If the flood of requests for reservations and accomodations means anything, the University will play host to a record gathering of coaches from every section of the Southland when the Southern Football Coaches Association holds its sixth annual meeting today.

Headquarters for the caoches' meeting will be the Washington Duke Hotel in Durham. The annual dinner and business meeting will be held there tonight. Tomorrow the coaches are expected to join the other delegates for the opening of the meeting of the Southern Conference here. The conference will continue through Saturday.

Thirty institutions, representing the Southern Conference and the S. I. A. A., and some non-affiliated, have already made reservations for 45 coaches. Alabama, V. P. I., Washington and Pep-flavor-health!

The most popular ready-to-eat cereals served in the dining-rooms of American colleges, eating clubs and fraternities are made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. They include ALL-BRAN, Corn Flakes, Rice Krispies, Wheat Krumbles and Kellogg's Shredded Whole Wheat Biscuit. Also Kaffee Hag Coffee—the coffee that lets you sleep.

PEP—flavor—health! You get them all in Kellogg's Pep Bran Flakes.

You can't beat the matchless flavor that only these better bran flakes have. The quick energy of their crunchy whole wheat. And the healthfulness of their bran—just enough to be mildly laxative.

Ask that Kellogg's Pep Bran Flakes be served at your fraternity or campus restaurant.

DEBATERS MEET CAMBRIDGE MEN

Saturday night the University of North Carolina and Cambridge University will meet for the first time on forensic grounds. The occasion will be a debate taking place in Gerrard hall on the query: Resolved, That the emergence of woman from the home is a regrettable feature of modern life. The debate will not be a contest between the Universities because there will be no judges' decision and a representative from both Cambridge and Carolina will speak for each side of the question. Accordingly, Geoffrey Crowther of Cambridge and McBride Fleming-Jones of Carolina will uphold the affirmative side of the question, while Albert Edward Holdsworth, Cambridge, and J. C. Williams, Carolina, will defend the negative viewpoint.

The time of the debate will be 8:30 and not 9:15 as advertised. It was formerly set at the later hour so as not to interfere with the Weil lectures which were scheduled for this week but have been postponed. Each speaker will be allowed twenty minutes for his first speech.

Law Lecture

Robinson Secured to Deliver Fourth Of Series on Preparation of Cases.

On Saturday morning of this week the fourth series of lectures on drafting, pleadings, and preparation of cases for trial are to be delivered by Mr. John M. Robinson, a prominent lawyer of Charlotte and one of the leading trial lawyers of western North Carolina.

Mr. Robinson has sent ahead of him the facts in two cases as they appeared to the plaintiff's lawyers when they drafted their complaint and as they appeared to the defendant's lawyers when they drafted their answer. Students in courses of code-pleading and practice are drafting their own complaints and answers on the basis of these facts Robinson will bring with him the pleadings actually drawn by the lawyers as they brought the cases into court. These are to be compared with those drawn by the students and both criticized. Mr. Robinson will bring out his discussions of his own wide experience in problems of this kind. This method of lecture is quite different from the usual formal lecture. The first of this series of talks was given four years ago by Kenneth C. Royal of Goldsboro and the second and third were delivered by L. P. McLendon of the Durham bar.

BENEFIT PROGRAM TO BE PRESENTED

Tonight at eight o'clock a musical entertainment is being presented in the Rock Hill Baptist church on Franklin street by the Colored Health Committee for Negroes of Chapel Hill.

The program as has been arranged is composed of the local Silver Tongue quartet, who will render a number of selections. A male quartet from Burlington, a solo singer, and violin music by Walter Hackney are the other numbers.

Following the program a silver offering is to be taken which will go to the Colored Health Committee to be used as the committee finds needs.

SWIFT NEBULAE SEEN

Mount Wilson—(IP)—Astronomers at the observatory here have observed a group of spiral nebulae which they believe are travelling at a greater rate of speed than any heretofore watched by mankind.

It is believed that the nebulae are traveling at the rate of 7,200 miles a second, a speed which would carry them round the earth at its surface in three and a half seconds.

The stars are about 75,000,000 light years away. They were located with the aid of the giant 100-inch telescope at the Mount Wilson observatory.

VARIATIONS MADE IN REGISTRATION

juniors and seniors in the college of liberal arts have registered with their respective major heads. This year the procedure differs, and they will register with Dean Hobbs and Mrs. Ray. They must, however, consult with their major heads before registering, and must present a written statement of their major-minor outline at the time of formal registration. Students in the school of applied science will register with Dean Bell in 205 Venable hall. Messrs. Baity, Hoefer, and Lear, of the school of engineering, will have charge of pre-holiday engineering registrations.

Registration begins on Wednesday, December 17, and continues through noon on Saturday, December 20. Those students due to register before the Christmas holidays are urged to make haste and not wait until the last day.

Polar Explorer To Appear At N. C. C. W.

Greensboro, December 10.—Captain Sir Hubert Wilkins, distinguished explorer who is to appear at Aycock auditorium, North Carolina College, tonight for a personal narrative on the subject "Flying to the End of the Earth," is said to have five firsts in airplane exploration.

They are: First trans-polar flight by airplane; first landing of an airplane on floating polar ice; first trip ashore unaided from a forced landing on any ocean a long distance from land; first airplane flight in the Antarctic (November 18, 1928); first discovery of new land from an airplane.

Sir Hubert has flown more miles as an explorer in the polar region than any other living man, it is said. In the Arctic his record is 15,000 miles, 12,000 of them north of the Arctic circle and 6,000 over the Arctic ocean. In the Antarctic his flying distance is 6,000 miles, more than twice as far as any other explorer has flown in the Antarctic.

Many Colleges On Connecticut River

Middletown, Conneticut.—That the Connecticut River has on its banks more institutions of higher learning than any other in the world, including the Thames, in England, is the claim set forth in an article from the Boston Transcript, reprinted in the Wesleyan Argus here.

From north to south, on the banks of the river, these institutions are:

Dartmouth, at Hanover, N. H.; Norwich University, in Vermont; Northfield and Mt. Hermon Seminaries in Massachusetts; Amherst College, Massachusetts Agricultural College, at Amherst, Smith College, Mt. Holyoke, two colleges at Springfield, Trinity College and Hartford Theological Seminary at Hartford, and Wesleyan at Middletown.

First Editions Of Paul Green's Plays Bring High Prices

First editions of "In the Valley" by Paul Green, University of North Carolina playwright, are now being sold for $7.50 per copy to collectors in New York, according to reports from that city.

This play was first published in book form in 1928, and since then has received widespread attention from noted critics and other playwrights.

The first editions of his other plays, "In Abraham's Bosom" and "The Field God," have doubled in value, selling for $4 per copy.

EXPECT RECORD ATTENDANCE AT S. F. C. A. SESSION

Lee, Auburn, South Carolina, Sewanee, Mississippi A. & M., and L. S. U. have yet to report delegates, but all these Southern Conference members are thought to be certain to send their representatives.

Dan McGugin, Vandy's wise old sage, will top all those attending in years of service, closely pushed by Curley Byrd of Maryland, Bill Alexander of Georgia Tech, and Major R. R. Neyland of Tennessee. At the other end of the service scale, just beginning their coaching careers in the South, will be Jack McDowell of Rollins, Walker of Mississippi, and probably Orville Neal of V. P. I., and Chet Wynne of Auburn.

Among the other coaches who put out crack aggregations this past fall and who will be present today are Walter Johnson, who coached Presbyterian College to a S. I. A. A. championship; Charlie Bachman, of Florida; and Birney Bierman, of Tulane; undefeated co-champions of the Southern Conference. Wallace Wade, who coached Alabama to a Southern title and a Rose Bowl engagement, and who goes to Duke next year, is also expected. So also Frank Thomas, crafty backfield coach at Georgia, who goes to fill Wade's place at Alabama.

An interesting program has been arranged, including a tournament at Hope Valley this afternoon for the golfer-coaches and their friends, with a business meeting at the Washington Duke Hotel at 7 o'clock.

Chuck Collins, head coach at North Carolina, will say the welcome. President W. J. Raftery will respond for the coaches, to be followed by W. A. Alexander, President of the American Football Coaches Association; H. J. Stegeman, A. R. Hutchens, Dan McGugin, and others.

fifty-four minutes in length. This makes a total of 594 possible minutes of play.

Johnny Branch came close behind McDade with a total of 480 1-2 minutes. Others who stood near the top are George Thompson with 462, Ellis Fysal with 444 1-2 and Ned Lipscomb with 369 1-2.

Irwin Walker, who was unable to play until the Tennessee game, because of a broken wrist, saw 313 1-2 minutes of action in six games.

NOTED PHYSICIST TO LECTURE AT DUKE UNIVERSITY

Dr. R. A. Millikan Won Nobel Prize in Physics in 1923.

Dr. Robert Andrews Millikan, president of the California Institute of Technology and director of the Norman Bridge Laboratory of Physics, will lecture on "New Knowledge of the Universe About Us" in the Page Auditorium of the new Duke campus Monday, December fifteenth, at eight P. M. Dr. Millikan consented to speak at the request of the scientific societies of Duke University. The address is open to the public.

Dr. Millikan for many years has been making researches on electrical phenomena and molecular theories connected with light rays. Of his contributions to science there are three of major importance. The first is the isolation of the electron and an accurate determination of its properties. The second is his accurate determination of the quantum of energy. The third and perhaps the most important is his work concerning cosmic rays from interstellar bodies. He has just returned from a trip to the magnetic north pole, where he studied the intensity of these rays. Dr. Millikan has also carried his work to South America where he conducted researches in the Andes. The cosmic rays are sometimes called Millikan rays because he has done so much to increase the knowledge of them.

Among the honors that Dr. Millikan has won by his researches is the Nobel Prize in Physics in 1923 from the Royal Swedish Academy as a result of his success in connection with the discoveries concerning electrons and their properties.

The Crowell Scientific Society of Duke University and the Sigma Pi Sigma, honorary Physics fraternity there, are responsible for obtaining the speaker.

COMMUNITY CLUB MEETS TO HEAR THREE LECTURES

Home, Garden, and Music Departments Stage Monthly Meetings This Week.

Departmental meetings of the Community Club have taken place this week.

The home department under the direction of Mrs. Ralph Trimble met in the social room of the Methodist Church Tuesday, December 9 at three-thirty o'clock. R. G. Barrett spoke on "Decorating the Living Room and Bed Rooms."

The garden club met Wednesday evening, December 10 at eight o'clock in Davie Hall. Miss Josephine Pritchard was in charge of the program and talked on "Window Gardens." The club will meet again on the evening of the second Wednesday in January.

The music department met in the choral room of the music building, Wednesday evening at eight-thirty o'clock. Dr. Guy B. Johnson of the Institute for Research in Social Science talked on "Negro Folk Music in the United States."

Johnson traced the growth of the music of the American negro and discussed the various types of negro songs. He also

Meeting of Second Year Class Called

President-elect Graham of the University, "Stud" Henry, president of the sophomore class, and "Red" Greene, president of the student union, have requested that all sophomores be present in Gerrard hall at chapel period this morning. On previous mornings this week, both the junior and senior classes have met with Graham, Greene and the presidents of their respective classes.

BAND IS SPONSOR OF SUNDAY SHOW

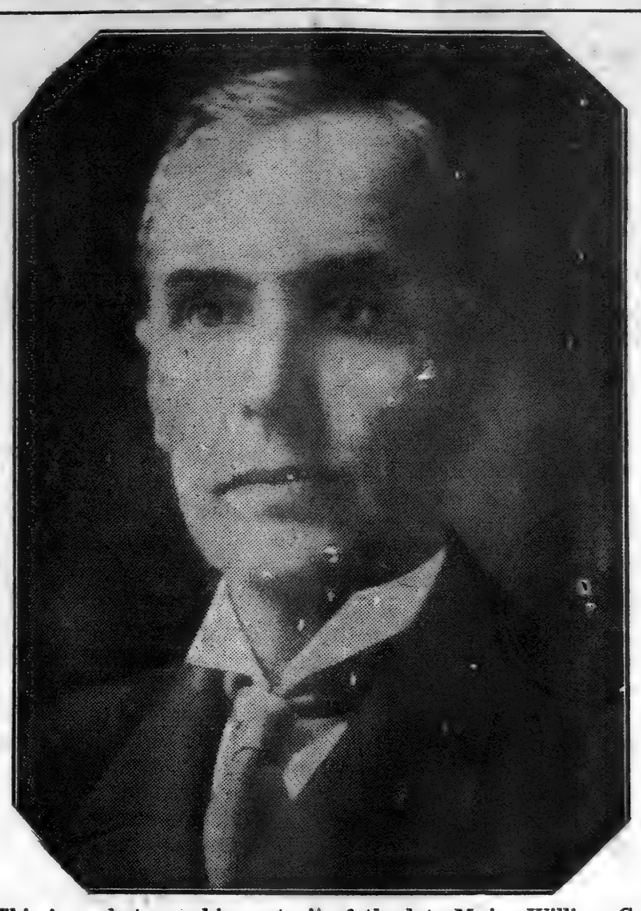
Performance of "Love Parade" And a Musical Program Will Be Given at Theatre.

The Carolina Theater will present a special showing of "Love Parade" Sunday afternoon in connection with a concert by the University band. There will be no charge for admission, but those attending will have the opportunity to make a contribution at the door. The entire proceeds will go to the band.

The performance will begin with a short program by the band at two-thirty which will be followed by the picture, "Love Parade," starring Jeanette MacDonald and Maurice Chevalier.

E. Carrington Smith, manager of the theatre, plans to have the first four rows of seats removed and special lights installed for the concert.

The University symphonic band is different from the athletic band. The former plays only the best of music, and past experiences have proved that it tunes down like an orchestra, the volume never being offensive even in the smallest of buildings. The theater with its special acoustical qualities for the sound pictures, is said to make a splendid concert hall.



Although the band has made it a point not to charge admission for Chapel Hill programs, there are certain expenses necessary to the existence of the organization for which funds must be raised by the band, since the University is not in a position to subsidize it.

Chief among these expenses is the purchese of awards for men who have given three years of service. In addition to this, the band arranges one or two concert tours each year, on which it plays mainly before high school groups to encourage new talent to come to the University. Sometimes, because of bad weather, unusual competition, or like difficulties, these trips result in a slight deficit. To meet just such a contingency the manager of the Carolina Theatre donated two Sunday performances last year. Although the contributions were rather small in some cases, the venture proved a great help.

DUNN IS REGIONAL GUEST OF SCHOLARSHIP GROUP

Clyde Dunn, editor of the Yackety Yack, who has been in Atlanta for the last two days as the guest of the regional Rhodes scholarship committee which is meeting there to pick men to attend Oxford University in the fall of 1932 is expected back on the campus to-day. The other representative from North Carolina was Dean Rusk of Davidson College.

"Dixie" Makes Last Curtain Call After Years Of Faithful Service

"Dixie," the only quadruped Ph.D in the University, and a member of the Actor's Equity Association of America, the Carolina Playmakers, and the Carolina Dramatic Association, silently passed to her reward Monday night, following a fatal ride on a running board, from which she was thrown into the path of an on-rushing machine. Fifteen minutes before her sudden demise, "Dixie" made what chanced to be her final curtainbow in the Playmakers Theatre, where, taking her customary place of prominence upon the stage, she conveyed to a sympathetic audience by her frank, indelicate attitude, her usual boredom with the amateur actors and playwrights. "Dixie" was often referred to as "the best critic and actor that ever crossed the Playmakers' stage."

Eight years ago the lady-terrior won the admiration of Frederick H. Koch, Jr., by way of helping him deliver the morning papers to Chapel Hill's subscribers. Young Freddie, then seven years old, was so much attached to the snowy pup that he pled with the owner for a transference of custody. At a cost of $2.50 "Dixie" became an adopted member of the Koch family. It was not long before she neglected her young master and devoted her attention to Professor Koch. With this affiliation her normal inclination drifted to the theatre and an interest in dramatics. In the Playmakers Theatre, in the classes of Shakespeare and playwriting, in the seminar rooms and at important conferences, she would sit, a silent, solitary figure, passively bored with the systemized actions of human beings.

"Dixie" had sat through so many examinations of candidates for the Ph. D. that one

Steene Will Paint Portrait of Logan

William Steene, the local artist who has contributed generously of his time and talent to the proposed organization of an art department in the University, is to go to Chicago early in January to paint the portrait of Frank G. Logan, Chicago millionaire and philanthropist.

Logan is the creator of the Logan Perpetual Award which has granted a long series of prizes in the field of art. The Chicagoan has long been an active enthusiast and patron of art. For more than twenty years he has been a trustee of the Chicago Art Institute, having just completed a renewed term as vice-president. The board of governors of the Grand Central Arts Galleries of New York City named Steene for the task.

Steene's selection is indicative of his growing reputation, inasmuch as his activities in the portrait field have thus far been limited to the South and East.

Wigue and Masque Plans Winter Revue

The initiation of two men and the discussion of plans for a review comprised the second meeting of the quarter of Wigue and Masque, University dramatic organization, Tuesday night in the music building.

Theron Brown and Francis Jacocks were taken into the club with due ceremonies.

Wex Malone presided over the meeting and plans for a revue, scheduled to take place during the winter quarter, were discussed. This revue will be the first given by the organization in two years as plans for last winter's revue were abandoned when Memorial hall was torn down and no other adequate auditorium was available.

Infirmary List

Joe Kelso, N. A. Bridgers, T. S. Jenrette, E. L. Peterson, and Coach Chuck Collins were confined to the infirmary yesterday.

Math Students

All students of the school of education majoring or minoring in mathematics are requested to see Professor C. E. McIntosh if they are interested in a class in mathematics 6 for the winter quarter.

ALDERMEN REGRET BRAUNE'S PASSING

Board Passes Resolution in Memory of Esteemed Fellow Member's Death.

At the monthly meeting of the Chapel Hill board of aldermen Wednesday evening a resolution to the following effect was unanimously passed by the board:

"IN MEMORIAM
GUSTAVE MAURICE BRAUNE

"The aldermen of the town of Chapel Hill having learned with deep regret of the untimely death, November 26, 1930, of their colleague, Gustave Maurice Braune, a member of this board from 1922 to 1930, hereby order that the following expression of their sense of loss sustained by this community be entered upon their minutes:

"By the death of Gustave M. Braune the Town of Chapel Hill has lost a good citizen, the governing body of the town, a valuable member, and we, his colleagues, a loyal friend.

"As a citizen, he always manifested a keen, intelligent, and unselfish interest in the welfare of this community and to his interest many of the improvements made during the past decade may be directly traced.

"As a public official he was faithful to his duties, wise in counsel, prompt to accept responsibility, and ever ready to place at the service of the town the fruits of his wide professional experience and his expert knowledge of problems vitally affecting the interests of the municipality.

"As a friend and colleague, he was gentle, patient, forbearing, helpful, and staunch and loyal in good and adverse fortune."

There was little else discussed at the meeting except that the board voted to have sixteen sugar maple trees planted along Franklin street, and to have a community Christmas tree placed in front of the Methodist church. The tree was not placed on the University campus as last year because it was found that it could not be seen from the road and some people neglected to attend the distribution of the gifts. Small cedar trees were placed along Franklin street yesterday at the order of the board of Aldermen and the unemployment committee.

Filling Station Nearly Completed

If the gasoline tanks arrive in time, the new Texaco gas station at the corner of Franklin and Columbia streets will be officially opened Saturday, December 20.

The station is now practically complete except for the tanks. The fence around the station, which is soon to be painted white, is now being painted and shrubs and trees are being planted in the ground surrounding the corner. Sugar maple trees, Burkman's globe, and Japanese arbor vitae are to be planted.

FUTURE OF PARTY TO BE DISCUSSED AT POLITY FORUM

Professor B. B. Kendricks Will Talk Briefly in Gerrard Hall This Evening.

The polity forum meets tonight in Gerrard at seven p. m. in its second meeting of this quarter to hear Professor B. B. Kendrick, of N. C. C. W., who is to make a short talk on "The Future of the Democratic Party."

Professor Kendrick is a nationally known authority on government questions, having written several articles and books on the subject. He has also taught in numerous universities and colleges in the country including Columbia University.

It is the plan of the forum that no resolutions be passed in the meeting influencing students to vote for one particular party, but instead the president of the group hopes to stimulate independent thought and discussions on political issues and candidates.

At the meeting tonight a resolution to encourage students of the country to think politically and begin to take an interest in affairs of politics will be discussed. This question is to be brought up at the meeting of the N. S. F. A. which convenes in Atlanta sometime in the near future.

President Jack Dungan states that the forum is a flexibly organized group, membership in which is based on interest shown in political and foreign relation questions. He said further that any persons in the student union, faculty, or citizens of Chapel Hill, who might be interested in hearing Professor Kendrick's talk tonight will be privileged to attend the meeting in Gerrard hall at seven p. m.

Members in the polity forum are required to pay no dues or fees of any sort. This meeting tonight concludes the program of the group for this quarter, but it is the plan to start immediately after the Christmas holidays.

GRUMMAN ISSUES BULLETIN ABOUT EXTENSION WORK

Division Has Registered Total of 22,692 Students in Nine Years of Service.

The latest bulletin of the University extension division has recently been issued by R. M. Grumman, director of the division. The bulletin is an explanation of the work of this department, its organization, function, objective, and of the classes themselves. A list of the rules governing correspondence instruction is also given.

By means of correspondence instruction, extension classes located in all parts of the state, radio lectures, extension library service, reading courses, community dramatics, interscholastic activities, and a variety of publications, the University, through the extension division, is relating itself with the life of the State.

At the present time the division is organized and prepared to make available to the people of the state a great many of the educational offerings now enjoyed by students residing in

A Political Ideal

The Polity Forum meets tonight for the second time of the year. The features of the organization which recommend it to the student union are that it meets only twice a month, there are no regular dues, and no compulsory membership. No attempt will be made to secure a closed membership list. There will be no passing or black-balling. The Polity Forum will not be simply another organization to include in the Yackety-Yack.

The purpose of the forum is to interest students in crystallizing their political ideas and ideals. Every effort is to be exerted through the medium of lectures and debates between nationally known men, at arriving at a condition in the future when the voice of students will be felt in the government of the country. This condition may be twenty-five or even fifty years distant but should be sought after. Students were largely responsible for the recent successful revolution in Brazil, for the republican government in Germany, and are at present the leaders of agitation for better government in Spain. The Oxford Union in England is often represented in parliament.

As American students, rightly or wrongly, we have often been accused of being childish and lacking in ability to make our own decisions. Whether we are or not, the fact remains that the government of the country is in no way interested in what the future men of state are thinking today. There seems to be no reason why the student population of the country should not be represented in their government as well as say the Federation of Labor, or that very powerful group the Methodist Board of Temperance and Morals.—JACK D.

OPEN FORUM

IN HOC SIGNO VINCES

Editor of The Daily Tar Heel:

I see in yesterday's Tar Heel that Judge Lindsay says that the modern youth may inaugurate a great moral age. Say, there's sense in that, I've always thought we modern youths were going to do big things. The Judge goes on to say that as a rule we're wholesome, sane, and sensible. My! that's pretty white of him; this Judge Lindsay must be a fine fellow—seems to me we modern youths don't half appreciate ourselves. Let's see what else the Judge has to say. Ah, O! I was afraid so. There's a catch in it, the Judge wants us to back this pet companionate-marriage scheme of his. That's the way it always is with that soft-soap business, there's always a nigger in the grass. Say, fellows, don't hold that against the Judge; you know we always use a little applesauce when we think it will advance our pet schemes. Personally, I think the Judge is pulling for what he sincerely believes is a great social reform. Of course it's quite possible that once he hit upon this companionate-marriage idea, he liked it so well that he became a little closed minded on the matter and was less apt to consider its possible defects than to search for new evidence to support the idea; but, after all, we're all that way about our own schemes, they always get all our support.

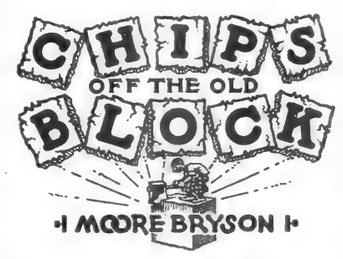
Seriously, fellows, I think we ought to all think over this trial marriage idea. The Judge says we can get married and unmarried whenever we want to and we don't even have to bear the burden of having children and bringing up a family—not bad is it? Come on, modern youths, lets all get together and think this thing over. All together now—one, two, three—concentrate. "Click, click, rrr, squeak, click, click." (Note: the modern youth is thinking.) No, fellows, this scheme sounds fine, but I'm d--ned if I see anything in it but legalized free love. It sure looks attractive and I would like to try it, but it seems to me that in the long run I'd be the loser. Aren't the finest and noblest qualities in a man and woman brought out by the responsibilities of fatherhood and motherhood? Isn't the greatest joy in a man's life the knowledge that a wife and children love and depend on him? If we resort to free love and dodge the trouble of a family for temporary gratification, aren't we cheating ourselves of the most lasting and worthwhile happiness of which we are capable. Perhaps Judge Lindsay doesn't think that this legal, free love idea would tend to destroy the family; maybe he's right, fellows, think it over.

Boys, the Judge sincerely wants to find a solution to the promiscuous-love question, but do you think that making free love legal and placing the social sanction on it would in any way remedy it? Would making stealing legal in any way lessen the evil effect of robberies. Do doctors attempt to check disease by spreading germs?

Honestly, I don't think we could inaugurate a great immoral age even if we wanted to. Seems to me there's nothing about immorality that's left to inaugurate; it's all been done time and again in all ages. By the way, haven't the modern youths in France already started a big immorality campaign. Fellows, even if we did want to copy those Froggies, does it seem that their free love is worth copying? Hasn't the declining French birth rate doomed the nation and driven the government to desperation?

Well boys, no hard feelings to Judge Lindsay but I hope his companionate wife eats crackers in bed.

Thoughtfully yours,
F. C. W.



P. S.: Hope the Judge doesn't retaliate and try to break up any of my prayer meetings. If he does, he'll get bounced sure.

IN ANSWER TO "MISUNDERSTANDING AND MISREPRESENTATION"

To the Editor of The Tar Heel:

Are we students not fortunate in having such a commanding genius as Mr. E. C. D. to write editorials for us? Surely, judging from the manner in which he writes, and the way he disposes of weighty and important matters, he must be a combination of the "Seven Sages of Greece." But is it not sickening for him to have the gall to say that Bishop Manning, who has more learning in his little finger than Mr. E. C. D. will ever have in his swelled head, is a "narrow-minded man of God," and "does not understand companionate marriage" whereas Mr. E. C. D. does so perfectly? And also to have him say that Judge Lindsey who has been one of the greatest, if not the greatest, proponent of companionate marriage, misrepresents it and does not himself understand it? Such statements would make a horse laugh and should not be pawned off on the student body.

Today the column blossoms forth with a new heading. The very clever drawing above was selected from submissions sent in by the leading modern artists of the country, in fact, the leading artists of the world. Both Matisse and Picasso were kind enough to send in drawings, but the committee decided that the work of Frank B. Cook of Asheville was by far the most artistic, as well as being the most expressive of the mood of the column. The committee sincerely hopes that you will agree with them in their selection. This committee was composed of the following prominent local artists: W. M. Bryson, Moore Bryson, "Block" Bryson, and Walter Moore Bryson.

It seems to be the custom for columnists at this season of the year to pick All-State, All-Southern, All-American, etc., teams. Not to be outdone, I propose the following for the

ALL-KENAN STADIUM TEAM

Right Bend—"Bunny" Chadbourne
Right Trickle—Branch Paxton
Right Goard—"Co-"Ed Curlee
Centaur—Charlie Shannon (Capt.)
Quarter Shot—"Sex" Malone
Right Half Shot—"Block" Bryson
Full Shot—"Senator" Roane
Coach—"Plunk" Plumly
Cheering Section—Tom Gold
Matron—"Breezy" O'Mara
Sponsor—"Stevie" Lynch

As is the case when any All-So-and-So Team is selected, there will be many dissentions from my choice. However, it has been a physical impossibility for me to observe all the various teams in action. Some may think that I put myself on the team because I was unduly prejudiced, but, of course, such is not the case. I feel that the famous "Four Horseman" combination should be left intact even at the risk of people thinking that I am conceited.

Chapel Hill. Over one hundred and fifty courses are offered by correspondence instruction. Many of these courses are adapted to the study habits and interests of adult students who do not wish to receive college credit. Any person may pursue these courses regardless of his previous education, provided he satisfies the instructor of his interest and ability to follow the course profitably.

Since it was organized in 1921, the division has registered a grand total of 22,692 correspondence and extension class students. While most of these students have never set foot on the campus, they have nevertheless come into a vital contact with the University.

spoke of his idea that many of the negro songs were appropriated during slave time by the negroes from the songs of the whites, giving a summary of this phase of the subject as presented in his book Folk Culture on St. Helena Island, S. C.

Musical extracts illustrated the lecture, and representative selections were played and sung. Professor Ward Fenley sang with guitar accompaniment—"John Henry," "Stagolec," "Rainbow 'Round My Shoulder," "I Told My Cap'n That My Feet Was Cold."

G. W. Fenley, G. M. McKie, W. A. Olsen, and R. P. Bond sang some old time spirituals, "Standing in the Need of Prayer," "Eagle's Wings," "Mariah Got a Letter," "Bear Your Burden," and "In His Own Time."

Mrs. R. H. Wettach sang Burleigh's arrangement of "Deep River" and "Going Home." The latter is based on the largo movement of Dvorak's "Symphony from the New World."

Mrs. P. H. Winston played John Powell's "The Banjo Picker" and David Guion's "The Harmonica Player."

George Gershwin's "A Rhapsody in Blue" and Dett's "Juba Dance" were the phonograph records which were played.

"Dixie" Makes Last Curtain Call After Years Faithful Service

night in 1926 during her thirteenth attendance at such a function that spring, Dr. Edwin Greenlaw, former dean of the graduate school here, in recognition of her splendid endurance and devoted interest, placed a motion before the board to confer upon her, honoris causa, the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. And so it happened.

Dr. Arthur Palmer Hudson last immortalized her name in his now famous masterpiece. A Scratchata of Our Dixie, published in The Carolina Play-Book in June 1930. In the extensive introduction to this work, Dr. Hudson points out that "—furthermore, the Actor's Equity Association of America honored "Dixie" with a life membership certificate and an equity badge. The badge we learned from the same source, was swallowed and digested (being paste) by one of the little Kochs, with results portentous for the American theatre."

Members of Professor Koch's classes were all familiar with the significance of the scratching coming from the ante-room of the classroom,—"Proff's" office. "Dixie" had an independent habit of coming in late, and going out whenever she pleased. But her patience was usually inexhaustible. Curling herself up on some unsuspecting person's lap, or sitting docibly by the radiator, "'Dixie," with less perseverance than those about her, would try to stay awake.

Dr. Hudson ends his memoir with lines well suiting the memory of such a famous character:

Oh, my cunning, melting brown eyes, doggie with your little scut
Of a tail, When Master Fred was smoking and the door was shut,
Did the Siddons let you in and coax you, "Come, my pretty slut!"
—'Smoke and fag butts!' So you snuffle, and I want the heart to scold.
Dear, dead hours, with such fun, too—what's become of all the bold,
The mad Playmakers and their antics? I feel chilly and grown old!

A special memorial service for "'Dixie" was conducted by "Proff's" 8:30 English class Wednesday.

CALDWELL TO BE ON KENAN LEAVE TILL NEXT FALL

Dr. W. E. Caldwell, professor of ancient history, is to leave Chapel Hill Friday, December 19th with his family for a nine months tour in Europe, having obtained Kenan leave from the University for the winter and spring quarters.

Dr. Caldwell is planning to sail from New York City on the French liner "Paris" on December 24th. He plans to spend about a week in Paris and Brussels with some of his friends and colleagues, and then to visit Roman remains in Orange, Arles, and Marseilles in the lower Rhone valley.

Leaving Marseilles January 14, the Caldwells plan to go to Egypt for about three weeks. Here the professor will visit Cairo, Luxor, and Assuan, seeing the pyramids, tombs and temples, and studying in the Cairo Museum.

After leaving Egypt early in February he plans either to visit Crete or to take a trip to Palestine and Syria, and thence to Athens.

Dr. Caldwell plans to spend about two months studying in Greece, with his headquarters at the American School in Athens.

After spending about a month in Rome, Naples, and Sicily, he will go to Berlin. He will probably spend the summer visiting the old stone age caves and prehistoric sites in Western Europe.

The family plans to return to Chapel Hill sometime next September in time for the opening of the University.

Gym Classes

There will be gym classes next Monday and Tuesday, contrary to the rumor that has gotten out among freshmen.

Crowd Attending Boxing Tournament At Tin Can More Than Six Hundred

Final Bouts of Intramural Meet Marked by Hotly Contested Battles.

HOLDERNESS IN FINALS

Fights Hudson for 145-Pound Crown; Glover and Wilmer Scrap in Bantam Division.

Late Bulletin

In the bantamweight class Glover took the decision over Boring. F. Raymer knocked out A. Smith in the third round to win the featherweightchampionship.

Gold won the lightweight championship over D. Raymer by decision, in the fourth after the regulation distance of three rounds had been called a draw.

Holderness won the welterweight championship for the second successive year by decision over Hudson in one of the stiffest bouts of the tournament. Guthrie defeated J. Hubbard for the middleweight championship in the fourth round after the first three rounds had been called a draw. Brown scored a technical knockout over Wadsworth in the third, cutting a bad gash over Wadsworth's eye, to win the light-heavy title. Pace defeated Greer by decision to win the heavyweight championship.

By Thomas H. Broughton

A capacity crowd of approximately six hundred enthusiastic fight fans, including both faculty members and students, turned out for the semi-finals of the intramural boxing tournament, making a grand total of approximately two thousand attending the tournament thus far. The crowd kept good order although several fans in the middle of a good mix-up would start cheering for their representative. Occasionally one could hear a long drawn out whistle as one of the contestants landed a good blow.

The bouts with results and weights of the contestants are as follows:

Thursday Afternoon

Glover had a slight edge over Biggs in the first two rounds of the bout in the 115-pound class, coming out strong in the final round to floor Biggs once and gain a decision.

Wilmer had a slight edge over Boring in the first round but was unable to hold it, Boring coming back strong in the second and third to win by a technical knockout in the third, thereby going to the finals in the 115-pound class.

Smith had a slight edge over Todd, defending champion, in the first and third rounds to win by a decision in the 125-pound division.

Raymer, featherweight, scored a technical knockout over Joyner in the third round when a hard right to the jaw dazed Raymer. Joyner had the fight sewed up on points up to the final blow.

Gold, lightweight, won the decision over Hubbard in the first two rounds, Hubbard coming back in the final, with nose bleeding profusely, for one of the gamest finishes of the tournament.

Raymer easily defeated Langdon on points to take the decision in a good mix-up in the lightweight class.

The best bout of the day went to Hudson, welterweight, on a forfeit when Stallings was unable to fight the extra round, after Hudson had made a good comeback to get a draw.

Guthrie, who packs a terrific left, easily won the decision over Burgwyn. These fighters are in the 160-pound division.

Wadsworth, middleweight, had a slight edge over Barclay, who seemed to want to wrestle, to get the decision. Both fighters appeared eager to mix-up much to the delight of the crowd.

J. Hubbard held a slight edge over Shearin to win on a decision in the only lightweight fight of the afternoon.

Wednesday Night

135-Pound Class

Wardlaw held a slight advantage over Langdon in the first round but Langdon came back strong to get a draw and the decision in the extra round.

Gold had a slight edge over Jess in the slowest bout of the tournament thus far to win by decision.

160-Pound Class

Burgwyn took the decision in a fight in which neither fighter could seem to hit the other cleanly, much to the amusement of the crowd.

Shearin held a slight edge over Perry to win by decision.

Hubbard took the decision over Davis in the final light-heavy bout of the evening. Hubbard was swinging a terrific right uppercut to the jaw wildly, never being able to connect with Davis's jaw.

Holderness, defending 145-pound champion, easily defeated Dandy to win a technical knockout amid shouts of "stop it" from the crowd in the final bout of the night.

Wednesday Afternoon

125-Pound Class

The first round started off slow with Todd having a slight edge. In the last two rounds Mowery came back to earn a draw only to lose the final round on the referee's decision.

The second bout of the afternoon went to Gold by decision. Nicholson seemed unable to hit Gold, his blows swinging wildly and harmlessly through the air. Gold stayed on the defensive most of the first round, coming out strong in the second round. Gold seemed tired in the third round but still had enough wind to coast through for the decision.

135-Pound Division

Thompson opened up with a rush in the first two rounds and

MARPET - GUARD

Artie Marpet, who will captain the 1931 basketball team, is one of the outstanding guards in the conference. He has proven his ability at defending Carolina's basket, and is adept at ringing up points. Frequently has he been the high scorer for a game during his two years on the Tar Heel varsity.

CERNEY HANDLES B. C. SPORTLIGHT

Carolina Backfield Mentor Pinch Hits for Collins in Radio Program.

Fever had Chuck Collins in its grip last Wednesday evening as the weekly headache powder sports revue went on the air. The popular Tar Heel strategist, suffering from a cold turned his program over to Bill Cerney, assistant coach. According to reliable information, the Rockne protege contracted the sickness when he stood "ankle deep" in slush and mire to cheer his warriors on to greater efforts against the DeHart cohorts in their annual battle on Kenan Field last Saturday.

Opening the revue, Cerney talked about the fine sportsmanship shown in the Carolina-Duke "battle-of-mud." He said that never before had he seen so much good will and clean fighting as in the game last week.

Something new in the line of football talk was introduced when Peter Ruffin, manager of the squad, gave out the hitherto unknown dope on what a manager of a ball team should do.

Rex Enright, freshman football coach at Carolina, gave the most interesting speech of the evening when he satirically and wittily described how a losing coach should compliment his opponent on the success of his team after a game. However strange it may seem, the Chapel Hill barbers came in for not even a part of the popular program. They are destined to play a big part in the event next year if "Dr. Magoodahoody," imminent Durham Herald-Sun reporter, has anything to do with influencing the sponsors of the B. C. Sports Revue. Readers of the sport sheet in the Durham paper may remember this famous personage as the dopester who picked nearly all the losing teams as winners during the past football season.

Perfecting the individual—not the team—is the aim of the yearling pikskin mentors at Chapel Hill, said Enright. "We do not try as hard to win our games as we do try to teach each player on the first-year squad the most important phases of his position," went on Enright. This specializing is stressed so that the men who are destined to fill the places vacated by the seniors are thoroughly drilled to jump into the departing mens' 'shoes as they fade across the football horizon.

Concluding his speech on the Tar Babies' methods of drilling and training, Enright tendered the "mike" to its original possessor, Bill Cerney. The substitute interlocutor eulogized on the different aspects of football, when it began, the early and late stages of the game, former hero-performers—and more football.

ORGANIZATION OF BIG TEN WILL BE DISCUSSED HERE

Tennessee's Violation of Conference Rules Will Not Come up at Meeting Friday.

One of the important problems that will come up before the meeting of the Southern Conference scheduled to be held in Chapel Hill Friday and Saturday will be the proposed Big Ten of Southern football. The Atlanta Georgian is the sponsor of this move to eliminate the weaker teams of the Conference. The members of this new organization would be: North Carolina, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Tennessee, Alabama, Tulane, Florida, Kentucky, Auburn, and Vanderbilt. This would greatly affect North Carolina football, since Duke and State would no longer be members of the new organization.

Tenth Annual Meeting Southern Conference Gets Underway Today

Representatives of Twenty-Three Colleges and Universities Come Here for Two Day Session—Places for Conference Tournaments Will Be Chosen—University Bids for Track and Tennis Meets.

Representatives of the twenty-three colleges and universities in the Southern Conference together with the southern football coaches will assemble here today for the tenth annual meeting of the conference. Athletic directors and faculty representatives from each of the colleges and universities are expected to be here.

The opening session gets underway this morning at ten-thirty at the Carolina Inn when the executive and other committees of the conference will convene. A full program is on for the group until the final meeting Saturday night.

More than one hundred delegates are expected to be present at the conference, since guests of the University and the southern coaches will add to the official list of representatives.

Numerous matters will be considered by the body, some of the more important being the selection of places for the conference boxing, track, tennis and indoor track meets, and proposals for changes in the by-laws. A proposition to have a central booking agency for football officials also will be discussed at the sessions of the conference.

The University is making bids for the indoor track meet, the outdoor track and field meet, and the tennis tournament to come here this year, and it is highly probable that at least two of these events will be scheduled for Chapel Hill.

The Southern Conference Tennis Tournament has been held at Tulane University, New Orleans, for the past two years, and there is a movement by officials in the northern end of the conference to move the tournament to this section in alternate years. Since the University at present is the only college in the northern division equipped to handle the tournament, it is believed that the officials will place the meet here.

The success of last winter's indoor track meet at the Tin Can makes it almost a certainty that the meet will return here this year, it has been learned. Chapel Hill and Atlanta seem to be the most likely places for the conference outdoor track meet, and due to the fact that it has been in Birmingham, are to the South, for two years, there is a possibility of this event also coming here.

The proposal of the Atlanta Georgian for the organization of a "Big Ten" Conference of the South probably will merit consideration by the officials, but plans for the organization of this new conference are still in infancy. For this reason it is not believed that definite action will be taken at this session.

The problem of penalizing the University of Tennessee for strating freshman football practice before the opening of the University, which was expected to cause much heated discussion at the conference meeting, has been settled by the executive committee.

Coaches Meet in Durham

The Southern Conference Coaches Association had a full day yesterday with a golf tournament in the afternoon at the Hope Valley Country Club, and a dinner and long business session at the Washington Duke Hotel at night.

The Tar Heel went to press last night before complete information as to the proceedings of the meeting could be obtained. H. J. Stegman, representative of the Southern Conference on the national rules committee was to lead a discussion on changes in the rules, and a round table discussion on stadia construction, football motion pictures, and radio broadcasting was planned.

Coach Chuck Collins, who was to make the address of welcome for the University, is still in the University infirmary, and was unable to attend the meeting. Coach Bob Fetzer was to take Coach Collins place on the program.

COLORED TEAMS TO PLAY CHARITY GAME SATURDAY

Johnny Branch Will Referee Contest Between Local Training School And Durham Team.

Football fans of Chapel Hill will get a chance to witness an interesting exhibition here tomorrow afternoon when the freshman team from the North College for Negroes meets the Orange County Colored Training School in a charity game on Emerson Field.

The University Athletic Association has extended the use of the field, and the entire gate receipts will be turned over to charity.

Johnny Branch will referee the game, and Pete Wyrick will be field judge. Stuart Chandler will act as head linesman.

Ellis Fysal and Noah Goodridge will be in charge of the gate. Ed Hamer and the members of the Senior Y Cabinet will have charge of the ticket sale and general management.

The kickoff will be at two-thirty o'clock.

Cobb of State and Williams of Wake Forest at Tackles; Magner Is Halfback.

Johnny Branch, Carolina quarterback and Bill Murray, Duke halfback, were the only two unanimous choices for the all-State teams this year, according to composite figures of the five leading coaches in the state who selected the teams.

Coach Jimmy DeHart of Duke added his selection to the list yesterday and picked the Tar Heel field general as well as his own halfback. DeHart's pick was as follows:

Ends, Rosky and Hyatt; tackles, Cobb and Webb; guards, Davis and Fysal; center, Adkins; quarterback, Branch; halfbacks, Mills and Murray; fullback, Brewer.

Other Carolina men receiving mention on the first all-state teams were: Fysal, on Collins' and DeHart's; McDade on Youngers and Collins'; Lipscomb on Sermon's and Collins'; Magner on Younger's, Sermon's, and Collins'.

Next to Murray and Branch, Rosky, end, Duke, got four votes while Hyatt, his team mate, received three.

HISTORY PROFESSOR CONDEMNS INCREASING MISUSE OF EQUITY

R. D. Meade Shows Instances of Unfounded Judicial Interference With Labor Disputes and Cities Supporting Opinions.

By Robert D. Meade

The present use of the injunction in the Danville, Va., textile strike and the probability of its widespread employment during future labor disputes in the South should attract attention to a timely article on "The Use of The Injunction in Strikes" by R. J. R. Hobbs in a recent number of the University of North Carolina Extension Bulletin. Professor Hobbs is a member of the School of Commerce faculty in the University.

Professor Hobbs refers frequently in his discussion to "The Labor Injunction," an exhaustive treatise on this subpect recently published by Felix Frankfurter of the Harvard Law Faculty and Nathan Greene of the New York bar, both authorities. He would undoubtedly recommend this book to all persons interested in the solution of this difficult problem of social justice.

In his article Professor Hobbs not only points out many abuses in the working of individual strike injunctions, but he shows grave fallacies in the legal theory upon which they are granted. John W. Davis, he says, in the Congressional debate preceding the passage of the Clayton Act, showed at least five glaring abuses which have crept into the administration of this remedy. They are the issuance of injunctions without bond, the issuance of injunctions without notice, the issuance of injunctions without detail, the issuance of injunctions without parties, and "in trade disputes particularly, the issuance of injunctions against certain well established and indispensable rights." Presidents Roosevelt and Taft also pointed out the abuses in the use of injunctions while Alfred E. Smith "advocated important changes in this respect in 1928."

"One phase of the injunction almost entirely overlooked by the courts," the North Carolina professor continues, "is the damage done to labor when an effective strike is stopped by injunction. Labor's chance to gain a legitimate objective by an effective and legal strike is often destroyed by the temporary injunction. The legal purpose of such an injunction is to preserve the status of the subject matter. This is good enough in theory, but the practical effect in the majority of cases is to break up the strike. The struggle between the parties is stopped when it is just beginning or at its height. Through delay in the final hearing, labor's chance of success is lost and the resulting injury to its cause is not compensated. At present there is no legislative machinery to relieve this practical and far-reaching result. Even if the legal controversy is ultimately won by labor, it is at heavy expense and the strike is often over, rendering the victory an empty one."

"The procedure and proof in securing the injunction have been attacked by labor and criticized by some eminent judges. While the procedure incident to obtaining an injunction is doubtless well known, it may not be out of place to mention some outstanding points. Only courts of equity grant injunctions. In granting the injunction the judge acts in his discretion. A court of equity has no jury. Proof in temporary injunctions is by affidavit. The opposition, therefore, does not have the chance to face the witness and cross-examine him. A violation of an injunction is a contempt of court. In a great majority of the states the trial of a contempt case is without a jury and before the judge who issued the injunction."

"As to the need for legislative limitation upon the equity power of the courts there can be little doubt. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said to a committee of the Senate, 'I say to you gentlemen that I know of no procedure in America that is fanning the flame of discontent to a greater degree than the misuse of the equity of power." Urgent requests from many of our leading statesmen could be cited in support of legislative relief. Our own (North Carolina's) Chief Justice Walter Clark said to a Senate Commission on Industrial Relations in 1912, 'I do not think they (Injunctions in labor disputes) can be justified. (Their effect) has been of course to irritate the men because they feel that in every Anglo-Saxon community every man has a right to a trial by jury and that to take him up and compel him to be tried by a judge is not in accordance with the principles of equality, liberty, and justice.' Judge Clark was referring to trials for contempt under injunctions."

Professor Hobbs declares that the Clayton Act, passed in Wilson's first administration, is a dead letter. "By the interpretation given the act it has proven a failure to correct the abuses of the equity power." Considering the use of the labor injunction in the past, Professor Hobbs feels it not strange that the courts have lost prestige. He says that new legislation regulating the use of the injunction is now before Congress. Although he does not seem to think that this legislation has much chance of passage, he feels that it "shows what some of the leaders of the country think are the needs of the situation."

COLLEGE LIBRARIES FACE BOOK STEALING PROBLEM

Various colleges and universities have tried different methods of controlling the circulation of library books. Very few libraries use the open shelf system because of the great number that disappear. Widener Library at Harvard has a turnstile through which all students withdrawing books must pass. Any student attempting to take a book illegally is liable to be expelled.

Lately there have been many editorials in college newspapers dealing with such misuse of library books as a breach of honor, The Wellesley College News, and the Sweet Briar News both comment on the removal of reserve books when there may be only one copy for a large class.

JUNIORS AND SENIORS TOLD OF REGISTRATION

Each junior and senior in the college of liberal arts is requested to secure a written outline of major and minor courses from the head of his major department immediately after receiving registration permit from the registrar. This is a new plan just inaugurated here, and members of the classes of '31 and '32 are to follow this new arrangement when registering for the winter quarter.

Especial attention is called to the necessity of clearing the record of required freshman and sophomore courses such as Math 1-2, History 1-2, English 1, and two from English 3-4-5, two foreign languages, two courses in science, and three or four sophomore electives.

THE CAMPUS QUEEN

New Arrangement Of Courses Gets Faculty Approval

The undergraduate faculty met last Tuesday afternoon in Bingham Hall and voted approval of a plan introduced by Dr. George Coffman, head of the English department, to make changes in the freshman English and history programs to come into effect next fall.

According to this plan, the freshman English course will run through the entire year (three quarters), holding three classes per week. It will coordinate with the freshman history—also to hold three classes each week throughout the year. The personal schedule of the student will determine whether the subjects shall alternate with one class coming on Saturday or shall double up on one day to avoid this Saturday class.

The chief advantage of the new plan of work will be that all freshman can register for English in the fall quarter. Under the present plan many are forced to wait until the winter or even spring quarter to begin their work in this subject. It will also require each student to attend a greater number of classes during the year, making possible a more comprehensive study of the subject.

LIVE BEES FOUND IN NARROW BOARD

The department of zoology recently received by mail a piece of board with an attached letter from Albert Richardson of the General Electric Company's plant in Erie, Pennsylvania. The following news item to appear in Works News, a General Electric publication tells the story of the board.

"While unloading a carload of yellow pine collar stock in the box shop, building eighteen, November 22, one of G. W. Dougherty's men noticed a deep black depression in one of the boards and on investigation found it to be a circular channel one-half inch in diameter by eight and one-fourth inches long housing six live bumble bees. The bees had evidently made their home in the tree, entering through a circular hole about seven-sixteenth inch in diameter nearly at right angles to the passage where they lived. At the junction of the two passages the entrance channel was rounded off on one side, permitting the bees to turn the corner easily.

"The remarkable part of it is that the bees must have gone through the various sawing operations in Plymouth, North Carolina, and travelled all the way to Erie, Pennsylvania, arriving alive and without injury.

"The bees were undoubtedly large carpenter bees which frequently burrow in porch columns or furniture and which in this case had retired to the burrow for rest during the winter period of unemployment."

Sport Slants

By Don Shoemaker

Everybody is talking about this Notre Dame team. They call it the greatest football machine of all times. Why? The answer probably lies in the school itself. Here's the contrast—at Wisconsin their trying to oust "Gloomy Glen" Thistlewaite for the record his team has made during the last two seasons. The downfall of the team is attributed to fraternities, sororities, and drinking. It seems that the men would rather go out and dance and imbibe than train. At Notre Dame there are no fraternities (and needless to say, no sororities), and no drinking. College life there is so planned that the chief diversion from studies is play, and by play we mean football. Ten percent of the student body goes out for the team and sticks, and the remaining ninety percent goes out, but is forced to participate from the sidelines. Notre Dame is not all football, but that sport is the ruling factor in undergraduate life. Under such conditions it is little wonder that such a team of keen-minded, physically perfect men can be put on the field to drive to national championships consistently.

Frank Carideo, Rambler field general, has been hailed as the greatest all-time Irish quarterback and by some, all-time All-American quarter. In our opinion this is a rather broad statement, for Carideo has had ten other stars on his team every time it has taken the field. It is not such a job to call signals when you know that every man will block and drive in the appointed time and place. In 1924 Rockne had another national championship team and another All-American quarterback, Harry Sthulder. Harry also had ten stars on the field with him all through that memorable year in Notre Dame gridiron history. But they fail to remember in 1922 and 1923, those who think Carideo better than the leader of the Four Horsemen, that Notre Dame had a weak team. The Irish were fair, but they were no world-beaters. Nevertheless in those two years some of the strongest teams in the country met defeat at the hands of the seemingly inferior and weaker Ramblers. The test of a good quarter back is under fire and in a time when he must depend on a ragged line and uncertain backs.

A flash from the coast says that in the California coast league championship this year Long Beach Poly downed San Diego High 14 to 8, and Long Beach made no first downs while San Diego made thirty!

We know a fan who bummed his way across the country from Pittsburgh to the Dartmouth-Standford game a few weeks ago on five dollars!

Navy take a warning-watch out for this Carolina freshman, Phipps in 1934. That boy is headed for All-American.

A point for those who argue in favor of the abolishment of the point-after-touchdown system: no less than 101 grid games were decided this year by the margin of a single point. Sixty-four games were decided by scores of 7-6, three at 8-7, fourteen at 13-12, fourteen at 14-12, thirteen at 14-13, three at 19-18, four at 20-19, and one at 21-19.

A statement that Tennessee athletic officials issued in regard to their violation of freshman football rules caused that matter to be dropped and saved Tennessee a penalty of one year's suspension from the Conference. The statement said:

"The University of Tennessee condemns the act of assembling and equipping freshmen before the opening of school in September. The act was without the knowledge or consent of the university.

"The University of Tennessee is humiliated that through its representatives the good name of the Southern Conference is involved and we express our deep regret to the other members that such violation took place at this institution.

"We assure the executive committee and the conference that we will do everything in our power to meet the obligation of the conference in the future."

Crowd Attending Boxing Tournament

floored Hubbard several times. Thompson took the first two rounds but made the mistake of using everything he had in the first two rounds and saving nothing for the final, Hubbard coming back in the third to win by a technical knockout.

The first two rounds went to Raymer with the third round ending in a draw, Raymer getting the decision.

Judges: Coach Allen, Davis. Referee: Levinson.

Lightheavy Fights

Barclay opened up with everything in his repertoire which was plenty and too much for Glover. Barclay easily took the decision putting the finishing touches on by knocking Glover down repeatedly and partly through the ropes twice.

Jean came in wide open and Brown floored him three times before the referee gave him a technical knockout in the second round.

Featherweight Battles

This bout showed the gamest man of the afternoon in action. Baucom, captain of the cross country team, took Raymer's rights and lefts on the jaw several times but always managed to come back smiling. Raymer took the first two rounds, with Baucom having a slight edge in the third.

Todd, defending champion, came back to win his second fight of the afternoon by a technical knockout in the third. Todd completely outclassed Holt to easily take the first two rounds.

Joyner floored Foster several times in the first and second rounds, coming back strong in the final to win by a technical knockout.

Wardlaw came out strong to take a slight edge in the first two rounds, although Smith was working on his nose in the last part, Wardlaw's nose beginning to bleed profusely. Smith opened up in the final round to get a draw. Smith took the extra round decisively to get the final decision.

FIVE UNIVERSITY MEN TO ATTEND N.S.F.A. CONGRESS

Carolina Delegation to Carry Endowment Money to Atlanta Congress.

The congress of the National Student Federation of America is scheduled to assemble in Atlanta during the Christmas holidays from December 29 through January 2. To this conference will come the student officials and leaders from all over the country. The program for the meeting at present, calls for speeches and debates at this meeting by Owen D. Young, ex-governor Nellie Tayloe Ross of Wyoming, Senator Joseph Grundy of Pennsylvania, Bobbie Jones, Coach T. T. Alexander of Georgia Tech, and Governor Hardman of Georgia.

Definite steps will be taken at this meeting to inaugurate an extensive program for the work of the N. S. F. A. during the coming years. Action will be taken at this time to place t N. S. F. A. in as prominent a position as that held by similar federations, such as the American Federation of Labor.

In the sessions of this national congress the North Carolina Student Federation is planning to occupy a prominent position. The North Carolina representation at this congress will consist of J. A. Lang, president of the federation; W. D. Murray of Duke; Mary Jane Wharton, N. C. C. W.; Elizabeth Kapp, G. C.; Irene Thomas, Meredith; Dan Paul, State; R. C. Greene, Mayne Albright, Pat Patterson, and John Idol, all from Carolina.

At the executive meeting of the state federation here last Saturday night, the North Carolina delegates to Atlanta drew up projects which they intend to present to the national meeting this year. There are seven of these main projects which the North Carolina delegates hope to inaugurate into the program of the N. S. F. A. They are:

1. The encouragement of greater interest in national and international politics and public affairs.

2. The establishment of a national student publication which is to act as the literary organ for student opinion.

3. The establishment of student scholarships and loan funds for the purpose of encouraging worthy students to pursue their studies through college.

4. The encouragement of academic and athletic perfection among the students of this country by offering awards, conducting surveys, and arranging schedules.

5. The strengthening of the machinery of the N. S. F. A. by consolidating all student federations into the N. S. F. A., and by permitting membership in this organization to colleges and schools having any form of student government.

6. A reorganization of the personel of the N. S. F. A. by placing its major officials on a two-year term and placing them on a decent salary basis.

7. The establishment of an endowment for the work of the N. S. F. A. In order to place this work on extensive and ac-

UNIVERSITY RADIO TALK POSTPONED

There will be no radio program next Wednesday as was announced recently. J. C. Williams, scheduled to deliver the next of a series of talks over WPTF in Raleigh, will conduct the first program of the coming winter quarter on the subject of debating. Williams, a member of the Di Senate, won the Mary D. Wright medal last year and is to uphold the affirmative in the University debate with Cambridge.

The last program of the quarter was given by Will Yarborough and Jack Dungan, editor and managing editor respectively of The Daily Tar Heel who spoke on "Campus Publications." This was the fourth program of the year.

DEBATERS SHOW GREAT ACTIVITY

Ten Important Encounters Already Scheduled for Balance Of Year.

The varsity debate squad decided, in its final meeting in Murphey hall Thursday night, upon a policy of having ten home debates during the remainder of the collegiate year. This number is many times larger than the number that has been attempted in the past.

The squad also discussed a plan of doing away with competitive tryout for places on teams to compete in intercollegiate contests. The idea of having meetings of discussion groups of men who are interested in any particular question before the selection of the team, and then having the debaters chosen from these groups was considered, and will probably be tried.

Arrangements are underway for meets with Northwestern, Texas, Boston, Pennsylvania, New York, Georgia Tech, and Tennessee Universities, and challenges have been received from many schools in this and neighboring states. The University of Porto Rico, and the University of Florida have also challenged the varsity. Porto Rico will meet Carolina here in the spring quarter and a team from here will probably be sent there next year. An exchange debate with N. C. C. W. on a question of state interest is also being arranged.

Overman Was Trustee

Lee S. Overman, junior senator of North Carolina, who died in Washington, D. C., early yesterday morning, after brief illness, served at one time as trustee of the University and also of Trinity College, his alma mater, as well as receiving the doctor of laws degree from the University Davidson, and Trinity.

Senator Overman was a well-known figure in North Carolina political life, being United States senator for twenty-seven years and serving in the state legislature for five terms.

GRAHAM TALKS AT CLASS MEETINGS

Carolina - Duke Relations and Working of the Honor System Discussed.

Special meetings of the three upper classes took the place of regular chapel programs Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday mornings. President-elect Frank P. Graham and the presidents of the senior, junior, and sophomore classes addressed the groups.

The senior class met under the direction of its president Pat Patterson who made a short talk preceding the address of the University's president.

Theron Brown, president of the junior class introduced President-elect Graham to the group Thursday morning, while Stud Henry made several remarks introducing President Graham when the second year men convened.

At each of the meetings, President-elect Graham congratulated the classes on the way they had conducted themselves at the Duke game and pointed out the necessity of continuing friendly relations with the near-by university.

The speaker next launched into the subject of the honor system, calling upon the members of the classes to support the traditional self-government of the University in this particular. He drew a number of instances from personal experience.

These special chapel programs were arranged under the direction of Red Greene, president of the student union, and the different class executive committees.

DEBATERS FROM CAMBRIDGE AND CAROLINA MEET

Emergence of Women from the Home To Be Discussed in Gerrard Hall.

The first debate between Cambridge University and the University of North Carolina takes place tonight at eight-thirty in Gerrard hall. The time has been changed to this earlier hour instead of nine-fifteen as given on the posters.

Albert Edward Holdsworth and Geoffrey Crowther, the Cambridge representatives, are to arrive in Chapel Hill this afternoon, coming from Winthrop College, S. C. The debate with Carolina tonight makes their fifth in six days. The men debated Emory University at Atlanta, Georgia, December 8; Kansas College at Decatur, Georgia, December 9; the University of Georgia at Athens, Georgia, December 11; and Winthrop College, S. C., December 12. Four queries are being debated by the Cambridge team on this tour. On three of them the two debaters upheld the same side, but in the debate with Carolina tonight they split, each man having as his colleague a Carolina representative. The subject for the debate is, Resolved: That the emergence of women from the home is a regrettable feature of modern life. Crowther of Cambridge and J. C. ALUMNI OFFICER BALLOTS MAILED

Harvey and Haines Are Made Candidates for Association Presidency.

C. Felix Harvey, class of 1892, of Kinston, North Carolina, and Robert M. Hanes, class of 1912, of Winston-Salem, North Carolina, have been nominated for president of the General Alumni Association of the University for next year.

Ballots have been mailed to Carolina alumni who have paid their dues, and are to be returned not later than December 29, so that the new officers may be announced soon after the new year begins.

Nominees for first vice-president are Kemp P. Lewis, 1900, of Durham, and Junius G. Adams, 1906, of Asheville, North Carolina; for second vice-president, W. D. Carmichael, Jr., 1921, of New York, and T. C. Taylor, 1921, of Raleigh; and for representative on the athletic council, Claude W. Rankin, 1907, of Fayetteville, and Frank S. Spruill, Jr., 1920, of Rocky Mount.

The nominations were made by a committee composed of Judge J. Crawford Biggs, 1893, of Raleigh, who acted as chairman; T. Holt Haywood, 1907, of Winston-Salem; and Herman G. Baity, 1917, of Chapel Hill.

The Alumni Assembly has also announced the reelection of John W. Umstead, Jr., 1909, of Chapel Hill, and the election of Charles W. Tillette, Jr., 1909, of Charlotte, and A. L. Purrington, 1921, of Raleigh, as directors-at-large to the Alumni Association Board of Directors for three-year terms.

DEMOCRATS NEED STRONG SENATOR AVERS KENDRICK

N. C. C. W. Professor Speaks on Future of State Democrats Before Polity Forum.

Professor B. B. Kendrick, of the North Carolina College for Women addressed the students of the University last night in Gerrard hall. His address was sponsored by the Polity Forum which made his visit to the University possible.

Professor Kendrick spoke on the future of the Democratic party, putting special emphasis on the possibility which Governor Gardner has in aiding the party by the appointment of a man in the late Senator Overman's place who is capable of handling the problems facing the party at present. Professor Kendrick began his address with a resume of the Republican administration in 1920 and pointed out the mistakes it made. He devoted particular attention to showing the political causes and possible remedies of the present economic depression. The Republican administration under Harding made the mistake, the speaker said, of reducing taxes considerably and allowing the war debt to continue unpaid. This resulted in lack of preparation for the depression which was inevitable for the government was faced with a decreased income and a large war debt. Thus the government was unable

REPORTS MADE AT PSYCHOLOGY MEET

Reactions to Caffein and High School Tests Subjects of Research Described.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Gamma chapter, Alpha Psi Delta, held in the psychology building Wednesday, two very interesting reports were made: Mr. N. W. Lyon, teaching fellow in the psychology department, reported on "A Study of the Conditioned Reactions of Caffein", a study which he made at Columbia University last year. The problem consisted of an attempt to study the difference between the effects of regular and decaffeinated coffee. Mr. Lyons offered no conclusive results of a quantitative nature, but pointed to a very important element in such an experiment, namely, the large number of control factors necessary for obtaining reliable results.

Dr. M. R. Trabue, director of the bureau of educational research, reported on "The Results of Tests on High School Seniors." For several years Dr. Trabue has directed the giving of these tests to high school seniors in this state, approximately 14,000 taking the test last year. Dr. Trabue has made a study of the results of these tests comparing age of the individuals taking the test, size of the senior class, and many other interesting factors. Perhaps the most interesting feature of the study is the high degree of predictability of success in college work.

Graham Leaves

President-elect Graham leaves this morning for Baltimore and New York, where tonight at the former place he will address the North Carolina Society and on Monday night he will speak to the New York Alumni Association of the University of North Carolina.

Staff Meeting

The first meeting of the Daily Tar Heel staff for the winter quarter will take place Sunday night, January 4, at seven o'clock for editors and seven-fifteen for reporters. All staff members are required to attend. The first issue of the paper will be published Tuesday, January 6.

MOTHER ON WAY FOLLOWING NEWS OF FINDING BOY

Presence of Bullet Hole and Pearl Handled Revolver Supports Theory of Suicide.

By Charles G. Rose

The skeleton of Morgan P. Moorer, who mysteriously disappeared from the campus last February, was found by three geological students while making a topographical survey four miles southeast of Chapel Hill late Thursday afternoon. Glenn Holder, and Frank Parker, close friends of the missing boy, identified the bones to be those of Moorer by means of a belt and a pistol which were found with the skeleton.

C. S. Maurice, A. R. Monroe, and E. R. Scott, the three students who found the remains of the missing young man, were surveying in the neighborhood of the rifle range Thursday, when one of the lines of their survey had to be made through a clump of thick undergrowth. In order to clear the brush, one of the students chopped away the growth with an axe, human bones being revealed.

The students immediately came to town and reported to Dr. S. A. Nathan, county coroner, who with a small band went out to the spot. The skull of the body had rolled down the small knoll on which the skeleton lay, and was found at the bottom of the hill with a pistol ball through both temples. One shot had been fired from the pearl-handled revolver which lay by the remains. The clothes were in shreds, and a belt bearing the letter "M" was around the skeleton. After some little difficulty the name of an Asheville tailor firm was distinguished on what was left of the label in the coat. The skeleton was unquestionably identified to be that of Moorer.

Mrs. Eva Moorer, mother of the boy, was immediately notified. Mrs. Moorer, who is at present working with the government in Washington, D. C., believed her son to be alive until she received word yesterday by a telephone call from President-elect Graham, of the discovery of the bones. She is on her way here now, and will probably accompany the remains, which are now in Andrews funeral home, to Asheville, where she lived at the time of the boy's disappearance.

Moorer, a freshman in the University, was staying out in a residence in town when he was last seen. On February 28, 1930, he left his rooming-place without leaving any word as to where he was going or when he would return. For some days, Mrs. Moorer said later, she had received no word from her son. When he left, however, a letter was found on a table in his room addressed to his mother. The only things which were found missing were a pearl-handled pistol, and a flashlight, both of which were found with his bones. A light blue-serge top coat together with his daily

Conference Boxing

Today the Southern Conference will announce dates and places for several tournaments and contests to be held this winter and spring. Carolina is understood to be bidding for the two track meets and the tennis tournament. The possibilities are that we will land at least one of these here if not more. Conditions are splendid for staging a track meet here. Undoubtedly the equipment of the University is as good as found in the South for those two sports. But where will the boxing tournament be held?

Since the introduction and recognition of boxing in the South the University of Virginia has been awarded the tournament each year. It is true that until the past two years interest in boxing in Virginia was higher than anywhere else in the South. Now Carolina and Duke both draw good crowds for dual meets, and a conference meeting at either place would draw even better.

Other institutions have recognized boxing and the sport is undoubtedly advancing rapidly in the South. Changing the place of tournaments every few years stimulates interest and encourages the sport. Admitting that the tournaments have been staged well at Virginia we think a change advisable.

We do not know what institutions are bidding for this year's tournament, but if Duke University is seeking it, we heartily endorse their position. North Carolina backs intercollegiate boxing and Duke is not only centrally located but has the facilities necessary for such an event. Carolina is not seeking the tournament this year, but while there is so much talk of friendship between the two Universities a little cooperation would bring to North Carolina the 1931 boxing tournament.

The Federation Looks Up

The National Student Federation of America is to meet in the heart of Dixie during the Christmas holidays. In past years this announcement to the effect that the organization would meet for its annual congress at Atlanta would have occasioned but mild interest.

There are reasons why the National Federation up until this year has attracted only casual interest. Like so many student and Sunday school conventions the delegates have taken advantage of the expense money, which was given them in order to make the trip, to have one grand time and a glorified vacation. Usually these conventions have provided an opportunity to meet a lot of pretty and clever girls, engage in a few fraternal stag parties (which never appear in the official reports), and most puerile of all to gossip through the medium of so-called discussions on honor systems, fraternities, athletics, scholarships, etc.—the sum total of the discussions being minus zero. The Federation during the first two years of its existence was no exception to the rule.

This past year instead of the usual sophomoric idealism, ignoring of the facts, and ineffective propaganda, the National Student Federation of America has actually come to life. An active president has traveled over the country this year laying the foundation for an organized student opinion; there has been an excellent news system for college newspapers inaugurated; and an actually forward-forward program for the annual congress has been drawn up.

Students who are of the opinion that the Federation has a definite place in student life welcome these signs of virility.—JACK D.

OPEN FORUM

THAT DUKE GAME

To the Editor:

Since the game Saturday with Duke, there has been a great deal of controversy relative to the feasibility of having a post-season game. The merits of such a proposal have been discussed at length both on the campus and throughout the state.

Why can't we have that game? The game Saturday satisfied no one. The spectators who came here with the expectation of seeing a scrap, were perforce disappointed. The pre-game tension, such as a game with Duke, by its very nature, always causes, has not been released. I for one, anticipated this game with more emotional excitement than all the rest put together. The fires of speculation and nervous tension still smolder in the breasts of the students and the alumni of Duke and Carolina. According to Drs. Jordan and Dashiell, from a standpoint of psychology, an expression and release of such pent up emotion is extremely beneficial to the parties concerned. A post-season game with Duke would accomplish this purpose precisely.

It has been argued that to play the game would hinder students in their preparation for examinations. This objection can be obviated at the start, by playing the game on New Years Day. Since this is a holiday, it would also mean a larger attendance.

This raises the question of the hardship it would work on the players. To my mind this is the greatest objection to playing the game. I realize that it would be asking a lot of them; both from a standpoint of a sacrifice of time, and the meticulous exactions of keeping training. But I believe they will all be on hand ready to go if the game is played.

the very existence of this Union. relieve the unemployed in this state, it will offset the hardship they will have to undergo. The revenue from football supports practically all other athletics at the University. This makes for better physical training and development. Why not let the proceeds from this one game go to the people throughout the state who are at present unable to find employment; to those who contribute with their labor to the very existance of this Union.

The argument has been advanced that this is not the proper method of solving the unemployment situation. I submit that the $30,000 or $40,000 would be a great step in this direction. The benefits that would accrue to the unemployed are too obvious to merit a further encroachment on the space of this paper. As an example, what would $30,000 as a loan fund to the students of this University who are unable to find employment mean? In support of this contention consider the fact that our government sanctioned the Army and Navy game for this very purpose. Here is an opportunity for the University to help in a constructive and tangible manner.

The plan of the News and Observer to sell tickets to an imaginary game is a noble gesture. Its purpose is unquestionably altruistic. But it will fail to get the results that the plan advocated, as to a post-season game, would. It is similar to what a North Carolina negro said when told of a fabulous reward offered for the return and capture of an escaped circus lion "It's a mighty good opportunity for somebody —somebody else." The plan cannot bring in the revenue that this game would. Football fans will part with their money gladly to witness such a contest. To those that would say it will be difficult to carry out this proposal, I would reply, let us "Do a little evil for a greater good."

WANTS HIS BURLAP

To the Editor:

If you would like to know exactly how high the campus of the University of North Carolina rates in honesty I can tell you. I have been able for a year to park my car wherever I like in the town of Chapel Hill, including the main road that runs through the campus, and the Library parking spaces, without having objects stolen from within the car. Thursday night, however, it was parked in front of Steele Dormitory next to the Playmakers' Theatre. If anything could be called the heart of the campus, that might. In the car were two objects: a girl's hat, and a piece of burlap, block-printed with green paint. The girl's hat was not taken, the other was. They both belong to someone else. I thank a kind heaven that at least one of them was left me. The other is a work of art made to order for a friend of mine, and irreplaceable. I would gladly give a reward if the possessor of the burlap would return it to me. It has no intrinsic value, but was made to hang in a certain spot in a certain room and represents hours of planning and collaboration between three people. Will the proud possessor please take pity on me and return the burlap to one who is the soul of secrecy and the essence of discretion?

Hopefully,
R. Valentine, Box 30.

MOORER'S BODY IS FOUND NEAR RIFLE RANGE

wearing apparel was all else which was missing from his room. A check for thirty dollars, just received from his mother, was found in his room.

Friends of the missing student stated that he was known to be fond of classical music and writings of Edgar Allen Poe. Moorer was described as being of a solitary, erratic disposition, and subject to moods of depression. It was feared at the time of his disappearance that he was mentally unbalanced.

As soon as it was reported that the student was missing, searching parties were sent out immediately and the entire district around this vicinity was covered. Nothing was found of the lost boy, but reports have come in continually of persons having seen him in various places over the country. A nation-wide search was conducted, but no definite evidence could be found of his existence. Reports from Asheville, Reidsville, Tampa, Florida; Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Wilmington, Delaware; Los Angeles, California; Denver, Colorado, and several other places in the country came in saying that a boy answering to Moorer's description had been seen.

Again this fall Mrs. Moorer came to Chapel Hill and another search was made of the land around this section. Moody W. Lloyd, with the aid of numerous students and Chapel Hill scouts, again scoured the woods with the aid of maps, but nothing was found. One of the searchers stated that the parties passed within a few feet of the place where Moorer lay, but because of the dense undergrowth he was not found.

Some of the searching parties, knowing that the lost boy enjoyed classical music, took a phonograph out one night and played the records all night in the hopes that if the lad was wandering around in the woods he would come near. The log hut in which these classical records were played is said to have been only a short distance from the place where the remains were found.

The letter addressed to his mother was found in the boy's room, was examined by one of the psychology professors here, who stated that Moorer was suffering from a mental disorder when the letter was written.

STEPPING INTO A MODERN WORLD

6-ton reels of cable distributed with the speed of perishable food

A carload of telephone poles laid down a thousand miles away within 36 hours after getting the order! Rush calls of this sort must frequently be handled by Western Electric, distributors for the Bell System.

But even more remarkable is the regular day by day flow of telephone supplies. The Chicago warehouse—one of 32 in the national system—handles 1,400 orders a day. In 1929 more than $400,000,000 worth of equipment and materials was delivered to the telephone companies.

Distribution on so vast a scale presents many interesting problems to Bell System men. The solutions they work out mean much in keeping this industry in step with the times.

The opportunity is there!

VETERANS SHOW ABILITY

No Pre-Season Games Scheduled Due To Approaching Examinations.

An intensive scrimmage in which every man on the squad took part was the most important thing in Thursday's basketball work out. A large crowd, who witnessed the semi-finals of the intramural boxing bouts, stayed to see the practice, and they were well satisfied with the general condition of the squad.

Coach Ashmore started the temporary first and second string lineups in the scrimmage, but soon sent in his third, fourth, fifth and sixth stringers. The Tar Heels continue to improve with every work out, their passing and floor work approaching perfection. "Sandy" Dameron, Captain Marpet, and Tommy Cleland continue to show the best pre-season form of the candidates, Dameron showing all of his old ability to score on follow-ups under the hoop, Captain Marpet starring with his close guarding of opposing forwards and ability to score on long shots, and Cleland displaying unusual agility in moving about and cutting in to receive passes and score.

Upsetting the precedent of former years, the Tar Heels will not engage in any pre-season games with nearby "Y" teams, since the approaching examinations will take up all the time of the athletes.

The first string lineup: Marpet and Edwards, guards; Cleland and Hines, forwards; and Dameron, center.

STROWD AGENCY AIDS UNEMPLOYED

Bruce Strowd, who is acting as the employment agency for Chapel Hill, reports that he has received applications for positions from 20 colored women, forty-two colored men, and thirteen white persons. Thirty-four of those applying for positions have been assigned work.

The committee in charge of unemployment now has about $110, which it has received as receipts from the charity motion picture and from individual subscriptions, with which to employ men to work on various public improvements. It is due to the suggestion of this committee that cedar trees have been placed along Franklin street.

Carolina Alumni Prominent Among Election Winners

Alumni of the University gained a sweeping victory in the recent elections on November 4. Seven of ten places in North Carolina's delegation to the national House of Representatives, thirty-two of the fifty seats in the state Senate and thirty-nine of the 120 seats in the state House of Representatives, and numerous judgeships, solicitor's posts and minor state and county offices were won by Carolina alumni.

University gains in the state Legislature were especially noteworthy. Two years ago fifty-nine University alumni were elected to places in the state Legislature, in contrast to seventy-one this year.

The seven University men who go to Washington for the next session of Congress are: Lindsay C. Warren, '08; C. L. Abernethy, '95: Edward W. Pou, '84; Frank W. Hancock, Jr., '16; J. Bayard Clark, '05; A. L. Bulwinkle, '04; Zebulon Weaver, '95.

Conference Decides To Hold Indoor Track Meet Here For Second Year

Rejects Invitation of University for Tennis Tournament—Constitution Committee Favors Abolishing Spring Football Practice—Alabama Permitted to Play In Rose Bowl Tourney.

Heated discussion over the proposed amendments to the by-laws and constitution of the Southern Conference kept the delegates busy until a late hour last night at the Carolina Inn. Twenty-two changes were proposed, and the proponent of each measure had the right to the floor to support the measure.

Forest Fletcher, faculty chairman of athletics at Washington and Lee University, proposed that "No institution which is a member of the Southern Conference shall be permitted to conduct spring football practice." This proposal was approved by the committee on constitution at the afternoon session in Bingham hall yesterday, and created no little comment.

When the recommendation was read to the conference by M. J. White of Tulane University, a general disapproval of the amendment was evident in the hall. Many of the coaches and athletic directors in the conference voiced their disapproval at the meeting last night, and it is not believed that it will pass. The final decision on the matter will come this morning when a vote is taken on the change in the executive session.

"No freshman students shall be allowed to assemble for practice before September 20," reads an amendment proposed by A. H. Armstrong of Georgia Tech. This proposal was opposed by the constitution committee, but because of the connection with the recent difficulty at the University of Tennessee, this proposed amendment created much discussion last night.

A crowd numbering well over one hundred, which included the delegates of the conference, representatives of the press, and guests of the University, attended the dinner at the Carolina Inn last night. President Frank Graham of the University and Governor O. Max Gardner were the principal speakers at the affair.

Indoor Track Meet Here

The conference accepted the invitation of the University to hold the annual indoor track meet and field meet here on March 7. The report of the committee was favorable to the annual holding of such a meet, and to the way in which the University carried out the tourney last winter.

A bid by the University for the tennis tournament was rejected, and a vote of the conference decided that the racket championship again will be decided at Tulane University, New Orleans.

Basketball Tourney to Atlanta

The annual basketball tournament was scheduled for Atlanta as usual, the dates being February 27, 28, March 1 and 2. Birmingham was chosen as the location for the annual outdoor track and field tournament for the third successive year, the dates to be May 6 and 7.

The University of Virginia will again be hosts to the boxing teams of the conference on February 27-28. The wrestling tournament was awarded to Washington and Lee University.

The golf tournament will be in Athens, Georgia, April 30, May 1 and 2, under the auspices of the University of Georgia.

Alabama to Rose Bowl

A motion from the floor to permit the University of Alabama to play in the Rose Bowl football game to "lick the stuffings" out of Washington State was passed, President Dougherty declaring, "The ayes have it with feeling."

"Big Ten" Not Discussed

The attention of the conference up until last night had not been directed toward the consideration of forming a "Big Ten" conference in the South, and it is highly improbable that it will be taken up at this session. However, it is possible that it will receive some consideration at the executive session this morning.

PHI KAPPA SIGMA TAKES INITIAL PING-PONG BOUT

Intramural ping-pong, unthought of before this year and once held in contempt of all intramural athletics and indoor sports, received a boost in the direction of becoming a recognized sport when the Phi Kappa Sigma paddle-wielders defeated the Chi Phi ping-pong team in one of the season's first contests Thursday night.

Both teams seemed well-versed in back-table play and all contestants were rather evenly matched although the Phi Kap team finally came out ahead in the miniature tennis contest with a four to one lead.

Markham, playing number one for the Phi Kaps, defeated Hudson, Chi Phi; Odum had the better of his contest with Sherfesee; Reid bettered Scheidt; and Winston defeated Parrish; while Withers beat Barnhill to account for the only Chi Phi win.

WADSWORTH, GOLD STARS

Holderness Meets Stiff Opposition in Hudson and Denny To Retain Crown.

According to Carolina boxing coaches and intramural officials, a crop of exceedingly promising men was discovered in the recent ring intramurals. During the progress of the tourney a number of upperclassmen and freshmen scrappers put in their bid for ring honors and will do much to augment the undergraduate boxing squads this winter.

The majority of the men participating in the forty odd matches have been out for boxing all quarter but the work of a number of unheralded newcomers was notably outstanding. Of the six finalists, three were freshmen, and several of these untrained.

In the opinion of Archie Allen, assistant boxing coach and former Southern Conference light weight champion, a spirit of friendly aggressiveness and good sportsmanship prevailed throughout the tourney. Most of the fights were close and hotly contested to the end and indicated the gameness of the men.

Among the newcomers, Alan Smith, featherweight, Greer, heavyweight, Bob Gold, lightweight, and Jim Wadsworth, lightheavyweight, were outstanding. Although Gold was the only one to win a title, the other three men went to the finals and lost only after hard fights in which they were handicapped by lack of experience.

Smith and Wadsworth handled themselves especially well, and deserve credit for their work. Smith drew the stiffest opposition in the tournament. Before the fights, Cal Todd, defending featherweight champion, Fred Wardlaw, and Furches Raymer ranked as favorites, but Smith, after drawing a bye in the first round, defeated Fred Wardlaw and Todd only to lose the title by a knockout at the hands of Furches Raymer, the hardest puncher in the division.

Cliff Glover's showing in downing George Biggs and "Speedy" Boring marks him as one of the best prospects of the year. Glover had never been in the ring prior to this fall, but under the guidance of Coaches Rowe and Allen he has come along fast, and won his title decisively Thursday night.

Mr. Crowther was formerly president of the Cambridge Union Society, and is at present employed in New York City. Mr. Holdsworth has been at Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, since October, 1928. He was elected to the committee of the Union Society while he was a freshman, the only man having this honor. He is vice-president of the Marshall society and editor of the college magazine.

Fleming-Jones represented the Dialectic Senate in the Mary D. Wright debate this year. Williams has taken part in numerous debates at the University. He won the Mary D. Wright debate medal and the Bingham medal last year. He was a representative of the University against State College this year. These men have been studying the subject since October 16 and have attended several lectures on the subject. The first of these was given by L. M. to spend money for an extensive program of internal improvement such as the building of a national highway system.

The Democratic party according to Professor Kendrick made the mistake of not following the progressive policy carried out by Woodrow Wilson. If the Democratic party wishes to serve the best interests of the country, it should advocate in 1932 a policy requiring governmental influence in industry. The government should be used as a balance wheel in business. Governor Roosevelt is a man who will admirably direct this policy.

Governor Gardner has a wonderful opportunity to aid the future of the Democratic party by appointing a man who understands the financial and economic problems of the present. Such a man, believes Professor Kendrick, can be found in the Universities of the state, for here men are trained in finance and government and understand modern problems. A party politician or a man aligned with power or business interests would not have the impartial point of view necessary in attacking the complicated problems which confront the Senate now.

BYRD CHOSEN TO HEAD SOUTHERN COACHING BODY of a burden or two in his talk last night, speaking on the best coaching job in the South this season, and on the stabilizing of the coaching profession.

With all due respect to friend Wallace Wade, Coach Byrd, averred that the best coaching job in the southern conference this year was even placed the Lexington mentor in done by Bill Raftery of V. M. I. He a class above the Great Rockne.

"Rockne had the material," Byrd said, "and Raftery didn't. Raftery had many boys on his squad this year who didn't know a football from an onion."

Wants Stabilization

Coach Byrd was keen for stabilizing the coaching profession, nothing that there were only three men present who were in the coaching business 10 years ago. Coach Byrd was moved to remark that there must be something wrong with the attitude of mind of administrative authorities. He thought the coaches association could help greatly toward "correcting this attitude."

A football coach, he said should have the same stability as a teacher. How many teachers would last he wanted to know, were they placed against the same killing competition as the coaches. College presidents, he said, are too prone to yield to alumni pressure.

Dan McGugin Speaks

Uncle Dan McGugin of Vanderbilt, who presided, agreed with Byrd. "There are no men in America who rank any higher in candor or high purpose than football coaches," Uncle Dan said.

Harry Mehre of Georgia, thought the officiating in the south this fall was the equal if not the superior of that of any section.

Favor Spring Practice

The Southern coaches last night went on record as favoring spring football practice.

The vote was taken after Coach "Curley" Byrd said he understood action was to be taken in this matter tomorrow at the meeting of the athletic directors and faculty representatives of the Southern conference in Chapel Hill tomorrow.

It was passed unanimously although Raftery, of Virginia Military Institute, said it would make no difference to him if spring practice was discontinued.

At the dinner last night which was under the auspices of the University of North Carolina the coaches voted to appoint a committee to investigate the matter of having a commissioner who would take charge of appointment of officials at Southern conference games.

'SCHOOL' CARRIES ARTICLE WRITTEN BY R. M. GRUMMAN

New York Magazine Includes Article Dealing With University Extension Division.

The current issue of School; a magazine devoted to the public schools and educational interests of America, which is published in New York and has a wide circulation throughout the country, carries as one of its features a long article on the extension division of the University. Written by Russell M. Grumman, director of the extension division, the article gives a complete outline of the activities of the division and its relationship with the life of the state since its organization in 1921.

The article is illustrated with photos of the University library and of President-elect Frank Graham.

"The term 'university extension'," states the article, "has come to be quite generally understood in North Carolina to mean an important source of educational service. Since 1921 the division has registered a total of 22,692 correspondence and extension class students. While most of these students have never been on the campus, they have nevertheless come into vital contact with the University and have profited by its existence.

"It is conservatively estimated that the numerous other activities conducted by the division serve each year more than 40,000 persons with regular educational assistance. Over one hundred and fifty courses are offered by correspondence instruction. Many of these courses are adapted to the study habits and interests of adult students who do not wish to obtain college credit. They may be pursued by any mature person regardless of his previous education, provided he satisfies the instructor of his ability to follow the course of study profitably."

Each of the different phases of the division are then taken up in detail and discussed briefly as to their objective and function, with emphasis on the fact that the extension division is not a commercial enterprise, but is devoted to rendering service to the people of the state as economically and effectively as possible, and to relating itself to the needs of the entire state.

Many Applications Already Received For Student Loans

The Federal Reserve Bank of Chapel Hill is a title which might with some consistency be applied to the Dean of Students office where 350 applications for financial assistance have been interviewed this fall. As a result of these interviews, $20,515 has been loaned to 237 students, the average size of each loan being approximately $86.00.

Due to the financial conditions in North Carolina at present, the amount loaned this fall is more than twice that loaned the fall quarter of 1929. This increase has been made possible through the assistance of the Alumni Loyalty Fund Board of Directors and through the establishment of two new loan funds since commencement. In all probability, most of the men receiving loans would be out of school now except for such help as they receive from the loan fund.

Final Issue

This edition will be the last issue of the Daily Tar Heel until Tuesday, January 6, after the Christmas holidays. In order that the members of the staff may have a short time in which to prepare for examinations, publication will be suspended when this paper is delivered to you.

To the members of the student union, the Daily Tar Heel sends its best wishes for success on examinations and happy holiday.

YOUNG LAWYERS MUST WORK AND LEARN STATUTES

Two State Barristers Give Youngsters Valuable Advice In Law School Lecture.

Pointing out that real property transactions are governed almost entirely by specific statutes, Charles T. Boyd of the Greensboro bar, speaking here Friday, urged the University law students to "Know your statutes." His general topic was a discussion of the practical aspect of title abstracting.

Mr. Boyd followed George Wright of the Asheville bar as the second prominent lawyer the University law school has brought in to address students on title abstracting, the lectures being on a law school association program designed to bring the actual practice of the law office more closely to students of theoretical side of the law. Mr. Boyd's lecture was followed yesterday by actual practice in abstracting of titles in the Orange county court house at Hillsboro for the students of the property classes.

Then, again yesterday, the practical "hoss-sense" side of the legal profession, along with many valuable suggestions as to pleading cases, were brought vividly to the law students in a lecture on "Preparation of Trial Briefs," by John M. Robinson, prominent Charlotte attorney.

"Practicing law is no child's play, Mr. Robinson said, "and if you don't want to work and work, don't go into it, because it will take everything you've got physically and mentally." He urged the necessity of "soaking" oneself in facts, regardless of the work or trouble involved.

Giving valuable information about appearing before the jury, Mr. Robinson declared that "a jury will stand for anything but trying to fool them."

UNIVERSITY MEN DEBATE BRITISH

The first debate between Cambridge University and the University of North Carolina took place last night in Gerrard hall at eight-thirty.

The English debaters arrived yesterday afternoon from South Carolina where they had met a team representing Winthrop College. To date they have met, besides the University and Winthrop, Emory, Kansas College, and the University of Georgia.

In the debate last night Mr. Geoffrey Crowther teamed with J. C. Williams to uphold the negative of the question against McB. Fleming-Jones and Mr. Albert E. Holdsworth, on the proposition that the emergence of woman from the home is a regrettable feature of modern life.

Cain Was Drill-Master Of Confederates At Fourteen

By R. W. Madry

Barely 14 years of age when the War Between the States broke out, the boy was too young to be admitted into the Confederate Army, even though more manpower was the cry of the hour.

But the youth of 14 was a precocious youngster. At the Hillsboro Military Academy, the boy evidenced a genius for military tactics and a rare aptitude in his other studies.

The war was not more than a few weeks old before the call for men to drill the raw troops became incessant. Realizing that the available officers could never supply the demand for drill masters, the eyes of the Confederate high command naturally turned toward the military academies. William Cain was the precocious youth of 14 at Colonel Tew's Hillsboro Academy.

Evidently Colonel Tew was a great inspiration to young Cain, for in the latter's autobiography, which I have been permitted to see for the first time, the author says: "I attribute my proficiency and enthusiasm for the military entirely to Colonel Tew. He was the only man in command of troops I never knew to make a mistake, even of the most trivial kind, and his example was an inspiration."

How He Became Drill-Master

It was not long, however, before the faculty and a large part of the corps of cadets had entered the Confederate Army, and the school was closed. Young Cain tried to get into the Army. He was turned down flatly, but they valued his military proficiency so much that they commissioned him a drill-master. That was about July 1, 1861. The boy took the oath to the Confederacy in a little law office in Raleigh and was sent to Camp Crabtree, near that city, where he was assigned to a tent near that of General J. Johnston Pettigrew.

For exactly four and a half months this 14-year-old boy drilled large bodies of troops, many of whom were old enough to be his father.

Young Cain had been at Camp Crabtree only a few weeks when men from the Confederate Camp at Asheville came down to look for drill-masters. The youth was assigned to Camp Patton, on the outskirts of Asheville, where he continued to drill troops for several months.

Colonel Dearing's Estimate

The 25th North Carolina Regiment was organized about three months later, and was ordered to the defense of Port Royal, South Carolina. William Cain was sent with this outfit. Port Royal was captured by the Federals before the Confederates could arrive, and the latter were ordered to take to the woods near the Savannah River.

"I asked Dearing (in command) what my place was in case of a fight," Major Cain says in his autobiography. "He replied that I must act as his aide. However, my luck failed me again, for as there could be no drilling in the woods, all the drill-masters (five, I think) were ordered home."

Colonel Dearing evidently was greatly impressed by the lad, for he said he considered him the best drill-master he had seen in the Confederate Army.

That, in a roundabout way, is the story of how the late Major William Cain, professor emeritus of mathematics in the University of North Carolina, whose death in Chapel Hill a week ago is being mourned by thousands of former students and associates, came to be a drill-master at the tender age of 14.

It is a remarkable story of how genius triumphed over age and numerous other difficulties. It indicates, in some measure, the qualities of a man who in later years was to become one of the country's most distinguished scientists.

Begs to Enter Army

After being discharged as drill-master and ordered back to school, young Cain went to Raleigh, where he spent an hour begging Adjutant-General Martin to let him remain in the Army. General Martin refused on the ground of the youth's age. Cain then went to Governor Ellis (but the Governor sided with General Martin, and the boy who had prepared hundreds of soldiers for the Army was forced to go back to school.

He was to see further service before the war ended, however. In 1862 the Hillsboro Military Academy was re-opened under the superintendency of Major W. M. Gordon. Cain was among those who re-entered, "and the work went on in its customary way, except that there was a consciousness present among the faculty and students that the school had become in fact a school for war."

In December, 1864, when Fort Fisher was threatened, the "Home-Guard" was called out. It was Christmas vacation time for the schoolboys at the Hillsboro Military Academy, but William Cain joined the company from Hillsboro. The company got no farther than Goldsboro, however, "for Bragg, for some unknown reason," Major Cain recounts, "would not send his land forces to the defense of Fort Fisher, which was finally taken after furious bombardments by a land attack."

Led in Scholarship

During the latter part of his stay at the Hillsboro Academy, Cain, who led his class in scholarship and was the ranking cadet captain, took special advanced work and did some teaching. In 1865 he left and studied law under his grandfather, Judge John L. Bailey, for almost a year.

And here comes another unusual incident in the life of this remarkable man. He had finished his law course and was ready to begin practice. But when he applied for admission to the state bar, he was politely but firmly informed that he was too young to receive a license.

So Cain returned to the Hillsboro Academy, then known as the North Carolina Military Polytechnic Institute, where he graduated in 1866, with the degree of master of arts, which the institution had been empowered to confer by the University of North Carolina. He was the only graduate the school ever had.

These and other equally interesting facts regarding Major Cain's career have been secured from a number of sources, but the writer is indebted chiefly to Dr. Archibald Henderson, who has permitted him to read Major Cain's autobiography; to Dr. J. G. DeRoulhac Hamilton for a biographical sketch of the Major in Ashe's History; and to a Miss Lucy Cobb for information contained in a newspaper feature story.

Gets Into Engineering

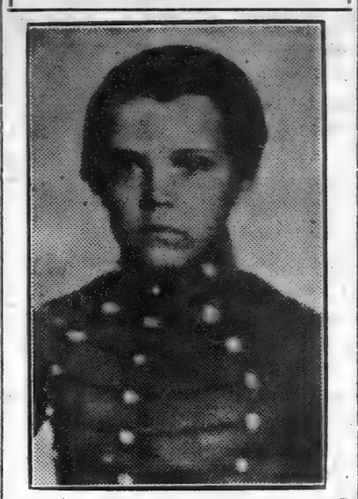
After being refused a license to practice law because he was judged too young, William Cain found a job with W. C. Kerr, state geologist, and was employed for some time in measuring the altitude of mountains and in similar work. As a result of this work he made a map of the state.

"In 1868 the need of more remunerative employment led him into active engineering work, and he was engaged in this with various railroads in the state and with conspicuous success until 1874," when, due to the deplorable conditions of Reconstruction Days, railroad construction ceased, Dr. Hamilton points out in his sketch.

Cain then accepted a position as professor of mathematics and engineering in the Carolina Military Institute in Charlotte. There he remained until 1880, when he once more began surveying and general engineering work. In this he continued for two years.

In 1882 he was called to the South Carolina Military Academy, at Charleston, as ranking professor, remaining there for seven years. At the Citadel he had the rank of major in the state service, and by this title he was generally known up to the time of his death. At the time he left Citadel, it is said the Board of Visitors was contemplating offering him the position of superintendent.

Major Cain came to the University of North Carolina faculty in 1888, succeeding the late Professor Ralph H. Graves as head of the department of mathematics and engineering. Here in Chapel Hill he had remained until the time of his death. He was recognized as a teacher of the first rank, but he did not allow his duties as teacher to prevent original investigation.



Many of his works are used as texts in the leading technical schools of the country. In a practical way his works have been used in the water-works system of New York City, the Pennsylvania Railroad, and on the arches of the Brooklyn Bridge.

MANAGEMENT IS TO BE EXPLAINED AT TAYLOR MEET

P. H. H. Dunn of United States Bureau of Standards To Speak Monday.

"Standardization and Simplification in Modern Management" will be the subject of the address of P. H. H. Dunn, of the Bureau of Standards of the United States department of Commerce when he will speak at the last regular meeting this quarter of the Taylor Society, tomorrow night.

Mr. Dunn's talk will be confined to thirty minutes discussion of the modern methods of business management. Following this, time for questions and discussions which may arise is to be reserved. Mr. Dunn has stated that he more than welcomes questions regarding specific phases of simplified practice advocated by the Bureau of Standards.

Mr. Dunn is the fifth speaker to address the Taylor Society this quarter on the subject of modern business methods and management, a topic which the organization has chosen for discussion this year.

The meeting tomorrow night will last only an hour and will not conflict with the "Messiah", the annual production of the community chorus. The society will convene promptly at seven o'clock in 103 Bingham and will be open to the public.

Town Transformed With Decorations Along Main Street

Cinderella has nothing over the business section of Chapel Hill. The block or two of business establishments have been completely transformed by the approach of Christmas. More than ever the stores are vieing with each other in tasteful decorations for the holiday season.

Electric lights in many forms and colors adorn the fronts of buildings, along with wreaths of holly and cedar, and small cedars line the streets. These were put in place through labor secured by the Strowd employment agency for the relief of the unemployed.

The community Christmas tree, which heretofore has been placed on the campus, has been erected on the edge of the sidewalk in front of the Methodist church so that it may be in a more conspicuous place. This was put up last Thursday.

BELL TOWER TO BE READY FOR FALL DEDICATION

Morehead - Patterson Memorial Tower To Be Finished Time of Thanksgiving Game.

It is probable that just a little while before Carolina and Virginia begin their annual Thanksgiving football game, November 26, 1931, the Morehead-Patterson Memorial Tower will be dedicated. Negotiations have progressed so fast that it is thought that the tower will be completed and the chime and clock will be installed by that time.

John Motley Morehead and Rufus L. Patterson, donors of the tower, were students at the University nearly half a century ago. Mr. Morehead is at present United States minister to Sweden. During his leave of absence in this country since October, he has been engaged in matters concerned with the building.

McKim, Mead, and White, consulting engineers of the University, are working on the drawings for the tower.

Meneely Bell Company in New York is to make the chime which is to consist of twelve bells ranging in weight from 350 pounds to almost two tons and weighing altogether 14,300 pounds. The largest bell is to be sixty inches high and fifty-eight inches in diameter. The chime is like the West Point chime which William R. Meneely president of the Meneely Company, stated has been termed by bell musicians as the best in the country and by some as the best in the world.

According to a statement made by Mr. Meneely, the process of attunement is slow. Probably more than 150 bells will be tested in order to secure the right pitch without materially changing the bell.

When the chime is completed, Harold S. Dyer, head of the department of music of the University will go to Troy, New York to hear it next September.

Howard Clock Company has the contract for making the clock.

LIBRARY HOURS DURING HOLIDAY

The regular hours for the library will be continued through Friday, December 19. The following day, Saturday, the library will open as usual at eight-thirty but will close at five o'clock.

During the holidays the hours will be from nine till five except on Sundays, Christmas, and New Year's Day, when it will be closed altogether. The reserve room will not be open, but books on reserve may be gotten through the circulation desk. The regular schedule will be resumed on Saturday, January 3.

Christmas Cantata

The Methodist church choir will present a Christmas cantata, "The Adoration," by George B. Nevin, at eight p. m. tonight.

Mr. Thor Martin Johnson and Mr. James Pfohl have had direction of the chorus of twenty-five voices and an orchestra of thirteen pieces in preparation for the presentation. "The Adoration" will be sung in the auditorium of the church and the public is cordially invited to attend.

A Suggestion To the Governor

When Governor Gardner begins consideration of possible appointees to the vacancy in the United States Senate created by the death of Senator Overman he will do well to consider the name of Prof. R. D. W. Connor.

Mr. Connor is eminently qualified for the position. As secretary of the State Historical Commission he gained an intimate knowledge of North Carolina and of its people. As professor of history and government at the University he is familiar with the art of government, and he is considered by many to possess the most accurate knowledge of North Carolina history of any living person.

But it is not alone for these qualifications that we suggest Professor Connor. Friday night Prof. B. B. Kendricks predicted that unless the Democratic party fearlessly opposed the pampering of big business and fought fearlessly Mellonism and Hooverism it was doomed to defeat. Having no entangling political alliances and not being a candidate for reelection two years hence Mr. Connor would not be forced to play politics but would be free to throw himself into the life of the Senate and of the government fearlessly.

The Greensboro Daily News says in speaking of possible appointments: "There has never been an hour in the history of the state, of the republic, when it might not have been written with truth that 'the times demand men of clear vision, of broad horizons, of poise and known ability.' But it has seldom been so peculiarly true as now. It is a time that especially demands, not the distribution of honors, but the assignment of ability to a share in common labors which are going to require the best in the way of statesmanship this country can supply. It is North Carolina's opportunity to furnish the federal establishment with talent in the art of government that is badly needed, if North Carolina has that sort of talent to furnish."

We know Professor Connor to be a man "of clear vision, of broad horizons, and poise and known ability." And he is above all others "free from suspicion of entanglements." He would serve the state with distinction and ability. His usefulness to the state and to the republic would not be hampered by future elections, inasmuch as Mr. Connor would not be a candidate to succeed himself.

More practical political arguments in his favor are the facts that he resides in the populous fifth Congressional District and that his appointment would solve a pressing political problem of the Governor. This appointment would relieve the Governor of the prospects of disappointing old friends and further antagonizing old enemies. But we are not interested in the solution of the political problems of the Governor. We are not interested in the election two years hence in offering Mr. Connor. We are interested in having North Carolina represented by a man eminently qualified in every respect, absolutely free from political entanglements, and one whose ability and vision is unimpaired and unquestioned.

Sentiment

We don't think his Brittanic majesty will mind our borrowing and perhaps unintentionally misquoting his motto. "Oh God, give us to know the difference between sentiment and sentimentality, to love the one and to despise the other." And sentiment, as intangible as anything can be, obliges us to demand immediate burial for the dead.

The formality is of no consequence to the dead man. But a sentiment of respect that we won't attempt to define is in order. It's not a healthy respect for the water shed, wherever that may be. It's respect to the dead man. And it isn't sentimentality. Some member of some searching party must have scoured his allotted square feet of ground in a slip shod fashion. At any rate, Morgan Moorer lay in the woods nearly ten months.

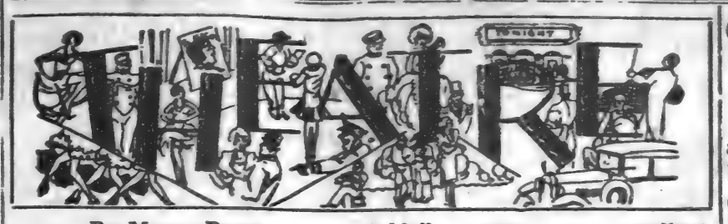
OPEN FORUM

"MR. E. C. D." HAS HIS SAY

"Good morning, Judge." I have been tried, condemned and sentenced to suffer the punishment of J. B. Fisher's flaying invective in Friday morning's paper. My reply to this attack is that I have been unjustly accused.

Mr. Fisher evidently does not approve of the casual manner in which I dispose of "weighty and important matters." But he mistakes my emphatic statements about Bishop Manning, Judge Lindsey and companionate marriage as evidence of some arrogant presumption on my part. I pretend to no wisdom of my own on this subject; I merely reflect the knowledge of the University's sociology department, members of which have opinions on companionate marriage which are equal in authority to those of Lindsey.

What I meant to say in my recent editorial, whether I succeeded or not, was this: Judge Lindsey is guilty of misrepresenting companionate marriage in that he disguises a form of trial marriage, as indicated by his advocacy of easier divorce, under the name "companionate marriage." That phrase was originated by Dr. M. M. Knight and it refers to an orthodox and legal marital contract in which both the man and his wife agree to practice birth control for a stated period of time. It has nothing of the aspect of trial marriage which Judge Lindsey gives it.



I would not presume to discuss Lindsey's views on marriage and divorce. My criticism of him is for deceiving the public as to the actual nature of companionate marriage, as it is represented to me by members of the faculty. At no point in his writings does the Judge give Dr. Knight credit for the origination of the companionate marriage idea. He not only plagiarizes the term, but goes further into the more serious crime of warping its meaning.

Judge Lindsey's over-emphasis of the more sordid elements of the trial marriage theory may be attributed to what I have formerly called his paranoiac tendencies. Ample evidence of his lack of mental balance may be found in his sensationalism on numerous occasions. Even now the press of the nation is condemning his display of irrationality in making a scene in Bishop Manning's church last Sunday.

Since I do not deny Mr. Fishers' privilege of calling me swell-headed and of referring to me in sarcasm as "a commanding genius", I further do not intend to relinquish my right to call Bishop Manning anything I please—that is, anything which is not slanderous and for which I can with safety assume all responsibility. Although I respect the man's apparent intellectual attainment, I still maintain that his persistent opposition to the views of the majority of the younger, liberal-minded clergy of his church on the divorce question is narrow-minded and needlessly dogmatic. As Louis Graves has written in the most recent issue of his Chapel Hill Weekly: "His views on divorce have given evidence enough of his essentially mediaeval outlook and attitude. He is the spiritual descendant of the churchmen of four centuries ago who sought to promote the Kingdom of God by the use of the thumbscrew and the rack."

I judge from the almost uncivil sarcasm of his letter, that Mr. Fisher allowed my previous statements to "get under his skin." Although I may have exceeded the bounds of modesty and propriety somewhat, I assure him that I am no person whose statements are worthy of such concern as he has given them. My editorial was originally intended to inform the campus of the true nature of companionate marriage, as opposed to Lindsey's presentation of it. Whereas I seem to have failed in my first attempt, I hope I have herein succeeded.

The Importance of Being Earnest is sufficiently clever to assure one of a delightful evening, no matter whether one reads it, hears it read, or sees it acted. Therefore, we owe to Oscar Wilde the greater part of our appreciation for an enjoyable three hours at the Playmakers Theatre on Thursday. The play has long since been accepted as one of the outstanding contributions to modern comedy; and while the plot itself is deserving of little more than a musical comedy, the scintillant dialogue and keen repartee justify the play's eminence among dramatic writings, as well as to make it practically actor-proof.

The acting throughout the play was far from satisfactory. At first your reviewer was pleased to notice that the director had realized how absurd it would have been to have attempted to have the actors use an English accent, but as the play progressed it became apparent that to give Wilde in the Southern manner was as absurd as it would have been to have given it with the assumed broad "A". The slurring of "R's" in an English comedy is most congruous. William Figgat as Algernon completely walked away with the honors for the evening. He was the only member of the cast who was able to show an appreciation for Wilde by the portrayal of his character. Mr. Figgat required the majority of the first act in order to get adjusted, but his subsequent performance was well nigh perfect. His handling of the difficult "tea-table" scene was excellent. Henry Wood was very good in the role of John Worthing. Mr. Wood has a very pleasing stage personality and his voice is splendid. Ellen Stewart as Gwendolen Fairfax did the best female characterization, though her performance was by no means exceptionally good as judged by the Playmakers' standards. Sybille Berwanger gave the lines of Cecily Cardew in the manner of a first-year student in a dramatic school; her appearance, however, was quite charming. Rachael Crook butchered the part of Lady Bracknell. Her voice, carriage, and costumes were in no way indicative of this delightful Wilde-an dowager. Theodore Herman did a nice bit of work with the minor role of the Rev. Canon Chasuble, and Walter Grotyohann made an excellent butler.

The scenery for the play was the most artistic that the Playmakers have produced. It is said to be "expressionistic" by the Playmaker officials, and we add that it is of the Post-Wall Street Crash period. Its obvious artificiality is in complete harmony with the spirit of the play. The garden scene, however, is too crowded. If the acting area was larger the illusion of space would be better obtained. The Playmakers and the University are fortunate in having a man of Mr. Selden's ability on the faculty.

The fortunate selection of the play, the acting of Mr. Figgat, and the scenery combined to make the present production a very enjoyable evening.

PRESS PUBLISHES NOBLE'S HISTORY

A History of the Public Schools of North Carolina the latest work of Dr. M. C. S. Noble, dean of the school of education here and a man who has done service for education himself—is to come off the press tomorrow. It is being published by the University Press.

The book is a conprehensive study of education in this state from the earliest colonial time to the latter nineteenth century. It begins with the first attempts at education in the teaching of orphans by persons to whom they were bound and the chartering of the first private schools and concludes with the opening of the Normal and Industrial School in Greensboro, a training school for women.

Southern Conference Rejects Proposal To Halt Spring Football

Request From Football Coaches Override Proposal of Constitution Committee.

DEAN HOBBS RE-ELECTED

University Athletic Chairman Renamed to Place on Executive Body.

Despite the fact that the constitution committee of the Southern Conference recommended an amendment to the by-laws of the constitution prohibiting spring football practice, the conference in executive session at the Carolina Inn yesterday morning voted almost unanimously against the the proposal. The Southern Football Coaches Association voiced its disapproval of the measure at its meeting in Durham Thursday night, and it is believed that the opinion of the coaches was taken into consideration in deciding the matter.

The executive session of the conference lasted for more than four hours, a large calendar of proposed amendments and other business keeping them busy until early in the afternoon. No one other than official delegates were allowed to be present at the meeting but it is understood that all of the business went off smoothly, and that only lengthy discussion slowed up the progress of the meeting.

The University of Tennessee was formally excused from the violation of conference rules in having early football practice for freshmen, when N. W. Dougherty, president of the conference and faculty chairman of athletics at Tennessee, read the report which was accepted by the executive committee, December 3.

Officers Elected

C. L. Hare, faculty chairman of athletics at Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Alabama, was named president of the conference for the 1930-31 year at the election of officers held yesterday shortly before the conference adjourned, thereby succeeding N. W. Dougherty of Tennessee.

C. P. Miles, faculty chairman and director of athletics at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Virginia, was chosen vice-president of the conference, and W. D. Funkhouser, of the University of Kentucky, was reelected secretary.

Dean Hobbs on Committee

The dean of the college of liberal arts in the University, A. W. Hobbs, was reelected to a position on the executive committee of the conference. James J. Doster of the University of Alabama was named for the other vacancy on the executive committee. Acording to the method of election of the conference, only two of the places on the executive body are subject to election each year.

Dean Hobbs has been connected with athletics in the conference for several years, and has taken a leading part in the work of the conference. He is faculty chairman of athletics here in the University, and is largely responsible for the favorable attitude which the faculty holds toward athletic competition.

Junior College Eligibility

S. V. Sanford, chairman of the athletic committee of the University of Georgia, succeeded in getting passed by the conference a ruling which will permit graduates of junior colleges to participate in Southern Conference athletics. The amendment as adopted is as follows: "Graduates of accredited junior colleges shall be eligible to participate in intercollegiate athletics on conference teams their first year, but the time of their participation shall be limited to two years over a period of two college years counting from the time of first matriculation. Non-graduates of accredited junior colleges shall not be eligible until they have been in college one full year, and the time of participation shall be limited to two years over a period of three years, counting from the first matriculation." This is made by way of an addition to the present ruling which permits students from junior colleges to participate after one year residence has expired.

Central Booking Offices

The proposal to create a central office for booking officials for the football games was adopted. According to the provisions of this ruling, officials will be booked on the Sunday following the opening of the Southern Conference Basketball Tournament in Atlanta March 1. This ruling was made so that the regular sessions of the conference in December will not be flooded with requests for favored officials. Under this plan all officials must be booked through this office, and no one may be employed as an official without the consent of the booking agency.

"Paid Athletes" Rules

A group of alumni of the "Big Five" institutions proposed to the conference Friday night that the "paid athlete" rulings be abolished and that it be replaced by a requirement that no student may compete in intercollegiate athletics unless he makes an average of 80 or better on his studies.

Sponsors of the proposal were quoted as saying that the regulations were quite generally disregarded and that they considered their alternative proposal much better in that it would assure a student taking an interest in his work. Dean A. W. Hobbs placed the proposal before the body.

In the executive session yesterday morning the proposal was opposed, no action being taken to change the existing rules.

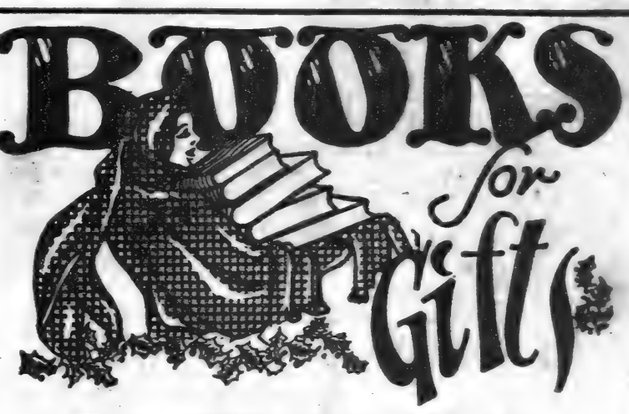
Those interested should attend the staff meeting which has been scheduled for Sunday night, January 4.

SUM OF $781,967 EARNED AT YALE

New Haven, Connecticut, December 13.—A total of $781,967 was earned last year by Yale students from positions recorded through the University bureau of appointments, according to the annual report to President James Rowland Angell by Albert B. Crawford, director of the department of personnel study and the bureau of appointments. Students working their way at present make up more than one-third of the University's total enrollment. Financial aid extended to this group by the University during the college year through scholarships and loans amounted to $535,197, bringing the total of all financial aid and reported earnings to $1,319,544.

Three-quarters of this amount, $993,003, represents assistance rendered to students directly by the University in the form either of financial aid or of employment secured through the bureau of appointments.



The student agencies, which serve various student needs, enjoyed a banner year. The student laundry agency, with forty-five men, earned $2,335. This group of students collects and delivers laundry with its own motor truck. The student suit pressing agency, with 108 men employed, earned $18,427. By waiting on tables in the University and other dining halls, five hundred and forty-three students earned board which otherwise would have represented an outlay of $120,397. Twenty-six students organized boarding tables and earned $6,247. Even by selling neckties, seven students earned $473. Twenty-eight students, who played in dance orchestras earned $9,241. Others sold Christball games, new and old furniture, pipes, shoes, wood, etc. The baseball and football programs, as usual, offered desirable opportunities for earning money by the sale of advertising space.

Some of the varied occupations the students pursue in their efforts to earn all or a part of their expenses are shown in the following kinds of employment: accountant, artist's model, carpenter, chauffeur, blood transfusion donnor, entertainer, pallbearer, photographer, gardner, guide, radio repairman, research worker, stereopticon operator, teacher, tutor, translator, and telephone operator.

Extraordinarily heavy second-term applications for financial aid, due to business and financial reverses in the families of many students not previously needing such assistance, increased the amount of short-term loans, particularly to students in the professional schools. A timely anonymous grant of $5,000 for use in this emergency aided a number of students who otherwise would have been unable to complete the academic year.

CAROLINA PIONEER AMONG SOUTHERN DEBATING CLUBS

Intercollegiate Contests First Staged Here as Early As 1897.

By McBride Fleming-Jones

Intercollegiate debating got its start at Carolina back in '97. The name of Dr. Horace Williams is inseparably connected with that start. He is Carolina's "grand old man" of forensics.

The first intercollegiate debate in which Carolina took part was probably the first in the South, and was with the University of Georgia. Carolina lost this contest, but came back the next year to win. In 1899 and 1900 she repeated the victory, and in the latter year added Vanderbilt to her schedule, defeating her also. The rivalry between Carolina and Georgia continued until 1911. In the period of eleven years the record shows seven victories to three defeats, no contest being held in 1903.

The year 1908 saw a great increase in the interest in debating. Carolina won all four of the meets entered. The next few years had their ups and downs, but Carolina continued her good work winning twice as many debates as she lost, until 1917, after which date stand the two words—"No Debates." One can not help wondering if the record shouldn't read, "No Debaters."

In thirty-three years of intercollegiate debating, the University of North Carolina has participated in over eighty debates, and since she has won over twice as many as she has lost, it must be concluded that the University has been successful in this field. But the best testimony in her favor is the record of the men who have represented Carolina. The roll of former debaters includes such names as Parker, Stacy, Graham, Connor, Brogden, Ruffin and Battle.

Debating at Carolina is under the direction of the Debating Council—a group of students elected by the student union and faculty members appointed by the President. W. W. Speight is president of the present council and George McKie, Professor of Public Speaking, is Secretary.

ALUMNI MEMBERS VISIT DELTA PSI

The local chapter of the Delta Psi fraternity, St. Anthony Hall, was host to a few of the alumni members the past week-end. The chapter entertained their guests at a dinner given at the Inn Saturday night.

John G. Jackson, Daniel Bates, William White, Staples Fuller, Graham Wood, Frank Bird Gummey, George Clifton Kein, A. Sefton Post, and Horace Churchman were guests of the occasion.

Community Chorus To Aid Unemployed

Handel's oratorio, the Messiah, is to be given in the musie auditorium tomorrow night at 8:30 p. m. The community chorus, assisted by artists secured from out in the state and the University symphony orchestra, are giving the concert to help relieve the Orange county unemployment situation. The admission will be fifty cents.

The special artists who have been secured are Edward Molitore, tenor who has just finished a ten-week season with the Cincinnati Opera Company, Mrs. Camilla Molitore, soprano, who has sung as soloist with the St. Louis symphony orchestra, Mme. Emily Berger Cullum, contralto, a prominent Chicago singer, and J. Foster Barnes, bass.

At The Carolina

Monday at the Carolina sees such a list of celebrities as Kay Francis, Charles Bickford, Kay Johnson, Lewis Stone, and Zasu Pitts all grouped in one picture, "Passion Flower," a vitaphone adaptation of the popular novel by Kathleen Norris. The theme is one of modern marital discord and domestic unhappiness, and the successful treatment of plot as well as the portrayal of the background and the excellent casting of the characters assures the picture of success.

The feature Tuesday brings back in full force the comedy team of Charles Rogers and Stuart Erwin. Erwin is said to have "the dumbest looking pan on the screen," and has become well known for his work in such pictures as "Sweetie" and "Only Saps Work." In this comedy-romance-drama of- love (with Francis Dee playing opposite Rogers) and of steeplechases (whereon fortunes are won and lost) Buddy Rogers is seen in a characteristic portrayal of the ardent and successful young lover, while the comically sheepish Erwin pursues, in his bashful way, a parallel romance which has its ups and downs in a big way to furnish much of the hilarity.

Variety in the form of highly entertaining melodrama is offered Wednesday in "Her Man", a film laid exotically in the underworld of Havana and featuring Helen Twelvetrees, Phillip Holmes, and Ricardo Cortez. The action of this feature affords interesting color and adventure, and the climax is as thrilling as it is dramatic.

Another Broadway comedy figure—and this time the Ziegfield Follies cut-up, Ed Wynne—has joined the ranks of Will Rogers, Eddie Cantor, and a host of others who have deserted the musical comedy stage for the talking movies. This well known comedian appears at the theatre Thursday in his vitaphone release "Follow The Leader", in which attraction the inimitable Wynne displays all those talents which have put him in a class by himself as a stage personality.

Friday sees the return—this time to the talking screen—of a well-known and well-loved feature of the old silent days, "Tolable David." This picture follows closely its predecessor except that of course all the usual sound effects distinguish it. A new star has been selected for the leading role to succeed Barthelmess, who established much of his present reputation in the original silent version.

"The Silver Horde' 'is the feature Saturday, and just as one would expect in any kind of adaptation from one of Rex Beach's novels the film thrills with power and pulsating action galore. All the essential qualities of successful talking entertainment are embodied in this story laid in Alaska—romance, intrigue, and sweeping action. Evelyn Brent takes the leading role, supported by Joel McCrea, a newcomer to the screen. Other headliners are Jean Arthur and Louis Wolheim.

taining walls. Only a year ago the late Dean G. M.Braune, in conducting for the American government a series of experiments pertaining to vertical pressures for pipe culverts, made generous use of Major Cain's formulas. The experiments involved large engineering projects connected with water-works and were intended to show the effect of the pressure of earth on pipe culverts. The government thought so highly of this work that it appropriated about $25,000 to enable the University's school of engineering to conduct the experiments, which had important results.

Served University 42 Years

Major Cain was retired from the University faculty on a Carnegie pension in 1920, with the title of professor emeritus, being succeeded by his nephew, Dr. Archibald Henderson. He continued his research projects, however, and was conducting them with a mind that was alert and vigorous to the very day of his death.

The University honored itself a few years ago in conferring on the Major the honorary degree of Doctor of Science. The University of South Carolina awarded him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

In politics Major Cain was always a Democrat, and in his church affiliation he was an Episcopalian. He had never married, and was one of the most popular members of the Bachelor's Club which makes its headquarters here at Mrs. Fred Patterson's home. He was fond of society, a great reader, a keen sportsman, and an accomplished musician. His whole life was one of high endeavor, guided by high ideals and a strict devotion to duty.

DUKE PROFESSOR TO TELL OF TOUR THROUGH RUSSIA

Professor Hoover Gained First-Hand Knowledge of Conditions During a 10,000-Mile Travel.

The department of economics and commerce announces a lecture on Russia, tomorrow night by Professor Calvin B. Hoover, of the department of economics of Duke University.

Professor Hoover spent nine months in Russia under a special grant made by the Social Science Research Council. Before he went he took the trouble of learning the Russian language, so he was not only independent of interpreters, but also had access to data and official reports other than those published for propaganda purposes. Professor Hoover modestly disclaims having traveled "all over Russia," but his 10,000-mile travels took him from the arctic circle to the Trans-Siberian railway along the border of China. Since returning, Professor Hoover has contributed several articles to leading magazines, including the Economic Journal and Harper's, and has in press at the present time a book on Russia.

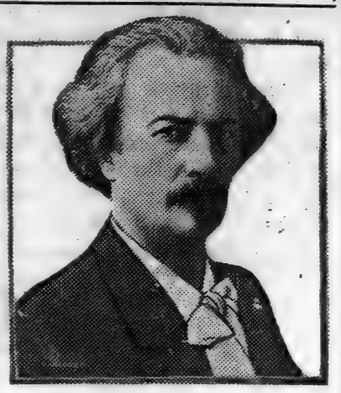
Professor Hoover promised some months ago to visit Chapel Hill for this lecture, but has been unable to find a suitable date heretofore because of speaking engagements at Princeton University. The Foreign Policy Association in New York, the Southern Economic Association in Atlanta, and elsewhere.

He will speak in the auditorium of Bingham hall (room 103).

EVERETT FAVORS SERVICE ROOMS

Students Sign Petition Supporting Retention of Dormitory Stores.

Students in Everett dormitory held a meeting last Monday night in the reception room of the dormitory. Discussion centered on the movement now being pushed by certain outside agencies to abolish all dormitory service rooms. This movement was heartily denounced by everybody present, and a petition was drawn up in which the students of Everett declared their desire for the retention of the dormitory store.



The petition read: "We, the undersigned, do hereby heartily endorse the movement to retain the Dormitory Service Rooms because of: first, the convenience of these Service Rooms to us in handling our laundry, pressing and dry-cleaning, and immediate supplies; second, the elimination of agents disturbing us during study hours.

The following officers were elected: president, A. W. Loving; athletic manager, M. Gitlin; councilmen, Lentz, Shapiro, Cohen, Morris, Roth, and Holder.

Noted Visitor

Miss Louise Pound, one of the most outstanding women professors in the country, was in Chapel Hill recently for a two-day visit with Prof. and Mrs. R. D. W. Connor. Miss Pound is a professor at the Nebraska U.

IGNAZ PADEREWSKI

Internationally famous pianist and composer who is to appear at Duke University Thursday evening.

PADEREWSKI AT DUKE THURSDAY

Aged Pianist Is Celebrating Seventy-First Year Amid Ovations from Public.

Ignace Paderewski will appear at the Page auditorium at Duke University Thursday evening, January 8, and is expected to attract music lovers throughout the state.

Paderewski, who recently celebrated his seventy-first birthday, will give seventy-five concerts this season. He made his first visit to the United States thirty-nine years ago, and this represents the pianist's seventeenth tour of the United States. His actual debut occurred in 1887 at Vienna. In 1890 London hailed him as "the greatest pianist of the age" and the following year he took America by storm. He has returned here frequently since that time with the exception of the period during which he served his native country, Poland, first as ambassador to the United States and later as premier of Poland.

Paderewski has been accorded unparalleled ovations this season in New York, Boston, Washington, and other of the largest centers to which his engagements have been limited. The concert Thursday night will be the first appearance of the noted artist in this section in three years, and will be one of the few recitals to be given in the south on this tour which is expected to be his final for the United States.

The department of music here has had a block of tickets on sale since the opening of the winter quarter last week. Word has been received at the music department office that no tickets at any price are available in Durham, as the house has been completely sold out there.

All tickets must be purchased before noon Wednesday, at which time any tickets that have not been sold will be returned to Durham.

Former Student Dies

Elsie Grady, of Kenly and formerly a student in the University, died at her home Saturday, December 27. The cause of Miss Grady's death was blood poisoning caused from a boil on her face. She was taken ill on Christmas Eve and was sick only four days.

Miss Grady attended school here last year and the past summer, and was a member of the Chi Omega sorority.

CAROLINA ALMA MATERS

DEAR MOTHER CAROLINA
By Brent S. Drane

Ever in memory's treasure-cell,
Thy bell-tones, singing, dwell
Thrilling in overtones of thy love,
Our hearts, responding, lift and swell
Dear Mother, Carolina.

Strong as the throbbing life that fills
The oaks that crown thy hills,
Rhythm in harmony with thy own
Thy love within our hearts instills,
Dear Mother, Carolina.

Glad is thy spirit, forthright, free;
Thy will not seem, but be
Direct and neighborly, loyal, true,
To faith, our fathers dreamed for thee,
Dear Mother, Carolina.

Flaming since Freedom's dawn, thy light
Has guarded free men's right
New truth through reverent toil to win;
Shown patient, Truth's eternal might,
Dear Mother, Carolina.

To strong lives lightened in thy way
Long years their honor pay,
Grant strength of spirit attuned with thine
To us, thy sons, in this our day,
Dear Mother, Carolina.

FACULTY ACTIVE DURING HOLIDAYS

President Graham Heads List of Members Taking Prominent Part in Various Meetings.

A number of University faculty members attended meetings of American learned societies during the holidays, many of them taking prominent parts on the programs.

President Frank P. Graham addressed a gathering of University alumni in Charleston, S. C., and spoke at a meeting of the New England Society there.

Dr. Howard W. Odum, director of the Institute for Research in Social Science at the University, presided over the meeting of the American Sociological Society at Cleveland, Ohio, of which he is president.

Other members of the faculty attending meetings included Professor R. D. W. Connor, head of the department of history and government, who attended a meeting of the American Historical Association, and Professor H. S. Dyer, head of the music department, who attended a convention of the National Music Teachers Association in St. Louis, Mo.

Attending the meeting of the American Association of Law Schools which was held in Chicago, Ill., during the past week were Dean C. T. McCormick and Professors M. S. Breckenridge and F. B. McCall of the University Law School.

R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, and J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary, were the principal speakers at a banquet given by the Alumni Club of Reidsville. Mr. House also addressed a meeting of the alumni in Rocky Mount.

FIRST OF ORGAN SERIES DELAYED

Injury Prevents Performance by Musician from Elon College As Scheduled.

The opening of the guest organ series of concerts, which was scheduled for sometime this week, has been delayed on account of the injury to the artist who was to have performed, Professor C. James Velie, of Elon College. Word was received late last week that Professor Velie's hand had been injured and become infected. This injury necessitates a complete cessation of playing until the hand has healed.

Although there are several capable recitalists in the state who are ready to present concerts on limited notice, it appears best, in view of the performance of Paderewski in Durham on Thursday night, to postpone the event until February, when Professor George M. Thompson of the faculty of N. C. C. W. will perform. Professor Velie will present his guest series program at a date to be announced later.

Professor Nelson O. Kennedy of the music department will play the second of his vespers series on Sunday afternoon, January 18, at 4:45 P. M.

New Specimens

The Botanical department has just received, from the National Museum at Washington, a very valuable gift in the form of a large number of herborium specimens of ferns.

While the largest number of these ferns are from tropical America, some are from the Northern part of the United States.

A Campus Calendar

Beginning with this issue, the Daily Tar Heel will publish a Campus Calendar—a tabulation of events of interest happening on and off the campus. Incidents relating to the University to which admission is not charged are to appear in this column.

This calendar will be run daily on page four—all announcements for which must be in not later than twelve o'clock the day preceding publication.

KOCH GIVES READING OF THE 'CAROL' IN NEW YORK

Frederick H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers, gave two readings of Dickens' Christmas Carol at the Town Hall in New York recently. One of these readings was heard by a man who was present when Dickens read the Carol himself more than sixty years ago.

President Frank Graham of the University, who was in New York to attend a meeting of the University alumni, was present at one of these readings.

ODUM TO DIRECT CHICAGO EXHIBIT

Sociology Professor Selected By Two Committees to Serve as World Fair Executive.

Announcement has just been made that Dr. Howard W. Odum of this University has been appointed Director of Social Science Exhibits in the Century of Progress, World's Fair, to be held at Chicago in 1933.

Among other suggested plans is one providing for a comprehensive social science building alongside the temple of science, in which will be housed the exhibits of the natural sciences, sponsored by the American Association for the Advancement of Science and its committees and directed by Professor Henry Crew, head of the department of Physics at Northwestern University.

There were two committees charged with the selection of a director. One was a special committee appointed by the social science research council and ratified by the Century of Progress administration. This committee was composed of the Secretary of the Interior, Ray Lyman Wilbur; President F. B. Eilson, social science research council; President R. M. Hutchins, University of Chicago; President H. W. Chase, University of Illinois; President H. G. Moulton, of the Brookings Institution; and President Logan Paxon of the University of Wisconsin. The other was a local committee of whom were Dean Charles H. Judd, of the school of education; Professor Harry A. Millis, head of the department of economics; Professor Charles E. Merriam, head of the department of political science; Professor William F. Ogburn, of the department of sociology; Professor Donald Schlesinger, school of law.

It is understood that the acceptance of this position will not take Dr. Odum away from North Carolina except on leaves of absence granted for certain parts of the year, beginning with the winter quarter, 1931.

Dyer Returns From Music Conference

Dr. Harold S. Dyer, of the music department has returned from St. Louis where he was a delegate to the Phi Mu Alpha Sinfony. This organization met concurrently with the Music Teachers National Association and the National Association of Schools of Music, in the Statler Hotel, December 29, 30, 31.

NO CHANGE YET BUT IS EXPECTED

Reactionary Move Begun Last Spring When Privileges Were Curtailed.

The Undergraduate faculty of the University has under advisement the complete and absolute abolishing of whatever optional class attendance the various undergraduate schools now enjoy.

Since the final week of last quarter, the student body has heard rumors of conflicting nature in regard to attendance on classes. Since the opening of the winter quarter last week it has been generally understood that class attendance in both the A. B. school and the commerce school was no longer to be a matter of choice, but upon having "cut" one's classes more than twice one was liable to expulsion from the University. The status quo, however, remains the same as it has been since the undergraduate faculty moved last year to curtail the privileges enjoyed by the members of the junior and senior classes by restricting them only to those juniors and seniors who had made the honor roll for the quarter before.

Dean Carroll, who has been inimical to the system sponsored and fought for by former Dean Addison Hibbard, refused to see a Tar Heel reporter yesterday, but it is understood that he is

UNIVERSITY MEN ATTEND MEETINGS

Professors Present at Sociological and Economic Meets in Cleveland.

At Cleveland, Ohio convened recently two major organizations: The American Sociological Society and the American Economic Association, on December 29th, 30th, and 31st.

The University of North Carolina was well represented at both meetings. Rupert P. Vance, Professor Lee M. Brooks, Professor Roy N. Brown, Dr. Guy B. Johnson, Mr. Waller Wynne, Dr. and Mrs. Hugh P. Brinton, Miss Katharine Jocher, Miss Harriet L. Herring and Dr. Howard W. Odum, who at that time was president, attended the American Sociological Society. The American Economic Association was attended by Professor W. F. Ferger, Dr. Clarence Heer, and Dr. Mills from this University.

All the meetings of the former organization were at the Hotel Hollenden in Cleveland. Programs were devoted to history and trends in sociology, social research, statistics, the teaching of sociology, sociology and social work, the family, educational sociology, sociology or religion, the community, rural sociology, sociological psychiatry.

Headquarters for the latter organization was the Hotel Cleveland. Their meetings were well attended, and the conferences and speeches on the different phases of economics were very successful.

The New Year

The Christmas holiday season is past, and the lily-white snow has vanished like perfume wafted away on a swift breeze. Another year is ahead. The charms of the old year are passed away, giving place to the unexplored possibilities of 1931. The new year in all of its hopefulness and optimism greets old and young, rich and poor, successful and unfortunate, alike. Holiday pleasures must become mere memory, for the glaring facts of eight-thirty classes is staring us in the face. A new quarter is ahead, another opportunity to do either better or worse. The season for putting new year's resolutions into practice is at hand.

At this season of the year there can be no doubt that hope springs eternally from the breast of mortal man. Time and again when the darkest moments of despair grip us we see, even though it be in fancy, better times, better luck, and better opportunities just ahead. Indeed, mortal man could not endure the dull, drear, and drab realities of a life governed by fixed laws of unchangeable consequence were it not for the balm of hope that comes to him in the darkest hours of his earthly pilgrimage.

At any rate, there is one advantage inherent in this customary Christmas recess in the process of going through the "diploma mill." Reference is made to the absence from the routine and monotony of the classroom . . . the separation from humdrum duties which never fail to engender a dread of the most ruinous variety. That the strain of student life be relieved occasionally is essential, if the best results are to be obtained. The Christmas recess, moreover, affords an opportunity to ponder over the successes and failures of the old year.

All of us have time and plenty of it. The length of the day is universal. Yet some accomplish great things, while others know not the satisfaction which comes from accomplishment. We refer to college students in particular when we say that all too much time is spent in pursuing that which is not worthy of pursuit, that which is shamefully unprofitable and ill-advised. Much time is spent in the pursuit of non-essentials. The past vacation period has given such persons an opportunity to come into a realization of what has been worthy and what has been unworthy in their activities of 1930, and the resultant idea as to what should be sought in 1931.

To him who has let the fall quarter slip by without accomplishing anything worthy of note another quarter, a new year, opens her gateway of opportunity just as wide as to those who have done great things in 1930. There is still plenty of time to gather up the loose ends, outgrow the shortcomings of the old year, and to hit the stride which will do credit to the new year, 1931.

—J. C. W.

A Political Prophecy

It already begins to look as if Cam Morrison will see difficulty in being elected United States senator in 1932. His approval of the confirmation of Frank McNinch for a position on the Federal Water Power Commission brought down on him a hail of condemnation from the state's Democratic leaders. Some political prophets have said, beginning when the first complaints were voiced against the action of the new senator, that since Morrison has forced himself so quickly into the flattering glare of the Capitol Hill spotlights, he will, by reason of his overnight arrival at eminence, be able to accomplish much for the state and in that way build up a reputation on which to base his campaign claims in 1932.

But, unless political fortunes change—and they sometimes do, the party leaders will oppose Morrison in his attempt for the Democratic nomination next year; unfortunately, it is the politicians who control the votes in North Carolina. It is, then, our prediction that Morrison is serving his last, as well as his first, term as a member of the United States Senate.

Concerning McNinch's qualifications, which, after all, should be the real and only reason for or against his appointment to the post which he now holds, the New York Times recently presented an interesting sidelight. A Times editorial writer has said that McNinch is not legally eligible for a position on the commission, as the law provides that not more than three men from any one party shall serve thereon; McNinch, he declares, is to be classed as more or less of a Republican because of his anti-Democratic activities as the state's "Hoovercratic" leader in the last election. Morrison himself admits that his fellow-townsman is a poor Democrat, but is otherwise perfectly capable of the job.—E. C. D.

OPEN FORUM

ONE DOWN ON F. C. W.

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

In his communication appearing in one of the December issues of your paper, Mr. F. C. W. speaks of companionate marriage as being identical with free love. Such a view appears to indicate that Mr. F. C. W. has an erroneous conception of Judge Lindsey's companionate marriage plan. "Free love" is generally interpreted as implying sexual promiscuity, which often leads to pernicious and far-reaching consequences. The most harmful social consequences of free love are the following: first, the spread of venereal diseases; and, secondly, the birth of illegitimate children. Under the system of companionate marriage, each person has sexual relationships with one—and only one—other person, as is the case in the traditional marriage. Under the companionate marriage system, moreover, no offspring who are born are considered illegitimate; for when a child is born, the companionate marriage automatically assumes the same status as the traditional marriage.

It is probably true that in some cases the "finest and noblest qualities" in men and women are brought out by "the responsibilities of fatherhood and motherhood." It is true also that the raising of a family represents the summun bonum of happiness for many people. It should be remembered, nevertheless, that the birth of children does not necessarily insure harmonious relations between husband and wife. At the present time, one out of every seven marriages results in a divorce. Before any children are born, husband and wife should have the opportunity to find out definitely whether or not they are temperamentally suited to each other. (The days of courtship do not serve very effectively as a test, for during this period both male lover and his sweetheart are on their "best behavior" and are not likely to reveal their less desirable traits.) The abolition of divorce would not solve the problem by any means. Constant bickering among parents who find each other uncongenial is likely to have a much more injurious effect upon their children than the separation of these parents from each other would have. Would it not be much better, therefore, to make easy and simple separation between husband and wife during the experimental period of marriage?

I fail to see why either Mr. F. C. W. or the French people should be distressed over the fact that the birth rate in France is declining. At the present time, all of the European countries have to import by far the greater portion of the food that they consume. In view of the fact that population almost always tends to increase more rapidly than the means of subsistence, it seems to me that a declining birth rate should be regarded as a blessing rather than as a calamity.

"Do doctors attempt to check disease by spreading germs?" inquires F. C. W. Assuming for the sake of argument that an analogy may be drawn between companionate marriage and disease germs, I should like to point out the fact that germs are actually utilized in combatting disease. Attenuated disease germs are sometimes injected into the body as preventatives of typhoid fever, smallpox, or rabies. In addition to this, toxins or poisons produced by disease germs are used indirectly in curing such illnesses as diphtheria, scarlet fever, and tetanus.

WHAT OF IT?

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

Students at the University are continually hearing the traditions of the University of North Carolina unravelled in glowing terms. While the University is aided by a glorious past, I think that over-emphasis on tradition and past history is entirely possible.

It is possible, I think, to spend too much time in the past when more emphasis should be placed on the present. An institution that is to continue its glorious traditions must continue to look into the future instead of lingering by the roadside relating a great past.

It is usually the case that a family that has had a glorious past and are not so successful in the present resort to relating their family history in order to maintain their position in society, but often society refuses to recognize history as a good reason for considering such persons' worth as members of society.

The University of North Carolina's tradition is good as long as the University continues to progress, but the University cannot stand on tradition alone. It must produce the product that society demands to carry on the work which is needed. If it turns out this product efficiently, it doesn't differ a damn whether the University has a great tradition behind it or not.

Tradition is all right to "bull about." We all like to point with pride to the achievement of some of our ancestors, but the fact that some of our ancestors did something great does not help us to maintain our stride in the contest which is always glaring us in the face.

An institution that is to progress must look forward instead of backward. The people of the state, I believe, are more interested in the University's present than they are in its past. The past has already contributed its share and now the problem is entirely in the present.

The University of North Carolina does not have to rely on its past to maintain its place of usefulness, so let's hear less about past traditions and more about present problems.

DAN KELLY.

IN DEFENSE OF E. C. D.

To the Editor:

Just a word in defense of E. C. D. upon whom J. B. Fisher wages a verbal assault teeming with emotion like that that ran riot in the cathedral a few days ago. The burden of proof is on Mr. Fisher to show that Judge Lindsey has not been the means of widespread misunderstanding of companionate marriage as the term was coined by Dr. M. M. Knight. The Judge's book and lectures have produced a confusion of mind throughout the land typified by the uproar which he evoked in the cathedral. Quite possibly a number of psychiatrists might agree that the Judge does exhibit paranoid traits in his books and behavior. E. C. D. was presenting far more than his own ideas as Mr. Fisher can see if he reads the current comments on the unfortunate occurence, for instance the original and quoted comments in yesterday's Chapel Hill Weekly.

Executive Committee Punishes Five Men

December 11 the Executive Committee of the University faculty suspended a senior for the fall quarter of 1930 and the winter quarter of 1931 for a violation of the honor system in connection with a quiz in one of his courses.

On December 18, a sophomore was deprived of credit in one of his fall quarter courses for a confessed violation of the honor system in connection with a report on collateral readings.

A sophomore and a freshman were suspended for the fall quarter for a violation of the honor system in connection with required notebooks in one of their courses, the sophomore confessing.

December 20, the committee suspended a freshman for the fall quarter for a confessed violation of the honor system in connection with one of his final examinations.

BOOKREADING HAS MULTIPLIED TEN FOLD SINCE 1910

University Library Head Tells Florida Convention Librarians Are Teachers.

The next most significant advancement in southern education will rest with the library, Dr. Louis R. Wilson, University of North Carolina librarian, said in addressing the Southern College Librarian Association which met in Tampa, Florida. Dr. Wilson is president of the association.

"The librarian has become a teacher in a new sense, taking the place of persons who formerly put pupils through a mere lecture and text book course. Even as low as the third grade library books are being used in development of writing and spelling through book reviews. All the way through, more skill is being developed as the result of the project method of teaching," Dr. Wilson said.

He cited records of the University in showing how the use of books had increased tenfold during the past twenty years. The average book loan to a student for one year in 1910 was from ten to fifteen books, and last year it varied from 100 to 150 books.

"Men and women past twenty-five used to be considered sort of old fogeys, too old to learn by studying," he said. "But now colleges everywhere are following up graduates with alumni programs of reading, and the American people are learning to utilize to greater advantage their leisure time."

CAROLINA BOXERS RETURN TO WORK AFTER VACATION

Squad Rapidly Rounding Into Shape As First Match Nears.

The thud of leather against flesh again re-echoed through the Tin Can as the Tar Heel boxers, after a ten day layoff, returned to the daily grind in preparation for a difficult schedule, which opens on January 16 here with the Gamecocks of South Carolina.

Although they were granted a ten day respite by Coach Rowe, some of the men, Lumpkin and Farris, welterweights, and Landis, heavy, worked out daily in a Charlotte gymnasium.

A resume of the boxing squad shows that three classes, the lightweight, middleweight, and lightheavy, will be well taken care of by lettermen, while the other divisions will be held down by either veterans or freshmen stars. Captain Goodrich, lightweight, in yesterday's workout, showed the form that marked him as one of the leading collegiate boxers in the South. Obie Davis, middleweight, and John Warren, lightheavy, have shown a great improvement over last year's form and these men will form the nucleus of Coach Rowe's bid for the Dixie title.

In the bantam weight class there is a battle between "Speedy" Boring and George Biggs, both sophomores. At the present time Boring seems to have the rail position because he packs a harder wallop than Biggs and he is also a bit faster.

If Harry Sheffield returns to the squad, there will be a merry three cornered scrap for the featherweight post. Martin Levinson, freshman sensation, leads the field, but Studie Clark is not far behind. Marty kept in shape this past summer engaging in amateur fights around New Haven, Conn. Sheffield, who has won two letters, was forced to drop out of school, and it is doubtful whether or not he will return.

Dale Holderness has the jump on the welterweights with Jack Farris, Cecil Jackson, and Nat Lumpkin a jump behind him. Holderness is twice the winner of the Intramural tournament and packs dynamite in his right hand. Jackson is a rough and aggressive fighter but he lacks boxing skill. Lumpkin fought creditably for the freshman last year and is one of the leaders for a post on the varsity. Jack Farris is a veteran of last year and took part in a couple of meets.

The middleweight division finds Obie Davis in undisputed possession although Tom Parsons, Intramural winner last year and freshman battler two years ago, and Jim Hubbard are coming along fast. Hubbard is an up and coming sophomore and was kept out of competition last year because of a broken hand.

John Warren, brother of the famous Add Warren, will take good care of the 175 pound class. Hugh Wilson, freshman K. O. artist, and F. M. Glover will battle for the alternate position.

Coach Rowe has shifted last year's light heavy freshman star, Platt Landis, to the unlimited class. Platt is one of the hardest hitters ever to wear the Blue and White and should take good care of the post vacated by Bill Koenig, football star. As alternate there is Bill Miller, also of last year's frosh outfit.

Collins, Cerney To Return

TO RETAIN TWO MENTORS ON ONE YEAR CONTRACT

(By Don Shoemaker)

Charles Christopher Collins, head football coach at the University since 1926, will be retained in that capacity during the 1931 grid season, athletic officials stated last night. It was learned through authoritive sources that Collins had signed a one year contract several months ago with the University athletic council.

Collins, known through the football world affectionately as "Chuck," was first appointed to the capacity as head grid mentor in 1926, coming here from Chattanooga University where he served as an assistant coach. A stellar performer in the line of the famous 1924 Notre Dame team, Collins gleaned his football prowess under the tutelage of Knute Rockne, also playing in 1922, and '23. With Big Ed Hunsinger, Collins held down the end positions when the immortal Seven Mules and Four Horsemen wrecked havoc with half a score of the nation's leading grid teams in 1924. He came here with a high recommendation from the great Rockne himself and has since demonstrated his proscribed ability in the coaching field.

During the recent football season, Collins made his bow to the radio world with a cleverly conducted sports talk every Wednesday evening, introducing and commenting on football players and coaches in the state, and answering innumerable queries on football tactics and history.

A severe cold contracted during the memorable Duke-Carolina naval engagement on Lake Kenan several weeks ago forced Collins to abandon plans to participate in the Notre Dame-All Star charity game in New York to which he was invited as an outstanding Rambler grid alumnus.

Collins has also assumed an active role in Southern conference activities and has been instrumental in effecting various changes in North Carolina and southern grid statutes.

Since the advent of Collins' coaching here, 28 out of forty-eight games have been won, sixteen lost, and four tied. Under his tutelage the Tar Heels have come through thirty four conference tilts, winning eighteen, losing twelve, and tieing four. Of the twenty games played in the state, Carolina has come through fourteen of them unscathed, has lost four, and has tied two.

In 1928 a two year contract was signed with Collins and Cerney which term ends this month. Though three defeats marred the Tar Heel record during the 1930 season, Collins and

Seventeen Dixie Grid Stars Chosen On Two All-America Elevens

Seventeen Dixie grid luminaries were selected on the composite teams of Collier's and College Humor's All-American teams, recent issues of the two magazines reveal. Branch and Magner of North Carolina received honorable mention in the backfield department as the Tar Heel state's lone candidates for the role of football's immortals. Dalrymple of Tulane and Sington of Alabama were choices on both teams with other southern representatives running the two close races for honors. Dodd, Tennessee, and Maffett, Georgia were named on College Humor's second and third string selections respectively.

COLLIER'S LISTS TWO TAR HEELS

Selections for Collier's All-American football team, which is a perpetuation of the original All-America founded by Walter Camp, were:

Carideo, Notre Dame	Quarter
Pinckert, Southern Cal.	Half
Dodd, Tennessee	Half
Macaluso, Colgate	Full
Dalrymple, Tulane	End
Fesler, Ohio State	End
Sington, Alabama	Tackle
Rhea, Nebraska	Tackle
Koch, Baylor	Guard
Beckett, California	Guard
Ticknor, Harvard	Center

Two additional players were named as "utility men,"—Hein of Washington State as utility lineman, and Mohler of Southern California as utility back.

"Dodd was the best passer of the year, a great passer in every contest. More than once he beat stronger opponents with his right arm and his head," said the weekly.

The complete list of all the year's players who were of All-American calibre, and whose names were considered in making the final choice, was as follows:

CENTERS: Ticknor, Harvard; Hein, Washington State; Siano, Fordham; Roberts, Tu-

Realizing that in fairness to all the combatants in our great game of football no one critic is adequately qualified to undertake alone the assignment of choosing an all-American eleven, Les Gage, sports editor of College Humor, posted eight competent reporters at points of vantage to observe the 1930 contests. The following are the members of the advisory staff who have assisted in making College Humor's selections: Robert Harron (New York Evening Post), George C. Carens (Boston Evening Transcript), Zipp Newman (Birmingham News), Lloyd Gregory (Houston Post-Dispatch), Oliver Kuechle (Milwaukee Journal), C. E. McBride (Kansas City Star), Ed R. Tar Heels Win Over Durham Y By 31-14 Score

The Tar Heel basketball team opened the 1931 season last night in the Tin Can with a victory over the Durham Y.M.C.A. by a 31-14 score. Sandy Dameron, tall Carolina center was high scorer for the evening with thirteen points. Captain Artie Marpet for Carolina, and Hackney for the Durham team also played stellar ball.

A complete account of the game was not available at press time last night, but will appear in Wednesday morning's Tar Heel.

BROWN SELECTED AS GREENVILLE ATHLETIC COACH

Former University Athlete To Serve In Absence of Regular Mentor.

William H. Brown, alumnus of the University and stellar basketball and baseball performer, has been secured by the athletic department of the Greenville schools to serve as coach in the absence of C. W. Porter, who has been granted a short leave to attend the International Y. M. C. A. college at Springfield, Massachusetts.

Brown, better known to students as "Billy" graduated last spring and left behind him an enviable reputation in North Carolina sports. He played varsity basketball during his sophomore, junior, and senior years, and served on the baseball team in his senior year.

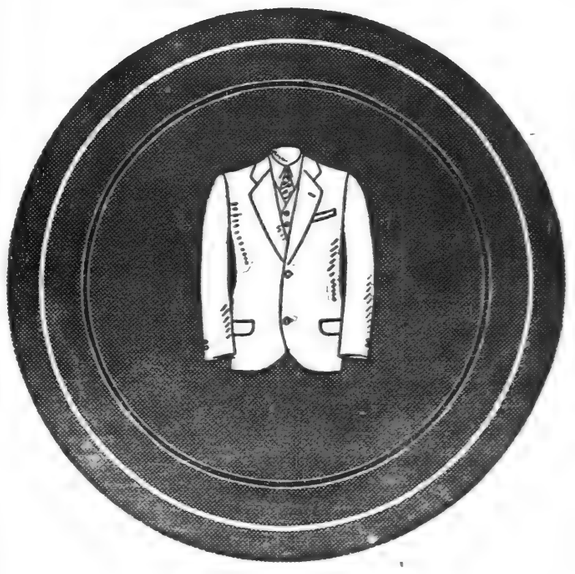
WRESTLING TEAM FACES AMBITIOUS CARD FOR YEAR

Many Veterans Now Drilling For Opening Bouts With Princeton.

With only five days remaining before the Tar Heel wrestling team leaves for its bouts with the Princeton Tigers, Coach Chuck Quinlan has his varsity wrestlers hard at work in preparation for one of the most ambitious schedules ever undertaken by a Tar Heel mat team. A veteran squad, led by Captain Fred Stallings, is on hand, as well as a group of promising rookies.



In addition to Captain Stallings in the 125 pound class, Coach Quinlan has Pete Usher, Mayne Albright, Harry Tsumas, Marion Cowper, and Fred Ferguson lettermen to use as a nucleus for his team with some of the more promising rookies to fill in where veteran material is lacking.

In the 115 pound class Pete Usher will be supported by Clay Bell of last year's team and Clyde Dietz, a sophomore. All three of these men showed up well in pre-holiday workouts, and competition is keen for the position.

Captain Stallings will hold down the 125 pound division again and will have an enviable record to uphold from last year. Stallings was undefeated during the regular campaign last winter and had to his credit wins over Navy and Princeton, both by falls.

Albright will again hold down the 135 pound berth while the 145 pound class will be without a letterman. Harry Tsumas, who

Campus Calendar

The business staff of the Daily Tar Heel will hold its regular weekly meeting tonight at 8:30. All members of the staff must be present.

Joe Eagles phoned that all candidates for freshman basket ball are to report at the Tin Can tonight at seven o'clock. No equipment will be issued for a few days.

The public is invited to hear C. A. Lovejoy, Investment officer of the Wachovia Bank & Trust Company of Winston-Salem, who will discuss the financial and administrative aspects of trust investments with Professor Van Hecke's class in Trusts, Wednesday, January 7th, at two o'clock in the first year class room in the law school.

Dr. M. B. Garrett, who has just returned from a six month's stay in Europe, will speak at the regular monthly meeting of the department of history, Tuesday night at 7:30 in room 313 Saunders.

There are a number of upperclassmen who have registered but who have not as yet received their athletic pass books. To avoid any confusion, and to obtain their pass books while the late students are still registering, the registrar requests that all these students who have paid their bills, but who have not yet received their pass books, come to his office today between the hours of nine in the morning and five in the afternoon and get same.

The following persons are requested to meet with Beverly Moore in the office of the Daily Tar Heel this afternoon at 1:45: Virginia Douglas, Wex Malone, Moore Bryson, J. C. Williams, Robert Hodges, Harper Barnes, James Kenan, Frank Manheim, Oscar Dresslar, and Carlton Wilder. This meeting will be a very important one and all those named above are expected to be present.

At the regular meeting this evening, the local Kiwanis club will hear Mr. Marion Fowler, Lieutenant-governor of the fifth division of the organization. The meeting, which will be presided over by the newly-elected officers, will be at 6:30 in the Baptist church.

All Y cabinet meetings postponed until next week.

The editorial and art staff of The Buccaneer will meet in the Buccaneer office tonight at 7:15.

Track practice for the winter quarter will be resumed today. A notice will be posted on the door of the track office giving instructions regarding the afternoon work-out.

competed in this weight last year probably will be seen in the 155 pound class, leaving Don Conklin a brilliant sophomore and Whitener to fight it out for his old position. Opposing Tsumas this year will be John Stallings, Greer ,and John Parks, holdovers from last year's squad who have been working all fall.

Marion Cowper, a dependable veteran, and Bradley of last year's freshman team will be seen in the 165 pound class, and Fred Ferguson, a consistent star for two years stands out in the 175 pound division. However, Ferguson is finding plenty of competition in Houghton and Percy Idol. Houghton is a letterman while Idol, as captain of last year's freshman team, showed up brilliantly.

George Thompson, letterman in 1929, may be back in his old place in the unlimited division, but will have Auman, Harrell, and Bill Liberstein as opposition. All three of the men are without previous varsity experience but have plenty of size.

Wayne Woodward, captain of the 1929 mat team, was expected to return to the University and to the team for the 1930 season, but as yet is not back in school. The loss of this veteran will be keenly felt when the wrestlers start their unusually difficult schedule.

of the opinion that the students have abused the privileges extended them and that they are incapable of thriving under them. Others, including Dean Hobbs, and the whole of the Romance language department, are back of the move to do away with cuts because they have felt that absences have been excessive under the liberal system.

No one was willing to say when the committee to consider the proposed abolition of privileges would report, but it is understood that Dean Carroll and others have taken it for granted that there is no question as to optional attendance being abolished.

R. H. FRAZIER TO ADDRESS FORUM THURSDAY NIGHT

Greensboro Lawyer, University Graduate, Has Had Wide and Varied World Experience.

Robert Haines Frazier of the law firm, Frazier and Frazier in Greensboro will talk before the Polity Forum at its second formal meeting in Gerrard hall tomorrow evening at seven o'clock. Jack Dungan, president of the Forum, will preside.

The Polity Forum meets every two weeks and is an organization having no formal fees or dues. Its idea is to cause students to crystalize their political ideas and opinions. Members are free to ask the speakers questions at the meetings. Anyone is eligible who cares to attend.

Mr. Frazier, who will speak on Thursday evening, is a native of Greensboro and received there his early grammar school and high school education. He once worked as news boy and carpenter. As a newsboy, he claims to have once sold Woodrow Wilson a copy of the Greensboro Daily News. He entered Guilford College in 1915. His activities there included participation in tennis and basketball and oratory. He was winner of the Websterian Orator's Medal. In 1917 he became a student at the University. He was initiated into the Eta chapter of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity, and served the chapter in a number of ways.

In August, 1918 Frazier was appointed clerk in the American consulate-general at Oslo, Norway. He served as secretary to Consul General Marion Letcher. He has the distinction of being Uncle Sam's youngest vice-consul. At the early age of twenty-one years, he received his commission as United States vice-consul. He served on special

ENTERTAINMENT PLANS ARRANGED FOR THIS YEAR

Carola Goya, First On Programme, Appears Here February 6.

At a meeting of the Student Entertainment Committee Monday afternoon in the office of the chairman, Dean Hobbs, definite arrangements were made for the Student Entertainment program for this year.

There will be six attractions on the program for the year. The committee has made contracts for five of these and the tickets are to be printed immediately. The sixth attraction has not yet been arranged. Last year the committee brought Miss Helen Pugh, a young pianist from Charlotte. They wish to make it a practice to bring one noted young musician in the state here every year, but as yet none has been engaged.

The first on the program is Miss Carola Goya who will be here February 6. Each of Miss Goya's numbers, except certain ones she has created herself to modern music, are classical or folk dances which have been familiar in Spain for generations. She brings to America the Spanish dances as they really are, and in them is reflected the life, traditions, and

MUCH CONFUSION ON ATTENDANCE

Di Senate Follows Tar Heel in Wanting Optional Plan for Juniors and Seniors.

The exact status which that orphan child—optional attendance—enjoys on this campus could not be ascertained yesterday. It was understood from the executive office that no change had been made in the rule in force last quarter, and that none would be made until a committee composed of Dean W. W. Pierson, chairman, Dean D. D. Carroll, Dean Hobbs, Mr. Harold Dyer, and an additional member report to the undergraduate faculty. President-elect Graham was ill at the president's mansion, and unable to be questioned.

At the office of the commerce school Dean Carroll issued a lengthy statement contained in the Open Forum column this morning, in which he vigorously resented the statement contained in an article appearing in the Tuesday Tar Heel in which it was said that the Dean was too busy to see a Tar Heel reporter. The Dean further was of the opinion that there had been no optional attendance for anyone during the last quarter, and revealed to the Tar Heel that at a meeting of the faculty of the departments of commerce and economics each instructor had been instructed to evolve his own method of enforcing required attendance. In concluding his statement Dean Carroll said, "I also favor leaving the matter of class attendance to any student who has won the 'right to freedom' by the high quality of his work and demonstrated self-discipline in performance of his duty. In other words, I favor optional class attendance for any student who during three consecutive quarters has maintained an honor roll average." It is estimated that even among the Phi Beta Kappa initiates there are to be found persons who do not make the honor roll three consecutive quarters and that only a very small percentage of the sophomore, junior, and senior classes ever make the honor roll three consecutive quarters.

Dean Hobbs, of the school of liberal arts, was of the opinion that honor students among the juniors and seniors be granted the privilege, and was opposed to giving sophomores the privilege stating that much of the "cut" trouble came from this class.

The dean of the education school said "that it was the sense of this department that there should be placed upon each student the responsibility of making up work missed," through the medium of coaching if required, and that the school of education places a premium on capability and thoroughness rather than on regular attendance.

The Dialectic Senate went on record last night as being in favor of an immediate return to the optional attendance enjoyed by all juniors and seniors last year.

The school of engineering declined to make public the attitude of the faculty of that school. Dean Bell could not be reached for a statement.

The age of the earth, according to Professor Holmes of Durham University, is between 1,600 and 3,000 million years.

CAROLINA ALMA MATERS

COMPOSITION

By W. M. Hayes

We, the sons of Carolina, Alma Mater's praises sing,
All her history and tradition is to us a sacred thing.
Through the years she has come marching; "Light and Liberty!" she cries,
While the world stands by to wonder at her sons so great and wise.

Chorus

Carolina, Carolina, we will be true
To the noblest, to the finest you have to give.
Carolina, Carolina, whate'er we do
Thy bonds shall grow stronger, thy mem'ry shall live.

Through her paths and shady woodlands walk the spirits of her sons
Who have loved her and are gone; yet their spirits linger on,
Teaching us to bear their burden and to keep her honor bright,
That her sacred name may ever stand for liberty and light.

Opinion of Dean Hobbs On Optional Attendance

"That honor students among the juniors and seniors be granted this privilege.

"No honor students among sophomores be granted this privilege as it is among this class that much trouble with this matter is present."

DEAN ENCOURAGES FAILING STUDENTS

Due to the fact that he was confined to his home with a bad cold, President-elect Graham was unable to make the chapel address yesterday morning. In the absence of the president-elect, Dean Bradshaw spoke to the freshmen in regard to their concentrating on their studies during the winter quarter. The Dean stated that the records of the University show that the best grades of the school year are made in the winter. Bradshaw ventured that this was probably so because there are fewer activities during the winter which tend to district the students from their books.

The Dean of Students told the freshmen that at no time of the year is the infirmary more fully occupied than at the present season. He admonished the students to do their utmost to keep in good health and to go to the infirmary for medical attention if they are seriously ill.

Dramatic Association To Meet Here Saturday

The annual directors' meeting of the Carolina Dramatic Association is to convene at the Playmakers theatre, in Chapel Hill, Saturday, January 10.

President R. C. Robinson, director of community welfare in Goldsboro, will open the morning session at eleven o'clock. Professor Koch will extend greetings to the directors. The speeches of the morning will be, in order: "Dramatics in Rural Communities," by Pauline Willis; "University Dramatics," by Professor A. T. West of Duke; "Our Adventures in the Belasco Tournament," by William Royal; and "Teaching Playwriting in High School," by W. R. Wunch of Asheville.

The afternoon session will begin at two-thirty. The program will consist of the following speeches: "The Original Play," by William Perry, "Judging the Tournament Play, by J. O. Bailey, of this University English department, demonstration play rehearsal, "The Rector," by students at Lenoir Rhyne College, and a talk on Folk Dancing by Gladys Angel of the University.

That same night at eight o'clock the Carolina Playmakers will have their annual Twelfth Night Revel.

J. C. WILLIAMS TO BROADCAST TALK FROM WPTF TODAY

The first University radio broadcast for 1931 will be made at 5:15 this afternoon over station WPTF in Raleigh by J. C. Williams, former president of the Debating Council and winner of the Wright and Bingham medals. Mr. Williams has been an outstanding debater in the University for three years and is the only man to win both of the aforementioned awards. His subject will be "Debating."

This program concerns an activity which is prominent in high schools, as well as in the University.

Next Wednesday afternoon Mayne Albright will discuss the literary societies.

Both speakers will be introduced by R. C. Greene, president of the student union.

From now on, the programs will be broadcast at five o'clock Wednesday afternoon instead of at 5:15.

University Sends Representatives To Language Meeting

The University of North Carolina was well represented at the meeting of the Modern Language Association of America which convened at the Hotel Washington, Washington, D. C., December 29, 30, and 31. Professors from the various language departments of the University attended the meeting, including about ten members of the romance language department, as well as a large number from the English department.

Representatives from the University who took part in the program were: Dr. George R. Coffman, discussion in the English drama section; Dr. J. C. Lyons, in the sixteenth century literature section; Professor Louis B. Wright, in the general English section; Professor Urban T. Holmes, in the general romance section; Dr. Ralph Boggs, in the folk law section; and Drs. Adams and Leavitt in the Spanish literature section.

Professor U. T. Holmes was elected chairman of the Medieval French section.

LANG TREASURER OF FEDERATION

National Student Congress Names University Student to Only Elective Post.

Carolina walked off with the lion's share of honors and recognition at the annual congress of the National Student Federation, which met in Atlanta during the Christmas holidays. John A. Lang, of Carolina, was elected treasurer, the only elective office in the entire federation.

The congress was attended by 312 delegates from about 250 American universities and colleges. Twelve states have informed Lang that they have definitely decided to follow Carolina's example and to organize state student federations for their own student affairs.

The official delegates from Carolina were: R. C. Greene, John Idol, and Mayne Albright. Carolina was the only institution represented that did not have a written constitution for its student government.

Definite projects for the general aid of students were begun at the congress. Negotiations are now under way with the Interstate Commerce Commission to obtain reduced rates on railroads for students. Plans for a national student publication have been set on foot, and hotel corporations have been approached for reductions in rates for students.

The new officials of the federation, who were appointed or elected at the congress are: Ed R. Murrow, of Washington State, president; Charlotte Raible, of Mills College in California, vice-president; and John Lang, of the University, treasurer. The next annual session of the federation will meet at Toledo, Ohio.

Addresses were made at the congress by former Governor Nellie Tayloe Ross, vice-chairman of the Democratic party, Governor D. W. Davis of Idaho, Republican publicity manager, Governor Hardmann of Georgia, President M. L. Brittain and Dean R. L. Skiles of Georgia Tech, President J. R. McCain of Agnes Scott College, and numerous other leaders. In order to encourage a continuation of the federation's program, Mr. Lang presented to this organization $103 as a gift from the North Carolina Federation of Students.

Carolina Students Attend Convention

Five students of the University recently attended the national convention of the Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. held jointly in Detroit, Michigan from December the twenty-seventh through the thirty-first. This institution was officially represented by Ed Hamer, president of the Y. M. C. A., John Park, representing the junior and senior cabinets, Frank Hawley and Bob Barnett, from the sophomore cabinet, and Bob Reynolds of the freshman friendship council.

Chief among the speakers of the convention were Norman Thomas, Dr. Coe, Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, of Union Seminary, New York, Hon. J. Stitt, of Wilson, Sherwood Eddy, international secretary of the Y. M. C. A. Addresses were made by a number of other speakers and group leaders.

The convention was entertained at the Book-Cadillac Hotel.

EDUCATION DEAN BEHIND OPTIONAL ATTENDANCE HERE

Believes Cuts Can Be and Ought To Be Made up Through Extra Work or Coaching.

Dean Nathan Wilson Walker, of the school of education, informed a Daily Tar Heel reporter yesterday that, with regard to the proposed compulsory class attendance, it "was the sense of this department that there should be placed upon each student the obligation of making up work he has missed." In cases where the make-up work would require tutorial assistance, the instructor should appoint the tutor, and the student should bear the expense. In line with this policy, according to Dean Walker, the school also believes that each instructor should keep careful attendance records.

This statement indicates that the school of education places a premium on capability and thoroughness rather than on regular attendance. The action of this particular school does not have force other than its influence upon the central committee which will decide finally on the question. The position of the education staff was reached in a recent meeting. The diversity of the courses, the range of offerings, and the individual methods of the instructors, together with differences of opinion on the subject from angles other than the professional, gave rise to as many varied stands as were expressed in the general faculty meeting.

The liberal position of the school of education diverges markedly from the attitudes of the schools of liberal arts and commerce, and of the romance language department.

Professor Herman G. Baity, of the board governing the school of engineering since Dean Braune's death, declined to make public the resolutions passed by the engineering faculty.

NEWSPAPER MEN TO GATHER HERE JANUARY 14-16

Leading Journalists Will Talk on Different Phases of Editing And Publishing.

The Seventh Annual Newspaper Institute will be held here, January fourteenth through sixteenth with headquarters at the Carolina Inn. Registration at the Inn will take place at four o'clock, January 14.

At eight o'clock the same evening the opening of the Institute takes place in Gerrard hall. President Graham will deliver the address of welcome. J. W. Noell, president of the North Carolina Press Association, will make the response to the president's address. Honorable O. Max Gardner, Governor of North Carolina, will then make an address.

Thursday morning at ten o'clock in the Carolina Inn ballroom, there will be a speech by Fred Fuller Shedd, a prominent newspaper man. Following this there will be a discussion by several newspaper men of state prominence. Professor Albert Coates of the University Law School will close the morning session with a talk on "Criminal Law and the Press."

At 2:30 Mark Ethridge,

Let's Have A Showdown

Rumors have been current on the campus for some time now concerning the proposal to do away with class attendance privileges altogether. We are informed that the Romance Languages department has announced that no unexcused absences will be permitted and we are also informed that the department of economics and commerce has abolished optional attendance. How true our information is we do not know; nor are we able to place much faith in the rumors floating about that the faculty is planning to do away with all attendance privileges for the entire University.

With such rumors current it would be wise and we think necessary that some statement be made as to the status of a student who "cuts" a class here. Students accustomed to limited optional attendance may find themselves almost suspended if they attempt to exercise their former privileges. Let's have a showdown on the entire proposition.

In accordance with the policies of recent editors of the Daily Tar Heel, we are opposed to compulsory attendance for juniors and seniors in any division of the University. And the Daily Tar Heel is committed to oppose every effort of the faculty to limit the already limited optional attendance we have enjoyed during the past quarter.

But before discussing the merits of optional attendance we want to know what has been done. How many departments in the University have adopted the plan of compulsory attendance? Has the faculty adopted the plan for the University or is the plan under consideration by the faculty?

After all the students must bear the brunt of any steps the faculty may take and it is only fair that they should be informed as to their status. Let's have a showdown!

The Economic Depression, Russia, and The Open Mind

The United States, as well as most of the other parts of the civilized world, has been in one of the most profound economic depressions of recent times. This fact has stimulated more popular and professional thinking than has anything of a similar nature within the writer's scant knowledge. Even the mountaineers of North Carolina and Tennessee are ready at any moment to volunteer lengthy treatises as to what is wrong with our entire economic structure from their observances about a filling station. The popular mind of the country is in one of its most receptive stages for the acquisition of propaganda given out by radicals or proponents of various economic reform systems. Russia, being in its infancy and craving public favor of the world at large, is profiting greatly by our economic stress. Students in the universities have recently become very interested in this great experiment which is going on on the continent and have been given several views recently on the subject, and most of these have been favorable to Russia. The inquiring mind has been busy and it is being fed largely by material which is untrue in its entirety. Too many lecturers are inclined to visit Russia for three months only.

Just before the holidays especially in the commerce school Russia was discussed by professors and speakers in almost every class session. The writer, being supposedly of the average susceptibility to impressions, received one distinctly of admiration for Russian daring and courage in economic fields. During the holidays an interview with one of the Russian emigrants—from the professional class—changed all previous impressions of Russia's economic soundness and national stability. There is no real personal incentive to do good work, and the resulting products of manufacture and industry are generally known as the worst possible. The workers know that they are being exploited by Stalin and Kremlin councils but they are told that if the desired Tsarist regime were to return they would all be beheaded as revolutionists. There is thus a vicious circle operating — leaving the great mass of the people to choose the supposed lesser of two evils. The Five Year Plan cannot help but go through with the workers absolutely controlled by the dictators. While this plan is working, thousands of unclaimed Russian children are living in caves and in similar places of abode. Their successors stand a good chance to follow after them since religion has been abolished as sanctioning families, which the Bolshevists have decided are "chattels to help defeat the final purpose of anarchism."

American recognition of Russia is impossible. We, as students, owe it to ourselves to get the truth concerning Russia and any mind poisoning should be carefully guarded against. The United States is in a crucial stage of economic change and the young men of the country will determine within the next few years some vital issues for the nation. While minds are supposed to be pliable during youth, certain agitators may make them extremely rigid. This economic problem is one of the greatest to face the youth of any nation. American youth should keep itself prepared to face it intelligently.—O. W. D.

A Justification

It is almost disconcertingly gratifying to attempt a justification of laziness and to succeed. We began the argument with an admission—we undergraduates are too lazy to fancy the idea of studying for a comprehensive examination. But we are too ignorant to pass the February comprehensives without studying. It follows that we are opposed to comprehensive examinations. But an admission of laziness never filled any man with righteous satisfaction.

We began searching for a justification for our opposition. Candor made us expect failure. Our laziness was so patent that any other excuse would be too overshadowed to be noticed.

Then day broke, and we found a justification for our opposition. Even the happiest innovation, if it defeats its own purpose, is useless. Comprehensive examinations defeat their own purpose. There is logic, whether prompted by laziness or not. Such tests as those to be given in February are, theoretically, tests of what the students have learned in four college years, and rewords, and remembered, are of infinite importance. It must follow that if students study for comprehensive examinations, those examinations have no excuse for being. Again logic, although prompted by laziness.

The idea of holding the tests seemed an inspiration on somebody's part. But too many of us study for them. We are too ignorant to pass them otherwise. But it has been decreed that we must pass them.—V. A. D.

OPEN FORUM

DEAN CARROLL WAS IN CONFERENCE

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

There appeared in your front page leader yesterday (January 6) an article in reference to the new faculty regulation concerning absences and my attitude towards it. A knowledge of the facts could have been obtained very easily and without violating the rules of common courtesy. I did not refuse to see a Tar Heel reporter yesterday. As a matter of fact I did not even know of his visit to my office until I read the article in question this morning. I was busy all day with a line of waiting students who had complications in their schedules. It seems that your reporter came and asked to see me when nearly a dozen students were waiting in line. He was told by the secretary that by waiting his turn he could see me. By some fiction of his imagination, he interprets this as a refusal to see him.

As to my views on the question of class attendance, there will be no difficulty in securing a statement of them if the reporter will call at a time not in conflict with my primary duty as dean of the school of commerce.

I do not hesitate to state my position on class attendance. When a student enters a class it becomes his duty to cooperate in the work of that class. In some subjects the work is of such a nature that this cooperation can be carried on effectively with an occasional absence. In other subjects regular attendance may be very essential to effective work. If circumstances beyond the control of the teacher or student prevent attendance of either, this is to be regretted but cannot be condemned. In such a case, I would feel under obligation to make up what I, as a teacher, had failed to present to the class, and also would undertake to assist a student to bridge the gap when he is unavoidably prevented from coming to class.

I also favor leaving the matter of class attendance to any student who has "won the right to freedom" by the high quality of his work and demonstrated self-discipline in performance of his duty. In other words, I favor optional class attendance for any student who during three consecutive quarters has maintained an honor roll average.

the art of the Iberian peninsula. Even there the traditional Spanish dance is fast yielding place to the modern dances.

On the 20 of February there will be a program by the famous cartoonist and humorist, Bruce Bairnsfather, "the man who made the world laugh in its darkest hour." The creator of "Old Bill" has appeared in many American and English lecture halls and has probably produced more laughs by his humorous monologue, illustrated lectures, and cartoons than any other man in the same field. He served in France during the World War and later was taken from the trenches to serve as cartoonist attache' to all the armies.

The third entertainment will be Miss Gay Maclaren, who is now making a coast to coast tour speaking before celebrity courses, clubs and colleges. Her skill at reciting a whole play from memory and adopting her voice to the many characters makes her presentations very interesting. She will be here March 2.

Few nations can claim such wealth and beauty in folk music as Russia, and this music is wonderfully interpreted by the Kedroff Quartet which will be here March 31. Professor N. N. Kedroff, founder of the quartet, has spent many years in research work in collecting and harmonizing the musical treasure of the Slavic race.

On the 7 of April Agna Enters will appear in her program of dances. Enters has won much praise from the American, British, and French presses through her appearances in those countries.

The committee on entertainments attempted to bring Colonel Richard E. Byrd for a lecture on his Polar expeditions, but at the time the program was arranged he was not available.

As far as possible the committee has tried to make the selections desired by the students when they cast votes last spring, but in many cases it was impossible to engage the desired persons.

As was the case last year the students in the schools of Liberal Arts and A. B. Education have paid for the entertainment tickets and can get them when they are printed.

detail at Murmansk, North Russia and at Havre, France.

After he resigned in 1920, Frazier returned to the University, received the degree of Bachelor of Arts and finished his law course. He was active in campus affairs serving on the campus cabinet, as vice-president of the law class, Yackety Yack artist and editor, as censor of the Dialectic society, magister of Phi Delta Phi, editor of the North Carolina Law Review, president of the Panhellenic Council, and as a member of the Carolina Playmakers.

Since 1922, he has practiced law in Greensboro in the firm Frazier and Frazier of which his brother, C. C. Frazier, also a graduate of the University, is partner. He is a member of several organizations in Greensboro and has been active in them. Among these are the University Alumni Association, Guilford College Club, Country Club, Merchants and Manufacturers Club, Open Forum, Baristers Club, Monthly Meeting of Friends. At some time or other he has served as head of each of these.

Norman Thomas, socialist candidate for the presidency in 1928, and Senator Norris of Nebraska have been asked to speak in February.

C. B. Hoover's Talk Scheduled Tonight

At eight o'clock tonight in the auditorium of Bingham hall, Professor Calvin B. Hoover, of the Duke University department of economics, will discuss some aspects of the Russian situation as he found them in his nine-months' study last year. Professor Hoover is a popular lecturer on this subject. Last week at the annual convention of the American Economic Association his talk was described by the press as "the high light of the day's sessions."

Speaking the Russian language, Professor Hoover was able to get an intimate viewpoint and knowledge of conditions denied most travelers. He gives a sympathetic, and at the same time critical, analysis of the Soviet system and problems, and their challenge to capitalism. The public is invited to the lecture, which will be followed by a question period.

At Virginia and Kentucky . . . down where tobacco grows

college men choose this one outstanding SMOKING TOBACCO

THE men who go to the universities of Virginia and Kentucky know tobacco . . . they see how it grows and what makes it good.

So when Virginia students, and the men who stroll down old South Limestone Street in Lexington, pack their pipes with Edgeworth, their choice tells volumes about the cool, slow-burning quality of this favorite smoking tobacco.

It's the same story everywhere—North, South, East and West. In 42 out of 54 leading colleges and universities, college men prefer the smooth, fragrant burley blend of Edgeworth. Try Edgeworth yourself. You'll find more pleasure in a pipe than you ever knew before. Every tobacco store has Edgeworth, 15¢ the tin. Or, for generous free sample, write to Larus & Bro. Co., 105 S. 22d St., Richmond, Va.

SMOKING TOBACCO

Edgeworth is a blend of fine old burleys, with its natural savor enhanced by Edgeworth's distinctive eleventh process. Buy Edgeworth anywhere in two forms—"Ready-Rubbed" and "Plug Slice." All sizes, 15¢ pocket package to pound humidor tin.

Tar Heel Basketball Team To Meet Raleigh Y At Tin Can Tonight

Frank Goodwin, Former State College Star, Leads Capital City Team.

TAR HEEL PASSING GOOD

Unable to Find Basket Consistently In Game With Durham Y However.

The Tar Heel basketball team will meet the Raleigh Y. M. C. A. tonight at the Tin Can at eight o'clock in the second of the series of practice games with Y teams.

The contest tonight promises to be a hotly contested affair, since the White Phantoms proved their floor ability in the game with Durham Y Monday night, and the Capital City outfit is led by Frank Goodwin, former State College star.

Coach Ashmore will probably start Hines and Cleland, forwards; Dameron, center; and Captain Marpet and Edwards, guards. A number of other men will no doubt be used, however, if the going isn't too rough, for the Tar Heel mentor has yet to get a line on the abilities of a number of men.

Smith, center; Kendall, Moore, Hendlin and Brooker, forwards; and Alexander, Choate, Lineberger, Henry and Connor, guards, are among the letter promising hopefuls who will undoubtedly furnish reserve strength.

In their 31-14 victory over the Durham Y. M. C. A. Monday night, the Tar Heels proved their superiority at passing the ball, keeping it away from the Y team for a greater part of the game, but were off at finding the basket. The fact that they scored only seven points on fouls from twenty chances is evidence of this.

Sandy Dameron, tall blond center for Carolina, who is playing his last season, was the star of the contest, finding the basket for four field goals and five fouls. His passing was very good, and his great height with his ability at jumping center enabled him to get the tip-off with regularity.

Captain Artie Marpet played a nice game guarding the Tar Heels' basket, and found time to come up to make four points during the evening.

Burch, guard, was high scorer for the Y. M. C. A. quint, getting one field goal and three foul points. Bunn Hackney and Sis Perry, both former Carolina stars, played consistent games for the losers.

Sport Slants

By Don Shoemaker

With the hooting of sirens and the clang of bells (especially the bell on patrol wagon number three as it raided your local hotels), Old Man 1930 gave way to the infant 1931 a few nights ago, and a new year was ushered in in the appropriate fashion. We hope you enjoyed your New Year's Eve, but as for us—we spent it on a siding in the great metropolis of Sardinia, Ohio, schoolward bound.

As we cast the speculative eye back over the old year that is gone and forgotten, or if at least not forgotten can be blamed on Hoover, a number of events stand out in the past sport season.

What has Baby 1931 in store for us? Will the year hold an abundance of basketball, baseball, and football victories? Will our boxing and wrestling teams come through with flying colors? Let's hope little old 1931 will be generous.

We quote with no little degree of amusement from the New York Mirror, metropolitan news-scandal-tabloid sheet, the following:

"The members of the Southern team who meet the North in a charity football game sponsored by the Brooklyn Unemployment Emergency Committee at Ebbets Field Sunday afternoon weren't slow in expressing their confidence of beating the North. The Southern delegation seems to be composed of Art Shires, Jack Sharkeys, and Max Baers. They were willing to tell anyone within hearing distance just what they could do to the North. . . . 'Why,' said Jim Magner, North Carolina halfback, who touts himself as the greatest forward passer in the country, 'we won't have to worry about blocking and taking those Northern boys out of plays. We'll just run right over them.' And then Magner went on in detail as to his exploits during the 1930 campaign."

The best part of the little episode, however, is the story which ran in the Mirror following the game to the effect that after all their joshing, the sport scribes really did believe that Magner was the best passer in the country.

. . . And I chose sports writing as my profession!

One of our New York correspondents who saw the game stated that he was the country's best passer (assuming that he did make such a declaration), for the Tar Heel flash split the air repeatedly with well thrown passes. One of these, for forty-five yards over the goal line, was dropped by a Dixie end.

During the radio broadcast of the Alabama-Washington State classic in the Rose Bowl New Year's Day, the announcer invited Johnny Mack Brown, erstwhile movie actor-All-American football player, to speak a few words. After a few remarks on his alma mater, Alabama, Johnny remarked that Wallace Wade was coming to Duke University, Durham, South Carolina, to coach next year.

Just another indication that our neighboring institution is becoming famous.

In one of the press writeups of the North-South charity game, the names of Morse (Maus) and House appeared with "N. C." and the notation "no college."

. . . And they choke carburetors.

OFFICIALS RULE SACRIFICE FROM BASEBALL CODE

Other Radical Alterations Made In Current Diamond Rules By League Heads.

The most radical change in baseball rules within the last three years occurred yesterday when the sacrifice fly was legislated out of existence by baseball's joint rules committee.

From now on when a batter lifts a lofty fly to the outfield and enables a runner to advance a base, he will not be credited with a sacrifice and he will be charged with a time at bat.

Proponents of the change insisted that the sacrifice fly had no place in the rules. They pointed out that in most cases batsmen had no intentions of lifting a high fly to the outfield so the runner could advance a base. Instead most of them were swinging for home runs or a hit of some description. Therefore, they argued, the batter should be charged with a time at bat just as he is when he lifts a fly which does not permit a runner to move up or which comes with the hassocks empty.

There being no sentiment on the other side the rule was adopted.

Another important change limits the runner to two bases when the ball bounces out of the playing field. This rule was designed to prevent "trick home runs" made when the ball hopped into the stands.

The National League rule saying that a ball should be judged fair or foul where it last leaves the playing field and not where it is last seen was given American League approval and thus becomes a standard regulation.

Pitching rules, especially in respect to the stance the hurler should take before delivering the ball, were clarified.

The committee also decided to revise and clarify the rules in general much as the football committee recodified the football regulations.

MUCH TALENT ON SOUTHERN QUINTS

Six of 1930 All-Southern Stars Return for Basketball Campaign.

Six of the ten players selected last season for the Associated Press by coaches as the best basketball players in Dixie are back for another cage campaign.

Corbitt, Tennessee's crack forward and Lindy Hood, Alabama giant center, are the only members of the first 1930 honor team back but Sanford, Georgia forward; Walton Laney, Alabama guard; Croson, lanky Duke center and Bobby Dodd, Tennessee guard, received second team honor.

Four of the most colorful players of last season—all honor team selections, are missing this year. They are Councillor, Duke's swarthy, dynamic forward; Bill Werber, an all-southern Duke guard for two years; Smith, Alabama's leading sharpshooter, and McBrayer, Kentucky stalwart guard.

Other outstanding players of last season back for another fling include Leigh Williams, center and Harris Cox, forward of Washington and Lee, joint holders of the conference high scoring honors in 1930. Catfish Smith, Georgia's great all-around athlete who plays center in basketball; Ginny Wages, Georgia Tech guard; Roberts, Tulane's robust center; Yates, Sewanee forward; Coffee, Vanderbilt forward and Waters, Florida gaurd.

Intramural Basketball Race Gets Underway Next Monday

Schedule Will Be Arranged When Entry List Is Complete.

The intramural department has announced that the intramural basketball season will open Monday, January 12, and will extend through a regular schedule which will be arranged as soon as all entry cards have been turned in to G. E. Shepard, Director of Intramural Athletics. These cards have been sent to each dormitory and fraternity manager of athletics, who is asked to fill out and turn in these blanks immediately in order that the schedule may be arranged and published by the latter part of the week.

This is a part of the regular intramural program and points will be awarded toward the winning of the Intramural Cup as in other sports. The championship winner will be awarded fifty points, forty points will be awarded for second place, thirty for third, twenty for fourth, and ten for fifth place. Individual team members will receive five points for every game in which they participate and win and one point for every game in which they participate and lose.

Wants To Insure College Athletes

College Humor Editor Favors "Workman's Compensation" For Athletes.

"Present day football has shown us that the successful coach (meaning one who wins games and fills stadiums,)" says H. N. Swanson, Editor, in the College Humor, "will be known hereafter not as a mentor who believes in sports to build a man's body and mind, but as a crafty stage director who drives his men and sacrifices them whenever scoring is at stake. The successful coach (still meaning the best showman) will urge his men to play hard and dangerously. The public loves a fast running attack, with plenty of spectacular tackling and spills. More men will be hurt and permanently crippled. Literaly, it will be dying for dear old Goofus.

"Games of this sort cause the outside public to help lift the burden of higher education. For the price of a cheap theater ticket the dear old public is, knowingly or not, doing a great service. And that's fine. But I say that since the players of football, basketball, hockey and

VIRGINIA CAGERS TO OPEN SEASON SATURDAY NIGHT

Meet Tar Heels February 7; Gus Tebell Hopes to Have Strong Quint.

University, Virginia, January 6.—Virginia's basketball team will have one more practice game before opening the regular season Saturday night with Hampden-Sidney College in the Memorial Gymnasium.

Virginia wants to go down to the Southern Conference basketball tournament in Atlanta, and Coach Gus Tebell will be centering the attention of his charges upon winning enough of their 11 games with Southern Conference members to be eligible for the tourney. In 1929 the North Carolina State team, under Coach Tebell, won the championship.

Lem Mayo, who has accounted for 28 points in the first two practice games, probably will be Virginia's scoring ace. Captain Bob Manley, Dave Stouder, and Harry Steinberg, all men of experience, will do most of the guarding. Jim Delafield and Andy Merle, who have played before, and Sidney Young, a newcomer, are competing as forwards. Three new men are out for the center position.

NEW GUILD WILL PRESENT MOVIES

First Programme To Be a Trip Across the World.

Beginning next Sunday, January 11, the Chapel Hill Theatre Guild, a recent addition to the art and dramatic organizations of the University village, will put on a special matinee program at the Carolina theatre, and their initial feature production will inaugurate at the theatre under the auspices of the Guild.

The Theatre Guild, organized by a number of prominent faculty members and townspeople, has, by a special arrangement with the management, secured the Carolina for the purpose of having Sunday afternoon programs. This latest organization for the art and drama of the screen is working in accord with the other intellectual clubs of the town such at the Fine Arts club and the Chapel Hill Folk Plays.

It is the intention of the Guild to give their accolade only to the very highest type of motion pictures, productions of proven artistic and dramatic merit of such types as Scott's The Lady of the Lake and the special feature Across the World. The feature selected for this coming Sunday is Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, celebrated travelers and adventurers, in their trip around the world. A board composed of certain Chapel Hill citizens interested in the innovation will choose the pictures to be shown. Many foreign productions are to be booked, as well as travelogues and similar educational attractions. Also there will be returns of some of the outstanding silent pictures of some years ago, such as "Variety" and "Hearts of the World." The so-called "popular movie" will not be seen at any of the Guild programs.

The members of the Guild will meet every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 for approximately an hour and a half of feature entertainment. In order to gain admittance to the Carolina at any of these performances one must become a member of the Guild, as no one else will be admitted. There will be no ticket selling at the box office. The membership dues of the organization are $1.60 a month, and members are entitled to attend every showing during the month.

The arrangement which makes possible this weekly Sunday afternoon program of the Guild is distinctly not a commercial proposition for the Carolina. The idea has assumed this definite plan in order to provide the highest and most wholesome form of entertainment for all townspeople, students, and University faculty members who wish to take advantage of it, and who otherwise would have to turn elsewhere for something to do on Sunday afternoons. All profits made from the venture are to be turned over to the Orange county charities under the direction of George Lawrence or to organizations of goodwill such as the King's Daughters and the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

The idea of the Guild has been endorsed by leading groups of Chapel Hill, and in its materializing a unique and particularly superior type of entertainment, not elsewhere available in the state and possibly in the South, comes to this town.

Membership to the Guild may be obtained by applying to the secretary of the Guild at the Y each day from ten to twelve. Also any one desiring to have a feature presented may send his request in to Box 70.

The world's supply of coal should last ten thousand years.

NOBLE PUBLISHES EDUCATION BOOK

"A History of the Public Schools of North Carolina," by M. C. S. Noble, dean of the school of education, has just arrived at the University Press.

The book is a description of the slow process of education in North Carolina in its fight against ignorance and greed, beginning with early colonial days to 1900, told by one who has performed yeoman service in the cause of education. The author is inspired with an unshakable belief in the genuine will of North Carolina to educate her people. He presents several striking analogies to the present educational problems of the state, and draws heavily upon manuscript sources, bringing to light much material of human interest.

U. S. Civil Service Announces Openings

The United States Civil Service Commission has announced open competitive examinations as follows:

Junior mathematician, coast and geodetic survey at a salary of 2,000 a year. Requests for information should be addressed to the Department of Commerce.

Junior forester and junior range examiner, forest service, Indian service, and bureau of biological survey, for duty in the field. The salary ranges from $2,000 to $2,600 a year. Positions are open for medical officer, associate medical officer, and assistant medical officer, general medicine and surgery, for duty in the department service, veterans' bureau, public health service, Indian service, coast and geodetic survey, and Panama Canal Zone.

All states with the exceptions of Maryland, Virginia, Vermont, and the District of Columbia have received less than their share of appointment in the apportioned departmental service, at Washington, D. C. Full information may be secured from S. W. Bynum, secretary of the United States Civil Service Board of Examiners at the post office or custom house in any city.

Graham Addresses Freshman Class At Chapel Meet

President-elect Graham yesterday morning opened the first chapel for the quarter with an address to the freshman class asking their cooperation in this time of business depression. He stated that the University last quarter had more students than at any previous time in its history, and yet was forced to operate on a budget that was cut $175,000.

either dormitory or fraternity may organize and enter independent teams, it is said, by filling out and sending the regular entry blank to G. E. Shepard in South Building.

In the fraternity league the Deke's, winners of last year's fraternity championship and runner-up to Aycock for campus honors, will again present a strong team with most of their men returning. The Phi Gam's, Sigma Nu's, Zeta Psi's and T. E. P.'s, tied for second place last year with seven victories and one defeat each, will give the Deke's a battle for the fraternity title.

The Zeta Psi's are the hardest hit by losses as only one or two men of last year's team are back this year. The T. E. P.'s will present the same line-up, while the Phi Gam's and the Sigma Nu's lose two men and one man respectively.

In the dormitory league Aycock, Old East, Manly, and Steele, who placed in order last year are all hard hit by losses only one or two of each team returning. Steele and Aycock are the hardest hit by losses, Steele losing the entire team, including Purser, all campus football and basketball star, who has transferred to a fraternity team this season.

FRIENDS COME TO AID OF COLLEGE

Appeal of Louisburg Institution For Funds Brings Encouraging Response.

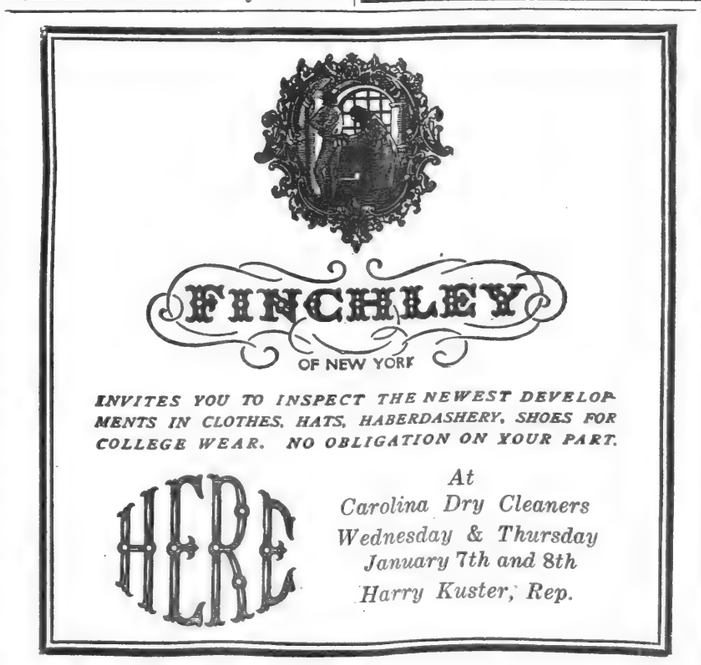
The fate of Louisburg College hangs in a balance. Following the action at a recent session in Henderson of the North Carolina Methodist Conference, which owns the college refusing to advance further credit because the money was not available, the institution has appealed for contributions of $12,000 with which to see it through the present financial crisis and operate it through the spring semester.

According to the response to the appeal thus far, friends of the institution are exceedingly hopeful that the school will be able to continue for the remainder of the year. The campaign to raise the necessary funds is to end January 10, and at that time an announcement will be made regarding the future of the institution.

Churches, individuals, and various organizations have joined in the money-raising effort. The contributions so far have been gratifying, with some churches giving as much as $700. Smaller churches throughout the conference have contributed from $20 to $500 to the cause.

It is understood that other organizations are rallying to the aid of the college. The Franklin County Welfare Association, a relief organization among the colored people of Franklin county, recently voted $25 to the fund. Welfare and civic organizations in Louisburg and other towns in all parts of the state are planning to make contributions.

Friends and alumnae have also made generous donations.



Louisburg College is one of the oldest religious educational institutions in the South, having been established more than one hundred years ago. The growth of the school was rapid until the fire three years ago which destroyed a part of the plant. At that time the enrollment was about 300. Approximately eighty girls are enrolled there this year.

DEBATERS PLAN EXTENDED TRIPS

The debate squad will meet in Murphey 201, Thursday night at 7:30, to begin preparations for the busiest season of trips and contests in the history of the University. The debaters will hear an address by a member of the faculty of the school of commerce on the subject of government unemployment insurance.

At a meeting just before the end of the fall quarter, the debate squad decided to have a large number of contests here and they will make three long trips: one to Boston, one to Northwestern, and one to Texas. The question of unemployment insurance will probably be used on all of these trips, and attendance at the lecture Thursday night is necessary for eligibility to compete.

other sports are so important to the school, the school should do something about them. Business institutions are required by law to insure workers against injury or death. I feel there should be a state law, requiring every school to take out compensation insurance for all players, except in intra-mural sports. In case a man is injured, a certain sum should go to him until he recovers no matter if he leaves school. Today's undergraduate doesn't ask that his expenses be paid or his academic way be made easy. But he is entitled to the assurance that if he does get a shattered knee or broken collar bone, his future will be protected. I am certain the schools will need no laws to force them to this. As business institutions they cannot help seeing its worth."

LEO, MOVIE LION WILL COME HERE ON TOUR MONDAY

Co-Ed Is Asked To Volunteer To Feed Famous Animal.

The best known animal in the world comes to Chapel Hill Monday in the person of Leo, the huge lion that roars his supremacy at the beginning of all Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures. We are accustomed to seeing Leo from within the "Ars Gratia Artis" scroll of the trade-mark design which he has helped to make so familiar, but today it is different for he arrives among us in person in all the grandeur and style that should surround "the greatest star of the screen" and the king of beasts. Leo will perform and eat twenty-five pounds of raw meat in front of the Carolina theatre at four p. m. Leo is very particular and likes to be fed by a lady. Any co-ed who wishes to feed Leo is asked to please call by Mr. Smith's office in the theatre.

Leo's entourage consists of two magnificent motor cars, a palatial motor truck, and a staff of five escorts. One of the motor cars is that which furnishes transportation for Leo's advance representative who visited this town two weeks ago to bring word that Leo was on his way. The second motor car is that which carries the Calliaphone, Leo's own private band accompaniment for Leo is fond of his music and is always in a much better mood to receive his guests after having been serenaded by this instrument. Any numbers which by chance do not please Leo's fancy, he has no trouble drowning out with his reverberating jungle roar.

The third unit of the motor assemblage is the big resplendent motor truck which is Leo's cage home while on his world tour. And it is in this truck especially that experts in many lines have combined their science and art in providing for Leo the most complete, the most comfortable and the most beautiful vehicle of its type ever constructed.

Leo's traveling home is twenty-four feet long over all and towers approximately ten and one-half feet above the Faculty and Student Players To Lend Merriment to Elizabethan and Modern Farces.

The Carolina Playmakers will present their annual Twelfth Night Revel, January the tenth at eight p. m., and the program will continue on into the night. There are two affairs of this kind each year on the calendar of the Playmakers, the other one being the Annual Caper at the end of the school year.

As usual the program will be divided into two parts, the Elizabethan and the Modern. The revel scene from Shakespeare's Twelfth Night is to open the evening's merriment. The stage will represent one end of an old Elizabethan hall and the costumes will be appropriate to the time. Professor George McKie is the director of the cast composed of members of the faculty and the student body.

Rules Regarding Late Registration

To clear up any misunderstanding among students as to exactly what the penalty is for late registration the registrar's office yesterday stated that the rule was as follows: any undergraduate student who registers late is on probation; for registering one day late the probation lasts thirty days, for two days sixty days, and for three days the student is placed on probation for the entire quarter.

FORUM WILL HEAR FRAZIER TONIGHT

Greensboro Lawyer to Speak in Gerrard Hall at Seven O'clock.

The second formal meeting of the Polity Forum will take place in Gerrard hall tonight at seven o'clock with Jack Dungan presiding. This organization has as its idea the development and crystallization of the opinions and beliefs of the students in political affairs. It is open to anyone without fees or dues.

From time to time, the Forum brings prominent men here to talk on matters of political interest. On Friday, December 12, the Forum brought Professor B. B. Kendrick of North Carolina College for Women, to talk on the future of the Democratic party.

Tonight Robert Haines Frazier, Greensboro lawyer of the firm, Frazier and Frazier, will talk to the Forum.

The Polity Forum has invited Norman Thomas, who was socialist candidate for the presidency in 1928, to speak at a meeting during the month of February. Senator Norris of Nebraska has also been asked to speak.

CALDWELL ABSENT ON KENAN LEAVE

Dr. Wallace E. Caldwell, professor of ancient history in the University, Mrs. Caldwell, and their two sons, Bobby and Teddy, sailed Christmas eve from New York for Europe.

Dr. Caldwell, who has been a member of the University faculty for the last eight years, is going to Europe on a Kenan travel professorship, awarded him by the University trustees last spring. His itinerary will include Egypt, Syria, Turkey, Greece, Italy, and Germany.

A student and teacher of ancient history for more than twenty years, Dr. Caldwell will devote considerable time to studies of archaeological discoveries. He has visited the East before and is familiar with the regions to be covered. The Caldwells will return to Chapel Hill in September.

Few Fires

There were no large fires in the last few weeks. Four small fires were reported and two false alarms were turned in. A chimney caused a flame on the house of John Kieser (colored). The damage was less than five dollars. The fire occured December twenty-eight.

On January second a small fire was reported on Pittsboro street. The damage was three dollars. Mrs. Mary Manning, E. Franklin street, had a small fire due to a stove on January third. The damage was slight. The fourth one was also small and occurred in the Delta Psi annex two nights ago.

SOCIETIES OPPOSE SUPPRESSION OF CLASS PRIVILEGES

Di and Phi Go On Record as Favoring Retention of Optional Attendance.

The Di and Phi societies met on Tuesday night and both bodies overwhelmingly passed resolutions against the proposed abolition of optional attendance for juniors and seniors at the University.

The Di resolution was: Resolved, That the Di society go on record as desiring an immediate return to complete optional attendance enjoyed last year by the juniors and seniors. The Phi resolution read: Resolved, That the Phi society go on record as opposing any plan to establish compulsory class attendance, as a plan not for the best interests of the students and of the University. Both resolutions were passed by large majorities.

The bill in the Di senate was introduced by Senator Dungan. The resolution was upheld by Senators Ramsay, Rector, Fleming-Jones, Malone and was opposed by Senators Medford, McIver and Whitaker.

The Phi resolution was introduced by Representative Albright. Representatives Hobgood, Kelly, and Sisp supported this bill; Carmichael opposed it.

HUMAN RELATIONS INSTITUTE PLANS BEING ARRANGED

Second of Its Kind To Be Held At the University.

In 1927 the University conducted its first Human Relations Institute. The Institute was held at the University for a week and had many prominent men as lecturers. The purpose of the Institute is to teach people to understand the vital problems confronting the United States and the world as a whole.

At the former Institute it was decided that there was to be a meeting every four years, and so during either the first or second week in April of this year there will be another convention at which lecturers from all over the country will speak to people at public meetings and attempt to make them understand the important points of such questions as international and interracial relations.

In 1927 there were twenty public meetings of the Human Relations Institute and sixty-one class room seminars at which there was a total attendance of 21,000. Some of the prominent speakers at the last meeting of the Institute were: W. W. Alexander, executive secretary of the Southern Interracial Commission; Cameron Beck, personnel manager of the New York Stock Exchange; J. J. Cornelius, former professor of philosophy at Lucknow University, India; Herbert Adams Gibbons, of Princeton, N. J., author and lecturer; Egbert M. Hayes, field secretary for the National Committee on friendly relations among foreigh students; W. C. GARDNER'S SPEECH TO BE HEARD BY RADIO ON CAMPUS

Public Invited to Gerrard Hall to Hear Governor's Address to General Assembly Friday.

Governor Gardner's address to the General Assembly in Raleigh tomorrow at noon may be heard over radio by members of the campus and town community at Gerrard hall. Through the courtesy of the University Consolidated Service Plants a radio will be installed and operated for this occasion. Law students and students in government are particularly invited.

The 1931 Legislature, which convened yesterday for organization, probably has as many important problems of far-reaching importance to the State to consider as have any sessions in the past quarter of a century. Principal topics of legislation that will be discussed by Governor Gardner will probably include tax relief for real estate, the reorganization of various departments of the state government, establishment of larger control by the state government over the administration of justice, and the biennial revenue and appropriations, bills to provide for the operation of the state government and institutions the next two years.

RUSSIA AT VERY CRITICAL PERIOD SAYS DR. HOOVER

Duke Professor Believes Five-Year Plan Is Causing Great Sacrifice.

Last night at eight o'clock in room 103 of Bingham hall, Calvin B. Hoover, professor of economics at Duke University, spoke for the department of economics and commerce on the subject "Recent Economic Developments in Russia."

Professor Hoover has spent nine months in Russia, in which he travelled 10,000 miles from the artic circle to the Trans-Siberian railway. Since he knew the Russian language he was able to make a fairly comprehensive study of conditions in that country, and was able to study reports other than pure propaganda. Professor Hoover has written several articles on Russia and also a book which has not yet come from the press.

"Russia at the present time," Professor Hoover said, "is at the most critical time in the economic development since the revolution. A change is being made from the economic policy which contains many capitalistic elements to a new economic system which approaches pure communism. This development has two important aspects: the collectivization of agriculture and a great program for the industrialization of Russia.

"This program of industrialization is comprehended in the five-year plan. The program is being carried on at the cost of the greatest sacrifice on the part of the Russian people." Professor Hoover stated that this sacrifice is largely unwilling but that it is dictated by the Communist party. He said also that during the past two years there has been an extreme shortage of consumption goods. "The shortage of food has almost reached famine proportions. The favorable

All Upperclassmen Enjoy Optional Attendance Right Until Faculty Denies It

Chairman

DR. W. W. PIERSON

Dr. W. W. Pierson, dean of the graduate school, has been chosen chairman of the special committee from the undergraduate faculty to consider the advisability of repealing optional attendance.

DEBATING TOPIC OF RADIO TALKS

Williams and Wilkinson Heard Over Raleigh Station Yesterday Afternoon.

At 5:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon the University radio broadcast on debating was made over station WPTF in Raliegh. The speakers were J. C. Williams former president of the debating council and winner of the Mary D. Wright and Bingham debate medals, and J. A. Wilkinson, active member of the debate squad and the first man in the history of the University to make the varsity debate squad in his freshman year. R. C. Greene, president of the student union, introduced the speakers.

Wilkinson spoke first of the history of debating at the University and the present organization of the debating squad, and also the plans for the future of debating here. He declared that the attitude toward debating at the University had undergone a shift during the past decade. "The emphasis is now on increased student participation and on wider general interest rather than on the mere winning of victories."

Williams spoke about intercollegiate debating in general and offered pertinent advice to high school debaters in the state. "It is my opinion," he stated, "that the policy of giving high school debaters subjects whose depth is beyond their grasp and information is not calculated to yield the best results." He advised concentration on simpler topics.

Comer Entertains

H. F. Comer, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., entertained at an informal dinner party at his home in Forest Hills Tuesday night. He had as his guests the members of the delegations from North Carolina and Duke Universities to the Y. M.-Y. W. convention at Detroit, December 27 to December 31. The boys from the University who attended the convention were Ed Hamer, John Park, Bob Barnett, Frank Hawley, and Bob Reynolds. Hubert Herring, student councillor and personnel officer from Duke, was with the delegation.

RULES MADE TWO YEARS AGO ARE STILL IN EFFECT

Faculty Is To Consider Changing Present System in Meeting Tomorrow.

STUDENT LEADERS MEET

Will Petition Faculty To Give Students Class Privileges.

The latest development in the optional attendance confusion is the discovery that all juniors and seniors despite rulings or rumors to the opposite have been under optional attendance during the past quarter and until further notice will continue to be. During the spring quarter last year the Hibbard legislation was repealed in favor of that which gave optional attendance to all juniors and seniors. Because only some forty to sixty percent of the faculty recorded absences and reported to Dr. T. J. Wilson, Jr., University registrar, and the obvious injustice to those who would be placed on probation under such a system, he ruled that all juniors and seniors should enjoy optional attendance until a definite plan had been put into effect by the undergraduate faculty.

From the official University catalogs of the University from the year 1920-21 a history of class attendance has been compiled and is issued this morning.

Beginning with the year 1920-21 and going through the school year 1924 the absences were handled by the instructors. When the student who in one month missed the number of classes amounting to a week's work, he was compelled to take a quiz on the work. If he missed 33 percent of the quarter's classes he was given an examination by the instructor before he was allowed to take the final examination on the course.

The first change came in the year 1924-25. This change was brought about by Dean J. F. Royster. The change stated that there would be fifty men allowed

Vicious Legislation

There is a rumor abroad—and in the light of all that we are able to ascertain from the commitments of certain individuals, we cannot believe it is a spurious one—that merchants and merchants associations are organizing to prohibit retailing of goods by the University of North Carolina or any of its subsidiaries. If there is anything in this report both the consolidated service plants operated as subsidiaries of the University and the dormitory stores, which are under University supervision, are concerned. The rumor even goes so far as to say that some sort of state or national organization of merchants (we do not know specifically what kind of merchants) is contemplating the introduction of a bill in the state legislature the objective of which would be, of course, to prohibit the University's retailing activities.

It seems to us entirely obvious that the University's operation of service plants and supply stores is justified. Not only has the University a right to engage in activities to supply its own coal, water, and power service; it would likewise seem that it has the right—nay, responsibility—of supplying students with other necessary commodities. The service plants have a buying power which enables them to make advantageous purchases, and they sell their goods and services at reasonable rates. Such being the case, it follows that the community ought, at will, to be allowed patronage of this service.

If it is the intent of merchants to run out of business the dormitory stores, operated and managed by self-help students, it is indeed a malicious one. While the system of dormitory stores here does have its defects, it certainly is a financial aid to many students who in its discontinuance might be forced to leave school. Any proposal, such as that mentioned above, to curb activities of self-help students who are engaged in legitimate occupations to defray personal expenses should make all students indignant.

If such a bill is introduced in the houses of the state assembly we hope—and we feel confident—that our legislators will frown upon it and send it to the waste-basket, which is the proper depository for all proposals of such character.—B. M.

Will the Legislature Lower Salaries?

And now it is said that certain members of the legislature, not content with cutting the appropriation of the state schools twenty percent, are seriously proposing to lower salaries generally among faculty members in those same state institutions. It is hard to give credence to this rumor, hard to believe that any member of the legislative body of the state, which of course has the best interests of North Carolina at heart, is so stupid that he cannot see the folly of this blundering step for economy's sake.

To cut salaries among University professors would be false economy of the most injurious sort. The University of North Carolina has achieved a distinctly enviable reputation over the long period of those ups and downs which mark its growth, and certainly the only logical thing for those who operate the purse strings to do is to let it stay in its position at the head of Southern education. Unless the legislature sees and pays attention to the handwriting on the wall that appeared last year with the resignation of five of the outstanding men in the department of English, then the University is due to see a sad decline coming on the heels of the justifiable pride it takes in its accomplishments.

Depression or no depression, one of the worst mistakes that could be made by the governing body of the state would be to lower the salaries of faculty members. Depression is temporary, but the University of North Carolina is permanent, and if the high standing of the institution is to continue as one of the greatest advertisements of the state, then the legislature should take steps to make that standing a permanent cause for pride rather than the ephemeral flash in the pan that such a record of achievement can easily prove to be.—R. H.

OPEN FORUM

TO THE MEN OF CAROLINA

This article is addressed to those who love their alma mater, to those who hold its time honored institutions dear. All others, including prep-school men, keep out.

I am appealing to you in a panic of mixed feelings, feelings of apprehension, anger, and shame, which bid fair soon to develop into a most decided feeling of pure mournfulness for this our own cherished institution. I am, of course, referring to the recent movement on the part of the faculty to put rings on our noses as tho we were dumb cattle, and chain us to our classroom desks with this idiotic new regulation making attendance compulsory. That, to my mind and the mind of those with whom I have talked, is the most degrading, most backward step that this institution has ever been guilty of, and perhaps makes concrete the subtly voiced opinion that we are on the decline, that the star of Carolina is setting!

Gentlemen, no doubt we are at a crucial period of our existence. We, as a state supported institution, feel the financial pinch of the nation-wide slump in business; new institutions privately and richly endowed are taking natural advantage of the situation to wrest from us the leadership of the state; some of our best professors have left us, some thru death, others thru better offers elsewhere; and at this critical juncture the faculty has seen fit to shear us of one of the most noteworthy flowers to our name; individual liberty as grown and sensible men. Splendid, splendid! the gentlemen of the faculty have devised a new means for restoring a sinking man: injecting water into his veins! If we are no longer the largest or the wealthiest university in North Carolina, if we are no longer the kings of the sports field, if we are no longer the intellectual leaders of the state, at least, in the name of all that is holy, let us be the most broadminded and freedom blest!

Remember how a year or so ago our President Chase spoke eloquently against the contemplated legislative action to suppress the teaching of evolution in our schools? From what a horror he saved us! President Chase goes. Retrogradation appears. I do not say that because he went, liberality went with him. Presidents have no power over such things. But it is significant! Then it was when juniors and seniors lost their old privilege of class attendance. We stood for it then because it affected only a minority of the students. My indignation at that step was almost as deep as the one I feel now, for in that move I foresaw what was to follow, and here we have it—the restrictions have been extended to the whole student body. Reactionary gentlemen never learn lessons, nor are they ever satisfied. Soon they will be forcing us all into chapel to listen to chatter, after that we shall be hounded into church, and after that, while we're at it, smoking will probably be prohibited on the campus. If you think that an exaggeration, consider that on the Illinois campus cigarettes are banned.

I do not say that all students should have absolute liberty in regard to class attendance; in fact, it would not be a bad idea to be more stringent on the lower class men; but juniors and seniors should have absolute liberty to come and go as they down right please. A man who reaches that category should be old enough to take care of himself, he is old enough to take his education seriously, to want to learn, to like going to class. I do not think that since the commencement of my third year I have cut more than five times, mainly because I wanted to go, and secondarily because I had to be present to pass my work. Why then be stupid as to force a man to do what he cheerfully does of his own accord? Somebody please explain that to me. It astonishes me to realize that the gentlemen of the faculty have as yet not learned that old maxim, that you can lead a jackass to the water but you cannot make him drink. What do they most desire, attendance or scholarship? You can have both by our past method, but if you get either now it will be with a growl. And after all, isn't it better for a man who does not want to pass his work to flunk out in time rather than to force him to encumber the progress of the others by his presence in the class?

Where is our famous student government now? Has it no voice in such matters as these? Is it instituted only for the inglorious and distasteful duty of shipping boys who get drunk or who cheat in an exam? We take great pride in it, as we take pride in our honor system, and as we used to take pride in our freedom; let's see some action on their part to prove to us that it still exists; let the respective classes congregate to voice an opinion on this matter—let us in short get together once again to prove to the world that we know what rights are, that we are alive to the ideals of our school, and that we have the red blood in our veins to knock down whomsoever should attempt to dress our proud head with a dunce's cap.—A. B. C.

AN OPEN LETTER TO O. W. D.

My dear O. W. D.,

In your editorial in the January 7th edition of the Tar Heel, you present to that small minority of students who admire the Russian experiment a rather depressive picture of the new Russia. It seems that children live in caves there; that there is no incentive to do good work; that the workers are being exploited; and that therefore America must never recognize Russia.

Let us suppose these statements and conditions to be true. They aren't, of course. But let us suppose that they are. And now let us apply them to North Carolina.

You say, "The workers know that they are being exploited by Stalin and the Kremlin councils, but that they are told that if the desired Tsarist regime were to return they would all be beheaded as revolutionists."

Can you deny that the workers here are not being exploited by the mill-owners? If they were not being exploited, they would be receiving a wage sufficient to maintain a decent standard of living. Are they? I think not. They receive just enough wages to keep them alive and at the looms. Why give them more? If they die off, there are always plenty of slaves to take their places.

And if they revolt against their masters? They are shot, beaten by ruffians hired by the mill-owners, thrown into prison, and evicted from their homes, which the mill-owners own for just that emergency.

You say that there are thousands of Russian children living in caves and similar places of abode.

Have you ever seen the homes of the colored working population of this state, or of some of the tenant farmers? You ought to go through some of them. I am sure that you would much rather live in a cave after you have seen them.

You say there is no real personal incentive to do good work in Russia.

What incentive do you see for the mill worker in this state? I can't see any beyond the mere will to live. Unless, of course, you call fourteen dollars a week an incentive.

You did not have to say that you had an interview with a Russian emigrant from the professional class. That was quite evident. I can assure you that if you had an interview with a mill-worker or tenant farmer in this state, you would receive a similar opinion of this country.

You spoke to the wrong man, O. W. D. Why not have a talk with some Russian workers who have lived under both the Tsarist and the present regime?

Yours truly,
PHIL LISKIN.

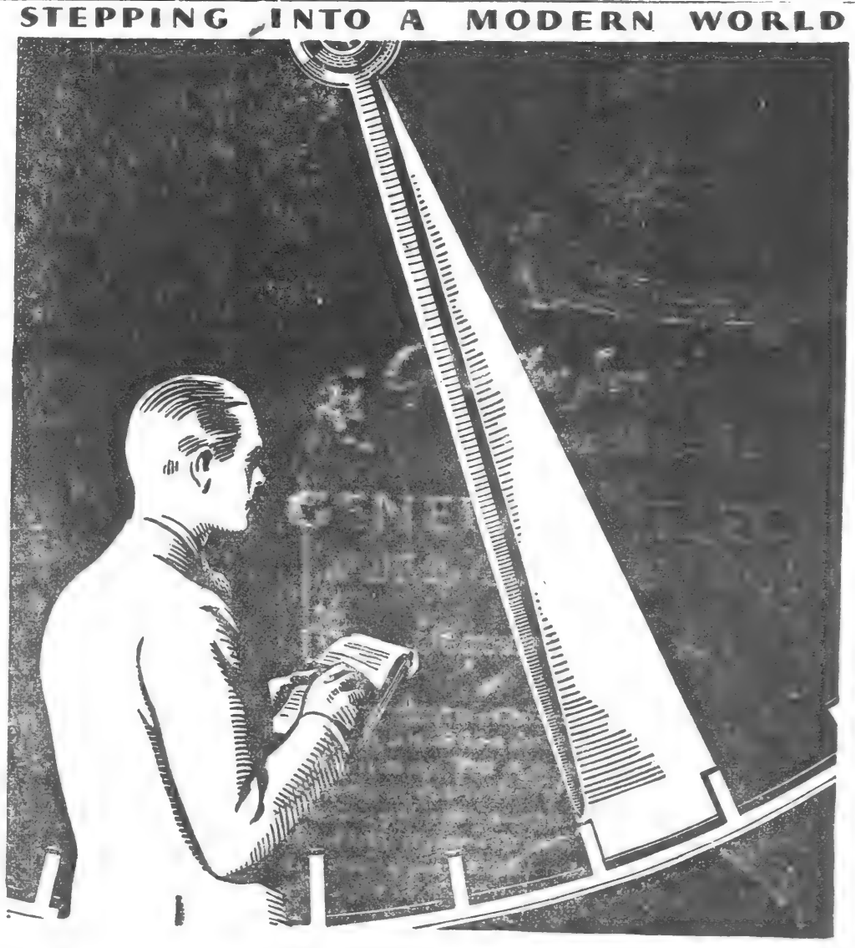
PLANS MADE FOR BRILLIANT DANCE



Junior Class Arranging for Large Orchestra and Special Features for Annual Prom.

The executive committee of the junior class for a period of weeks has been discussing plans for the annual junior prom. The junior prom is in most universities recognized as the highlight of the social season but here junior proms in the past few years have not been very brilliant successes. The present class is desirous of making its dance an outstanding success and as a result it is sparing no effort to get entertainers who will assure the affair of being remembered. The dance will be in either Swain hall or the Tin Can at the latter part of April or the early part of May.

It had been suggested that the juniors and seniors combine and give both their dances during some week-end but the executive committee of the junior class has voted to have their traditional dance separately. The committee has both the Coon-Saunders and Guy Lombardo orchestras under consideration for the dance. In addition to procuring one of these two outstanding dance orchestras the committee has arranged to have a special decorator to come here to decorate the ballroom and have also arranged for special features to be given between dances. Final plans for the prom will be completed next week. The members of the committee in charge of the dance are: Jack Dungan, chairman; Theron Brown, president of the class; John Phil Cooper and Steve Lynch.

Clipping a second would save 25,000 hours

A second saved here — an unnecessary step cut out there — on such close attention to detail rests the success of modern industry. Nowhere is this more strikingly shown than in the telephone business.

In accounting work for instance, an improved method that clips just one second from the time required to handle one toll ticket would have great results.

Applied throughout the System—handling an average of more than 90,000,000 toll tickets each month—it would effect a monthly saving of 25,000 hours!

Such "little" things often are tremendously important in so vast an industry. That is one reason why men find Bell System work so fascinating.

The opportunity is there!

Tar Heel Basketeers Play Host To Flashy Quaker Quint Tonight

Contest Is First Collegiate Engagement for Both Teams This Year.

Guilford College's Quakers will invade the Tin Can tonight at eight o'clock to meet the Tar Heel quint in its first cage game with college opposition. The Quakers also have not met any college teams as yet, and it is difficult to make any predictions as to the outcome of the game, though they are touted to be a strong combination.

The Tar Heel lineup for tonight probably will be Hines and Cleland, forwards; Dameron, center; Captain Marpet and Alexander, guards. This group has proven itself able at passing the ball during the two practice games with Y. M. C. A. teams, but has found it difficult to take advantage of its scoring opportunities, being off at following up crip shots. Some improvement was noticed in the play of the White Phantoms last night against the Raleigh Y outfit, however, and it is highly probable that they will hit their stride tonight.

The Guilford team boasts a total of six veterans with exceptional strength at the guard posts. During the pre-season games Cheek and Chisholm defended the Quakers goal, and Jameison jumped center. Captain Alley and Haworth saw first team scrimmage action at the forwards before the Christmas vacation.

Coach Anderson has developed a neat passing attack and most of the men seem to be in fair condition following the holiday season but the lay off from practice has hurt the shooting and the defensive work of the whole squad. Both these departments are in for a lot of attention this week in preparing for the coming contest with the Tar Heels.

Purnell, Wildman, Royall, and Milner are looking good for the reserves, Jimmie Bunn and John Love, football stars, are out for the team now. Neither have ever played while in school at Guilford but they had some high school experience.

Duke Grapplers To Meet Eight Teams

Durham, January 7—Opening their schedule by a match with Franklin and Marshall at Lancaster, Pa., Duke's wrestlers will then return home and confine their activities to the boundaries of North Carolina and Virginia.

For the coming schedule Duke will be equipped with veterans in almost every weight. Cole, the captain, in the 155 pound class, Adkins in the 175 and Hughes in the unlimited have no opposition for their positions, but the other veterans have at least two hopefuls working against them.

The schedule:

January 12—Franklin and Marshall at Lancaster, Pa.

January 24—V. M. I. at Lexington.

January 26—V. P. I. at Blacksburg, Va.

February 2—Virginia at Durham.

February 11—N. C. State at Durham.

February 14—Davidson at Davidson.

February 21 — Washington and Lee at Durham.

Date pending—Carolina at Durham.

Iceless Hockey In Vogue During Corey's Heyday

"The outstanding difference between ice hockey as we played it at Dartmouth back in 1867 and your modern hockey," writes Corey Ford for College Humor, 'The Grand Old Man Hockey,' "is that in our days we never had ice. As a result, due to the weight of our skates, most of the game was necessarily played under water. To be sure, this method of playing hockey had its disadvantages, such as drowning, but on the other hand there were several distinct advantages of our method over the modern version. In the first place, the fact that the water was not frozen made it a great deal warmer and consequently we did not have to wear so many thicknesses of long woolen underwear under our hockey uniforms, thus speeding up the game considerably. In addition, the soft surface of the water saved us many a nasty bump on the forehead when tripping over an extended hockey stick. Chilblains in my days were virtually unheard of.

"The idea of freezing the water in the rink occurred in 1849. Up to that time the majority of the games naturally took place on the bottom of the rink, but spectators began to complain that it was almost impossible to follow the finer points of the contest. Various experiments were tried in an attempt to freeze ice, including artificial refrigeration (cooling the water by pouring it into a saucer), building all hockey rinks hereafter in some cold country like Baffin Land (a method which was later abandoned owing to the difficulty of transporting audiences to watch the games), or tossing in lumps of ice until the water in the pool reached a point where it would freeze itself. The rink at Dartmouth was frozen in this manner and was the first all-ice rink in America."

NOTRE DAME WINS FOOTBALL AWARD

Notre Dame wins a smashing victory in the final balloting of the country's leading sports writers engaged in selecting the championship football team of 1930 for the Albert Russel Erskine Award. For the second successive year, Rockne's team captures the national gridiron title, according to announcement by W. O. McGeehan, chairman of the Erskine Committee of Award.

The preliminary ballot, which was completed two weeks ago, resulted in re-submitting to the jurors the names of Notre Dame, Southern California, and Alabama for the final vote. This final vote tallies 261 for the South Bend team and 5 for Alabama. It includes the votes of the sporting writers who compose the jury, plus the votes of the 20 members of the Award Committee. Theodore Roosevelt's selection was cabled from Porto Rico by way of the war department in Washington.

The Notre Dame team will be entitled to hold for another year the huge silver cup which is the emblem of victory. The formal presentation of this cup, as well as the presentation of a parchment scroll and a Studebaker car to Rockne, took place in New York on January 2.

CAROLINA FROSH COACH MAY LAND POST AT GEORGIA

Atlanta Papers Report Enright Possible Candidate for Assistant Coaching Berth.

Local football fans are awaiting the return of Coach Rex Enright to the campus Friday to learn of the results of his trip to Athens, Georgia. Coach Enright left Chapel Hill Tuesday night to confer with officials at the University of Georgia concerning a contract as an assistant football coach.

Enright has been freshman football coach here for the past two years, and has developed many strong candidates for varsity positions. His contract expired this year, and it is not known by the Tar Heel whether or not he has been tendered a new pact. The Georgia offer would be quite an advancement for Coach Enright, and although Carolina would hate to see him leave, would be interested in seeing him get this promotion.

Atlanta papers reported recently that Enright had been offered the position vacated by Frank Thomas, who succeeds Wallace Wade as head coach at Alabama. Georgia athletic officials denied that an offer had been made but said they had requested permission of North Carolina authorities to make such an offer.

Enright is a disciple of the Rockne school, as was Thomas and the University of Georgia has expressed anxiety to secure a competent coach with Notre Dame training.

Clarence Jensen Elected To Head Carolina Harriers

Coach Dale Ranson of the cross-country team announced that Clarence Jensen of Newark, New Jersey, was elected to captain next year's Tar Heel hill and dale squad. Jensen, who is a sophomore, led all the Tar Heels to the tape last fall in the Southern Conference meet, which was held in Kenan Stadium. The captain-elect, one of the few captains that are not seniors, will have a veteran squad returning next fall, only one man, Captain Baucom, graduating.

Spalding Sport Shop Gives Trophy To Club

The Spalding Sport Shop has presented the Chapel Hill Country Club with a large seal bearing the figure of a golfer in a typical pose. This placque the place of the President's Cup and will be called the President's Trophy.

It is intended that an open tournament should be played each year on a non-handicap basis to determine the winner of this seal, the name of the winner to be engraved upon the award. The winner will become ineligible for competition again for three years.

The trophy is now in the possession of Dr. Lawson, the chairman of the golf committee, but will be presented to the president at the meeting of the Country Club on January tenth.

In 1929 the prize was won by Dr. Lawson, who turned in a card of twenty-eight for the eight holes.

The chairman of the golf course wishes to call special attention to all members that the tournament which was to have been played last fall will take place during the next few weeks if the weather permits.

The last ice cap began to disappear only 20,000 years ago.

TAR HEELS WIN OVER RALEIGH Y BY LARGE SCORE

The Tar Heel basketball team found little difficulty in defeating the Raleigh Y. M. C. A. cagers last night at the Tin Can by the decisive score of 46-12. Captain Artie Marpet was high scorer of the game with a total of seven field goals and one foul for fifteen points. Sandy Dameron center, came next with four goals and two fouls for ten points.

Coach Jim Ashmore used seventeen men in the game. Cauther and Young showed up best for the Capital city team.

LANDIS BREAKS HAND SPARRING

Injury to Stellar Heavyweight Will Cripple Squad; Others Show Good Form.

Tuesday wasn't Friday the thirteenth, but it certainly was a hard luck day for Coach Rowe and his boxing squad. Coach Rowe waded into hard luck when he shoved in Landis and Miller heavyweights, to spar. Both boys were mixing it up freely when suddenly Landis shot over a terrific right for Miller's jaw; Miller ducked and the blow landed on his head with such force that two bones in Landis' hand were fractured. Platt will be out of competition for at least a month, and if the hand responds to treatment rapidly, he should be able to face Virginia's heavyweight when the two teams meet. As a result of the accident, there is a new entanglement as to who shall wear the Tar Heel spangles in the 175 and unlimited weight classes. Although nothing definite has been revealed at this time, there is a possibility that Warren shall continue in the light heavy division and Miller in the unlimited class.

Aside from this unfortunate accident, practice moved along smoothly. Martin Levinson and Captain Goodridge, featherweight and lightweight respectively, provided the thrills of yesterday's practice by giving an exhibition of boxing rarely seen in the Tin Can.

One damaging effect of the Christmas vacation was to soften up the boxers, and as the first meet—that with South Carolina—is only eight days off, Coach Rowe will devote much of the remaining time in getting the squad back into the condition that they were in before the holidays. That, however, should not be difficult since the boys were in great shape before Christmas and they're rarin' to go, which bodes ill for the Gamecocks.

GRAPPLERS SAID IN POOR SHAPE FOR PRINCETON

Failure of Men to Return and Lack of Time Will Hamper Tar Heels Saturday.

With only three days of practice since the holidays Coach Quinlan's varsity grapplers today make their final preparations for the first meet of the season with Princeton Saturday at Princeton, New Jersey. The entire squad has been put through unusually stiff drills this week in an effort to get the men in shape, but the lack of time has made this impossible, and the Tar Heels will leave here in far from their best condition.

The failure of Wayne Woodward, former captain and brilliant 135-pounder, and Winstead, a promising rookie, to return to school has caused further complications. However, Woodward's old position will be well taken care of by Mayne Albright, a veteran who is beginning his third season as a varsity performer.

Clay Bell and Clyde Dietz, 115-pounders, Lee Greer, in the 155-pound division, Bill Bradley, sophomore 165-pounder, and George Thompson, letter man who works in the unlimited class are in school, but have not as yet reported for practice. Coach Quinlan has been depending on these men to bolster his squad, and their loss is being felt keenly. In addition to these men, several other promising recruits have failed to make their appearance since the holidays, but are expected to be back in togs by the end of the week.

The failure of Bell and Dietz to report has narrowed the 115-pound class race down to one between Pete Usher and Charley Lawson, a newcomer. Lawson has been showing up well in this week's drills, but lacks Usher's experience.

Captain Fred Stallings is the class of the 125-pounders and Mayne Albright seems likely to get the call for the 135-pound berth although Tom Riddick has been making a formidable bid for the post.

Don Conklin and Bill Higdon are engaging in a bitter scrap for the 145-pound berth. Both boys are promising and have been improving steadily.

Harry Tsumas, letterman in the 155-pound division, was not on the campus last quarter and has not had sufficient time to get back into shape. He has been working hard since the holidays however, and will probably work in his old class with John Park as alternate.

Percy Idol, star of last year's freshman squad, has been the outstanding man in Marion Cowper's old berth at 165-pounds, while Cowper has taken on considerable weight since last winter and has gone into the 175-pound division. Fred Ferguson has been leading the candidates in the unlimited class. However, Cowper and Ferguson have been weighing about the same and there is a possibility that Ferguson will work in the 175-pound class with Cowper moving into the unlimited. Both men are seniors and have made good records during the past two years. Houghton, another letterman, has also taken on weight and is working in the unlimited class at present.

Lovejoy Addresses Law Class

C. A. Lovejoy, investment officer of the Wachovia Bank and Trust Company, of Winston-Salem, made a talk yesterday afternoon to Professor Van Hecke's first year class in trusts. Lovejoy chose as a subject, "The Administrative Aspects of Trust Investments."

TENNIS TEAM TO WORKOUT DURING WINTER MONTHS

Indoor Court Has Been Constructed at Tin Can to Keep Team in Shape.

Coach John F. Kenfield, noted for putting out a winning tennis team each spring, is overlooking no opportunities for another unbeatable team this year.

He has had an indoor tennis court built in the Tin Can, and regular team practice has been called for each afternoon from two to four. The court is of regulation size and is identical to an outside court in every respect but one, the base being wood instead of clay.

The wood floor changes the game somewhat as the ball tends to slide along the floor after it has bounced instead of rising into the air as it does on a clay court. This necessitates hitting the ball on the rise instead of on the fall as is the usual practice, and a great deal of alertness is necessary to play the indoor game.

Those members of the team, however, who have been playing on the indoor court, have taken to it very readily, and are all batting the ball back and forth almost as well as they did on the clay courts a few months ago.

The team will have to be at top-notch form this spring for it faces the most severe schedule that has ever confronted a Carolina tennis team. Besides matches with its old rivals such as Duke, Wake Forest, Davidson and other Southern colleges, the team will play the Southern Conference tournament at New Orleans and in the state tournament at Chapel Hill. Upperclassmen Enjoy Optional Attendance Until Faculty Denies It the privilege of optional attendance. These would be juniors and seniors in the A. B. School making an average of "B." If their grade fell below this, their privilege was withdrawn. This regulation remained intact until 1927.

The next change was made by the influence of Dean Addison Hibbard in the school year 1927-28. It extended the optional attendance of juniors and seniors to the education school, commerce school, and liberal arts. The number was not restricted to fifty, but all juniors and seniors with a "B" average were allowed the option.

The very next year the "B" average rule was removed, and the statement read: All juniors and seniors taking junior and senior courses in the schools mentioned above would be allowed any number of unexcused absences. This is the plan that was followed the fall quarter of this school year and no change has been made for the regulation this, the winter quarter of the school year 1930-31.

On December 17 and upon several previous occasions, the faculty have discussed sweeping changes in the present regulations. It is understood that no definite changes have been made as yet. The principal changes most likely to go into effect are understood to include abolition of the university regulations and substitution of departmental rules administered by each of the instructors in their classes. This would, of course, do away also with any general optional attendance for juniors and seniors.

Up to date all undergraduate departments of the University are under obligation to run under the regulations in the last catalog which gives optional attendance to all juniors and seniors.

The rule reads: "The instructor concerned will notify the dean of a student's school when that student has incurred absences amounting to three in a full course or two in a half-course; and will send a second notice when the student's absences amount to five in a full course or three in a half-course. When a student's absences from a class during any quarter amount to ten in a full course or six in a half course, he may, at the discretion of the dean of his school, be dropped from the course.

Juniors and seniors in junior and senior courses are free from the regulations governing absences from classes to the extent that such absences shall not carry any penalty imposed for absence alone."

The Central Administrative Council composed of students representing every phase of University life met to organize in an orderly and dignified fashion for a liberal legislation. They expect to petition the undergraduate faculty, which it is understood will meet tomorrow, to permit the students to have a voice in a matter so closely connected with student welfare.

RADIO INDUSTRIES NEED ENGINEERS

The radio industry, growing and expanding apace, is ever in need of new blood, especially in its engineering branches. With this need in mind, the RCA Victor Company at Camden, N. Campus Calendar

Debate Squad Meeting

The debate squad will hear J. M. Lear, associate professor of insurance, speak on "Unemployment Insurance," at the regular meeting in Murphey 201 tonight at seven-thirty. The debating council will meet at seven o'clock.

Basketball Manager Candidates

All freshmen who want to go out for sub-assistant basketball manager report to the tin can at four o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Education Students

All students in the school of education who did not pass two courses in the fall quarter are on probation for the winter quarter. These men will meet Dean Walker today at the chapel period in room 201 Peabody. This is an important meeting. Students who fail to attend must see C. E. McIntosh, room 127 Peabody, at once.

Glee Club Men

All men who tried out in the fall are requested to be present this afternoon at five o'clock in the music building for a rehearsal for the concerts scheduled this winter. Any new men wishing to try out are to report to Dr. H. S. Dyer in his office at the same hour.

Breakfast Hour Changed

An important meeting of the editorial staff of the Yackety Yack convenes this afternoon in the office of the annual at two o'clock sharp, announced editor Dunn yesterday.

DELTA PSI HOUSE HAS SMALL FIRE

The members of the Delta Psi fraternity seemed to be rather non-committal when interviewed yesterday about the fire in the annex of the house. The fire occured about eight o'clock Tuesday night.

Everything seemed to be in perfect running order and quiet had settled down for the night of study. One member was in his room studying when he began to get a little warm. An investigation revealed that a fire had broken out in the cellar in a wood pile. The origin of the fire is still doubtful although various conjectures are hazarded.

The Chapel Hill fire department was on hand immediately after the alarm was turned in. By this time there was a small blaze burning and was getting along quite well until the firemen appeared and put out the conflagration.

The only damage done was to the ceiling of the basement where the fire occurred and to the flooring immediately above this spot.

Language Conference Honors English Men

At the meeting of the Modern Language Association of America in Washington December 29, 30, 31, Dr. George R. Coffman of the University was elected a member of the executive council. Dr. Coffman has previously been a member of the council.

Prof. Louis B. Wright was elected secretary of the Shakespeare group.

Bradshaw Explains Attendance Rules

Yesterday morning Dean F. F. Bradshaw spoke to the freshman in chapel telling them of the present controversy about compulsory attendance at classes. He stated that there were three major reasons why the number of cuts allowed each student is limited. The first of these reasons was that men absent from class not only hurt themselves but also interrupted the continuity of the class' work. The second of the reasons was that the faculty from past experience has found that the present number of cuts was the maximum number which a student might take and yet have a fair chance of passing the course. The third reason for limiting the amount of unexcused absences is that if students were allowed to attend classes optionally it is feared that they would not often attend their classes and so defeat the purpose for which they are at the University. The entire University, according to Dean Bradshaw, now works on the system of allowing each student nine cuts per full course a quarter.

Billy Arthur spoke to the freshmen after Dean Bradshaw had finished, on their conduct at basketball games.

HUMAN RELATIONS INSTITUTE PLANS BEING ARRANGED

A.; Arthur Rugh, foreign department of the Y. M C.. A. in China; Alva W. Taylor, secretary Board of Temperance and Social Research, Church of Christ; and E. G. Wilson, industrial secretary for the National Council of Y. M. C. A.

The officials in charge of the Human Relations Institute have not as yet completed the list of speakers who will be here in April but the list will include men equally as prominent as those who spoke at the last meeting of the Institute.

The committee working on the plans for the coming meeting of the Institute is composed of a group of students and faculty members. The students are: Ed Hamer, Pat Patterson, Mayne Albright, Jack Dungan, Joe Eagles, John Lang, Clyde Dunn, Noah Goodridge, and Will Yarborough. The faculty members are: President-elect Frank P. Graham, Dr. E. W. Knight, Dean Dudley D. Carroll. Dr. H. W. Odum, K. C. Frazer, T. J. Woofter, Jr., H. D. Meyer, Dean Bradshaw, and R. B. House.

PUBLIC HEALTH OFFICER REPORTS VERY FEW CASES

Last month the public health officer had the shortest report of the past year. There were four cases of pneumonia, all of them white people, and three cases of syphillis, all of them colored. Mrs. J. M. Cheek of Chapel Hill succumbed to pneumonia. All the cases of syphillis are under treatment.

The city manager, John Foushee, announced that a change has been made in the collection of garbage. Garbage will be collected once a week instead of twice. It will now be collected on Tuesday. City taxes which are overdue will be subejcted to the same penaltiy as county ones.

ground. The interior is divided into three compartments. In the front is the driver's cab; at the rear of the truck is a sanitary compartment which occupies three and one-half feet of the truck's length, while in between these two sections is the spacious cage occupied by Leo himself. Here Leo has ample room for sleep and exercise. The cage is fifteen feet long by six feet wide and six feet three inches in height.

In order to further protect Leo from the elements, heavy indestructable plate glass extends from the floor two thirds the height of the cage. This glass can be raised or lowered or opened, thus affording a perfect view of the occupant at all times. In order to afford Leo complete protection, heavy canvas drop sides are provided so that while traveling in inclement weather his comfort is assured. Besides the truck is electrically lighted and equipped with pneumatic shock absorbers and special springs.

Such is the traveling equipment of the screen's greatest star. Obviously, it would have been unfair to move Leo from the luxury and comfort of his Hollywood home.

this is over, it will go North and take on Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Army, and Columbia all in one week. It may also participate in the national intercollegiate tournament during the summer.

Indications point to a remarkably well-balanced team this spring, and the outlook is very hopeful for a successful season, Bryan Grant, national clay court champion, Wilmer Hines, national junior champ, and Ed Yeomans, Washington, D. C., and one-time North Carolina champion, will lead the attack in the spring. They will be backed up by at least five experienced players: Hendlin, Liskin, Graham, Wright, and Abels.

Registration Figures

Through January 6 the number of undergraduate students registered in the University was 2,469. In addition to this number 104 law students have been registered, making a total of 2,573. Late students are still registering and these figures are not final.

Following this there will be the customary events: the election of the Lord of Misrule and his Queen ,the entry of the Carolers, Dancers and Mummers who sing the old folk song, "Twelve Days of Christmas," and Dr. J. M. Booker's introduction of the Mummers. Another of the usual and enjoyable features of the night is the rendering of the folk play, Saint George and the Dragon. This production will have a cast of faculty members only and will be directed by Dr. P. C. Farrar.

The Elizabethan part of the performance is always the same but it is the modern part of the program that varies. This modern part consists of skits and sketches by different students.

This year Joe Fox will have charge of affairs on the stage as master of ceremonies. The first feature of this part of the program will be some Mountain Square Dances arranged by Gladys Angel. They will be danced to such favorite old tunes as "Scoop the Oyster," "With Grass and Dew," and "Around that Couple and Take a Look."

After this, skits follow in quick succession. Tom Loy has directed a humorous play, "Cecily's Diary up to Date." After the Twelfth Night Orchestra favors the audience with a few selections, Billy Arthur will entertain in a little sketch, "Tee for All." A tap dance by an, as yet, unknown performer follows and then a few more selections by the orchestra.

Spain's immortal epic, "The Cid," will be burlesqued by Alfredo Nazareno. The inimitable Kent Creuser will render "Dangerous Dan McGrew" a-la-Yiddish, as a closing offering on the close of the performance.

The general public is not invited to the celebration. Only those who have had a part in the productions of the Playmakers may attend. This includes actors, playwriters, stage-work will take the place of the President's Cup and will be called the President's Trophy.

harvest this year has provided sufficient bread, but there is still a great shortage of poultry, dairy, and meat products. Considerable progress has been made in the industrialization of the country and there is a large yearly increase in industrial production. The quality of production is unbelievably bad."

Concerning the second aspect of the development, Professor Hoover said that the collectivization of agriculture has meant in practice that the land has been taken from the peasants and consolidated in large state and collective farms. "Eventually it is intended," he said, "that all of these farms will be run by tractor power and thousands of tractors are now in use. The peasants opposed this collective agriculture desperately. But economic, political, and military pressure is compelling them to acquiesce in it."

Mr. Hoover stated that the Communist regime in Russia is characteristically one of fear and force. "There is an almost total negation of speech and of conscience. Academic freedom and freedom of the press are nonexistent."

"My advice to those who want to live to a good old age," says a doctor, "is—walk slowly." Those who follow this advice should take the precaution of keeping to the sidewalk.—The Humorist.

'JUDGE LYNCH' IS VIEWED AT LAW SCHOOL MEETING

Seven Speakers Take up Aspects Of North Carolina Mob Violence.

"Lynching and the Judicial Process" was the topic discussed by the administration of justice class of the University law school at its January meeting yesterday. Papers on various phases of this topic were presented by students of the class.

W. A. Johnson presented a paper on "The Effect Upon Mob Action of a Change of Venue or a Postponement of Trial." He surveyed the lynching conditions in the South and reached the conclusion that a change of venue or a postponement of trial will often increase the anger of the mob, causing it to act violently. He expressed the opinion that speedy trials of those accused of rape, murder, and kindred offenses would serve to quell mob violence.

"Summary Trial in Serious Cases—Effect of Undue Haste, Mob Intimidation and Use of Militia Upon Due Process of Law" was discussed by E. M. Perkins. The difficulty in getting an unbiased jury to sit upon these speedy trials, and the obvious lack of justice occasioned by the trials was pointed out by Perkins. He concluded that "if swift and certain punishment of offenders were a characteristic of our criminal law, there would still be lynchings."

A. W. Langston then presented a paper on the "Prosecution of Lynchers," bringing out the difficulties of securing prosecution under existing criminal procedure and suggesting changes in that procedure to secure indictment and trial of lynchers. He stated that "until the public is educated to the point of condemning all mob action against an individual, the final aim of each statute aimed at lynching and lynchers is impossible." He also discussed present North Carolina legislation on the question and showed that it was working very effectively.

L. J. Giles presented "The Liability of the City or County under State Legislation." The many attempts to penalize the municipality or county in which a lynching has taken place were analyzed. Giles expressed the idea that a fine of this nature would make the people of that province less liable to take the law in their hands by mob violence.

"The Removal of Sheriffs for Failure to do Their Duty" was debated by J. N. Wright. He reasoned that laws removing sheriffs for failure to do their duty would give better protection to prisoners and cause mob action to be more difficult.

R. M. Gray next talked on "The Constitutionality of the Dyer Anti-Lynching Bill." This bill provides for the punishment of the officers of a county where a lynching occurs when these officers do not make reasonable efforts to prevent the lynching and punish the offenders, for federal jurisdiction over the case when the state court does not adequately handle the situation, and a forfeiture of a large sum of money by the county wherein a lynching occurs to the government of the United States. Gray concluded that

Rumor About Graham's Health Unfounded

Rumors that found their way around the campus early yesterday afternoon to the effect that President-elect Frank Graham was in a very critical condition due to a severe influenza infection were entirely unfounded, and physicians reported that the University's head was in somewhat better condition than the preceding day.

It was rumored on the campus yesterday that President-elect Graham was on the point of death. His position was so serious, according to the rumor, that three doctors from Charlotte had been called into conference, and it looked as though an oxygen tent would be needed.

This, however, was found to have no grounds for truth, when Doctors Field and MacNider reported to the executive office at three o'clock yesterday afternoon that President-elect Graham's condition was good and that there had been no dangerous development in his case up to that time. The University's President-elect has been suffering from a severe influenza infection since Monday.

Doctors Ross, Sloan, and Davis, personal friends of Graham, came to his house merely to inquire of his condition, and it is in this way that the false rumor was started.

GLEE CLUB HEAD HELPS ARRANGE ANNUAL CONTEST

Dyer Is Interviewed in Greensboro in Regard to Yearly Meet.

Dr. H. S. Dyer of the music department returned Wednesday from a trip to Greensboro in the interest of the South Atlantic Glee Club contest. While there he met representatives from the Chamber of Commerce, the press, music clubs, and North Carolina College and Greensboro College.

The next glee club contest will take place at Aycock auditorium, Greensboro, Friday, February 13. The contest song for this year is Feasting, I Watch, by Elgar, an English composer. Each club entering the contest will sing three songs, the contest song, a song of its own choice, and its alma mater. As only student directors are allowed, Dr. Dyer is now casting about for candidates. The directorship is open to any one eligible under the rulings. The glee club is also open for candidates.

For the last three years, the South Atlantic Glee Club Association has had its contest at Furman University in South Carolina. Carolina entered the contest last year for the first time in three years and won the cup, after which it went on into the national contest.

DR. HENDERSON TO SPEAK ON GANDHI SUNDAY EVENING

Address To Be Given In Methodist Church at 7:30 O'clock.

Mahatma Gandhi will be the subject of an address by Dr. Archibald Henderson, of the mathematics department, at half past seven this coming Sunday evening in the Methodist church.

Dr. Henderson expects first to give a sketch of the Indian leader's life, and then to make an analysis of his philosophy. The lecturer will compare the doctrines of Gandhi with those of Christ, of Tolstoi, and of other philosophers who support the theory of non-resistance. He will also consider the relation of the doctrines of the present Christian religion to those of Gandhi.

When Dr. Henderson was questioned as to his attitude toward the Mahatama, he unhesitatingly pronounced him the greatest living man. J. H. Holmes, in the Century Magazine, calls Gandhi the successor of Tolstoi" in that unbroken line of saints and seers, running like the stitches of a golden thread through the tangled pattern of human affairs, who have insisted that man, like God, is spirit, and can achieve his ends and thus fulfill his life only by using the spiritual powers of his nature. Gandhi, in other words, like Tolstoi, Garrison, Fox, St. Francis, Jesus, Isaiah, is a non-resistant." But Gandhi, unlike Tolstoi, who often complained that the czarist officialdom arrested the followers instead of the leaders, has often fallen into the clutches of the British lion and is at present, to use his own phrase, a "gentleman prisoner."

The magnetic personality of Mahatma Gandhi has succeeded in bringing about a greater degree of co-operation between the Brahmans and the Moslems than have the efforts of the maharajahs at the modern Round Table in London.

FEDERATION MEN SUBMIT BILLS IN NATIONAL MEET

Lang and Greene Attend Meeting of Student Congress In Atlanta.

In the recent congress of the National Student Federation of America which met in Atlanta from December 29 to January 3, three of the eight resolutions endorsed by the delegates were sponsored by John Lang and Red Greene, local student federation officers.

The resolution submitted by Greene regarding athletics, which was that the N. S. F. A. authorize its officers to make a thorough study of the possibility of staging a nation-wide conference of athletic directors, college presidents, and student leaders on the question of commercialism and professionalism in college athletics, was adopted by the congress.

During the discussion of this resolution, the congress announced itself as favoring the awarding of all scholarships on the same basis regardless of extra-curricular activities.

The two resolutions made by John Lang which were also passed were that the United States should join the World Court immediately without reservations, and that all the war debts incurred during the World War should be canceled.

The five remaining resolutions passed by the congress were that compulsory R. O. T. C. service in the colleges should be done away with; that the United States should recognize Russia immediately; that United States government should take immediate action to relieve unemployment, even if the dole system has to be used; that Eighteenth Amendment be modified; that there is no material difference between the two existing political parties, and that a new liberal third party should be formed.

The North Carolina delegates were particularly impressed by the amount of authority exercised by the students in other parts of the country. At the University of Washington, the student government handles, without any aid from the faculty, about $650,000 annually. A great part of this sum is received as admissions to athletic contests.

The student opinion committee serves as a discussion group for the resolutions before they are submitted to the students. This committee is composed of only five members from the entire country. John Lang, one of North Carolina's representatives, served as a member of this committee.

Magazine Oldest Publication

A survey of the University proper and of its various affiliated branches shows that there are several institutions here which are very old. The University is the oldest state university in the United States in point of operation.

Many of the national fraternities located on this campus placed chapters here early in their history. In the field of student publications, the Carolina Magazine is the oldest college publication in the United States, having been founded in 1844. The Round Table, of Beloit College (Wisconsin) is second oldest.

Law Codes Exhibited In Law Reading Room

A valuable exhibit was shown Wednesday in the downstairs reading room of the law building. It concluded all North Carolina compilations of laws ever published except three, as well as many early English treatises, statutes, and collections of cases.

Some of the famous codes exhibited are William R. Davie's code and Zebulon Vance's code of civil procedure.

FOURTH ISSUE OF REVIEW APPEARS

Alumni Publication Features Etching of Old Well for Cover Design.

The University Alumni Review for January appeared yesterday as announced by the editor. This issue is the fourth of the year and contains accounts of the various meetings which took place at the University during the Christmas recess.

The cover of the review is decorated with an etching of the old well and South building by William Steene, Chapel Hill artist. Mr. Steene has made many etchings for the Review, the latest being the Carolina Playmakers building.

On the inside of the front cover appears a list of the January books selected by the Alumni book club. The commentaries for all of these books were written by faculty members. They are: As We Were, by E. F. Benson, commentary by Raymond Adams, department of English; I'll Take My Stand, by Twelve Southerners, commentary by Rupert B. Vance, institute for research in social science; The Conquest of Happiness, by Bertrand Russell, commentary by J. J. Slade, Jr., school of engineering; and The Redlakes, by Francis Brett Young, commentary by R. B. House, executive secretary of the University.

The three biographies selected are: The Story of San Michele, by Axel Munthe; Mahatma Gandhi, an autobiography; and Crucibles, by Bernard Jaffe. The books of fiction are: The Deepening Stream, by Dorothy Canfield; The Tides of Malvern, by Francis Griswold; Memoirs of an Infantry Officer, by Siegfried Sassoon; and Shepherds on Sackcloth, by Sheila Kaye-Smith.

Besides biographies and novels the following books are included: The World's Economic Dilemma, by Ernest Patterson; A History of Modern Culture, by Preserved Smith; Man and His Universe, by John Langdon-Davies; Desert Islands, by Walter de la Mare; Those Earnest Victorians, by Esme Wingfield-Stratford; and An American Epoch, by Howard W. Odum.

Country Club Meeting

The annual meeting of the Chapel Hill Country Club will take place Saturday night. At this time reports of the officials are to be read and new officers elected and at six-thirty preceding the meeting, dinner will be served to club members.

DECLARE ACTION WOULD OBSTRUCT SCHOOL PROGRESS

Group Seeks to Call Regular Meetings of Students and Faculty Members.

COMMITTEE IS APPOINTED

Mutual Understanding and Co-operation Desired.

The Central Administrative Council, a group of twenty-two students representative of all walks of student life, moved Wednesday night to offer an orderly and vigorous opposition to any retrenchment in the class attendance privileges which the student body now enjoys.

After hours of serious deliberation, and a sane consideration of all phases of the question, the group went on record as being unanimously in favor of the following resolution—"Resolved: That the Central Administrative Council go on record as heartily opposing any restriction of present privileges as stated in the University of North Carolina Record of 1930, pages seventy-four and seventy-five."

The Record reads—"The instructor concerned will notify the dean of a student's school when that student has incurred absences amounting to three in a full course or two in a half course; and will send a second notice when the student's absences amount to five in a full course or three in a half course. When a student's absences from a class during any quarter amount to ten in a full course or six in a half course, he may at the discretion of the dean of his school, be dropped from the course.

"Juniors and seniors in junior and senior courses are free from the regulations governing absences from classes to the extent that such absences shall not carry any penalty imposed for absence alone."

Will Yarborough, editor of the Daily Tar Heel, moved that there be one meeting of a representative group of the faculty and the students called each quarter for the purpose of threshing out mutual misunderstandings and problems. Yarborough emphasized the point that the confusion and misunderstanding, which had resulted from the announcement that the faculty was considering a change in attendance regulations, came as a result of there being no regular contact between these two groups. The motion passed unanimously, and the idea of a friendly co-operation between the faculty and the student body whereby the students would be permitted a voice in matters pertinent to themselves was heartily endorsed.

President Greene named Joe Eagles, president of Phi Beta Kappa; Jack Dungan, managing-editor of the Daily Tar Heel; Mayne Albright, secretary of the Student Council; and Ed Hamer, president of the Y. M. C. A., to serve with himself on a special committee to represent the student body in matters of class privileges.

The remaining members of the Central Administrative Council are: Will Yarborough,

The Students Speak

That the student body favors optional class attendance (such as that system set forth in the 1930 catalogue of the University) is evident from the storm of protest against any curtailment of this privilege which is being voiced by students and students' organizations. By far the most significant protest is that which has been made by the Central Administrative Council, a committee composed of leaders in student activities and a group which is as nearly representative as possible of the complexion of the student body. If there is any group which is qualified to speak the mind of the student body it is this council, and this council, having agreed that it will fight compulsory attendance to the last ditch, indeed has taken a vigorous stand to preserve the liberties of the individual student.

But the Central Administrative Council is not the only group of students which is opposing the regulations of certain departments—namely, the departments of romance languages and commerce and economics—which are tending to restrict student liberty. Both literary societies have gone on record as favoring retention of optional attendance. The editorial board of the Daily Tar Heel is definitely set against any abolition or restriction of present freedom. The board believes that destruction of the attendance liberty—or privilege, as you will—would tend to destroy the traditionally liberal atmosphere of student life and would be a long stride toward conservatism. Aside from these groups many others have shown their disapproval of present tendencies of certain departments to impose upon them restrictions which seem at once impractical and unnecessary.

The students have spoken, and their jeremiads, which may be heard in every conversation and seen in the columns of their news publication, bear strong witness to their feelings. If the faculty is contemplating the change in attendance rules, certainly it must consult the opinions of those whom such a change would most vitally affect. The students are demanding a voice in the management of their academic affairs, and a wise and fair-minded faculty will not only give them a voice, but an attentive ear as well.—B. M.

Intersectional Football

It was with a great deal of pleasure that most of the students of this University saw that Carolina is going to play several more Southern Conference football games next fall. The University heretofore has been too self-contained with its athletics following an entirely different policy along academic lines. In the past we have placed too much emphasis on "Big Five championships" and other unit championships of a similar nature. The playing of Florida and Vanderbilt on foreign soil next year will inaugurate a new era for Carolina athletics.

One of the drawbacks of the rapidly advancing South has been the presence of localism in feeling. Until the South gets this feeling entirely out of its mind, a hindrance to the cooperative development of this section will be plainly present. Intersectional football games have become to be one of the most important media for the welding together of sections of the country. Before Wallace Wade took the boys from Alabama for their first invasion of the west, many of the Californians probably knew Alabama only as one of the states of the Union and the place of residence of Tom Heflin. The people on the west coast now have a very definite idea of the presence of Alabama—which idea is accompanied by a few painful memories, perhaps, but its is a definite one, nevertheless. A great deal of friendliness and mutual understanding between sections is bound to follow from the pilgrimages which are made for games such as those. We are already the most completely unified large state in the world but a great deal more progress could easily be made.—O. W. D.

"Tomlinson"

We feel sure that Kipling was inspired when he wrote his poem "Tomlinson," and that in spite of the fact that many of the intelligentsia find neither inspiration, nor poetry in anything he did.

Tomlinson died in the first line, and a "spirit came . . . and gripped him by the hair." They went to the milky way, passed the milky way, and on to the gates of heaven, where the pair was halted. Tomlinson began his account. "'Oh this I have read in a book,' he said, 'and that was told to me, and this I have thought that another man thought of a Prince in Muscovy'."

"And Peter twirled the jangling keys in weariness and wrath . . . 'Ye have read, ye have felt, ye have guessed, good lack'." But what have you done? We trust Peter put "done" in vocal italics. We are sure he did. Tomlinson had done nothing, so Peter sent him down to the Lord of Wrong. "The Wind that blows between the Worlds" chilled Tomlinson until he longed for the warmth of hell. But when the devil seemed inclined to refuse him place—"Nay this I ha' heard,' quo' Tomlinson, 'and this was noised abroad, and this I ha' got from a Belgian book on the word of a dead French lord'." But he had done nothing, his host explained, and hell was too crowded for him to admit pikers.

So neither the Lord nor the devil would have Tomlinson. He returned to earth, apparently the only place where a man may be colorless—and get away with it.

We believe the moral of the tale is plain. But there is something that may not be so plain. And that is the fact, we use the word fact intentionally, that a college is always unusually full of Tomlinsons. There are people who read think, believe, but never do a thing.

We won't suggest a remedy. We can't think of one. If we proposed a reform measure, people would agree or disagree, and that would be the end. We'll let Tomlinsons think out their own answers—V. A. D.

The Faculty And Self-Reliance

The present movement among some of the faculty to establish a rigid system of class attendance is directly opposed to the purpose of college. A college education is worth-while to the great majority of people only insofar as it prepares them for life and enables them to make the necessary environmental adjustments, social, vocational, cultural, and otherwise, after they leave.

A man old enough to come to college is old enough to make his own decisions and to discipline himself. When he leaves college, there will be no dean to warn him, no registrar to punish him, no one to hold a big stick over him and make him work. If such measures are used in his college life, rather than helping him to adjust himself to the conditions of his world, his college education will have materially retarded the progress of his adjustment. Instead of a self-disciplined, independent individual, capable of leading, he will be a dependent follower, looking to someone else to discipline his life.

The University of North Carolina is a progressive institution with advanced ideas. To establish any such puerile, "high-school," system of discipline would be a long step backward. Instead of reproducing actual conditions of life, it would create an artificial system detrimental to the student.

Remember, after the college episode, there will be no one to say "Naughty, naughty" to the college man when he errs.—H.B.

CHIPS off the OLD BLOCK

By Moore Bryson

Back again to the old grind after a very enjoyable vacation. The old home town may be bankrupt, but it is still very lively. Furthermore, it is getting to be quite citified. You can go to the phone, call a number, give a couple of words in code, and PRESTO—what have you?

Speaking of grind (and I think that I was) someone should write a story about Carolina and call it "Slaves of the Bell." And I don't mean "belle."

Had a Christmas card from one of my numerous goil friends, on the back of which she had written a note asking if the diary to which I referred some weeks ago was hers. No, C——, you may rest easy, the diary which was read in class belonged to one of our present co-eds. Besides, can you imagine my quoting from yours after some of the things I helped you write in it this summer? One of the fundamental rules of law is that an accused can not be forced to give evidence against himself.

Speaking of Christmas cards—But, there, there: I promised "Bobby" Carmichael that since his card had already received so much national publicity in Time and other leading magazines, that I would not further embarrass the modest "Mad" Bob by calling attention to it in the local paper, and I always keep my promises.

All this rumpus about optional class attendance is very amusing. (Chorus of "You apparently think that it is," from the Law faculty.) After all, what difference does it make? Hasn't the State provided the University with an infirmary to provide the students with perfect excuses on short notice? I used to be sick, deathly sick, on the average of once a week until I entered a school where such things are not taken into consideration. I hope that this doesn't put any bad thoughts in any little Freshman's head.

There should be a law requiring students who marry to announce the fact immediately. I know a certain boy who was terribly humilated when a certain young lady refused to go on a perfectly lovely party with him, but he was hacked when he later discovered that he had been asking a married woman to go out with him. (Believe it or not, there are still a few boys like that left on the campus.)

Our campus comic comes forth with the startling announcement that the author of this column is not the one who writes "Between Glasses." Suh, I have never laid claim to such an honor. If I may paraphrase the famous remark of the Governor of North Carolina to the Governor of South Carolina, "My only regret is that it is not a longer time 'Between Glasses'."

I've heard of the boss who ate up the profits, but last night in a local eating place, I went hungry because the boss had eaten the sandwich I had ordered. Now, I don't know exactly what you would call a man like that, but I know what I did, for I was hungry and didn't feel like waiting for another half hour.

As this is being written, it has started to snow. If it keeps up, it will be more than an ample excuse for anything which one should desire to do on Friday.

Lights Replaced On Library Chandelier

Early visitors to the library Tuesday morning saw the huge chandelier in the main reading room being lowered slowly from the rotunda, like a free balloon floating gently toward earth. It was a rather peculiar sight to those who did not understand "the facts about the case." Unknown to most people this mass of candle power is suspended from a pulley attached to two cross beams in the tower of the library, and is not fixed to the ceiling.

The replacement of the bulbs which had burned out, about a third of the total, was the necessity for which the chandelier was lowered. A twelve foot ladder had to be used in order to reach the uppermost of the lights.

The electricians started early on this job, and before eight-thirty classes had completed their task.

Chemistry Fellow Withdraws

W. F. Smith, of Chadbourn, N. C., teaching fellow in the chemistry department, has been compelled to withdraw from the University on account of ill health.

N. C. PRESS ISSUES THIRTEEN BOOKS IN FALL QUARTER

Folk-Lore, History, Sociology, And Economics Covered In New Books.

Since September 1 of last year, the University of North Carolina Press has published 13 books, many of which were written by members of the faculty. These books are both educational and entertaining, and many have already achieved a marked popularity.

Three Wise Men of the East by Elizabeth Bisland is a story of three magnificent rulers of the orient. The author, having spent many years in the East, is thoroughly familiar with the life and culture of her characters.

Joseph Blount Cheshire's Nonulla is a collection of anecdotes and legends, more or less authentic about North Carolina. Bishop Cheshire is known far and wide as a prince of story tellers. At last he has been prevailed upon to put his best into writing.

A Newton Among Poets is an interpretation of Shelley's marvelous lyricism, by Carl Garbo.

The present business situation is admirably analyzed in The Country Life of America, edited by Wilson Gee. The contributors are: E. C. Branson, Wilson Gee, Benjamin Gunter, Newell Leroy Simms, Edgar Knight, and others.

Included within the realm of historical publications is Fletcher M. Green's Constitutional Development in the South Atlantic States, together with A Social History of the Sea Islands, by Guion G. Johnson. Still another, History of Education in North Carolina, by M. C. S. Noble of this University.

Folk Culture on St. Helena Island, by Guy B. Johnson, describes the peculiar Gullah dialect; it comments upon the folk songs of the island and discusses the relation of white and negro folk music in America, offering a collection of typical folk literature.

In his recent book, King Cotton Is Sick, Claudius T. Murchison, professor of applied economics of the University, gives a brief but thorough analysis of the condition of King Cotton, and proposes a remedy for the most alarming and dangerous features of his illness.

Management Problems, edited by G. T. Schwenning, Henry P. Kendall tells us what the Kendall organization has done to guarantee continuity of business, which today is one of the most difficult problems facing American civilization.

Criminal Appeals in North Carolina, by George R. Sherrill, is a study in the actual functioning of the courts in North Carolina in the trial of criminal cases.

Words and music, of songs sung in the neighborhood of Louisville, Kentucky, and in certain rural sections of that state by the negro is by Mary Grissom in her The Negro Sings a New Heaven.

K. D. Har has written a book, Social Laws, in which he lists and classifies the laws that might qualify for scientific social laws.

Prizes Offered To Collegiate Writers By Ladies' Magazine

A short story contest, sponsored by the Ladies' Home Journal, with prizes of $1,000 and $500, is open to undergraduates of American colleges and universities. The first prize will be awarded to the author of the best original short story submitted of from 5,000 to 7,000 words in length. These stories must be mailed on or before March first.

To the author of the best original short story will be a award-a prize of $500. These manuscripts, which have to be of from 1,200 to 2,500 words in length, must be mailed on or before February first.

The judges committee of this contest consists of two well-known short-story writers, the names of whom are to be announced later, and the editor-in-chief of the Ladies' Home Journal.

Mention The Daily Tar Heel when buying.

Basketball Team Wins Over Guilford College Quakers By 33-13 Score

Dameron of Carolina and Alley Of Guilford Tie for Scoring Honors.

CAROLINA DEFENSE GOOD

Marpet and Choate Show up Well at Guard Posts for Tar Heels.

The Tar Heel basketball team succeeded in defeating the Guilford College Quakers last night at the Tin Can with little difficulty, thereby winning its first game against college opposition by a 33-13 score. The game was played rather fast, being run off in one hour and fifteen minutes.

The floor work of the Tar Heels was outstanding throughout the whole game. The defense of Coach Ashemore's men was almost impenetrable, Carolina's cagers keeping the ball in their possession for most of the evening.

Sandy Dameron, tall Tar Heel center, and Captain Alley of Guilford tied for scoring honors. Dameron made three goals and one foul shot for a total of seven points, and Alley made two goals and three foul shots for a like number of points. Cleland, Carolina forward, trailed closely, ringing up three baskets.

AVIATION SCHOLARSHIPS OPEN TO STUDENTS HERE

According to announcements received at the Registrar's office, students of the University of North Carolina are eligible to compete for the scholarship awards sponsored by W. E. Boeing, Chairman of the Board of United Aircraft and Transport Corporation, at the Boeing School of Aeronautics, Oakland, California. These scholarships are offered as awards to deserving college men who have determined on aviation as a vocation.

Four scholarships will be awarded, at a total tuition value of $7190, including a $5275 Master Pilot course. Other awards are the Private Pilot Ground and Flying course, Master Pilot Ground course and Master Mechanic course.

Any undergraduate student, including the class of 1931, who will complete one or more years of study by July 15, 1931 is eligible as a candidate for the Boeing Scholarships providing he has a scholastic standing classifying him in the upper one-third of his class during enrollment. Each candidate will also be required to write an essay not exceeding 2,000 words.

Essays will be finally judged by a National Committee of Award and the candidate who is selected for the First Award must be able to pass the Department of Commerce Transport Pilot physical examination which may be given by an approved local physician after awards are announced.

Second, third and fourth awards will be offered to the next ranking candidates in order. Three alternate candi-

Wrestling Captain

George Stallings, captain of the 1931 wrestling team, has an excellent record to live up to this season. In the 125-pound class last year he won many bouts, among them being a fall over his opponent in the Princeton meet. He will be trying to repeat this victory tomorrow afternoon when the Tar Heels meet the Tigers.

Tar Heels Again Have Big Center

Sandy Dameron Stands Six Feet Four and One-Half Inches In Sock Feet.

Despite graduation of the towering Lacey Harper, the Tar Heel basketeers of 1931, seeking to rebuild Carolina's quint fortunes, are able to call on another big boy at center, for Sandy Dameron matches even Washington and Lee's Williams, Duke's Croson and Alabama's Hood in height.

The big weight-heaving center-jumper for the Tar Heels is 6 feet 4 1-2 in his sock feet, just an inch and a half shorter than the mighty Harper, who was also a weight-heaver and a Southern champion. Dameron is a good jumper and floorman, and, showing more aggressiveness in this his Senior season, has been playing good ball consistently.

The Tar Heels have a fairly good-sized team around Dameron, for of his first string companions of the instant, Captain Artie Marpet, all-state guard, is 6 feet 2; Edwards, letter forward converted to guard, is 6 feet 3; Wilmer Hines, sophomore tennis champion, is 6 feet; and Tom Cleland, official "runt" of the first string, is 5 feet 8.

Coach Ashmore's most promising reserves average about the same. Winslow Smith, pushing Dameron for center, and Meade Willis, golf captain aspiring for center, both stand 6 feet 2 or better, and Smith jumps unusually well for his height. Hendlin and Kendall, two good forward prospects, are both 6 feet 2; Moore is about 6 feet and Brooker is 5 feet 8. Alexander and Choate, two other letter guards, are both 5 feet 11, and Henry, big sophomore who has been playing an unusually good floor game at guard and forward, is 6 feet 3.

MATMEN LEAVE FOR BOUTS WITH PRINCETON TEAM

Tar Heels Not in Best of Condition Because of Lack of Practice.

Following a light workout, the Tar Heel grapplers left Chapel Hill yesterday for Princeton, New Jersey, where they meet the Princeton Tigers Saturday afternoon. Wrestling is a major sport at Princeton, and the Tigers are well known for their many successful teams. However Coach Quinlan is carrying a veteran team, but will be handicapped by the fact that the men have had only four days of regular practice since the Christmas holidays.

Pete Usher will handle the 115-pound class with Captain Fred Stallings in the 125. Last year Stallings won by a fall. Mayne Albright, another letterman, will be seen in the 135-pound class while Don Conklin, a sophomore, will hold down the 145-pound berth.

The veteran Harry Tsumas will handle the 155-pound class with Percy Idol, another sophomore, in the 165-pound division. Marion Cowper and Fred Ferguson, veterans, will take care of the 175 and unlimited classes with the probability that Ferguson will handle the unlimited, although a last minute shift is possible.

The workout yesterday was a fairly light one for those making the trip to Princeton, but Coaches Quinlan and Abbott put the rest of the squad through its usual stiff drill in preparation with the meet with Navy at Annapolis January 17.

Coach Quinlan expects to have the entire squad in condition by that time, and workouts will be held the rest of the week for the reserves.

In addition to the men mentioned above, Coach "Chuck" Quinlan and Manager Wallace Case made up the party which left immediately following the workout yesterday afternoon.

Alumnus Back Here For Research Work

William D. Harris, law, '22, of Asheville, is back on the campus engaged in some special research work for two of the state commissions and in taking several graduate courses in government. Harris was head of the state department of conservation and development in 1925, being appointed by Governor McLean. As lieutenant colonel of field artillery in the reserve corps of the United States Army Harris is probably the youngest officer of this rank in the military establishment.

He has been engaged in legal activities and the trust department of banking the past several years, and is an active member of the North Carolina Bar Association.

LAUNCH TRAINING FOR TRACK MEET

Large Number of Entries Expected Here for Southern Indoor Games.

The next big objective for which the track squad has begun training will be the second annual Southern Conference Indoor Games. The Tin Can will again be the scene of this big meet which will take place on March 7th.

The first Annual Southern Conference Meet which was held last year in the Tin Can on March 8th was a mammoth event, featuring, in addition to the varsity teams of ten Southern Conference colleges, an equal number of southern preparatory school teams and six freshman teams.

Four of the Southern Conference indoor records established last year are held by Washington and Lee, the winner of the meet, while North Carolina came second with two first places and tied South Carolina for a third first place. The records established in the twelve events last year are as follows; 60-yard dash, 6 2-5 seconds (N.C.); 60-yard high hurdles, 7 4-5 seconds (W. and L.); 60-yard low hurdles, 7 seconds (W. and L.); 440-yard run, 55 4-5 seconds (W. and L.); 880-yard run, 2 minutes, 2 seconds (Maryland); one mile, 4 minutes, 37 2-5 seconds (Tulane); one mile relay, 3 minutes, 47 2-5 seconds (W. and L.); two mile run, 9 minutes, 57 2-3 seconds (Ga.); high jump, 5 feet, 11 1-8 inches (tie N.C. and S.C.); shot put, 42 feet, 10 1-2 inches (Maryland); broad jump, 22 feet, 7 inches (Ga Tech); pole vault, 12 feet, 7 1-4 inches (N.C.).

The meet this year should furnish an abundance of action for the spectators, as the time not devoted to varsity competition will be given over to meets between the freshmen and meets between the teams of southern preparatory schools.

Sophs Make Spirited Bids For Posts on U. N. C. Quint

Several sophomores from last year's strong freshman quint are making spirited bids for varsity basketball posts. Wilmer Hines, the tennis champion, is running first string forward. Earle Beale, regular freshman center, converted to forward, is another good prospect, although football kept Beale from participating in the valuable pre-Christmas drills. Henry, Lineberger and Connor are outstanding guard prospects, and there are several others.

Tar Baby Quint Sends Varsity Good Prospects

Carolina's freshman quint of last year sent a trio of likely guards up to the varsity this season, and Henry, Lineberger, and Connor seem slated for much service despite the fact that Carolina has four letter guards.

Randolph-Macon Varsity And Freshmen To Meet Tar Heels In Twin Bill

Coach Ashmore's Team Will Be Playing Fourth Game of Week Tonight.

FROSH GAME AT 7:15 P. M.

Tonight's Contest Will Be First Test of Season for Yearling Cagers.

The Carolina basketball team will continue its heavy program tonight with a home game with Randolph-Macon, carded for the Tin Can at 8:45 o'clock, following a 7:15 o'clock meeting between the Randolph-Macon and Carolina Frosh.

The Virginia club will be making its first sally into the Old North State, and will be playing Carolina its only game of the year, so that there will be no chance for subsequent revenge.

Carolina, in turn, will be playing its fourth game of the week, to be followed by a fifth at Davidson Saturday night. The Tar Heels have shown unusually good floorwork in all opening games, and are expected to hit their shooting stride after the long Christmas layoff.

Coach Jim Ashmore will probably start the Tar Heel regulars, but several shifts and experiments are anticipated around the forward berths, unless Hines, rangy sophomore, and Cleland, speedy little Senior, begin ringing the hoop more consistently.

The Tar Heels have lost heavily in monogram forwards of late, three this year, four the season before, and Coach Ashmore is still handicapped by lack of seasoned material at these posts.

Stud Henry, a big sophomore guard and a good floorman, has been shifted to forward, as also Early Beale, regular freshman center last year.

Hendlin, Kendall and Moore, three other good-sized boys, and Markham and Brooker, small but fast, should also get their chances.

The regular Carolina lineup which will probably start against the Virginians includes Hines and Cleland, forwards; Dameron, center; and Edwards and Captain Marpet, guards.

With only two days of practice in preparation for tonight's game with the Randolph-Macon yearlings, the Tar Heel freshmen probably will have no little difficulty in getting a smooth working combination on the floor. Coach Bo Shepard has been working hard with the group for the past two days, however, and with a group of promising youngsters as a nucleus, it is altogether probable that the frosh will make a good showing tonight.

Stage Funny Man Tells Of Method Used To Cure Son Of Crying Habit

"Only too well do I know how a screaming baby can disturb a man's bed-life," writes Groucho Marx, professional funny-man, in a recent edition of College Humor. "I can remember, as though it were last Michaelmas, those days when I had to get up in the middle of the morning because my son took a notion to yell until he was picked up. But I cured him of that habit.

"It all came about like this. I was curled up in my little bed one September noon, dreaming that St. John Ervine was chasing me out of a theatre with a portable typewriter, while Alex Woollcott, Heywood Broun, and Percy Hammond sat in an upper box singing 'I'm Just a Vagabond Lover.' Suddenly I heard my son screaming and the sound saddened me. 'Should I,' was the question I put to myself, 'should I pick the brat up again and pace the floor?' I was about to answer the customary 'Yes!' when my manhood asserted itself. 'No,' I finally replied. 'NO! I'll scream for awhile and let the brat carry me and see how he likes it.'

"So I began to yell. Surely enough, the baby came and picked me up and carried me around the room until I ceased making noise. (Maybe I'm just a foolishly proud father, but it seemed rather wonderful when you realize that the lad was scarcely ten months old and I was feeling close to a hundred.) I repeated this performance for eight successive mornings, until the neighbors complained. You see, being a pretty strong fellow who eats his roughage every evening and drinks plenty of milk, I was able to cry about twice as loud as the baby. Day after day I'd scream—the brat would crawl out of his crib, pick me up and pace the floor.

"Eventually, of course, he got pretty tired of the whole business. And although he wasn't talking to me at the time, there was a silent understanding between us. If he wouldn't scream, neither would I. And I can only say that no Marx ever breaks his word—except maybe to an employer, the landlord or a dame."

USUAL SERIES OF DANCES PLANNED BY GERMAN CLUB

Tentative Date for Mid-Winter Dances Set for Middle of February.

At a recent meeting of the executive committee of the German Club, plans were begun for the mid-winter dances which are sponsored by the Club. Definite arrangements have not been made but the dances will probably take place Friday and Saturday, February 13 and 14. As usual there will be five dances and they will be in Bynum gymnasium.

Officers of the Club stated that an orchestra has not yet beet engaged but they are negotiating with Jimmy Green, Tal Henry, Hal Kemp, and others.

William Dunn was elected early in the fall to lead the set. His assistants will be Lynn Wilder and George Bagby.

The entire set is under the auspices of the University German Club and the regular rules will be in effect. John Bullock of Rocky Mount is president of the Club; W. B. Snow, Jr., of Asheville, vice-president; W. H. Yarborough, Jr., secretary-treasurer; and John Park of Raleigh, assistant secretary-treasurer. Other members of the executive committee are Marion Cowper of Kinston, chairman; Henry House of Weldon, Aubrey Parsley of Wilmington, George Newman of Greensboro, and S. A. Lynch of Atlanta, Georgia.

The first set of dances sponsored by the German Club this year were the Thanksgiving dances which took place Friday and Saturday, November 28 and 29. The Club will also sponsor the finals next spring.

McIntosh in Raleigh

An announcement from Kenneth C. Royall says that Andrew McIntosh will be associated with him in the practice of law and will be in the branch office which he has opened in the North Carolina Bank and Trust Company building in Raleigh. Mr. McIntosh is the son of A. C. McIntosh of the University law faculty.

Now that Washington hop raisers have joined the vineyard interests in demanding modification or repeal of the state bone dry law it is about time for the hard cider contingent spoke up. —Seattle Times.

Y IS ACTIVE IN SELF-HELP FIELD

Intensive Effort Has Been Made To Aid Especially Needy Students.

The work of the Y in the self-help field has been greater this year than previously. Next year shows no signs of abating, for forty-nine applications for jobs for next fall have already been filed.

Before Christmas there was an intensive effort to aid the especially needy men. All who were doubtful as to whether or not they could return for the winter quarter were asked to come by the Y before they decided anything final about the matter. Almost fifty students did so and their cases were investigated.

Work was found for most of these, and the others were informed during the holidays whether anything had been done for them. Those who are in particular need of financial help usually find it to their advantage to go by the Y before dropping out of school for reasons of this nature.

Jobs are scarce and applications are many. Those who desire to apply for positions need to do so early. Mr. Lanier states that several publishing houses have written him and informed him that they have positions open this summer.

New York Italians Conduct Contest

The Italian Chamber of Commerce in New York City is now sponsoring an annual essay contest, open to graduate students and seniors in American universities and colleges, irrespective of nationality.

The essay submitted may be especially written for this contest, or it may be a final course essay.

The subject of the essay may be any subject clearly falling within the following general fields,—preferably to be treated with special reference to the economic relations between Italy and the United States:

Trade, industry, agriculture, finance, merchant-marine, railroads, public-works, hydro-electric plants, land reclamation, commercial education, and related subjects; problems or phases of the export trade from Italy to the United States; economic development of Italy's colonies.

The successful candidate in each of these general fields will receive three prizes.

Address Changes

All students who have made a change in address are requested to put their new one in a box located in the Y lobby for this purpose.

Sports Writers

All reporters on the sports staff of the Daily Tar Heel must report at the office this afternoon between the hours of two and three o'clock. At this time work will be gone over, and some changes in beats made.

Boxing Managers

All men who were out for managerships in boxing during the fall quarter must report to the Tin Can immediately. Any new men wishing to try out may do so by reporting to Clarence Weeks today.

Magazine Deadline

The first winter quarter issue of the Carolina Magazine will appear Sunday morning, January 18. The deadline is Sunday night, January 11.

Governor's Address

Governor O. Max Gardner's message to the General Assembly may be heard in Gerrard hall at twelve-fifteen today over a radio installed for the occasion by the University Consolidated Service Plants.

College Graduates Wanted For Game Warden Positions

College graduates now have a new career open to them. This different vocation is of especial interest to men desirous of working out of doors, for it is of the old game warden type. However, not the same type of men are wanted as formerly did this job. Men of education are needed now as it is thought that this work necessitates high intelligence and understanding.

Wisconsin leads the way in insisting on having men of education and high character for its conservation force. It is realized that the conservation wardens today mold the public opinion in matters of this kind.

To belong to the force in Wisconsin, one must pass a written examination of 250 questions on every phase of conservation and law enforcement, to classify 150 mounted birds, animals, and fish, and finally there is a three month probationary period with experienced wardens in the field.

The Wisconsin conservation commission announces that this plan is a complete success. Of 185 men taking the examination last year only nineteen passed. One of the men accepted for this work is able to speak seven languages.

It is thought that this idea of having well educated conservation wardens will assist in the co-operation of the scientists in the laboratories and the men in the fields, as the men are on the same plane and will be able to understand each other.

Recently great strides ahead have been made along the line of scientific research in game problems. Some thirty scientists are studying the rivers and streams of New York in an effort to learn more about the fish and plant life there. A committee in New England have been investigating ruffled grouse. Many interesting facts about the parasites and diseases as well as information about the food, growth and structural variations of the grouse were discovered. This study is still in a virgin field of science and offers an interesting and profitable work for young scientists.

It may be a relief to the President to have a Congress from which nothing is expected.—Duluth Herald.

Council Opposes Any Restrictions On Attendance Privileges

editor of the Daily Tar Heel; Pat Patterson, president of the senior class; John Lang, president of the State Student Federation and treasurer of the National Student Federation; Clyde Dunn, editor of the Yackety Yack; J. C. Williams, editor of the Magazine; K. C. Ramsay, president of the Publication Union Board; Jack Ward, president of the Interfraternity Council; Archie Allen, president of the first year law class; Red Gilbreath, football player; John Phil Cooper, national treasurer of the Interfraternity Council; Ransom Whittenton, president of the Phi; Burgess Whitehead, president of the Athletic Council; J. M. Little, president of the Di; Beverly Moore, secretary of Phi Beta Kappa; F. M. James, treasurer of the Y. M. C. A.; Dan Kelly, John Idol, and Frank Manheim. Eight of the twenty-two are Phi Beta Kappa men, and four are letter-men.

Starting with the premise that freedom is something inherent and not to be earned, the Council formulated reasons why in its opinion a plan of compulsory attendance would not be for the best interests of the students of the University.

1. In the opinion of the Council, the proposed change would be the most serious set-back to University progress which the University has had to face for the past two decades. The University of North Carolina has won a national reputation as being the "bulwark of liberalism" and "the intellectectual dynamo of the South," and the fact that it would curtail student privileges at this time would serve only to refute that contention. It was their opinion that such a change would be the difference "between a University and a good boys' prep school."

2. Because of the confusion which would result from the lack of a uniform law, and because of the possibility of departmental jealousy and discrimination on the part of students and faculty, the council opposed department control of attendance regulations.

3. The proposed change is vigorously resented on the grounds that it is in direct opposition to the ideal of student government and initiative.

4. Since seventy-five per cent of the undergraduate courses are lecture courses, absence from which would not hamper the development of the individual, optional attendance permits intellectual freedom.

5. Students should attend classes for interest and not for grades, and professors should merit full attendance by the manner in which they make their courses interesting.

6. The change would mean a most harmful severance of co-operation between the students and the faculty, and would cause the faculty to become truant officers and the students victims of rules with which they are entirely out of sympathy and which they in their entirety would resist.

7. Most important of all, the Council was of the opinion that such a movement would retard the growth of self-development and self-reliance, which is the first duty of an educational institution to inculcate its students, and would artificially prolong the academic life of individuals who are not capable of standing on their feet at an enormous expenses to the state.

The special faculty committee appointed by President-elect Graham to consider the question of attendance has already intimated its willingness to hear the student committee.

Congress is not authorized to adopt general legislation or the rights of a citizen, but only corrective legislation, and that the above bill is repugnant to the tenth amendment to the Constitution.

Following this paper, Dr. W. C. Jackson, state chairman of the North Carolina Interracial Commission and vice-president of North Carolina College, made a few remarks on the work of the commission.

The meeting was attended by the faculty of the sociology department of the University, the law school faculty, and a number of students from the law school and the school of liberal arts.

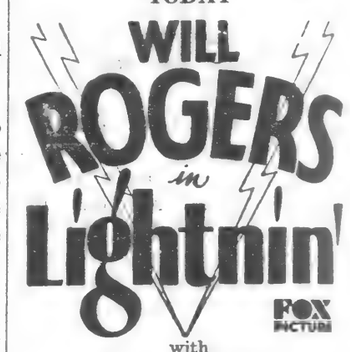
dates ranking fifth, sixth and seventh, in the judgment of this committee, will be selected.

Essays must be typewritten. A brief questionnaire outlining the candidates, interest in physical education and extra-curricular activities must accompany the essay. Successful candidates will be notified directly and public notice of awards will be given in leading aviation publications.

The objects of the Boeing School of Aeronautics is to provide adequate facilities for flying and ground school instruction, for commerce flying as a transport pilot, for the student preparing to enter the aeronautical industry as a trained mechanic. Its courses also furnish instruction helpful to those who plan to engage in the operation and executive branches of the industry.

Stringfield Wins High Recognition



Joseph Littau, who recently gave up his position as conductor of Roxy's Orchestra to take over a symphony band in Omaha, is planning to devote considerable attention to American composers, among whom is Lamar Stringfield, nationally known composer and flutist, now residing in Chapel Hill.

Stringfield won the Pulitzer Prize for his composition, "From the Southern Mountains," and in addition has composed many other pieces of folk-music. He has recently written a one-act opera "The Mountain Song."

FOREIGN SERVICE SUBJECT OF TALK TO POLITY FORUM

Robert H. Frazier Describes Life Of Foreign Ministers as Being Romantic.

Robert H. Frazier, prominent lawyer of Greensboro, talked before the Polity Forum at its meeting Thursday night in Gerrard hall on the subject, "The American Foreign Service."

"The foreign service of the United States," stated Mr. Frazier, "is that expert branch of government established by law to assist American citizens and to promote the interests of our nation abroad. It makes up the eyes, the ears, the outstretched helping hands of our nation away from our shores. It is a vital agency in the development of our foreign relations—relations which arise out of dealings between our citizens and nationals of other governments—dealings which bring about controversies as well as agreements between our nation and other nations and the citizens thereof. It is the Good Will department of our government for the purpose of making our foreign relations friendly relations."

The president is responsible for conducting foreign affairs and the secretary of state is his agent. The foreign service has two branches—diplomatic and consular. "The diplomatic branch of the service," said Frazier, "is made up of ambassadors, ministers, envoys, counselors, secretaries and clerks." It has to do with affairs between the nations, and with watching the political trends of the governments. The ambassador represents the president in a leading nation of the world, a minister in a smaller nation. The United States has ambassadors in Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Belgium, Mexico, and Cuba.

The consular representative has his work in the trading centers, the consul-general being in the larger cities, the consul in the smaller cities, and the vice-consul in the trading posts. Frazier explained that the work of the consul comes under four heads—trade, citizenship, shipping, and notarial.

Concerning trade, the consul looks out for opportunities for American trade, and makes contacts between foreign and American firms." In the matter of shipping, he is the arbiter and judge between the master and his crew. He oversees ships sailing for America, and invoices goods. In his work concerning citizenship, his duties include visaing pass-ports of foreigners, going to the United States, issuing and approving pass-ports, and registering American citizens living abroad. In explaining the notarial work, Frazier stated that it "consists in taking depositions for use in American courts, taking acknowledgments for instruments to be recorded in the United States, and other authentication of documents."

Frazier spoke of the foreign officer's life as one of "privilege and pleasure," of "duty and Drudgery." The officer is open to attacks and often meets death. Frazier concluded, however, "it is a service with a romantic appeal for those who care to roam about the world. Much self-service is endured by those who succeed in it. It is an avenue of patriotic service sometimes leading to great distinction."

Grail Plans Three Dances This Winter

The Order of the Grail met last night and decided to have three dances this quarter. The dances will take place on the week-ends during which athletic contests are held at the University. The first dance will be conducted on the evening of the seventeenth of January; the second on the evening of February seventh; and the third on the evening of February twenty-eighth.

The Grail is trying to make the dances this year better than ever before and is at present negotiating with Jelly Leftwich to have his Blue Devil orchestra play for the first dance, which will take place a week from tonight.

COMPLETION OF NEW AUDITORIUM SET FOR MARCH

Exterior Finished But Interior Awaits Plastering, Decoration, And Electrical Fixtures.

It is definitely known now that the new auditorium, which University officials had hoped would be ready by the middle of this month, will not be ready for use until sometime in March. The exterior of the building is completed but plumbers, electricians, plasterers, carpenters and decorators are still at work on the interior.

The walls have been finished and practically all the tablets have been affixed, but finishing touches have not been added because electricians have not yet completed the wiring of the building.

The balcony, which is built on the cantilever principle, requiring no pillars, has been entirely completed except for the seats. The floor of the new hall is now being laid. The floor is constructed so that it is as sound proof as any yet made. Over the concrete floor were placed large planks on top of which were laid waterproof paper and sound deadening felt. Pine flooring is being nailed on over the felt, and on top of this flooring there will be tacked more sound-deadening felt and then finally the carpet.

After all other workmen have completed work on the building, the decorators will take charge and make the building ready for use. The stage has not as yet been furnished with footlights, overhead lights, back drops and curtain, but these accessories will be installed as soon as the remainder of the building is completed.

Due to the fact that the auditorium will not be ready in time it is likely that the entertainments scheduled for the auditorium will be given in the new Music auditorium. If this is the case, it will be necessary for the performance to be given twice or perhaps even more times because of the small seating capacity of the hall.

The inauguration of President Frank P. Graham has been postponed until the auditorium will be completed so that the greatest number of persons possible will be able to witness the ceremony. If the inauguration were held in any of the buildings now on the campus a great number of persons would be unable to see the proceedings because of the small seating capacity of even the largest campus buildings.

PLAYMAKERS TO PRESENT ANNUAL REVELS TONIGHT

Traditional Twelfth Night Festivities Will Take Place at Theatre.

Tonight at eight-thirty o'clock the Carolina Playmakers present their annual Twelfth Night revels to an audience composed of any persons on the campus who have been in any way connected with the organization.

This performance is one of the Playmakers' traditions and is in itself traditional. The first part of the program is devoted to older dramatic features and the last to original pieces.

In the first part the revel scene from "Twelfth Night" is followed by the entry of the Carolers, the election of lord and queen, the introduction of mummers, and the Saint George play, which is played by faculty members.

In the portion of the program devoted to modern drama mountain square dances, by Gladys Angel; a sketch from Cecily's diary up to date; performance by the Twelfth Night orchestra; a sketch by Dr. Hammond; tea for all, brewed by Billy Arthur; Reading by Joe Fox, Poe's "Tell Tale Heart"; tap dance; more music by Twelfth Night orchestra; "El Cid Moderne," a playlet; "Dangerous Dan McGrew," and "Guess Who," a sketch by Miss Jordon, will be presented.

"El Cid Moderne" was written by Fred and Digby Wardlaw, in collaboration with Misses Betsy Perrow and Mary Aileen Ewart, and Al Nazareno. The scene takes place in father's library about eleven P. M. The cast is composed of the following:

Count de Change.....Dig Wardlaw
Diogenese.....Miss Elizabeth Perrow.
Dueno.....Miss Mary A. Ewart
Lord Savus.....Fred Wardlaw
The father.....Al Nazareno

UNIVERSITY MEN ARE NUMEROUS IN NEW LEGISLATURE

Thirty-Two State Senators and Thirty-Nine Representatives Are Alumni.

Both in the election for the State Legislature and the national House of Representatives the alumni of the University of North Carolina won a sweeping victory. Seventy of the one hundred-seventy members of the state legislature are alumni of this University.

Of the fifty seats in the state senate thirty-two, or over fifty percent, are filled by University alumni. The percentage in the state house of representatives was somewhat less there being thirty-nine out of the 120 seats filled by Carolina alumni. In addition to these elected in November for the present legislature, which convened January 6th, there were many Carolina men who gained positions as judges and solicitors.

The University's gains over previous years were especially noteworthy. Two years ago fifty-nine alumni were elected to the places in contrast to the seventy who gained seats this year. In 1928 there were twenty-four in the state senate and thirty-five in the house of representatives of the state compared with thirty-two senators and thirty-nine representatives at present.

TAR HEEL IS TO INAUGURATE NEW CUSTOM SUNDAY

Regular Meeting Will Be Entirely Devoted to Journalistic Discussions.

A new custom will be inaugurated at the regular weekly meeting of Daily Tar Heel reporters Sunday night when matters concerning the every-day operation of the daily paper will be taken up and when the whole meeting will be devoted to an address by a well-known journalistic figure of the campus.

Formerly, these meetings consisted of "shop talk" and then an address, but Tar Heel editors have decided that individual attention given during the week is better than the "shop talk" and have consequently turned over the entire Sunday night meeting to a speaker who will present some phase of journalistic work.

The usual weekly meeting of the staff will be tomorrow night in room 104 of the Alumni building at seven-fifteen. Fifteen minutes prior to this all of the editors meet for a short session.

Reporters and editors not able to attend the meeting are requested to secure an excuse from the managing editor before the time of the meeting. All not receiving an excuse will be marked absent. Two consecutive unexcused absences automatically drop one from the staff.

A speaker is to be secured for the Sunday night meeting to address the group. Last quarter several noted journalistic men on the campus talked to the staff, and this idea will be continued for the remainder of this quarter.

MOVIE GUILD IS FORMED TO AID MANY CHARITIES

Organization To Present Artistic Pictures on Sunday Afternoon.

With Paul Green as president, the Chapel Hill Movie Guild has been started with the view of putting on educational and artistic pictures Sunday afternoons for the benefit of various charities in and around Chapel Hill.

Membership cards, entitling the holder to admission to four plays whenever presented, are being sold. Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson will appear in "A Trip Around the World," at two-thirty this coming Sunday; and "The Lady of the Lake," based on Scott's poem ,will be seen here the following Sunday. A German production, "Hamburg Docks," is scheduled for January 25.

Only those who become members of the Guild and present their cards of membership will be admitted.

During the past year more than $1500 has been raised for charity by the Sunday afternoon attractions, at which collections have been taken up. This method of revenue has been proved undependable, and much more can be obtained for charity through the enrollment of members in the Guild.

A board of directors will select the presentations which will be talking pictures for the most part, although some of the more famous silent pictures may be revived.

First Year Men To Nominate Officers

Nominations for the freshman class officers are to be made at a called meeting of the first year men in Gerrard hall, Tuesday night, January 13, at 7:30. Nominees for president, vice-president, treasurer, and secretary of the '34 group will be chosen at that time.

On the following Thursday, January 15, the election will take place in the Y. M. C. A. lobby, at which time the voting will be by Australian ballot. The polls are to open at eight-thirty and remain open until five o'clock in the afternoon.

The election has been postponed thus far in order to give the new men a chance to get acquainted with each other.

KOCH WILL OPEN STATE DRAMATIC CHIEF'S MEETING

College, Community, and High School Representatives To Gather Here Today.

Representatives of college, community and high school dramatic associations will gather here Saturday, January 10, for the annual Dramatic Directors' meeting of the Carolina Dramatic Association, it was announced today by Prof. Frederick H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers.

Meetings will be held in the Playmakers Theatre, beginning Saturday morning at 11 o'clock. The afternoon session will begin at 2:30 o'clock and that night the visitors will be entertained at the annual Twelfth Night Revel of the Playmakers.

Professor Koch will welcome the delegates at the morning session. Following his talk a discussion of rural, community and college dramatics will be held. William Royal of the Wayne County Players, will tell of the Belasco tournament.

Technical discussions will feature the afternoon session. R. C. Robinson, president of the association and director of community recreation of Goldsboro, will preside.

The complete program follows:

Morning Session: 11 o'clock.

President R. C. Robinson, Director of Community Recreation, Goldsboro ,presiding.

Greetings to the Directors: Professor Frederick Koch, Director of the Carolina Playmakers.

"Dramatics in Rural Communities," by Pauline Willis, Director, Knightdale High School.

"University Dramatics," Prof. A. T. West, director, Duke University.

GOVERNOR SEEKS CUT OF TEN PER CENT IN SALARIES

Gardner Recommends Program Of Rigid Economy in Biennial Address to Legislature.

In his biennial message to the General Assembly, meeting in a joint session, Governor O. Max Gardner yesterday urged many far-reaching reforms such a the central purchasing plan for all branches of the state government, a ten per cent reduction in the salaries of all state employees, unification of the state's institutions of higher learning under the banner of the University of North Carolina, and the consolidation of the state departments as recommended in the Brookings Institute report.

The governor's speech was broadcast by station WPTF of Raleigh from the hall of the house of representatives in the State Capitol, and through the courtesy of the University Consolidated Service Plants, a radio was installed in Gerrard hall so that the students and townspeople were able to hear the message.

A program of rigid economy in state government was discussed by the governor. Beginning with the achievements of North Carolina during the past decade, Governor Gardner declared that the state stands today at the cross-roads but must continue to push forward despite the present economic situation. He pointed out, however, that no bond issue should be authorized at this session. The bonded indebtedness of the state is now $537,000,000 and a program of economy must be pursued.

The tax burden on property should and must be relieved, said the governor. A system of fair and just taxation, levied on the ability to pay basis is sought in North Carolina. This reduction in taxes must be reflected in a decrease in the amount the tax payer has to pay.

Governor Gardner stressed the "live at home" idea as a means of relief to the farmer. To relieve the farmer of high taxes would not entirely relieve the situation. Low prices are the causes of the perplexing economic situation that faces the state today. The farmers of North Carolina received eighty million dollars less in 1930 than in 1929.

"The hope of this state is to raise the right crops, plant the best seed, and rid North Carolina of the scrub," declared the governor.

Complete state maintainance of county road systems by the state was recommended. A tax of six cents per gallon on gasoline, of which two cents is to be used for county road maintainance, provides the means. All tax refunds are to be revoked. No new road-building program should be inaugurated but maintainance must be kept up by those who use the roads, includ-

Action Instead Of Words

The Central Administrative Council, composed of students entirely, wasted few words at its recent meeting, but after discussing thoroughly the question of optional class attendance formed plans for presenting the plea of the student body to the faculty. Too often meetings of this kind resolve themselves into "indignation meetings" at which there is much oratory and little action. It was refreshing to witness the Administrative Council take a definite stand on the question and to prepare to present the student attitude toward class attendance to the faculty.

Our position has been stated. We are opposed to abolition or restriction of optional class attendance among the upper classes as we do not believe that compulsory attendance will improve the scholastic records of upperclassmen and as we believe that compulsory attendance will create such feeling between students and faculty as to hinder the cause of a liberal education.

It is our hope that the undergraduate faculty and the general faculty will give careful and considerate attention to the position of the students on the question of attendance. The committee which will meet with the faculties is composed of students of sane judgment, students who have witnessed both optional attendance and restricted optional attendance. This committee will present what we believe to be the opinion of the student body. It is worthy of attention.

Humpty Dumpty

With the convening of state legislature it becomes more and more apparent that there will be many reductions in state expenditures. Although it is still a matter of speculation as to just where the knife of economy will cut most keenly, it is probable that there will be a bill introduced to prune the University's appropriation. The reception which will meet this measure is a matter of the gravest concern not only to us here in Chapel Hill, but to the state at large.

In deciding just which state enterprise should be dealt with most frugally an astute legislature will not confine its attention solely to the present possibilities of reduction nor consider only how far the expenditures of a given utility can be curtailed and still allow it to eke out an existence. We all realize that this is a period of extreme financial depresson, but to be stampeded into believing that this is the sole matter of importance would be to adopt a policy leading to the greatest disaster. Therefore, the wise legislator in measuring out the pennies to any institution must consider carefully what will be the effect of a temporary financial starvation on the welfare of that institution when normalcy has again returned. It is apparent that if the expansion of our concrete highway system were interrupted at present that it could be resumed later with only a loss in time as the result. Building plans can be curtailed and taken up again at a more opportune period with small loss to the public.

Other institutions would not emanate so fortunately from an era of reckless economy, and to these institutions a closed pocket book would lead to a catastrophe. A state university is not alone a number of buildings and a group of salaried employees. If it were, the same rule might be applied without disaster. The period leading back to the Civil War, and especially the past decade, has been spent in building here at Chapel Hill an educational institution that has acquired a reputation envied throughout the entire South, a university with certain high qualifications and standards which have earned for it and for the state it represents a reputation of high intellectual attainment. This is the greatest asset we have, and one standing today in an extremely precarious position. Reputation can not be made over night. It is acquired through years of constructive work by a conscientious administrative body, by the enthusiasm of devoted alumni, and the employment over a period of years of an efficient respected personnel. It can be destroyed much more easily. A capable faculty can not work for a pittance, and once they desert the ranks the news travels quickly, and the priceless ingredient of a great institution is seriously undermined. To rebuild requires another decade of work, an eventual expenditure of much greater sums of money, and the restoring of lost confidence, confidence not only of prospective students, but of the entire educational world. The University is the great Humpty Dumpty of the state; once she has fallen, all the state's politicians and all the state's economists can not put Humpty Dumpty back on the wall.—W. M.

To The Legislature

The State and the Church are the champions of the present. The future has only the School.

Those two old allies State and Church have done much for civilization and have lived well off it. It was the statesman and the churchman who civilized man and they will never let him sink so low that they will not be needed. They are the two great bulwarks of the social order, the two chief guarantors of its continuance. But there their effort ceases. Their aim is rather a maintenance of the status quo than a continued forward march; their ideal an orderly society rather than a progressive civilization.

Thus it has often been their part to restrain rather than to lead the march of man's advance—a march on which they may eventually be discarded as superfluous.

But when an angry Church and a sullen State barred the path of progress, the School has always helped man up and led him on toward light. In times of prosperity it is the School and its products that point out those uses to which plenty can be most profitably put. In times of scarcity when all, admitting their impotency, curse relentless fate and abandon themselves to despair, it is the School and its products that keep up the flagging spirit and lead the way to success.

In this state particularly the School, typified by this University, has demonstrated its power to lead. To the unfailing courage and determination of the University is directly, almost solely, due the State's resurrection from the wreckage left by the Civil War. It is University graduates realizing University ideas who have led the people of North Carolina through the darkest era in her history to the undreamed of pinnacles of "Coolidge" prosperity. From the halls of this University have gone forth a line of men who, strong in their faith in the future, have braved the pricks and darts of the present to the realization of those ambitions, engendered here at Chapel Hill, which have made the name of North Carolina respected throughout the nation.

These are lean times, and the State, seeking to alleviate the people's distress, proposes economy. Yet, with remarkable blindness it proceeds to starve the University—the one institution which has proven its power to solve our problems. That last year's reduction in the University's income has damaged it, is evident. How it is to survive the further reductions proposed by many, and maintain its high standard or produce the type of men indispensable in the approaching crisis is unanswerable. The School is the cradle of the future and to cripple it is to make tomorrow subject of today.

The legislature now sitting in Raleigh is confronted with a task far greater than any faced by its predecessors for many years, and the course of action taken by it will have an important bearing on the future prosperity of the state. There are many things that it might do, and we appreciate its perplexity as to what it ought to do. But it is obvious that there is one thing that it must not do. It must not rob the state of the one tried servant on which it can depend to lead it through its present troubles. It must not starve the University.—J. G. K.

Go Through The Chaff

The General Assembly of North Carolina, colloquially called the legislature, is just beginning its biennial session, and for the next ninety days the state press will have a great deal to say in news, and even more in editorials, of the proceedings.

Without meaning any disrespect to the powers that be, and intending no disparagement of the men we elected, still we are safe in predicting that a lot of the sayings and doings, and consequently a lot of the reports, will be of no particular interest. Nobody, in his wildest dreams, will be able to find any exciting literature in the press reports of the next three months. We will probably be unable to understand much that will happen; we will wonder by just what process of wily logic our elected reached their conclusions. And perhaps we may lose whatever respect we entertain for the innate intelligence of men.

And yet the wheat will justify our going through the chaff, which translated means that a careful reading of the newspapers of the next ninety days will be a part of a liberal education.—V. A. D.

ing out-of-state motorists who travel in North Carolina.

A new central prison to be located on the Cary farm and a more efficient prison system is advocated by the Governor.

In his recommendation for salary cuts, Governor Gardner said the reduction must affect all or none. Exceptions for those whose salaries have been cut since December 1, 1930 and those whose incomes are less than fifty dollars per month. This proposal is without precedent in North Carolina history and will probably mean a saving of about four million dollars to the taxpayer. This cut is to become effective July 1, 1931 and will last for two years.

Governor Gardner pledged his support to the proposed measures, saying that they were his honest convictions and were not prompted by any political or factional motives but for the good of North Carolina.

STEENE ETCHINGS PLACED ON SALE

William Steene, Chapel Hill artist, has made six etchings of prominent buildings in Chapel Hill which are being offered for sale by the University Press in portfolios priced at $100 per portfolio. The etchings made are those of Old South and the Old Well, Episcopal Chapel, Playmakers Theatre, Kenan Stadium, Old East, and Davie Poplar.

Clyde Dunn, editor of the 1931 Yackety Yack, has arranged to use all six scenes in the layout of the present yearbook which is now in process of being assembled. The Alumni Review has used the etching of the South Building and the Old Well for the cover design of the January number, which was sent out yesterday.

The size of each etching is approximately nine and one-half inches by thirteen inches. Each is mounted on board suitable for framing.

William Steene has been a resident of Chapel Hill for several years and is well known for his portrait painting. He is a member of several leading art societies, and has exhibited his works in many galleries and institutions.

Second French Film Will Be Given Today

The Carolina Theatre will show another French film, entitled "La Lettre," today from twelve to two p. m. This picture it is reported, has an all French cast and was produced in France.

The French talking picture was adopted from the English play by Somerset Maugham. The name in English is the same, "The Letter."

This is the second French picture of a series of foreign talking pictures that E. C. Smith, manager of the theatre proposes to show at the Carolina. These attractions will represent the languages of France, Germany, and perhaps Spain. The only presentation that has been definitely scheduled to follow is another French picture, "Sous les Toits de Paris," which also has an all-French cast, and has won much praise from various sources.

MAKER OF BELLS DESCRIBES WORK

Gift to University Is Not Made In Usual Fashion, Says Letter.

The bells for the Morehead-Patterson Memorial Tower to be shipped to the campus sometime next fall are described in a letter to Louis Graves (editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly by W. R. Meneely, who is making the chimes.

"The musical scheme of the set," the letter says, "embraces eight notes of the octave in the diatonic scale, with two bells above the scale, and two other bells attuned to the 'sharp-fourth and 'flat-seventh,' respectively, thus rendering the chime capable of producing music in any one of three different keys.

"The bells are composed of 78 parts of new Lake Superior copper and 22 parts of block tin, which form the highest grade of bell composition.

"Unlike the average chime or carillon for which the requisite number of bells for the set are cast and chipped or tuned to pitch, and so often to the impairment of the quality of tone, the University's chime will be assembled from many bells of the same size that are cast to choose from in order to obtain a set of virgin bells that will be correct in attunement and even in tone color."

The tower and set of bells are a gift of John Motley Morehead, now United States minister to Sweden, and Rufus L. Patterson.

no one can tell—if the letter is written on Old Hampshire stationery—for it gives an almost presidential dignity to the message it carries. Whether your letter is to the family at home, to some of your tradesmen or purveyors—or to your very best girl, Old Hampshire adds a distinct tone, for it is rich, substantial, smart—it has the rich texture, the crisp crackle of the truly aristocratic paper.

Cagers Meet Davidson Tonight At Charlotte In First Major Game

Fifth Clash of Week for Tar Heel Quintet Expected To Be Hard Fought.

OPENING BIG FIVE TEST

Wildcats' Victory Over State College Makes Them Likely Title Contenders.

The Tar Heel basketball squad leaves here this morning for Charlotte where it will battle the Davidson College cagers in the Central High School gymnasium tonight for its fifth game of the week. This game will be the first for the Carolina quintet against big five teams, while the Wildcats have already opened the race for state title honors by downing the State College Red Terrors Thursday night.

Davidson is expected to furnish the first real competition for the Tar Heels, and judging from the performance which they turned in against State College, it will be very stiff competition. State College took an early lead over the 'Cats, but Captain Bill Goodson of Davidson quickly swung into action and rung up three successive field goals to knot the count at 13-13 as the half ended. The final score was 26-19 in favor of Davidson.

Both teams boast strong defenses ,and both teams' defenses are built largely around their captains. A heavy loss of forwards by both quints has hurt them greatly, but a strong offensive may develop for either team at any time. Martin, Davidson forward, was high scorer in the State-Davidson game with four field goals and one foul throw, and Wilmer Hines, Tar Heel forward, was in a triple tie for scoring honors in the Carolina-Guilford game Thursday night.

Carolina's guards and centers have proven particularly outstanding in the four games the Tar Heels have played this week. Sandy Dameron, 77-inch center, and Captain Artie Marpet, big all-state guard of last year, have been playing great floor ball.

Captain Marpet did an especially fine piece of work against Raleigh "Y." Guarding Hank Young, captain of North Carolina State's Southern championship team of year before last, the Tar Heel held the famous marksman to a couple of field goals, one on a long shot, while Marpet himself got away from Young for seven goals.

Dameron has been playing the best of his career as pivot of the Tar Heel offense, and has also developed a new aptitude at breaking away and bagging crips. Edwards, Alexander and Choate, Carolina's other three letter guards, and Smith, center, have also been going fine, but the Tar Heel forwards must still prove themselves.

Davidson will probably start Rusk and Martin, forwards; Pierce, center; Captain Goodson and Proctor, guards. Carolina will probably begin play with Hines and Cleland at forward; Dameron at center; and Captain Marpet and Edwards at guard.

Graduate Club Chef Dies

W. F. Hawkins, colored, who has been chef of the Shirley Graves Graduate Club dining room since its organization several years ago, died Thursday afternoon following an attack of pneumonia. In the death of Hawkins the club loses a faithful employee.

SPORT SHOTS

By Jack Bessen

A recent Associated Press report that will interest Tar Heel baseball followers is the announcement in the Greensboro Daily News that Nap Lufty and Jimmy Maus have both been signed by the National League pennant winners, the St. Louis Cardinals. It is unlikely that these two men will make good on their first trial in "big time" company, and next spring will see them perfoming with some minor league team. If Maus and Lufty can have their way, they will play for the Greensboro Patriots of the Piedmont League. Both boys claim Greensboro as their home town, and after their great record at Carolina, would be sure to go great for the Patriots. The record that both Maus and Lufty have established at the University is one that may not be approached for years to come. Nap Lufty played such "bang-up" ball in his sophomore year that he was elected captain at the termination of that season, an honor rarely bestowed upon a junior. Then, Nap was a first baseman, but weakness at third forced Coach Ashmore to use the versatile Nap at the "'hot corner." It was at this post that Lufty found himself, establishing himself as one of the best collegian infielders in the South.

Jimmy Maus' rise has not been less sensational. A normal .350 hitter and a fielder par excellence, Jimmy's worth has never been fully realized because he plays the most unappreciated position on the team—that of catcher. But it is the catcher, more than any other player, who guides the destinies of a baseball team, and one need only to look over Carolina's record on the diamond for the three years that Jimmy has been catching to realize his ability.

From early season performances, Carolina will have two men to push for all-southern berths—Sandy Dameron, tall center, and Captain Artie Marpet, guard. In the three games played so far, Sandy has scored a total of thirty points, an average of ten markers a game, and in addition, Sandy has been playing a great game defensively. Not far behind comes Artie Marpet with twenty-five points for three games. Last year Marpet was an almost unanimous choice for all-state guard over Johnson, N. C. State's trick all-American, and this year will be looking for greater honors.

Boxing, which, from the point of attendance, is Carolina's most popular indoor sport, will be king next Friday, when the team meets the Gamecocks of South Carolina. This year the Tar Heels again have a team that will have the students "hot and bothered."

Wee Willie Clark, iron man of the Brooklyn mound corps last year, has gladdened Uncle Robbie's heart by returning a signed contract, which gives the Dodgers the championship of the signing season, only two men, Herman and Vance, still being unsigned—Stecker, who gained fame because of a fifty yard run against the Navy last fall, is showing the way to the Army basketball stars—after two months of diligent searching through the files, President Sidney Weil has finally discovered a Cincinnati ball player with a contract, Wally Roettger, who is bound over by a contract with the Cardinals.

COUNCIL TO ACT ON GEORGIA BID FOR REX ENRIGHT

Other Matters of Import To Come Before Athletic Body Monday Night.

The University athletic council in session Monday night is expected to act on several matters of primary importance, officials revealed yesterday.

Despite frequent denials it is understood that Rex Enright, Tar Heel freshman football coach has reached an agreement with the University of Georgia to assume the duties of assistant grid mentor, a post recently vacated by Frank Thomas who succeeds Wallace Wade at the University of Alabama. Since the permission to bid on Enright's services was readily granted by University authorities and Georgia was anxious to reach an agreement with Enright, it is practically certain that the Carolina frosh coach will accept the berth at Athens. Verification of this rumor will rest in the action of the athletic council Monday night when a formal declaration will be issued.

Other business to come before the group will be the approval of the selection of football managers for 1931 and the designation of those who are eligible to receive monograms in football and cross-country. Freshmen eligible for numerals in both sports will come under discussion also.

Contests for High School Wrestlers, Boxers To Be Here

Annual State Tournament Will Take Place in Tin Can.

The annual high school wrestling and boxing tournament will take place February eleventh and twelfth in the Tin Can. The scoring of the tournament is arranged on a basis of points; the school having the greatest number of points will be awarded a cup, which is to remain in the possession of that school until it is won by another. The school winning the cup three times may keep it permanently.

One cup will be awarded for the boxing championship and one for the wrestling championship. Five points will be awarded to the winner of each boxing bout. Five points will go to the winner of each wrestling bout if he wins by a fall; if he should win by a decision he will receive only three points.

The weights for both the boxing and the wrestling events are: 108 pounds or under; 115 pounds or under; 125 pounds or under; 135 pounds or under; 145 pounds or under; 155 pounds or under; 165 pounds or under; 175 pounds or under. If there is not enough interest shown in the 175 pound class this division may be discontinued.

The rounds of the boxing tournament will be two minutes each with one minute between rounds. The officials in charge of the wrestling events have ruled that if no fall is registered in the first two minutes each wrestler will get down on the mat for a period of two minutes and if his opponent holds a thirty second advantage over him the decision for the bout will go to his opponent.

The boxing and wrestling events will go on at the same time, and no man will be permitted to take part in more than one event. In case of disagreement between the two judges, the referee shall decide the winner of the boxing bouts.

The first preliminary will start at three o'clock, Friday afternoon, February eleventh; the semi-finals will begin at eleven o'clock Friday morning; and the finals at eight o'clock.

Education Incomplete Without Attention To Physical Development

Fifty Percent of Students Take No Part in Competitive Games, States Coach Fetzer—Also Writes That Nothing Can Replace Health Producing Exercises.

R. A. Fetzer, director of athletics and head coach of track, issues a challenge to the students of the University not to neglect their physical development while trying to get a well-rounded and complete education. Coach Fetzer finds that in spite of the extensive varsity, freshman and intramural athletic programs, there are about fifty per cent of the student body who do not take part in any kind of competitive athletic contests.

"This has been termed the age of invention," states Coach Fetzer, "but we still have the problem of inventing something to take the place of health producing exercise and recreation. We must supplant this artificial environment and sedentary living with out-of-door-mindedness and athletics."

Besides the many benefits derived from building up the body physically, there are the many ideals of sportsmanship, such as loyalty, courtesy, initiative, unselfishness, honor, and courage, which can be learned only through athletic competition, says the University's athletic director. His complete statement follows:

"In spite of the urgent calls for candidates for the many branches of varsity and freshman athletics, and the splendid opportunity afforded by a well organized intramural program, there are still about fifty per cent of our students who are not competing in any form of competitive games.

"Students come to the University, often at the cost of great sacrifices, to obtain an education. Surely an education that neglects the physical man and disregards the opportunity for the development of the manly traits of character, and of learning by actual practice the invaluable lessons of sportsmanship, cannot be called a complete education.

"The necessity for participation in athletics is far greater and more urgent than it was even ten or twelve years ago, for the tendency is more and more toward the artificial life. This has been termed the age of invention, but, we still have the problem of inventing something to take the place of health producing exercise and recreation. We must surplant this artificial environment and sedentary living with out-of-door-mindedness and athletics.

"The University is being called upon to produce real, finished men, ready and willing to take their places in the world. Men, who will not be forced aside in modern business or in life by an ailing body. Health is necessary for success in business and in life, and the same elements of character that make for success in athletics are welcomed and

Thirty Groups Enter Teams For Intramural Basketball Race; Play Starts Monday

Teams Not Entered to Date Have Until Wednesday to Send Applications.

The intramural basketball season will get under way Monday, January 12, according to reports from the intramural department. Thirty teams have entered the tournament thus far, while at least ten more are expected to enter by Wednesday, the last date at which teams may be entered. Up to date twenty-two fraternities have signified their intentions of participating in the annual affair. In the dormitory league six dormitories and two independent teams have returned entry cards.

This has been one of the most successful seasons in intramural history and while the list of entrants is ten behind last year's record, it is expected that by Wednesday, the final day, the number of entrants will exceed that of last year. Last year a total of twenty-five teams, more than this year's entry, participated in the fraternity race. In the dormitory league a total of fifteen teams, including four independents, entered, exceeding this year's total by seven. The list of entrants is as follows:

Fraternities: Delta Tau Delta, Kappa Alpha, Kappa Sigma, S. A. E., Pi Kappa Alpha, Chi Psi, Theta Chi, Delta Sigma Phi, Beta Theta Pi, Sigma Zeta, Lambda Chi Alpha, Pi Kappa Phi, Tau Epsilon Phi, Zeta Psi, Phi Alpha, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Theta Kappa Nu, Phi Kappa Sigma, Phi Gamma Delta, Chi Phi, Alpha Tau Omega, Sigma Nu.

Dormitory League: Mangum, Lewis, Ruffin, Graham, New Dorms, Steele, Question Marks, and Independents.

All teams wishing to enter may do so by calling G. E. Shepard at 4141 any time between now and Wednesday.

Bottom Of Cage Net Cut Out In Princeton Riot

"In conclusion," writes Corey Ford, The Grand Old Man of Basketball, in the College Humor, "I feel that the history of basketball would not be complete unless I mentioned the great Basketball Riot of 1843, which took place while I was Captain of the Princeton team of that year. It was a direct result of this riot, in fact, that the modern basket, in which the bottom of the net is cut out, first came into vogue. In my day the basket was not cut as it is today, but consisted of a large closed net hanging from a round iron brace, in which the ball rested after it entered the basket, without falling through. At first these nets had seemed satisfactory but as months went by and one basketball after another came to rest within these nets, high off the floor, it became apparent that sooner or later we would be faced with a serious basketball shortage, threatening the whole future of the sport. Pleas of the undergraduates were of no avail; the authorities steadfastly refused to cut the nets and release the captive basketballs, and at last the loyal supporters of the game decided to take a hand. A large

TAR HEELS OPEN MAT SEASON AT PRINCETON TODAY

Crucial Match Will Be Acid Test For Carolina Grapplers.

At two-thirty today Coach Chuck Quinlan's wrestlers open their season against the strong Princeton Tigers at Princeton, New Jersey. The team left Chapel Hill after a short practice Thursday afternoon and reached Princeton last night to rest until this afternoon.

Princeton has a reputation for exceptionally fine wrestling teams and stands high in national ratings. Last year Princeton eked out a fifteen-thirteen win over the Tar Heels in an exciting match which was not decided until the last bout. Carolina's hopes for revenge have been lessened by a lack of time allowed for practice since the Christmas holidays.

The team representing Carolina today will be composed of four seniors and two juniors, all of whom have won their monograms, and two sophomores who starred on the 1930 freshman team. Captain Fred Stallings and Fred Ferguson have been outstanding performers for the past two years, and are being depended on in today's meet.

The lineup for Carolina will have Pete Usher in the 115-pound class, Captain Stallings in the 125, Mayne Albright in the 135, Don Conklin 145, Harry Tsumas 155, Percy Idol 165, Marion Cowper 175, and Fred Ferguson unlimited.

"THE LETTER"

North Carolina Foremost Southern State In Education Of The Blind

By J. Marshall Parham

"This beats anything I ever saw!" exclaimed a visitor in the gymnasium of the State School for the Blind in Raleigh.

No ape out of Africa, with all his four hands, twenty fingers, and prehensile tail, could have surpassed the deft tricks of these boys on the stationary bar. No seal from the Bering Sea could have done half so neat a back-flip as the fellow who just went from the springing board into the pool. Another soared gracefully in a perfect swan dive, a third did a jack-knife, then a half-gainer, and topped off the performance with the difficult flying-Dutchman.

It is never easy for visitors to this gymnasium to realize that the boys and girls doing these things with such dexterity are blind.

And yet they are only at their play here. In other buildings of the school, in the class room, the study hall, and the work-shop, one may see them applying themselves as earnestly to a nobler art, the art of learning how to live useful, satisfying lives. They are taking advantages of the best opportunities offered blind students anywhere in the South; for this school not only ranks high nationally, but it is the only one of its kind on the list of southern accredited high schools.

Have Made Great Progress

The institution has made such phenomenal progress during the last few years under the direction of Superintendent G. E. Lineberry that other states look upon its methods as a criterion for the training of the blind. Extreme care is taken to provide for the comfort and welfare of the students, who are given every advantage from kindergarten through high school.

Upon admission to the school, students are placed in the kindergarten department, where they are taught to read and write the raised symbols of revised Braille, which are now in use throughout the world. The instructors in this department must possess extreme tact and patience. The very young blind ones are often unable to dress or feed themselves, and sometimes show no interest in life; but in spite of all this, they are soon trained to conduct themselves normally, and even to surpass seeing students in the grammar grades.

Blind students in high school have the same tough problems in math and languages as do those students who can see. They receive the same instruction in English and composition, and are probably even more emphatically dealt with in the matter of punctuation and theme construction. The requirements for graduation are the same as those for seeing students. The only difference is their method of reading and writing.

Individuals are classified according to their talents and abilities. Those excelling in that field in art are given thorough training whether music, the study of languages, or the preparation for a profession. Some are taught to manufacture mattresses, some to tune pianos, and others are instructed in caneseating. The girls make their own graduating dresses, choosing the colors and designs themselves, and they can also crochet and weave baskets. The industrial department is one of the most thorough in the South.

Taught Useful Trades

Industrial training for the boys begins in a shop equipped with facilities for chair-reseating and mattress manufacturing. The equipment is like that in other factories of this kind. There is also a course in pianotuning, no pupil of which is permitted to do public work until he has thoroughly proven his proficiency.

Small girls are first taught bead-work, and as soon as they have mastered this, they learn to weave baskets from raffia. Later, when they learn to crochet, they make scarfs and baby caps, and the final accomplishment in this department is the crocheting of rugs. A spirit of helpfulness always prevails; the older girls instruct each other, while the teacher serves more as a guide.

All the girls are taught to sew. They begin with simple hemstitching of towels and handkerchiefs, and their own wearing apparel, as well as the dresses of the younger girls.

For those who become blind comparatively late in life there is the problem of readjustment to a new world. They are momentarily dazed and bewildered, and either grope for the transformation so slow in coming, or lapse into a deadening state of inactivity of mind and body. Under the influence of the teachers at the Raleigh school, their faltering steps soon become ones of firmness as their other senses are trained to make up for their visual deficiency. Their dull fingers soon acquire a sensitiveness that enables them to transmit the where-withal of an education from the raised letters to their brains.

How They Overcome Obstacles

Every pupil who applies himself leaves the school perfectly capable to earn a living, or to enter school for further training elsewhere. Perhaps the most outstanding professional men turned out by this school in recent years are Sam Cathy, an Asheville lawyer, who served as the Asheville city solicitor for some time; and Clayton Alexander, head of the history department at Catawba College.

We who are blind dream of equality with the seeing man, and of creating our own place in society, but we have been handicapped in the past by the element of pity which has always been a part of the assistance given us. There has been too much of the theory that all that is necessary for the blind is to keep them out of idleness. Blind persons with heart and mind intent upon creating for themselves a normal place in society deserve every consideration. It is not a gift of money that most of us want, but an opportunity to make money; and it is lamentable that this majority is handicapped by the few blind persons who practice professional beggary, and thereby arouse pity and disgust. Those evils are being obliterated by such forces as North Carolina's State School for Blind.

Charlotte Taking the Lead

North Carolina was one of the first states to establish an institution for the blind, having had such a school since 1845, and she was the pioneer state in offering like advantages to the blind of the colored race.

During the past year the city of Charlotte has been actively engaged in work for the benefit of the blind. The Charlotte Lions Club has begun an effort to establish a commission which would supervise the activities of the blind in the state. If this vital plan is successful, the commission will be composed of the Governor, the superintendent of the State School for the Blind, the Secretary of Labor and Printing, and a resident blind person. The commission would have the power to appoint a secretary and field workers who would compile authentic statistics of the blind and their present living conditions.

DEANS WILL GIVE OUT TICKETS FOR ENTERTAINMENTS

"The Spanish Dancer," Will Be First Presentation of Year.

Student entertainment tickets for the winter quarter's presentations will go on sale Monday, January 12, according to a recent announcement made by Harold S. Dyer of the music department, chairman of the Entertainment Committee. The first performance will take place on February 6 when Carolya Goya will appear under the title of "The Spanish Dancer."

Liberal Arts students will receive their tickets Monday at their dean's office in South building upon the presentation of receipts incident to registration. Students in the school of education who have paid the entertainment fee may get their season tickets at Dean Walker's office.

The season ticket will be good for all six of the performances that will be presented this winter and which will begin January 6. The sale of tickets will be in charge of T. C. Worth who will announce where tickets may be obtained.

Stringfield To Be Leading Figure In Playmaker Recital

The Carolina Playmakers will sponsor a recital of chamber music jointly with the University music department, to be given Friday, January 30, at the Playmakers Theatre.

Appearing as a flute soloist Lamar Stringfield will play several of his own compositions. His piano accompanist will be Mrs. Fred P. McCall. A dozen or so musicians selected from among faculty members and other citizens of the village are to compose the orchestra, with Mr. Stringfield as the conductor.

The program will last approximately an hour and a quarter, and will include pieces by Gluck, Debussy, Stringfield and other famous composers.

STUDENT GROUPS PROTEST AGAINST MILITARY DRILLS

Student groups in over one hundred colleges have decided to protest simultaneously against compulsory military training. Meetings have been scheduled by student groups throughout the country, and petitions in support of two bills pending in Congress which demand the immediate abolition of the compulsory feature of military drill are being circulated. The campaign which is being organized by the Intercollegiate Student Council, will be concentrated in December and January in order to influence this legislation. "Fifteen thousand signatures by January first" is the slogan for the first part of the fight.

The objections stressed in the petitions circulated are:

Military drill is a violation of academic freedom. R. O. T. C. courses are not under the administration of the college but of the War Department. They often are a prerequisite to graduation. This amounts to a strangle hold on student opinion by the military authorities.

Military drill teaches doctrines contrary to the principles of American government. In one of the manuals of the War Department, democracy is defined as involving an, "attitude toward property (that) is communistic—negating property right—results in demagogism, license, agitation, discontent, anarchy."

Military drill is an attempt to train students in the attitude of unquestioning obedience which war demands. It seeks to idealize war, and to inculcate among students the mental attitude which makes war possible.

PADDOCK DENIES BRIBERY CHARGES

"Athletic conditions almost caused the downfall of the University of Southern California," reveals Charles Paddock in an article on the "Trojans" in the January College Humor.

"Many a great athlete entered U. S. C. and was accused regularly of having been bribed. The college at that time however was so cramped financially that there was hardly any school in the country which had less proselyting. My own case might serve as an example. I had run just about as well before I reached the University as I ever did during my college days. Having been 'propositioned' by leading institutions throughout the country, it was naturally assumed that I undoubtedly must have had a lucrative offer from Southern California. As a matter of fact, I had grown up on the beach in the summer time as a friend of Warren Bovard, the son of the president and now comptroller of the university. We used to run races on the beach together in company with Fred Kelly, Olympic hurdling champion, and it was only natural that a warm personal regard should have existed. During my stay at college, 'Bovie,' as he was affectionately known, and I had many a laugh concerning the charges of professionalism with which rival schools accused the university and myself."

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE DENIES CREDITS TO FOUR

Monday, January 5, the executive committee of the University faculty deprived four freshmen of all credits earned during the fall quarter, 1930, for confessed violations of the honor system in connection with final examinations at the end of the quarter.

One of these men was allowed to register in the winter quarter, with the understanding that if he dropped or failed in either of these courses, he would automatically be suspended for the spring quarter. The fall quarter is to count against him in computing the number of courses required to be able to return to the University in the fall of 1931.

DURHAM CONCERN TO RETAIL MILK BY LOCAL STORE

Dairy to Celebrate Fourth Anniversary by Opening Branch Here.

The Durham Dairy Company will celebrate its fourth anniversary Saturday by opening a retail and wholesale milk store in Chapel Hill. The store will occupy the building formerly occupied by Gooch's restaurant. In the front of the store will be a counter and tables for the purpose of handling the trade of persons wishing to buy dairy products by retail. In the rear will be a store room and offices for handling the wholesale trade.

The Durham Dairy Company was organized in Durham four years ago. The officers are Durham men with C. B. Martin president in charge of plant production. Watts Hill, is vice-president and financial backer, he is in charge of building and finance. V. J. Ashboro is general manager of the company. Mr. Martin and Mr. Ashboro are graduates of Cornell University and are experts in dairy methods.

The company handles fifteen hundred gallons of milk per day, a large percentage of which is purchased from Chapel Hill and Pittsboro dairymen. All of the milk is pasteurized and bottled by the company. The dairy company is home-owned, and the local store is to be managed by J. C. Lane, a resident of Chapel Hill. Chapel Hill labor will be employed, and the local bank will handle their business. The managers intend to cooperate with local merchants and do not wish to drive anyone out of business.

The Durham Dairy Company distributes the milk and is able to handle large quantities in a scientific manner, and by doing business on a large scale can do so at a small cost. The local store will sell milk, lactic acid milk, buttermilk, chocolate milk, whipping cream, sour cream, coffee cream, butter, and cheese. The company has been wholesaling milk since the first of January and will begin the retail business Sunday. A great number of local concerns have already made contracts with this company. Milk will also be delivered in wholesale quantities to any party desiring to give a banquet or to use the milk for any similar purpose.

STATE REGISTRATION OF AUTOS FALLS OFF IN 1930

The total number of automobiles sold in Orange County for the year 1930, based upon the registration figures in Raleigh, was 279, of which 231 were Fords, as compared with a total of 433 in 1929 with 158 Fords. According to these figures, the sale of all cars decreased 35 per cent.

The state of North Carolina registered 34,098 less cars in 1930 than in the year 1929, the total figure being 412,957.

In the whole of the United States 2,700,000 cars were sold in 1930, according to the closest estimate obtainable, against 4,016,056 in 1929. The sale of Fords fell off 19 per cent while the decrease in the total sales, including the Ford, was 32 per cent.

and enthusiastic meeting was held in the old Nassau Hall on the evening of December 2, 1843, and one Dudley Malone, center of the Princeton team, made a stirring speech pointing out the dire possibilities of the situation.

"'When in the course of human events,' said Malone in part, 'it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bonds which have connected them with another and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of Nature and Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.'

"This stirring speech had the desired effect. An undergraduate uprising followed, known as the Princeton Rebellion, in which scores were killed or wounded, and at last the frightened authorities gave in and consented to cut the ropes at the bottom of the basket. Thus the game of basketball was saved. On the other hand, the nets were ruined."

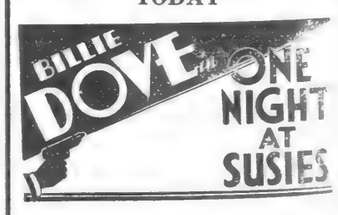
sought after in the business world. The ideals of sportsmanship, honor, loyalty, courtesy, initiative, unselfishness, and courage; what finer characteristics can a man carry with him from his college training when he enters the field of business.



"There is ample opportunity for every student in the University to participate in some branch of sport. The winter program includes varsity and freshman basketball, boxing, wrestling, and track; and varsity football training; also, a complete intramural program. Get in line. Form the habit of daily systematic exercise and accept your obligation as a student of the University of North Carolina to support an athletic program worthy of the leading educational institutions of the South."

The trouble with a burning issue is that it produces so much more heat than light.

Students Approve Retaining Present Attendance System

CAMPUS GLOOMY OVER PROSPECTS CONCERNING CUTS

Predictions Are Combinations of Seriousness and Humor If Ruling Is Effected.

OPINIONS DIFFER

Many Students Believe Curtailment of Present Privileges Is Backward Step.

In an unofficial survey of student opinion, made by a reporter of the Daily Tar Heel, it was found that there was an overwhelming sentiment against the proposed radical, and what has been termed reactionary step to make class attendance compulsory. The investigator found that among the upper classmen, juniors, sophomores and seniors, there was a decided conservative and mature point of view on the subject. The majority of those questioned, and they were many in number, asserted that they realized that there are many classes, such as those in mathematics and languages in which it is a necessity to attend regularly. This fact caused the conservative statements, which in the main merely expressed the desire for present rules and regulations to remain—a status quo is all the students appear to want.

Many were the doleful comments and prognostications uttered by the undergraduates. Scarcely one who was interviewed at length failed to predict that this projected withdrawal of students freedom was merely an initial step upon a downward path—a road leading far from what has been styled the center of liberalism in the South. On Friday, a professor in his class made the statement that the class seemed unusually restive and appeared to be paying no attention. To his own rhetorical question designed to find the cause of this lack of concentration, the same professor replied with the suggestion that the proposed revision of attendance rules was perhaps the source of ill-rest among his students. There was no laughter or unbelieving smirks to this assertion, but rather a deeper realization on part of the students that that which they had held to be the glory of the University was on the threshold of being no more. As expressed by one student, the campus regrets that the faculty seems not to realize that none but a handful wants license, and all desire freedom, in the dignified and mature manner that it has been heretofore exercised.

Many of the conversations between the interviewer and those being interviewed took humorous turns. One claimed that if the proposed change is adopted, the immediate result will be a ninety-nine and one-half per cent dropping off in registration for eight-thirty classes; another mournfully inquired what the rules and regulations contained in the University of South Caroline; a third, with a sob in his voice, claimed that he was certain that within a year, Oak Ridge Academy and the University of North Carolina would merge; a fourth maintained steadfastly that the next logical step in the faculty's program

HENDERSON WILL SPEAK TONIGHT ON INDIAN LEADER

The career and teachings of Mahatma Gandhi, the famous Indian leader, will be discussed by Dr. Archibald Henderson in a talk tonight at the Methodist church at seven-thirty o'clock.

Dr. Henderson will first outline Gandhi's career, tracing his life and telling how he became a religious teacher, then he will analyze and explain some of his religious teachings, comparing them with those of other religious leaders of this time.

The respects in which politics are affected by religion, in contradiction to the present idea that religion takes no part in politics, will then be discussed by the speaker. He will also show how religion can be taken into business and how Gandhi has practiced religion in his business and political life.

BAND PRACTICING NEW MUSIC FOR CONCERT TOURS

First Tour To Be To Southwestern Part of State Sometime Next Month.

The University band will resume work Monday night in preparation for the annual concert tours of the winter and spring quarters.

The blare of the last football march has faded, and the Sousa march folios are laid aside for the next few weeks. Instead of these, one may hear now issuing from Person hall the music of a strictly symphonic band. The fact that the band of U. N. C. does play music of such high type as the overtures, suites, and symphonies which make up this year's concert program has placed it at the head of the college bands of the South, and among the ten outstanding college bands of the country.

This year, the concert band will play a program of numbers which are new even to its members. It is the aim of the director, Mr. McCorkle, to raise the standard of the organization to an even higher level. With this in mind, new music has been added to the library, and much concentrated work will be required to have it ready for presentation.

A brief concert was given at the Carolina Theatre on December 14th through the courtesy of Mr. Smith, the manager. It is expected that there will be another such program during this term if arrangements can be made. In addition, tentative plans call for a trip to the southwestern part of the state about February 16. Several short trips are also planned.

Due to the illness of Mr. McCorkle the work has been postponed one week already, and it is very necessary that all members of the band be present promptly at seven o'clock Monday night.

GRAHAM IMPROVING

President Graham's condition has been rapidly improving within the last few days, and he is now beyond any possible danger. He is recuperating so fast that there is no doubt that in a few days he will again be about his duties.

COMMUNITY CLUB REVIEWS WORK OF PAST SEASON

Has Done Diversified Work In Fields of Citizenship And Art.

The Chapel Hill Community Club is continuing its work this week with two departmental meetings, citizenship and garden. Wednesday, January fourteenth at three-thirty o'clock the citizenship department will meet in the Episcopal parish house. Also, on Wednesday January fourteen at eight, Miss Josephine Pritchard will have charge of the program of the garden club meeting in Davie hall.

The officers who have had the direction of the Community Club for this year are: president, Mrs. R. M. Grumman; first vice-president, Mrs. J. N. Couch; second vice-president, Mrs. W. C. George; secretary, Mrs. W. A. Olsen; treasurer, Mrs. C. E. Preston; and publicity chairman, Mrs. Lee Brooks. There have been two general meetings of the Club for the conducting of business affairs. At the first of these on Friday, September twenty-six, there was a general discussion of the club's proposed program for the year. The chairmen of the different departments outlined their work for the year and these programs have been carried out in the weekly and monthly meetings of the various departments.

The citizenship department under the direction of Mrs. J. M. Valentine has had as its subject "Highway Beautification" and has discussed this subject in its various phases at the monthly meetings.

The sketch club had as its chairman, Mrs. W. E. Caldwell. The club met each Thursday and sketched various scenes on the University campus and in the community. The subject for study was "Modern American Paintings."

The health department was under the leadership of Mrs. George B. Logan. This department has been active in collecting and mending clothes for the poor, making surgical dressings, and in carrying on the tuberculosis seal sale.

Mrs. P. C. Farrar was in charge of the literature department. This group has had

HARVEY ELECTED HEAD OF ALUMNI GROUP FOR 1931

Kinston Man Was Honor Student During Undergraduate Days at Carolina.

C. Felix Harvey of Kinston, a graduate of the University in 1892, will preside over the meetings of the general alumni association during the year 1931. Mr. Harvey was declared president when his opponent for the office, Robert M. Hanes of Winston-Salem, announced his wish to withdraw in favor of Mr. Harvey.

At the alumni balloting, which ended December 31, Kemp P. Lewis of Durham, and William D. Carmichael, Jr. of New York City were elected as first and second vice-presidents, respectively. Frank S. Spruill, Jr. of Rocky Mount won over Claude W. Rankin in the race to decide which would represent the alumni on the University athletic council. All the officers were elected for terms of one year with the exception of Mr. Spruill who will serve three years.

At another meeting of the alumni early in December Charles W. Tillett, Jr., of Charlotte and A. L. Purrington, Jr., of Raleigh were elected for three year terms on the alumni board of directors. John W. Umstead was reelected to the same position.

The new officers have already begun their tenure of office. Mr. Harvey takes the reins of office from W. T. Shore of Charlotte, who served two years, having been reelected following his first year.

Mr. Harvey is a widely known alumnus and since 1915 has been a valued member of the University Board of Trustees. He won the place of president through his long and faithful service to this institution.

Harvey was born in Kinston in 1872 and twenty years later graduated from this University. As an undergraduate he won high scholastic honor, and was one of those alumni whose scholastic records was recognized by the Phi Beta Kappa last month.

After his graduation Mr. Harvey entered the farm supplies business and in 1895 became a partner of the L. Harvey & Son, of which he later became president.

Contemporary Immortals Accorded High Praise By Literary Critics

Contemporary Immortals, the most recent work of Dr. Archibald Henderson of the University, has drawn much praise from literary critics.

The New York Times has this to say about it: "Whether the ten men and the two women Dr. Henderson has chosen for immortality are rightly chosen is a matter for discussion, but that he has done justice to each there can be no question. It is difficult to imagine how twelve brief biographies could be better done. What he has written is both entertaining and informative. Into the few pages he has devoted to each, he has packed incisive character studies and always a fair and balanced outline of his character's life work."

Allen W. Porterfield, writing for the Outlook and Independent, contributes a lengthy article in which he compares Dr. Henderson with the noted Italian writer, Giovanni Papini.

"Signor Papini," says Porterfield, "candidly admits that he is interested only in saints and artists; Dr. Henderson confesses with equal candor that he is concerned only with great characters. The professor from North Carolina is less arrogant than Papini, and admits that it is hard for him to lift himself to the level of his heroes and then remain there without the aid of air-wings.

"To go from Papini to Henderson is like going from mysticism to matter, from Catholicism to clarity—which is not saying that Professor Henderson has written anything but a dignified, timely, and well-tempered book. To read it is to be made more intelligent, and greater praise than this cannot be given."

TRYOUTS FOR NEW PLAYMAKERS PLAY TOMORROW NIGHT

The Playmakers will hold the tryouts for their next public production tomorrow evening at seven-thirty p. m. These tryouts are open to all students, members of the faculty, and residents of the town interested in this kind of work.

The new play will be East Lynn, a melodramatic dramatization from one of the best selling novels of its day. It is a rather weepy and sentimental play with a dyed-in-the-wool villain, a hero and a heroine. The heroine becomes the governess of her own children.

The production will be in the modern manner; the scenery costuming and directing will be modern and not of the "Gay Ninety" type, although the story dealt with these times. It will be produced Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the fifth, sixth and seventh of February.

TAR HEEL STAFF TO HEAR CONNOR

Head of History Department Will Speak Tonight at 7:15 O'clock.

Contrary to the usual custom, the meeting of the Daily Tar Heel staff at seven-fifteen this evening will not be occupied with reviewing the errors made during the week, but instead Professor R. D. W. Connor, head of the history department, will speak to the group. The editors will meet for a short session at seven o'clock.

Starting the new quarter, the managing editor has decided to change the weekly Sunday meetings from a boring mechanical procedure to one which will be both interesting and instructive to the members of the staff. In order to further this plan, several prominent men on the campus who are well-known in journalistic circles will address the staff. Professor R. D. W. Connor, at one time editor of the Tar Heel, will be the first speaker this quarter. The second speaker will be Dr. Coffman, head of the English department.

ACTORS PRESENT THEIR OWN SHOW

Last night the Playmakers presented their annual "Twelfth Night" program before an audience of present and former Playmakers. The entire program was done very well and the evening was pronounced a success by all those attending.

After the program for the evening had been given, there was dancing on the stage. The music for the dancing was furnished by the Twelfth Night Orchestra.

Outstanding Students On Daily Tar Heel

According to the record of work handed in daily by each reporter on the Daily Tar Heel staff for the past quarter five have turned in over three hundred inches. These are in order of the amount of work handed in: Otto Steinreich, 568; Mary Buie, 431; L. L. Pegram, 358; Jack Riley, 340; and Peter Henderson, 314.

Three Hundred And Five Students Make Honor Roll

LARGEST NUMBER IN HISTORY GAIN THIS DISTINCTION

Increase of Almost Thirty Per Cent Over That of the Fall Quarter 1929.

26 MAKE ALL "A's"

Commerce School Shows Fifty Per Cent Increase Over Last Year's List.

The honor roll for the fall quarter of 1930 has broken all previous records, increasing by almost thirty percent over that of the fall quarter of 1929. A total of 305 students to make the honor roll is a record never before attained at this University. Last year there were only 270 to win this distinction during the fall quarter.

Of this number the school of liberal arts had 152 compared with 143 last year. The commerce school came second with a total of 51 in contrast to their very low number of 23 the year before. This school showed a remarkable increase of over fifty percent even though there is much agitation against optional attendance from that source.

The education school placed forty on this year to the thirty-nine the preceding year, with little increase. The applied science school dropped below their mark of thirty-five last year with only twenty-eight. The engineering school accounted for thirty-four of the placed in comparison to thirty a year ago.

Taking the class comparisons the seniors increased their number by fifty percent having a total of sixty-four. The juniors remained stationary with seventy-four. The sophomores showed a slight increase over sixty last year to bring the total to seventy-two. The freshmen with no increase maintained their previous number of ninety-five.

In addition to those who made the required average of a "B," there were twenty-six students who made all "A's". These students carried at least three courses and many of them were taking four and even five courses. The list is:

A. B. Andrews, Jr., T. H. Barker, A. Cope, J. B. Crutchfield, C. J. Dietz, J. C. Eagles, A. G. Engstrum, L. J. Felton, E. Kath. Fennell, M. P. Gilmour, D. A. Green, R. P. Howell, R. D. Humphreys, D. M. Lacy, J. H. Lassiter, Miss G. P. McCall, J. T. O'Niel, J. C. Sitterson, T. R. Taylor, H. C. Thomas, D. J. Thurston, Jr., Daniel Weirner, C. E. Wilder, F. D. Williams, K. P. Yarborough, J. R. Marvin.

The requirement for the honor roll is that the student complete at least three courses in the quarter and make an average of "B". The students to meet this requirement and thereby gain the honor roll distinction are:

A. E. Akers, R. M.. Albright, J. M. Alden, A. L. Alexander, G. L. Allen, F. J. Allred, F. I. Anderson, A. B. Andrews, Jr., John Andrews, Liller May Antley, Mrs. J. O. Bailey, R. E. Baldwin, T. H. Barker, Jr., J. H. Barnes, M. V. Barnhill, A. Barr, J. K. Barrow, Jr., D. P. Beam, W. M. Bell, A. Benjamin, Miss S. K. Berwanger, J. S. Bivens,

Our Brief for Optional Attendance

Final action on optional class attendance will be taken in the near future we are informed. Before the holidays the faculty made decisions which practically abolished optional attendance. As we understand it each department was to decide for itself its attitude towards optional attendance. Instructors in the departments would be governed by the action of the department. The action of the faculty was nullified and a return made to the system employed last quarter. Now final action is expected.

General misunderstanding has existed since the holidays as to what attendance is required. Discussions have been held on classes both before and since the holidays and a number of conferences between members of the faculty and students have been held recently. Altogether both faculty members and students are beginning to understand the opposing points of view.

Recently the administrative council of the student body adopted a plan to confer with the faculty on the subject. This was a wise move and undoubtedly this committee will present the consensus of student opinion. Final ation is expected within the next few days.

Frankly, the Daily Tar Heel has always been and probably will always be opposed to compulsory attendance. As long as the Daily remains under present editorial control its policy will be to agitate for optional attendance, regardless of the action of the faculty.

Some of our arguments will not bear investigations. They are based on personal reactions to the idea of being forced to attend classes. Arguments based on personal reactions cannot be made to apply to the student body as a whole. But we wonder if the action of the faculty isn't based more on individual professors' and instructors' experiences with empty seats and less on their desire to improve the general scholastic standing of the University.

The theory of liberalness has been discussed. It would be useless to say that abolition of optional attendance would be retrogressive. Those who think so will continue to do so. Those who hold differing opinions cannot be convinced. Similarly it would be useless to describe the move as a step backwards, for such descriptions are theoretical as are most the arguments for and against both optional and compulsory attendance.

But practical or theoretical compulsory attendance is a nuisance. It is unnecessary. The time and red tape involved in fulfilling the requirements of a compulsory attendance system do not justify such a system. The honor roll for the past quarter indicates that the students are progressing nicely under the present system. If we are seeking mechanical perfection perhaps it would be wise to vary our system until we discovered one which would make us mechanically perfect. But if we are educating let's eliminate some of the red tape and get down to it.

And Now The History Department

The Younger Generation is not as infantile as college pictures and magazines would have you believe. They have a hard, brittle outlook on life and society in general. They are not mere youngsters to be imposed upon. And furthermore the best way to handle them in colleges and educational institutions is to place with them the responsibility for the successful culmination of educational policies as they relate to students—examinations, etc.

Thus it is that the Honor System so admirably fits the Younger Generation in theory, and in actual practice where faculties wholeheartedly support it. The University of North Carolina—both faculty and students—is pledged to uphold the ideal of the Honor System. Any organized disregard for that ideal on the part of either party is a break in good faith. The Tar Heel is forced to lament the decision of the history department of the University which would refuse to take the word of pledge of students that they had actually read outside reading, and which demands of them that they must outline each page of reading in detail to prove that they are gentlemen and men of honor, or rather, and actually, as they are viewed—dishonest children incapable of being trusted.

—JACK D.

We Must Have Money

Quite naturally, Governor Gardner's proposal to further cut the salaries of all state employees is meeting with considerable discontent throughout North Carolina. High school and college teachers will probably be hit harder by the cut than any other group. Perhaps, the cut in salaries is essential. Yet the fact is that the harmful results which this and other educational institutions will suffer are greatly to be lamented.

The tax payers of the state are justified in complaining of high taxes, for real estate has fallen to the level of worthlessness. The University of North Carolina, however, must have money from some source if it is to maintain its present rating among the universities of the nation—if it is to render the state of North Carolina the service that it has done for a long number of years. An educational institution of collegiate rank is not to be compared with a house, which can be neglected when half completed, the building process being resumed later without any considerable loss. This university cannot stand still, there must be advancement in one direction or the other. Damage incurred from one year's operation on too lean an allowance will require perhaps ten years of constructive labor to regain lost ground.

This University must compete with the largest and best of the United States for its professors. Salaries paid the present faculty are already ridiculously low. The result of a cut in existing salaries is too obvious to be mentioned.

Great credit is due Governor Gardner for his untiring efforts in attempting to bring relief to the people of the state. There can be no doubt that he has the interests of the University at heart. His failure, however, to recommend securing increased revenue from such institutions as the Duke Power interests to bridge the present very grievous emergency is worthy of note.

The fact is that the University of North Carolina cannot operate without funds. The people of the state are not fully aware of this truth. High school teachers throughout the state are making mediocre salaries at present. Lowering of their salaries cannot help but result in a corresponding decrease in the number of competent persons who will enter the teaching profession in the future. Money must be had, or the aggregate results will outlive the narrow ken of the present.—J. C. W.

The Russian Trial

Professor Calvin Hoover of Duke University, in his address on Russia in Gerrard hall Wednesday night, made a statement concerning the recent sensational Soviet trial of eight professors and engineers accused of plotting against the Russian government that is the echo of hundreds of similar editorial comments in American newspapers during the past few months.

Mr. Hoover asserted that the trial was a dramatic sham; a theatrical spectacle for the Russian people. The Communist party needed some alibi for the recent food shortage that has beset the nation, and so it used these men as scapegoats, and accused them of bringing about this crisis by the use of sabotage.

General opinion in this and other countries regarding this trial has been of the same nature. The Russian people are fond of the dramatic, so they were given this play. The trial was planned in advance, and all the roles were carefully rehearsed. The eight "actors" in the "play" were cautiously coached for their parts. And the play went over with a flare. The eight men were merely unfortunate puppets controlled by strings held in the hands of the Communist party.

But, somehow, we do not think this was the case. The accused men were men of the highest type of character and intelligence. We do not think that any amount of money or punishment could have made them sell their souls and lower themselves so deeply into the mud. We think they were too fine to truckle to the government and utter the false testimony they have been accused of doing.

What could they have gained by doing this? At the least, exile in the far North or many, long years in a Russian prison, and the hatred of millions of their countrymen for the remainder of their lives. Would it have been worth is?

We do not think so.—P. L.

OPEN FORUM

FROM THE FACULTY

To the Editor of the Tar Heel:

In the fall of 1928, 124 freshmen entered one of the schools of this University. At midterm of that quarter eighty-eight of these men had failed to do passing work on one or more courses. At the end of the quarter forty-four of the 124 (less than thirty-six per cent) passed all of their work. Twenty-eight men (twenty-two and five-tenths pen cent) passed two courses and the same number passed one course. The other twenty-four (nearly twenty per cent of the class) did not pass any work at all. It is true that in this list of twenty-four men there were several who had withdrawn, some who because of illness could not take the examinations, and some who absented themselves from the examinations. The stark fact remains, however, that only a little more than fifty-eight per ent of the work for which this freshman class registered in September was passed at the end of the quarter, and that a very high percentage of the work that was passed received the grade of D, the lowest passing grade.

The resume that the men assigned for their failures included the following: loafing, twenty-one; poor preparation, fourteen; a lapse of one or more years between high school and college, thirteen; time spent in football practice, seven; time spent in self-help work, six; miscellaneous reasons twenty-seven. Among the latter group many said that they had missed quizzes by being absent from school at week-ends.

Does this record bear out the contention that just because a man has been accepted at college he is, therefore, able to direct his own affairs? To me it indicates that he needs guidance of a very positive nature, and I presume to suggest a program that I believe would help materially. I give below the plan that I would like to see tried out.

The Plan

1. Set aside a group of buildings on the campus for freshmen and provide that all freshmen should observe study hours, say from seven-thirty to eleven o'clock each evening.

2. Provide study halls for all who were deficient in any work and place in charge of these halls men both able and willing to help the freshmen with their problems.

3. Install a system of Saturday morning quizzes for all freshmen and excuse no freshman from these quizzes except for the most urgent reason.

4. At the end of the fall quarter, grant to all freshmen who had made the average of C on their three courses the right to move out of the supervised buildings.

5. Make class attendance optional thereafter so long as a student should maintain an average of C.

6. When a student should fall below the C average, remand him to the supervised program, no matter to what class he might belong.

Such a program would seem to meet the demands of both students and faculty. All the faculty is contending for is that students shall do the work for which they are sent to college. all the students should demand is a reasonable amount of freedom, and the above plan would seem to give freedom to all able to use it in a right manner.

Suppose the students give their reactions to the above suggestions.

several books reviewed and has discussed current magazines in its meetings. One of the programs was on Vergil with an address by Professor George Howe of the University faculty.

Mrs. Ralph Trimble has had charge of the home department which has studied primarily subjects of interior decoration.

The music department, led by Mrs. F. H. Edmister, has presented programs of Scandinavian and American music. Special attention was paid in the first program to the selections of Grieg and in the latter to McDowell.

The garden club was organized late, but under the leadership of Mrs. L. A. Koonts, the club has met several times for concentrated study on specially arranged programs.

Tar Heel Cagers Will Meet South Carolina And Furman This Week

WILL HAVE MET SEVEN TEAMS IN NINE DAY PERIOD

End of Strenuous Early Season Schedule To Be Followed by Week of Rest.

The Tar Heel basketball team will continue its strenuous early season schedule the first of this week by meeting the Furman University and University of South Carolina teams at the Tin Can on Monday and Tuesday nights. This brace of games will make it seven contests within a period of nine days for the White Phantoms.

Little is known of the individual strength of the Furman team, but the Purple Hurricane had a very powerful aggregation last season, and only a few of their star cagers were lost by graduation. The Tar Heels, weary from the long series of games of the past week, probably will have to extend themselves considerably to down the South Carolina Baptists.

South Carolina comes to the "Hill" Tuesday with a team that is said to be far above the average, and a stiff battle is expected in this game.

After meeting the Furman and South Carolina teams, the basketball team will get a much needed rest until Wednesday, January 20, when the Wake Forest Demon Deacons come here.

Fine Group of Guards

The games of the past week revealed that the Tar Heels have as fine a group of guards as can be found in the Southern Conference. With Captain Artie Marpet, Tom Alexander, Page Choate, and Paul Edwards, Coach Ashmore finds it difficult to select the best combination. Captain Marpet is easily the outstanding performer of the group, but there is little to choose between the other three. Alexander plays a steady game throughout, being adept at guarding his man and at times coming up to shoot. During the final minutes of the Randolph-Macon game Alexander came up for two baskets in less than two minutes.

Page Choate is one of the most clever passers seen on the Tin Can court in several years, and Paul Edwards, shifted to guard after playing at center last season, has a good eye for the basket and is steady in his floor work. Sandy Dameron, who for two years has been a dependable reserve center, but had not shown the alertness and speed necessary for a regular berth, has this season been playing stellar ball. His passing has been excellent, feeding the ball from the center position in true veteran style. His eye for the basket is very good as is evidenced by the fact that he is high scorer on the team at the present time. Dameron was high scorer in the Durham Y, and Randolph-Macon games last week, and tied for scoring honors in the Guilford fray Thursday night.

Forwards Improving

Jimmy Moore, reserve quarterback on the football team and last year reserve forward on the cage team, has during the past week proven his ability on the court. His play against the Randolph-Macon five Friday night was outstanding, and it is expected that with steady improvement he will make Coach Ashmore a very dependable forward.

Wilmer Hines, tennis star and 1930 freshman basketball player, is showing up well at forward as is Tommy Cleland, and with the experience that comes as the season progresses, it is likely that Coach Ashmore will have a pair of able forwards to round out a smooth working basketball team.

The glaring defect of the Tar Heels' play during the past week was their inability at sinking foul throws. It is expected that they will spend considerable time on this phase of the game during their week of rest which begins after Tuesday night, however, and that a great degree of accuracy will be shown in the coming Wake Forest game.

COURT DISPOSES OF THREE CASES

At the Recorder's Court yesterday three cases were disposed of. Will Britton was charged with public drunkenness, and was suspended upon payment of the costs of court. James Foushee was convicted of assault with a deadly weapon. He was sentenced to serve eight months on the county road. Everett Hardee was charged with public drunkenness, and sentenced to thirty days on the county road. But his sentence was suspended on payment of the costs of court and for behaving as a law-abiding citizen for six months. After taking up cases that were continued from last week, the court was dismissed.

No Faculty Meeting

Rumor that found its way to the office of the Daily Tar Heel of a meeting of the University faculty last Friday has been unfounded, and the faculty failed to meet Friday. There will be a meeting of the faculty with the trustees to make arrangements on degrees in the various schools, but this date has not yet been set.

BOXERS ROUNDING INTO SHAPE FOR OPENING FIGHTS

South Carolina Gamecocks Come Here Friday Night to Start 1931 Season.

In preparation for the coming meet with South Carolina, the boxing team put on extra speed and showed its stuff in Friday's workout in the Tin Can. The meet with the Gamecocks is only six days off, and there is a great deal of work to be done. While the squad is in tip-top shape again after their ten day layoff over the Christmas holidays, Coach Crayton Rowe must put on the finishing touches, and he will take care of that this week. There will be no heavy workouts as in the past few days but this week's practice will consist chiefly of last minute advice by Coaches Rowe and Allen.

The loss of Platt Landis, heavy weight, was somewhat offset by the addition of Cheatham Coley, bantamweight. Seniors who have followed boxing at the University will recognize Coley as the star 115 pounder of three years ago. Cheatham has been out of school for the last three years, but is still able to participate in intercollegiate boxing. However, it is very doubtful whether Coley will be able to get in shape by Friday. Although Coley is a veteran, he is not assured of a place by any means, since there are two first class 115 pounders in "Speedy" Boring and Biggs.

In his sparring bout with Tom Parsons, light heavy, Obie Davis, middleweight, put on a great exhibition of boxing skill. The Texan has always had a good left jab, but he has perfected it so that it now forms his chief weapon on offense. Obie lacks a punch, but with a jab that cuts his opponent to pieces, that is not necessary.

Martin Levinson, featherweight, also opened the eyes of the large group of students gathered to watch the practice. Recently there have been so many fans gathered at the ringside, that it might be a good idea to put up a stand on the left side of the ring. Marty has been going great lately and has apparently cinched the job in the 125 pound division. Levinson has plenty of experience behind him, an invaluable advantage in intercollegiate boxing. In addition, he can hit with the best of them, and his defense is above par.

Up to now only slight news has been available concerning the South Carolina team, but word has just come from Columbia, S. C., that the Gamecocks have one of the best teams that they have had since boxing was inaugurated at their school, and first class bouts will be in store for those who will witness the fight next Friday night in the Tin Can.

Three Fires This Week

The fire department had three calls in the last two days. Two were small blazes caused by kindling catching fire. The third was a small explosion of an oil stove in the Klutz building. The flame was quickly extinguished, and the damage was small.

Tar Heel Wrestlers Defeat Princeton Tigers By 16-14

Princeton, New Jersey, January 10.—The University of North Carolina wrestlers defeated Princeton University here this afternoon by a 16-14 score. The Tigers were expected to win the bouts, having one of the strongest teams in the east, but the North Carolina grapplers succeeded in ekeing out a victory by the very close two-point margin.

Captain Frank Stallings and Conklin of Carolina won their bouts on decisions, while Harry Tsumas and Mayne Albright, also Tar Heels, defeated their opponents by falls.

RANDOLPH-MACON QUINT LOSES TO CAROLINA, 34-13

Sandy Dameron High Scorer for Second Time of Week; Moore Plays Nice Game.

The Daily Tar Heel went to press Friday night before the basketball game between Carolina and Randolph-Macon was over, and for this reason it was impossible to run an account of the contest in yesterday morning's edition of the paper.

The Carolina quintet aided by two scoring spurts which came near the end of the first and second periods ran up a 34-13 score over the Randolph-Macon cagers. The game was marked by the roughness, and the strong defenses of both teams. It was only during the two spurts of scoring that the Tar Heels were successful in penetrating the strong defense of the Ashland, Virginia, team.

Sandy Dameron, 77-inch center on the Tar Heel quint, for the second time of the week was high scorer for the evening with a total of three field goals and one foul throw. Paul Edwards, Carolina guard, and Woodson, Randolph-Macon center, tied for second place with six points each.

Jimmy Moore, forward, played a nice game for the Tar Heels Friday night, scoring four points during the time that he was in the game, and covering his man well on defense.

Grid Practice Will Commence On January 19

Nonplussed by cold winter winds and icy turf, King Football will send his minions to the fore January nineteenth as the annual Tar Heel winter grid campaign gets under way. Kenon stadium will re-echo with the staccato barks of Georgia quarterbacks as the red and black stem the Crimson Tide, the thud of Florida cleats as the Gators rough the engineers from Atlanta, and the din as Vanderbilt tramples Tennessee.

Athletic officials stated yesterday that six teams would probably be formed from the men, both freshmen and upperclassmen, that report for the winter grid season. As last year, two games will be played weekly, on Wednesday and Saturday in Kenan stadium. Each team will be given a name and the plays of

FRESHMEN LOSE FIRST GAME OF SEASON BY 39-30

Yearling Basketball Team Meets Randolph-Macon After Only Two Days Practice.

From about one hundred and fifty aspirants for the Freshman basketball team, Coach Bo Shepard picked five men and sent them out on the floor Friday night against the Randolph-Macon first year men. The team that played for Carolina had worked together for only two practices. Taking this into consideration, the showing they made against a team that had played together for a good while, was remarkable. The score, at the end of a very exciting and fast game, was 39-30 in favor of Randolph-Macon.

Although the game put on by the Tar Babies was creditable, the fact that they had not played together, stuck out like a sore thumb. The passing was ragged, the guards and the forwards were slow in handling the tip-off. The guarding was, however, of a creditable nature. All these discrepancies should be ironed out with a few more practices and there is a possibility that a smooth working team will be rounded together.

There was one player, Weathers, who dominated the whole play of the Tar Babies. He aa Carolina opponent and a regular schedule will be formulated.

To consumate the season, the annual Monogram-Rookie game will be played in which a team composed largely of freshmen and those who have not played varsity football, will meet the letter men of this year in their annual classic.

Uniforms are to be issued January fifteenth.

Within the last few years, winter football has been a rising winter sport in the University. The games are well attended by the student body and keen competition ensues between the teams. The usual custom of awarding medals to the twenty best players will be adhered to this year.

Y. M. C. A. Meeting

The freshman, sophomore, and junior-senior "Y" cabinets will meet Monday night at the usual time. This is the first meeting of the cabinets for the winter quarter and full attendance is looked for.

Master of Arts Candidates

All those who hope to obtain the degree of Master of Arts in June, 1931, should secure from the Graduate office, and fill out, application blanks for admission to candidacy.

King's Daughters to Meet

The King's Daughters will meet at three-thirty next Tuesday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. R. B. Lawson.

"Mahatma Gandhi"

Tonight at the Methodist church Dr. Henderson of the University faculty will deliver his well known lecture on "Gandhi, the Indian Mystic and Leader." Dr. Henderson considers Gandhi the greatest living man. This will be the first of lay addresses from this pulpit during the winter quarter.

Band Rehearsal

It is very important that all members of the band be present for the regular rehearsal Monday night as plans for the winter concert trip will be made.

North Carolina Club

The North Carolina Club will continue its bi-weekly meetings tomorrow night at seven o'clock. Dr. C. C. Taylor, dean of the graduate school of North Carolina State College, will talk on "Rural Standards of Living in North Carolina." The meeting will be in the library room of the rural social-economics department in the library building.

Tar Heel Meeting

Dr. R. D. W. Connor will address the Daily Tar Heel staff at their regular weekly meeting in the Alumni building at seven-fifteen tonight. Before this meeting the editorial board and the editors will meet at seven sharp.

Buccaneer Staff Meeting

Kermit Wheary, editor of the Buccaneer announces a meeting of the staff this afternoon at three o'clock.

AT THE CAROLINA

The program this week begins with the showing Monday of Marie Dressler and Polly Moran in their latest co-starring comedy, "Reducing." The picture might well be termed "Fun In A Beauty Parlor," since the best mirth provoking scenes are laid in a beauty parlor where the two principal stars are attempting to be made comely once more. The cast has in addition: Anita Page, Sally Eilers, Lucien Littlefield, and William Collier.

Tuesday's feature is another picture dealing with the subject of the younger generation and starring Loretta Young. The latest film of the beautiful and prolific Miss Young is "The Truth About Youth."

Joe E. Brown, famous stage comedian who has recently been seen on the screen in a number of features, comes again to the theatre Wednesday in his latest production, "Going Wild." In this picture the star is seen as a self-admitted aviator who has really never been in an airplane in his life.

Students Desire To Retain Present Class Attendance System

would be the introduction of a two-year required course in a close study of the Old Testament; a fifth was amazed to see the day when the main difference between Duke and the University was one of architecture; a sixth inquired whether or not regular Saturday, and half day Sunday classes were part of the curriculum as yet, and thus it went, with practically every conversation whether serious or not, definitely gloomy and pessimistic.

It requires no trained expert and experienced social worker or investigator to see that with the incorporation of the compulsory attendance clause into the general rules of the University, there would go with it a certain atmosphere, a certain attitude among the students that has been struggling for its retention this past week. As was also said on the campus "the University seems to be losing those characteristics that make it such, and seems to be fast developing into a Chapel Hill College for Boys and Girls. Let us only hope that the faculty's insistent march toward Control and Supervision will stop short of creating a committee to see that students are all in bed by ten-thirty and that all lights are out."

The student body is most decidedly behind the resolution of the administrative council.

lone, played what could be called a fine game of basketball. Scoring seven points and guarding his man perfectly, he stood out head and shoulders above the other members of his team. However, there are others on the squad and some that have been overlooked so far that show a great deal of promise.

Coach Enright has returned and will take over the coaching duties on Monday. He will drill the men hard in an effort to get the team into shape for the next game which is scheduled for January 17, with the Walkertown High School team. Coach Enright was at the game last night and seemed pleased with the showing of the team, admitting that practice was all that was needed to produce a high-scoring outfit. Besides Weathers, he will have Jones and McCachren, two stellar guards, and Minor and McGlenn, both rangy aspirants for the center position. For the guard positions, besides Jones and McCachren, there are Poe, Harris and Webster.

So far nine games have been listed for the Tar Babies while several more games with High Schools and also a trip through Virginia is being planned. Below is a list of the games which have been listed to date:

MOVIE LION PAYS VISIT TO VILLAGE

Leo Gives Tar Heel Reporter Private Interview on His Travels.

Yesterday Chapel Hill was honored by the visit of a very distinguished personage. Leo, the famous lion of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Motion Picture company, was the guest of Mr. Smith, the manager of the Carolina Theatre. Leo has visited nearly every country in the world and has been around the world on his tours. He has appeared before kings and presidents of many countries. The Emperor of Japan, the king of England, the President of France, mayors of many cities, governors of states, and other prominent figures of today have been permitted to see Leo perform.

Leo is very old but has not lost any of the ferocity which he enjoyed in his youth. He has had two trainers on his present tour. The first trainer is in the hospital recuperating from injuries received when Leo decided to dismiss him. Leo can perform all the tricks of a circus lion. He is usually very docile but occasionally becomes aroused and does something desperate. Last week in Charlotte he tried to break out of his cage but did not succeed.

Leo likes raw beef, especially

J. BEARD LAUDED IN DRUG JOURNAL

Leading Article in "Pharmaceutical Era" Devoted To University Professor.

The current issue of The Pharmaceutical Era, a monthly national drug journal, carries as a leading article a biographical sketch of Professor J. G. Beard, "a pharmaceutical educator who has been a member of the teaching staff of the School of Pharmacy of the University of North Carolina since his graduation in 1909." The article pays especial tribute to the services he has rendered to his profession. "The business of teaching has dominated Professor Beard's activities, . . . but notwithstaiding his devotion to his calling he has found time to give his energy and abilities to the promotion of numerous activities for the advancement of professional pharmacy." In conclusion the article calls attention to his contributions to pharmaceutical and other journals, and to the offices he has held in state and national pharmaceutical bodies.

ENTERTAINMENT TICKETS TO BE ON SALE TODAY

As has been announced in the Daily Tar Heel, tickets to the entertainment course were to have been placed on sale Monday, but were not ready then, and it is expected that they will be placed on sale today or tomorrow.

T. C. Worth will have charge of the ticket sale, and will announce where the tickets may be obtained. Liberal arts students and students in the school of education who have paid their fees may obtain their tickets at the office of their respective deans. The first performance on February 6, will be The Spanish Dancer with Caroyla Goya. The season tickets will be good for the six performances this winter.

Infirmary Reports Many on Sick List

At three o'clock yesterday afternoon the University infirmary appeared to be facing a crisis More than 120 students were on the sick list, with approximately fifty in the infirmary. Extra cots were being supplied as the demand warranted it, and many boys were waiting in the offices to be examined.

Despite the condition of many patients Dr. Abernathy assured a Daily Tar Heel reporter that the majority of the cases were merely heavy colds, and that there was no cause for any very extensive alarm on the part of the parents of the boys, or anyone else.

During the day comparisons were being constantly made to the epidemic in 1928, when due to the great number of influenza cases school work had to be suspended. There seems to be slight likelihood that such an occurrence will take place at this time.

GANDHI ANALOGY TO CHRIST, SAYS DR. A. HENDERSON

Head of Mathematics Lectures On Indian Leader at Methodist Church.

"Mahatma Gandhi" was the subject of the lecture delivered by Professor Archibald Henderson, head of the department of mathematics and celebrated author, from the pulpit of the Methodist Episcopal church Sunday evening.

Dr. Henderson described the Hindu patriot as "the most Christ-like man alive, whose continued imprisonment by the British government constitutes an ironical comment on present-day civilization. "No mere man," the speaker further declared, "has ever exerted so powerful an influence over so large a number of people."

Outlining the career of Gandhi from his graduation from a British University and a subsequent lucrative law practice, Professor Henderson showed the steps by which the Hindu leader has elaborated one of the tenets of his native religion into the political theory and practice which has made so much trouble for the British imperial government. He stressed the catholicity of Gandhi's religious views, explaining that the "Mahatma" holds that God and good are in all religions, and that the truth is to be found in the Koran, the Zend-Avestas, and the Bible, as well as in his own Vedas.

"Gandhi," according to the speaker, "has had much relation to occidental writers: to Thoreau (particularly, 'On the Duty of Civil Disobedience'), to Ruskin ('Unto this Last'), and to Tolstoy, with whom, in 1909-10, Gandhi carried on an extensive correspondence."

"The law," declares Gandhi, "is a wall of stone and mortar, but my meditations follow the jailer out as he locks me in." And again, "Force and love are incompatible. Only by love can we conquer the wrath and error of British officialdom."

Dr. Henderson described the present "non-violence" campaign as an attempt to restore the original pastoral simplicity of the Hindus, to rid the country of the evils of industrialism, and to raise the spiritual plane of the Hindu people. The speaker characterized the Hindu as an "impressive analogy to Christ."

Flexner's Book Gives Criticism On Degeneracy Of Universities

That universities in the United States are in danger of degenerating into mere culture service stations, following every ripple and whim of popular thought is one of the criticisms made by Dr. Abraham Flexner in his new book entitled Universities: American, English, German.

This book is felt to be so important for American education that a prominent philanthropist who wishes to remain anonymous has presented copies of this book to various college and university libraries in the country according to a letter received by the University Library from G. F. J. Cumberlege, vice-president of the Oxford University Press, which publishes the book. The University Library is one of those chosen to receive copies of Dr. Flexner's book. They will be available for circulation within a few days.

In a review of the volume, American universities are said to "mirror to perfection the national ideals; they apply with brilliant success the national methods. They are masterpieces of organization, mass production, quick sales and substantial returns. They are advertised as efficiently as cigarettes or chewing gum. They are as typical as Woolworth, Sears Roebuck, Henry Ford or Wrigley Brothers. There is such a thing as a homogeneous American culture: the same imprint is stamped on our education, our Christianity, our amusements, our periodicals, our business life. Mr. Flexner's protest may be interpreted as the dying wail of an effete European ideal, ill-advisedly transported to our more rugged shores; or as an arraignment of material success as the sole basis of a civilization. Whichever view you adopt, the book far transcends the bounds of mere pedagogy. It has already created a flutter among professors: it should cause heart-searchings among all leaders of thought. If Mr. Flexner be right, if it is not good for American universities to go the American way, then the American way cannot be wholly good. —The book is a searching discussion of Americanism; the other parts, although not negligible, seem a little out of place. The treatment of the English and German systems is not merely far briefer: it is totally different in spirit. In his last two chapters, Mr. Flexner is an investigator: friendly, judicial, informative. In the main part of the work, he is a fierce satirist. Professionals will read his studies on foreign universities with cool approval. But the central chapter will cause no little gnashing of teeth."

Dr. Flexner has been a student of American education for many years, having been an educational expert and secretary of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching and the director of the division of studies and medical education for the General Education Board until 1928. This book is an expansion of three lectures on universities given at Oxford on the invitation of the Rhodes Trust in 1928.

CANDIDATES FOR GLEE CLUB URGED TO TRY OUT SOON

Candidates for the glee club and Maennerchoer concert have one more week to try out, according to word from Dr. Harold S. Dyer of the music department. These two organizations are affiliated and a person may try out for both at the same time. The Maennerchoer concert will be given on February 1. Tryouts are held on Mondays, Tuesdays, and Thursdays at 5:00 o'clock in the music building. There is no formality at the tryouts, as the voices are merely classified according to range and type. Dr. Dyer is of the opinion that there are a great many persons on the campus with good voices who have not come out, thinking that a rigid examination is necessary and the ability to read music at sight. Neither is the case. The largest number to ever tryout have come out this year, and represent every department in the University. There are no restrictions at the rehearsals, other than regular attendance.

Dashiell Returns

Dr. J. F. Dashiell, head of the University psychology department, has returned from a ten-day trip in the middle west during the holidays. As a member of the council of directors and as chairman of a committee on the introductory course, he attended all the meetings of the American Psychological Association in Iowa City. Afterwards, he visited the psychological laboratory at Grinnel College as the guest of his uncle, President Main, and of Earl D. Strong, a visiting professor at Carolina last year.

FRESHMEN HEAR CAMPUS LEADERS AT CHAPEL MEET

At chapel yesterday morning the freshmen heard Red Greene, president of the student body, and Pat Patterson, president of the senior class on the class nominations which are to take place at seven-thirty this evening in Gerrard hall.

Patterson admonished the freshmen to elect men who are willing to work, who have initiative, and who are democratic. He also asked that all freshmen appear at the hall to vote; Patterson said that it was the duty of the members of the class to vote, and to see that competent men are elected.

Grail To Give First Dance of Quarter

The first Grail dance of the winter quarter will be given Saturday night, January 17, from nine to twelve o'clock in Bynum gymnasium. Music will be furnished by Ty Sawyer and his Carolina Buccaneers. The regular rules of the German Club will be observed.

The Grail gives nine dances during the year, three each quarter. During the fall quarter the dances were given after the big football games of the season. The first was given September 27 after the Wake Forest-Carolina game, the second October 11 after the Carolina-Maryland game, and the last was given December 6 after the Duke-Carolina game.

The second dance for the winter quarter will be on February 7, and the third on February 28.

The officers of the Grail who have charge of the dances are John Slater, Haywood Weeks, and Mayne Albright.

North Carolina Club Hears Dean Taylor

Dr. Carl C. Taylor, dean of the graduate school of North Carolina State College, addressed the North Carolina Club last night at 7:30 o'clock on the subject, "Rural Standards of Living in North Carolina." The meeting was in the rural social-economics department room of the library building.

Dr. Taylor is the author of a text book on rural sociology. He has directed many researches into rural conditions in North Carolina and in other states.

The talk last night was another in the series of bi-weekly talks being made before the North Carolina Club in connection with its program on agriculture which they are conducting in coordination with the North Carolina conference for social service. Men connected with various agricultural organizations write papers on assigned subjects and present them to the club.

NEWSPAPER MEN TO CONVENE HERE TOMORROW NIGHT

Prominent Journalists To Discuss Current Problems at Seventh Annual Institute.

Editors, publishers, and other members of North Carolina's Fourth Estate will hear many prominent men in the newspaper world when they meet here for the seventh annual Newspaper Institute which opens Wednesday night at eight o'clock. The men to speak at the Institute are men who have distinguished themselves in journalism both in and outside the state.

At the head of the out-of-state list is Mark Sullivan, celebrated Washington correspondent and editor of "Our Times." In addition to him are Fred Fuller Shedd, editor of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin and president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors; W. W. Bell, editor of the Charleston News and Courrier; John N. Wheeler, president of the Bell Syndicate; Mark Etheridge, managing editor of the Macon Telegraph-News; and W. C. Wolfe, of Wolfe and Company, accounting experts of Philadelphia.

The Institute has selected more than a dozen men from within the state to lead the discussions and deliver addresses. Prominent among these are J. W. Noell, president of the North Carolina Press Association; Governor O. Max Gardner, and President Frank P. Graham. They are scheduled to speak at the opening session Wednesday night.

Others who will speak during the meetings are J. T. Fain, Henderson Times-News; R. E. Price, Rutherford County News; Don Elias, Asheville Citizen-Times; Roland Beasley, Monroe Journal; Albert Coates, professor of criminal law in the University Law School; Lee B. Weathers, Cleveland Star; J. C. Andrews, Ayden Dispatch; John A. Park, Raleigh Times; Frank Daniels, News and Observer Ben Sronce, North-Wilkesboro Patriot; J. A. Parham, Charlotte Observer; and J. L. Horne, Jr., Rocky Mount Telegram.

Subjects for addresses will follow the trend of the day by hinging on the problem of "Facing Present Conditions." The sessions begin Wednesday night

FACULTY GROUP HEARS STUDENTS

Student Leaders Present Optional Attendance Idea to Undergraduate Faculty Committee.

The special committee appointed by the Central Administrative Council to represent the views of the student body in regard to the agitation for a reconsideration of optional class attendance were received by the faculty committee composed of Dean W. W. Pierson, chairman, and Dean D. D. Carroll, Professor G. R. Coffman, Professor W. C. Coker, and Professor W. M. Dey, associate members.

A two hour discussion of the faculty and student view-points on the matter was engaged in.

The student committee headed by President Red Greene, Joe Eagles, Jack Dungan, Mayne Albright, and Ed Hamer have asked permission to submit affidavits from reputable university presidents, fifty-three letters having been addressed to all important educational institutions in the United States in an attempt to elicit information as to how similar plans have worked in these institutions. A survey aimed at a comparison between grades before, during, and after complete optional attendance is also under way. This type of expert opinion is to be presented the faculty before their meeting in which the matter is to be settled.

DIRECTORS TELL OF PLAYMAKING

"Drama in the Making," Keynote Of Dramatic Directors' Meeting.

The keynote of the annual Dramatic Directors meeting held Saturday, January 10th, was "Drama in the Making." Let due honor be given to those whose enthusiasm and sincerity in their dramatic work overcome all obstacles. Reference is being made particularly to Miss Pearl Setzer, of Lenoir-Rhyne College, who with eight students, arose at four o'clock on Saturday morning, and drove nearly two hundred miles to attend a director's meeting and to present at that meeting a "Model Rehearsal;" and to "Bobbie" Wunsch from Asheville, who has been teaching for months without pay, who borrowed from three different friends, money to bring him to the meeting, where he made a talk on "Playwriting in the High School."

In the absence of President Robinson of Goldsboro, Mr. W. R. Wunsch, of Asheville, presided. Professor Koch, director of the Playmakers, gave the opening address of welcome, and issued an invitation to all to attend the Twelfth Night revels where the "Spirit of Economic Depression" was absolutely banned.

Miss Pauline Willis, of Knightdale high school, spoke on the "Problems of Dramatics in the Rural School."

Mr. West of Duke University, in his talk on University Dramatics, informed those present that it is not the rural schools that have all the problems and difficulties. He has his own, some of which are finances, status on the campus, and quarters in which to work.

Mr. Wood, director of recreation in Durham, spoke on Hallowe'en as an indication of what

Nepotism And Communism

We understand that Senator Walter H. Powell of Columbus County will introduce, or perhaps has by now introduced, a bill in the state senate to make it unlawful for a married woman whose husband has an income of more than one hundred dollars a month to be paid for any services from any public funds in the state. The senator explains that he happened to think up the bill when he learned that a "most deserving widow of a distinguished official of the state" applied for a state position and was refused, while at the same time married women were filling positions. Apparently the lady had only one qualification: She was a "most deserving widow of a distinguished official of the state." We find more things than one wrong with the bill.

To begin with, a devotion to, not exactly nepotism, but something closely related, inspired the bill. Apparently the state is expected to provide employment for every deserving widow of every distinguished official of the state. And who may dare call a widow not deserving and an official not distinguished? It will be worse than any federal patronage known to North Carolina—a very broad statement. Perhaps it is a far-fetched prophecy, but we believe that if Powell's bill is passed, employment will be created for deserving widows.

One purpose of the bill is the relief of unemployment in general. Paris once created employment for the unemployed. And it didn't work.

And there is something else wrong. If a man makes over twelve hundred dollars a year, his wife may not be employed by the state. Any question of competence is waived. As we understand communism, that is a mild form of it. But perhaps we don't understand communism. North Carolina's woman senator will receive no salary if the bill is passed. No woman may be even a dollar-a-year employee.—V. A. D.

Optional Attendance And the Honor Roll

The honor roll has been issued for the fall quarter, and what is astounding in view of all the hue and cry in regard to class cuts and the poor quality of work done by the student body during the fall quarter is the fact that the honor roll contains three hundred and five names—the largest number in the history of the University. One out of every eight persons averaged B on all their work.

We as students have our idea about optional attendance, which we have stated here before and often, and those few persons who happen to have read these opinions are asked to see what kind of an equation they can make out of these facts: the highest and best work done in any University quarter accomplished in a time when some of the faculty claim that never before in the history of the University have the number of absences been so great. It would follow, then, that absences had accelerated rather than hindered the success of education here, and that this might be one way to overcome the obvious handicap of larger and larger classes as a result of smaller and smaller amounts of revenue.

There may be other reasons why certain faculty members desire to wipe out liberalism at the University but the one that the number of absences last fall had lowered the quality of work does not hold water. If there are plausible reasons why, for the good of the University and the state, the student body should be forced to go to classes they should be stated.—JACK D.

Student Government Forges Ahead

The forward-looking strides which the student government organization of this university and the local branch of the National Students' Federation of America have taken of late are gratifying in the extreme. That the work of the newly-organized state federation is worthy of note was demonstrated recently in the election of a student of this university to an office in the national federation. The local branch of the order has been a bolstering arm to student government here ever since its founding. Herein lies the greatest opportunity for further advancement of the principles of harmony and good will, upon which the federation is based.

Practical persons rightly view with approval an undergraduate group who will tackle problems of national and international import. Indeed, one may well say that the obligation of citizenship itself rests upon an understanding of such issues as prohibition, tariff legislation, the League of Nations, and so on. By virtue of its affiliation with the similar groups in the leading colleges and universities of the nation, the local federation is laying the path for subsequent expansion of student government here.

People the world over are beginning to look to the students of the present to make the world of tomorrow a better place to live in. Contrary to the situation existing in former times, the citizenry of this nation is looking to college and university men to provide leaders in every phase of endeavor. Through the medium of arranging international debates, radio broadcasts, and news releases, the federation is bringing the people of the world to an understanding of each other. Such a program is indeed gratifying to those who believe that the students of today must harmonize and pacify the world of the future. The local branch of the federation is doing great things here in our own midst to bring about that attitude of harmony and mutual concern, which is prerequisite to the advancement of student government.

Young America

That America is in its early youth can hardly be doubted after a casual scanning of the daily papers. The lack of power to govern efficiently is inevitably connected with a young nation, and the papers are full of the evidences of this weakness. Chicago and Illinois have been trying for the past several years to rid themselves of a handful of gangsters which have made them notorious. The local governments are too weak and corrupt to dare face a showdown on the matter. American local governments to a surprising degree have inferior men in their make-up. Virtue or efficiency in office is not a requisite for places of public trust—only that you follow the dictates of your political boss is all that it required.

It seems to us that it is just about time that America should "come of age" on this matter of government. When Chicago gangsters can cow every agent of the law into submission except federal income tax auditors, and Rogers Caldwell and Luke Lea can literally ruin the central South by themselves, it is high time that public curiosity should be aroused to take a look at the men who are governing them. Individuals or small groups which have the inside track on things can do a tremendous amount of swindling and still the majority of the taxpayers sit complacently by their with hands folded — content to let well enough alone. It is just another application of "Everybody's business is nobody's business."

England, as a rule, seems to get her very best men into the various branches of the government—both national and local. America is content with the taking of a great deal of interest in its chief executive and then letting other offices fill themselves as best they may. The nation then blames the executive for any shortcomings or failures of his administration. How can he do any better with so many of his subordinates being of an inferior quality and intent mainly upon graft and fraud? England is interested in every office of public trust that is filled, but then she has had some form of democratic principle in her government for almost a thousand years. We have experimented for a little over a hundred and fifty years with our government. We sincerely hope that we will grow up to govern ourselves efficiently beforé another hundred and fifty years.—O. W. D.

At The Carolina

Thursday's production brings Edmund Lowe back again, but it is a different Lowe from the polished and suave characterizations that audiences usually see him in. In "A Part Time Wife" the star plays the role of an irascible, henpecked husband whose wife runs the family in which he plays second fiddle. Leila Hyams plays opposite Lowe.

"Paid," Joan Crawford's latest starring feature, is the feature attraction at the theatre Friday. This production is based on the play "Within The Law" by Bayard Veillers, and was celebrated during its stage presentation.

The crazy pair of comedians Woolsey and Wheeler come Saturday in their latest feature, "Hook, Line, and Sinker." These two comedy stars are well known, and every since their distinguishing work in "Rio Rita," have been given films of their own. The story was written by Tim Whelan, who wrote the original story for many of Harold Lloyd's chief successes. Dorothy Lee again takes the leading feminine role.

At 12:00 noon Saturday the third of the foreign dialogue pictures to be brought here will be seen. This latest is a Spanish version of "The Doctor's Secret," and contains a cast of Spanish stars headed by Carlos Diaz de Mendoza.

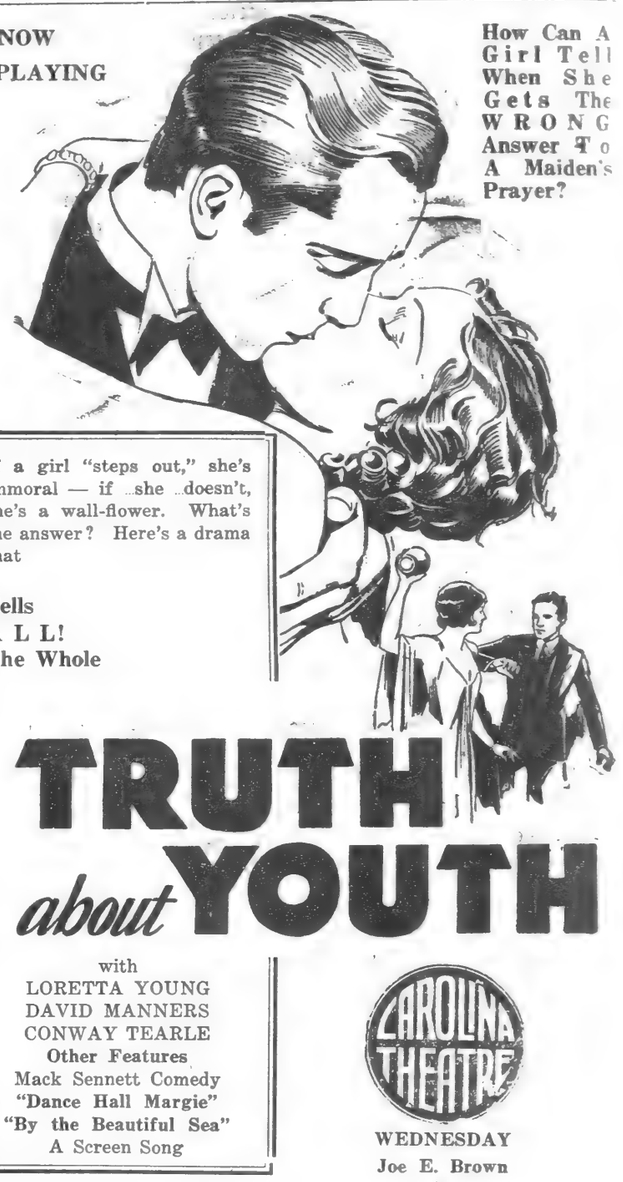
is being done along these lines.

The closing speech of the morning session was made by Mr. Wunsch. He told how he teaches playwriting in the high school.

At the afternoon session, Miss Bessie Watts and "Bill" Perry with a cast of their own students, offered an original play, "Jasper," written by one of the students.

"Judging the Tournaments" is a hard job. After listening to Mr. J. O. Bailey discuss the problems for fifteen minutes the job became more and more difficult. Some of the advice given by Mr. Bailey that was of particular interest was "Choose the right play, use the best cast available, watch the diction of the characters as this is very important, and the scenery should be an asset to the play."

Following Mr. Bailey Mr. Mathis of radio station WBT, Charlotte, told something of radio dramatics.



Mr. Humble spoke of the work of the "Charlotte Drama League." This organization intends to enter the tournament in the spring. Every two months they put on a program of one-act plays and have already this year produced three long plays.

A closing feature on the meeting's program was Miss Gladys Angel's demonstration of folk dancing.

Gamecocks Engage Tar Heel Quintet Tonight In Initial S. I. C. Game

WHITE PHANTOMS BRING SUICIDE PERIOD TO CLOSE

Downtrodden Sandlappers Pointing for Vengeance After Annihilation at Hands of S. I. C. Foes.

Tail feathers drooping by three wallopings in succession at the hands of Alabama, Georgia, and Auburn, the Gamecocks of the University of South Carolina will attempt to brighten their court reputation tonight against Carolina in the Tin Can. With the exception of a victory over Georgia Tech. South Carolina's basketeers have failed to register in the victory column so far this year. It will be the first conference engagement for the White Phantoms.

The battle will consummate a "suicide schedule," embodying seven games in ten days, and will precede a week's rest from competition for the North State quintet.

During the ten days campaign only one game was lost, that to Davidson. Though the Tar Heels led in field goals, an old weakness, failure to make free throws, proved the downfall. Davidson scored six fouls to Carolina's three. Though this set back has no bearing on the White Phantom's conference chances for 1931, a distinct comeback against South Carolina will do much to raise hopes of Blue and White followers, for the South Carolina quint has exhibited potential possibilities.

If the Tar Heels can only weather this game, which will be their last against an outfit from the Sand lapper State, Coach Ashmore will have a game-less week in which to polish the Carolina offense before the next game, against Wake Forest.

Georgia drew first blood from the Gamecock crew, administering them a sound 31 to 16 thrashing in the first game of a road trip several days ago. Moving on to Alabama, the Carolinians fell before the swift onslaught of last year's Conference champions to the tune of 45 to 11. Alabama Poly wound up the Gamecock's losing streak by registering a fast 39 to 21 set back to the South Carolinians. Into the winning side of the ledger for the first time, South Carolina handed Georgia Tech and impressive 30 to 25 defeat at Atlanta.

Said Ole Timer Atlanta Journal sports columnist about the Gamecocks: "The South Carolina team looked crude but promising against Georgia. The Gamecocks had had little practice and were playing their first game, so it may be they will develop considerably."

Captain Munch DuPre and Bedenbaugh top the South Carolina scoring column so far this year and should give the White Phantoms trouble on long shots. Both are accurate marksmen and both hold down forward positions. Against Georgia Tech, DuPre counted sixteen points including seven field goals.

Probable lineup for the invading Gamecocks will include: DuPre and Bedenbaugh, forwards; DeVaughn, center; and Freeman and Hughey, guards.

Sandy Dameron, big center, is still leading the Carolina scorers, closely pushed by Captain Artie Marpet, all-State guard.

These men with Cleland and Hines at the forward posts, and Edwards at the other guard, will probably start tonight.

K. C. RAMSAY

WITH THE WINTER SPORTS program now one week old, the campus is able to get a line on what to expect from at least two of the teams, though nothing can be said of the boxing outfit until after Friday night. The schedules for the winter bring to the "hill" some outstanding teams in each sport.

The basketball team will meet on the home court each of the Big Five teams, and at least two of these should present teams which will give the cagers stiff opposition. In addition to these (Davidson and Duke), there are Washington and Lee and Sewanee. The bouts with the University of Virginia mitmen should be one of the biggest drawing cards of the winter season, and second only in attendance to the bouts of last year between Carolina and Penn State. The climax to the winter sports season will come when the track teams of the Southern Conference assemble here on March seventh for the annual indoor meet.

THE BASKETBALL TEAM though it has dropped a game to the fighting Davidson Wildcats, can be expected to do big things before the season is over if it keeps working hard, improves its shooting of foul goals, and develops a pair of dependable forwards. The five games of last week together with the two on the first two days of this are enough to fatigue an aggregation greatly. But with the ten days of rest (beginning tomorrow) which come while the colleges on the semester system take their examinations, they should resume playing with many of the defects ironed out.

COACH QUINLAN AND THE wrestling team are deserving of much praise for their victory over the Princeton University team last Saturday afternoon. They had practiced only four days before they left for the bouts with the Tigers, and yet they succeeded in capturing half of the events, two of them by falls. They, not content with defeating one major team, are going up to Annapolis this weekend to meet the middies. We know little about the strength of the Navy, but if the Carolina grapplers continue in the way they have started they should handle the Middies, and, in fact, all of the remaining opposition on their schedule.

WHAT COACHES ROWE AND Allen have in store for us remains to be seen. The University of South Carolina is not expected to present a particularly strong group of mitmen, so we do not expect that the Tar Heels will be pushed to win until the V. M. I. freshmen and varsity come here next Saturday night. The loss of Platt Landis to the boxing team has hurt the lineup considerably. It is probable, however, that he will be back in shape for the Southern Conference Tournament the latter part of February. Hugh Wilson, a sophomore who is noted for his ability to stand punishment from the best of fighters and who has to his credit knockouts over several of the 1930 leading freshman pugs, may get the call for the heavyweight berth. Miller is the other heavyweight who is making a strong bid for Landis berth, and the selection of the fighter for Friday night, probably will come only after

Chi Phi's Lose to Delta Tau's

The Delta Tau Delta intramural basketball team opened the season by defeating the Chi Phi's by a score of fifteen to eight. Small and Owen led the way for the victors with seven and six points respectively. The first half ended in a five-all tie but the Delta Tau's opened up in the second half to forge to victory. Abels played a nice game at forward for the Chi Phi's leading the way with five points, the other three points coming on foul shots by Mortenson, Sloan, and Peeler. Cook, with two points finished out the scoring for the winners.

Zeta Psi's Win First

The Zeta Psi's, runner-up in last year's tournament, began right where they left off last season by defeating the Pi Kappa Phi's by the decisive score of twenty-eight to fourteen. Sonny Graham and Pratt staged a great race for individual scoring honors, Graham finally winning out by the narrow margin of five points, scoring fourteen points in all. Sasser played a good defensive game at guard for the victors, getting two points to figure in the scoring. Snow, stellar forward, was badly hurt when he collided with a steel support head-on, cutting a deep gash over his left eye. Davis and Hogan tied for scoring honors for the losers with two field goals each. Dixon ran a close second with three points.

T. E. P.'s Get Win

The T. E. P.'s began the season by getting a thirtyto twenty-one win over the Theta Kappa Nu's. The Theta Kappa Nu's presented a well balanced team, four figuring in the scoring. Longest and Lufty, with six points each led the attack. Midget and Creech, with five and four points respectively, finished out the scoring. For the winners Eisner and Fine, with fourteen and eight points respectively, led the way.

A. T. O.'s Defeat Sigma Nu's

The A. T. O.'s gave their rivals something to think about by defeating the strong Sigma Nu's by the decisive score of thirty-four to ten. The A. T. O.'s seemed to score at will, and used in all twelve players. Smith and Erickson were the stars of the game with four and six

U. N. C. WRESTLERS WIN CONVINCINGLY

Carolinians Are Impressive In Victory Over Princeton Grapplers; 16-14 Final Score.

The Carolina wrestlers won a thrilling 16-14 victory over Princeton Saturday before a large crowd that was kept on its toes throughout the final bout. The meet reached a climax in the unlimited class when, with Carolina leading by a 16 to 11 score and Princeton needing victory by a fall in order to tie the count, Fred Ferguson, weighing 178 pounds, faced Rutherford, 213 pounds. Ferguson's speed and cleverness offset his disadvantage in weight, however, and Rutherford was only able to win a decision with a time advantage of one minute and seven seconds after a hard fight. Ferguson put up a brilliant battle in spite of the difference in weight and had his heavier opponent close to a fall on one occasion.

Led by Mayne Albright and Harry Tsumas, both of whom scored falls over their opponents, the Tar Heels were able to win the meet by taking the 125, 135, 145, and 155 pound bouts, while the inability of any of Princeton's last three men to score falls prevented a tie score.

After Captain Colmore of Princeton had thrown Usher in the 115 pound class, Captain Fred Stallings put Carolina in the running with a time advantage over Ihrig. Albright then pinned Fisher's shoulders to the mat to give the Tar Heels an 8 to 5 advantage which Princeton was never able to overcome. In the following bout, Don Conklin completely outclassed Jones with a time advantage of nine minutes and one second, and Harry Tsumas won by a fall after a hard fought bout with Henry Royster. Royster, a North Carolinian, won against Carolina last year and is one of the outstanding men of the East in his division.

With the score standing 16-5 in favor of Carolina, Percy Idol lost a close decision to Hooker, Princeton's brilliant 165 pounder and Billings won another close bout with Marion Cowper to make the count 16-11. Then came the exciting bout between Ferguson and Rutherford with Ferguson preserving the Carolina advantage after a close struggle.

The Tigers, although presenting a formidable team, could not cope with the skill and speed of the Carolina grapplers, all of whom put up unusually fine exhibitions. With the exception of Conklin's bout with Jones, in which Jones at no time had the advantage on Coach Quinlan's flashy sophomore, every bout was close and hard fought. The brilliant battles put up by Idol, Cowper, and Ferguson, even in defeat, were outstanding while Hooker, Royster, Captain Colmore, and Billings did the best work for the Tigers.

The results of the individual bouts follows:

115 pound class. Captain Colmore (P) won by a fall over Usher in 9:15 with half nelson and body lock.

125 pound class. Captain Stallings (NC) won an overtime decision from Ihrig with time advantage of 3:26.

135 pound class. Albright (NC) won by a fall over Fisher in 6:21 with a double wing lock.

145 pound class. Conklin (NC) won a time decision over Jones with a time advantage of 9:01.

155 pound class. Tsumas (NC) won by a fall over Royster in 8:48 with a bar arm and body lock.

165 pound class. Hooker (P) won a time decision over Idol with a time advantage of 1:19.

RINGMEN APPLY FINAL TOUCHES FOR GAMECOCKS

Prospects Appear Bright for Mitmen As Opening Bout Nears.

With only four more days remaining before their first meet—that with South Carolina—the boxers engaged in an extensive drill yesterday to put on the finishing touches before the arrival of the Gamecocks.

Captain Goodridge, light weight, Martin Levinson, feather, Obie Davis middle weight, and John Warren, light heavy, continued to display the form that stamps them as potential Southern champions. Miller, the southpaw heavy weight, who will probably answer the gong Friday night, is improving with each workout and before the season is over, he should be a real threat in the unlimited division. Miller was thrust into the unlimited class when Platt Landis, sophomore star, with whom he was sparring, broke his right hand.

The welterweight situation took a new development by the rapid rise of Patterson, who fought in the middle weight class for the freshmen last year. Patterson is down to 149 and is going great. He is only a fair boxer but packs the kick of a mule in his right arm. Dale Holderness, who was generally conceded to be the best welter, will have a terrific battle on his hands to beat out both Patterson and Lumpkin, who also fought in the yearling ranks last year.

As soon as the South Carolina meet is over, the Tar Heels will point for the next meet—that with V. M. I. Last year the Cadets were runners up to Florida in the Southern Conference meet held at the University of Virginia. This meet will have an important bearing on Carolina's chances for annexing another Dixie title, since the Cadets have a veteran outfit.

NETMEN WORKOUT ON INDOOR COURT

Rain yesterday didn't mean a thing to the tennis team since the new indoor court in the Tin Can was completed two weeks ago. Pactice was held as usual from two to four in the afternoon. Coach Kenfield played a set with Harley Shuford, a promising freshman player who has a fast all-around game.

Coaches Drilling Charges for Walkertown Game; Enright Gives Them New Plays.

The freshman basketball squad was out Saturday afternoon in an attempt to iron out some of the errors that were in evidence in the Randolph-Macon game of last Friday. Coach Enright took over the coaching duties and spent the whole afternoon giving plays and running them off smoothly. He worked with a team composed of Fisher and Weathers, forwards; McGlenn, center; Jones and Poe, guards. At first the men were very awkward in carrying out the plays, and consequently there were several mix-ups. However, after a few alterations, and a little practice, the plays began to look like something. After the formations had been given to three teams, the first two scrimmaged, and then the third team and one that was picked up, fought it out on the floor.

The next game is scheduled to be played with Walkertown high

Phi

The bills on the Phi calendar to be discussed tonight are: 1. Resolved: That women should be obliged to pay the same poll tax as men. 2. Resolved: That every student working for a degree should be compelled to participate in at least one extra-curricular activity each year, fraternities not included. 3. Resolved: That the governor of North Carolina should be given the veto power.

University Women

The American Association of University Women will hold a meeting at eight o'clock tonight in the Episcopal parish house. Dr. Guy B. Johnson of the Institute for research in social science will speak. His topic will be "Folk Tales of the Negroes."

Motion Picture

The American Institute of Chemical Engineers will present Wednesday evening at seven o'clock an education motion picture, "The Arteries of Industry," illustrating the manufacture of "National" wrought steel pipe, from the mining of the ore to shipment of the finished product. Tonight at seven-fifteen in 208 Venable hall Dr. Cameron will speak on some phase of industrial chemistry at the first meeting of this organization in 1931.

Di Initiation

An initiation ceremony of the Di Senate is scheduled tonight, and all members who have not yet been initiated into the society are asked to be present. Following the initiation ceremony, the bills on the calendar will be discussed. President J. M. Little requests that all men be present at tonight's meeting.

Freshman Class Meeting

The freshman class meets tonight in Gerrard hall at seven-thirty to nominate men for the offices of president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer of the class of '34. Thursday, January 15, will be election day for the new men, at which time the Australian ballot system is to be used. Ballot boxes will be placed in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. building.

All Juniors and Seniors who have not yet had their pictures taken for the Yackety Yack are requested to do so this week.

Seniors desiring to make additions or corrections in their statistics in the Yackety Yack are asked to call at the Yackety Yack office on any afternoon this week.

The Inter-Fraternity Council will meet tonight at 7:15 in the "Coop."

Dr. Sturgis E. Leavitt of the department of romance languages will make an address tonight to the Philological Club on the subject of "Spanish American Literature," at the Graduate Club.

AWARDS FOR BEST PEACE EDITORIAL

The department of journalism of the University of Tennessee has made public the announcement of the George F. Milton Awards in Journalism. These awards have been made possible through the earnest desire of the late Mr. Milton to render a permanent service to the cause of international peace, an ideal to which his life was devoted.

For 1931, a cash award of five hundred dollars will be made to the writer who shall publish in any newspaper or periodical in the South during the calendar year of 1931, the best editorial or editorials advancing the cause of international peace.

Writers are to submit two clippings of their published articles upon white sheets of standard size paper. One sheet should have the name and address of the author, name of the periodical in which the article appeared and the date of publication. The other should contain only the clipping.

In addition to the award in journalism the Milton Fund provides for a cash award of two hundred dollars to the woman writer of the South who shall accomplish most for her sex during the year 1931. This award will be determined, without competition, by the administrators of the fund.

The decisions will be announced as soon as possible after the first of the year, and checks will be mailed to the winners.

University Head Predicts Longer Education Course

President L. D. Coffman of Minnesota University recently made the prediction that within the next decade courses ranging from two to ten years, depending on the financial circumstances an ability of the individual, would take the place of the traditional four-year course which is today used by colleges and universities all over the country.

He was also of the opinion that one of the main developments in the decade would come in the growth of the junior college, with which growth would inevitably come a separation of the junior college and the university.

"The more definite break will be the sophomore and junior years," continued the university president, "and a degree of some sort may be granted to those who finish the sophomore year."

Minnesota University established into its system a new experimental college last fall, which permits its students to take subjects in any college of the University. It is the belief of Mr. Coffman that by taking this step the University has made an advancement toward a sounder educational procedure.

Birth Rate Exceeds Deaths During Year

During the year 1930 there were thirty-eight births and twenty-eight deaths in Chapel Hill. Ten of the births were white children, and eighteen, of which five were illegitimate, were negroes. Of the twenty-eight deaths ten were of white people and eighteen were negroes. The causes of death were as follows: white people: hyperlensim, peritinitis, cerebral hermorrage, heat prostration, caronary thrombosis, angina pectoris, pneumonia, auto accident, apoplexy; colored: tuberculosis, three cases, intestinal obstruction, nephritis, two cases, murdered, one case, pneumonia, diabetis mellitis, mengitis, stillborn, premature birth, three cases, hyelitis, myocarditis, cerebral hemorrage, two cases, and one case of which the cause was not diagnosed.

Leo is the honorary member of every Lion's club in the country. He has two grandchildren in captivity. One of them is in Australia and the other is in South America. Both are honorary members of the Lion's Clubs of their locality.

Leo is one of the very few lions to have ridden in an airplane. He has flown from Los Angeles to New York. On his first trip the plane fell. However this did not frighten Leo, so he tried it again with success.

In a personal interview with a Tar Heel reporter Leo stated that he liked Chapel Hill much better than other college towns. He was not favorably impressed with the weather, but was very much attracted by the reporter. He approves of optional attendance, but thinks that the younger generation is not as wise as it was in his day. He said that he read the Daily Tar Heel with interest and approved of its editorial policy.

Leo is now planning a trip to Greece where he hopes the climate will be warmer. He was born in the Congo Basin and likes a very warm climate.

NOTED NEWSMAN AND JOURNALIST TO SPEAK HERE

Mark Sullivan, Prominent Political and Historical Writer to Address Institute.

Mark Sullivan, noted newspaper correspondent and political prophet, is to be among the outstanding news men present at the Seventh Annual Newspaper Institute which gets under way tonight in Gerrard Hall at 8:00. President-elect Frank P. Graham is scheduled to deliver an address of welcome to the visitors as the opening speech on the program.

Sullivan, author of The Great Adventure at Washington and Our Times, the United States, 1900-25, is from Pennsylvania. After graduating from a normal school in West Chester, Pa., in 1892, he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts eight years later from Harvard, and 1903 the degree of L. L. B. from the same institution. In 1927 he was awarded the honorary degree of Litt. D. from Brown University. From 1893 to 1900 Mr. Sullivan was a part owner of the Daily Republican which is published in Phoenixville, Pa.

Dr. Sullivan is probably the best known out-of-state newspaper man who will attend the meeting here this week. He has made a name for himself in the journalistic field, as well as, to a lesser degree, as a contemporary historian.

He will address the institute tomorrow night at the Carolina Inn immediately following a buffet supper. "Observations of

ANNUAL CONTEST PLANS ANNOUNCED

Student Orators Will Speak on "The American Legion" at Third Meeting.

Professor George McKie has received a bulletin from Mr. Cale K. Burgess, department of Americanism officer, in Raleigh, announcing the third annual American Legion Oratorical Contest. The subject for this year's contest is, "The American Legion." Students desiring to enter the contest should notify Professor McKie before February first.

The American Legion contest was inaugurated in 1928 when the subject was "The Citizens' Duty to Vote." The subject for the second year was "Our Flag." The subject chosen this year was "The American Legion."

The rules for the contest allow the entrance of all undergraduate white students. Speeches may not exceed fifteen minutes in length. The University's representative will be selected in a preliminary meet before March the twentieth, on which date the finals will be held in Raleigh.

The prizes for the meet are: first, gold medals and seventy-five dollars; second, fifty dollars; third, twenty-five dollars; and fourth fifteen dollars. The Legion hopes to have additional prizes, but these will certainly be awarded.

Information on the subject may be secured from a recent book by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Fletcher, A History of North Carolina Department of the American Legion and Auxiliary, and from Legion posts and Legionnaires in every county.

Freshmen Nominate Seventeen Men for Thursday's Election

Last night the class of 1934 met in Gerrard hall at seven-thirty to nominate officers. The purpose in delaying the nomination until last night was so that the freshmen might become acquainted with each other. The meeting was adjourned at eight o'clock. The candidates for the presidency are: Ike Minor, John Phipps, Otto Prochazka, and Red Rankin; for the vice-presidency: John K. Barrow, T. H. Broughton, Joe Gardner, Harold Meade, and James M. Tatum; for the secretaryship: Bob Gold, John Leake, Shelley Sims, and Joe Tobin; for the office of treasurer: Walter Groover, Lasley Hudson, Dave McCatheron, and Gus McIver.

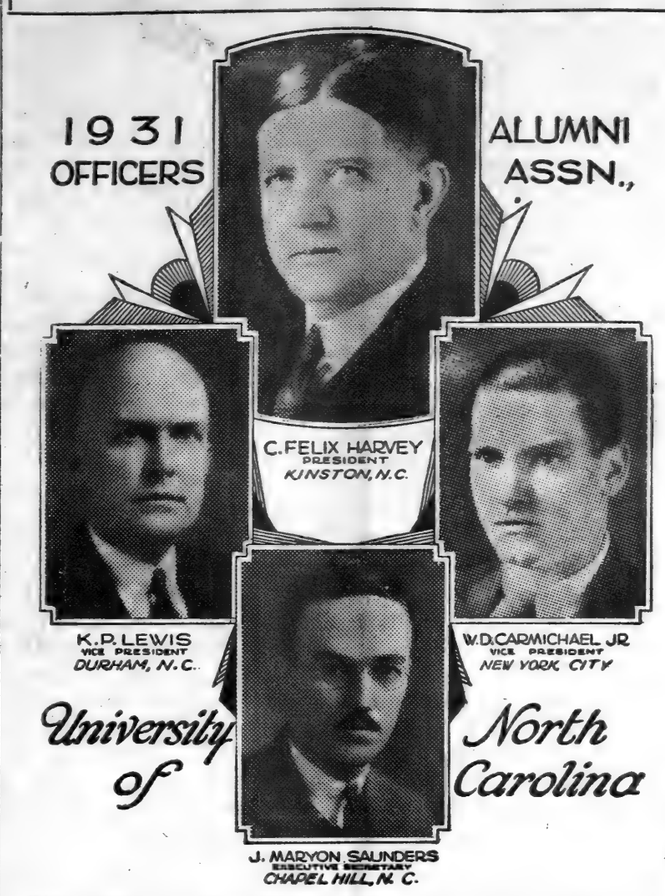
The voting will take place in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. Thursday from eight-thirty to five-thirty. The voters are to vote for one man in each office and for one only. The balloting will be in charge of Red Greene, president of the student union.

Prouty Tours New England Studying Geological Strata

Dr. W. F. Prouty has just returned from an extended tour of Columbia, Harvard, and Yale Universities, where he visited the departments of geology during the larger portion of the fall quarter.

While in Connecticut and Massachussetts, Dr. Prouty made several field trips which enabled him to complete one phase of his studies on "The Structual Relation of the Triassic Basins of Eastern United States."

In addition to visiting a number of other institutions, field trips were made in the glaciated area of Rhode Island, south-eastern Massachusetts, and Southern Vermont. Of especial interest were the glacial tillitis and varied deposits of Permocarboniferous age exposed best on the Squantum Peninsular southeast of Boston. These play a large part in the theory of the shifting of the earth's pole, as held by many European geologists. Many geologists from other continents have visited these deposits.



Dr. Prouty will teach during the winter quarter, but he expects to continue his Kenan leave of absence in the spring.

Latest Press Book Deals With Strikes

A comprehensive history of the theory and practice of the general strike in countries of Europe, the Orient, North and South America will be covered in The General Strike, by Wilfred H. Crook, which is the next book to be published by the University Press.

The author was born in Lancashire, England, and holds advanced degrees from Oxford and Harvard, is now a naturialized citizen of the United States and a professor at Bowden. He is admirably fitted both in temper and in training for a study of "labor's tragic weapon." He deals with such topics as "The First General Strike: Great Britain," "France, the Home of Theory"; "Belgium, the Land of the Political Strike"; "Sweden Tries Anything Once"; "Holland in 1903: the Penalty of Overconfidence." The study is fully documented.

ALUMNI OFFICERS FOR 1931

The group of men pictured above have been selected by the members of the University Alumni Association to head their organization during 1931. Eight hundred out of 1,400 possible ballots were cast in the election, which was held by mail. Mr. Harvey is a member of the class of '92, Mr. Lewis of the class of '00, and Mr. Carmichael of the class of '21. Mr. Saunders, '25, is continuing his duties as the active head of the association and as editor of the Alumni Review.

BUSINESS WILL PICK UP IN 1931 SAYS WESTINGHOUSE PRESIDENT

Many Aspects of the Present Situation That Promise Improvement, He Asserts.

The following is an article written by F. A. Merrick, president of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company at the close of this past year:

"The past year has presented a progressively disappointing picture for commerce and industry in general. Following the stock market break in October, 1929, the high tide of business receded rather quickly to a level which was almost universally accepted as the base line to be expected for the current course of things until the upturn came in sight. This view was encouraged by several favorable factors present which have not usually been found in similar situations. Prominent among these were the plentiful money supply and the general absence of swollen inventories. Existing inventories, however, were then judged in relation to past consumption, and when the stock markets began their pronounced downward slide in midsummer of this year and customer buying was abruptly curtailed in consequence, the inventories loomed larger and prices of all commodities yielded, bringing the result of added stagnation through the natural timidity of purchasers in a falling price market.

"The electrical manufacturing industry suffered with all others in this series of changes, except in so far as work on larger types of equipment, requiring considerable time for fabrication, held up the level of employment during the greater part of the year.

"While the short time outlook in the industry thus shows a much lower trend than has been the case in recent years, there are many aspects of the situation that promise improvement—the extension of electrical service to the farms of the country is progressing with increasing rapidity—there are important lines of industry who are embracing this period of relativiely slack business to rehabilitate their plants on most modern efficient basis which generally means increased electrical equipment—all branches of government, federal, state, and municipal; are joining in an effort to advance construction of useful public works—and even under present conditions there is ground for expectation that the use of electricity in the households of the country will be accelerated throughout the coming year, with attendant market for the appliances which will create this added use.

"And beyond all this is the basic fact that goods in the hands of the public are daily being consumed, that the shelves of the dealers are being cleaned up and the stocks of distributors lessened—thus the fundamentals of a normal return to sound business in all lines are working themselves out as must ever be the case.

"This is too large and too fundamentally prosperous a country to stand still for any long period."

OUTSIDERS MAY SECURE ENTERTAINMENT TICKETS

The students of the liberal arts school and the education school can get their student entertainment tickets today from the business office. Other persons who wish to see the performances may buy the book of tickets entitling them to see all six attractions for $2.50.

T. C. Worth, who is in charge of the sale of such tickets, states that they will be obtainable at the Y. M. C. A. at chapel period during this week and next. Saturdays he will be at Sutton's Drug Store from ten to twelve-thirty to sell them.

Final Cast For 'East Lynn' To Be Chosen Tonight

The final cast for the Playmakers' next play, East Lynn, will be chosen tonight at seven-thirty when the first rehearsal for the play will take place.

The results of the tryouts held last evening are as follows: Sir Francis Levison—Mr. Ayres or Mr. Jess; Archibald Carlyle—Mr. Rulfs or Mr. Ward; Lord Mount Severn—Mr. Bissel or Mr. Ward; Richard Hare—Mr. Deans; Lady Isabel—Miss Winburn or Miss Perrow; Barbara Hare—Miss Daniels or Miss Norwood; Miss Carlyle—Miss Walker; Mr. Dill—Mr. Oettinger or Mr. Piland; Justice Hare—Mr. Zimmerman; Officer—Mr. Wrigley; Joyce—Miss Bowers; Wilson—Miss Reed.

This new presentation of the Playmakers will be presented February 5, 6, and 7.

Student Opinions And Problems To Be Discussed By Lang

The weekly radio talk over station WPTF will be given today at 5:15 by John Lang, secretary of the National Student Federation of America, and R. C. Greene, president of the student body of the University.

Greene will point out the ideals and the program of the N. S. F. A. for the coming year. He will attempt to explain the work that the organization does as a member of the International Student Federation.

Lang, in his talk, will tell of the trend of student sentiment in the United States on such matters as prohibition, subsidized athletics, a third party, the tariff, cancellation of allied war debts, and the world court.

The greater part of Lang's speech will be given over to a detailed discussion of the problems confronting the present session of the state legislature. In his discussion of these problems Lang will attempt to present the facts from the viewpoint of the student.

In addition to the consideration of the state's problems, Lang will report on the plans of the N. S. F. A. to aid students in receiving the benefits of reduced rates on railroads and in hotels, and to establish loan funds for college students.

Leavitt Speaks To Philological Club

Dr. Sturgis E. Leavitt, of the Spanish section in the department of romance languages, made an address last night at seven-thirty to the Philological club on the subject of "Latin-American Literature in the United States," at the Graduate Club.

Dr. Leavitt's talk was mainly a survey of the contributions made by American leaders in the fields of literature and language to our knowledge of Latin-American literature.

Beginning with the contributions made by William C. Bryant in 1828, Dr. Leavitt traced the development of the knowledge of Spanish American literature in the United States up to the present time.

Dr. Leavitt also stressed the fact that, due to the rising importance and growing knowledge of Latin-American literature, that course is now being taught in many leading American colleges and universities.

NO FLU EPIDEMIC HERE ON CAMPUS SAYS ABERNETHY

Condition Practically Same As Last Year at This Time.

"The cold situation in Chapel Hill and the University is no different than it is every year at this period," stated Dr. William Abernethy, physician in charge at the infirmary yesterday. "We are pleased to report that, while we had twenty-three persons admitted to the infirmary Monday, it was only necessary to care for eleven Tuesday."

Dr. Abernethy urges all who feel ill to either report to the infirmary or to call the infirmary if they are too ill to come, and medical attention will be brought them.

Most of the persons who have been ill during this period have been confined for three days only. Only eight actual influenza cases exist at the present time.

Dr. Abernethy has gone to the dormitories and examined all students who had reported as being ill, and he states that a large number of those reported ill were suffering from nothing more than slight colds. The infirmary is fully equipped to handle the situation, and anyone who really needs medical attention will be admitted.

The University authorities especially wish to impress on the minds of the students and their parents that there is no imminent danger of the University's closing down because of the number of students who are ill.

LIST OF AWARDS IS MADE KNOWN

Graduate School Offers Group Of Teaching Fellowships To Students.

The graduate school announced recently a list of fellowships to be given in the school for the year 1931-32. They are available to graduate students and to seniors who expect to enter the graduate school next year.

The first group of fellowships are offered by the University to men who will devote a part of their time to instructing or to other prescribed work. There are twenty-six of these fellowships, each carrying free tuition and $500.

There are also a number of appointments with a stipend of from $500 to $800 and free tuition offered to students who will devote half their time to instructing in the department to which they are assigned. These are also given through the University.

Free scholarships will be appointed to fifteen graduate students who apply for them next year.

Two Graham Kenan fellowships in philosophy with a stipend of $700 and free tuition are available to men or women of the graduate school next year. For research in chemistry there will be given the Ledoux fellowship of $300 and free tuition to either men or women.

Through the Institute for Research in Social Science there are available for next year from eight to ten appointments allowing $1,500 annually for the expenses of students who will devote their time to research. Application blanks can be secured from the director of the Institute, Dr. H. W. Odum.

Salary Cuts And A Corollary

No collegian has to demonstrate his "school-spirit" by vociferous shouting at athletic contests, his "boosterism," or his short-sighted praise of his institution. That kind of loyalty went out of existence when the World War made us as a nation grow up earlier than we had expected.

Loyalty is rather manifested in an intelligent endeavor on the part of student-bodies to keep their school right, and keeping it thus to fight continually to cause it to occupy the exalted position that the student feels his institution has fought for and won. It is, therefore, with considerable shock that one picks up his morning paper to discover that a legislature, or a governor, or some group of the faculty of the institution in question has done something or set about doing something which is capable of tearing down the beautiful structure which it has taken countless generations of student bodies, and decades of faculty control to arrive at.

Governor Gardner lays his executive axe on sacred wood when he proposes to lop off the salaries of the teaching staff and allied employees of the University of North Carolina. It took an hundred and thirty years to arrive at the position the University occupied three years ago. A very definite decline has already set in, a decline which can only be accelerated by lowering salaries and wiping out operating budgets. The student body with true loyalty to the institution which is making men of them, which is opening before their eyes the vision of the world and of the universe, deplores the movement on foot to cut all state University employees' salaries by ten per cent.

A wave of vicious conservatism—vicious in its disastrous effects to the quality and reputation of the institution—has set in. Even our own faculty, the very ones who would suffer most from it, have not been untouched by it. At present faced on one side by the appalling sight of a veritable exodus of highly trained experts to other fields, and a retarding of all projects except the bare essentials, some have proposed to complete the picture by a retrenchment of whatever liberal measures which have been extended to students—optional attendance, etc.

This is no time for a quiet acquiescense, but rather for a well planned campaign to ingratiate the University so strongly in the good graces of the people so that the legislature and the governor could do no other thing than support it in the style it so richly deserves. Continuing the corollary, the faculty if they deplore the retrenchment of the University's progress can not without intellectual dishonesty take away student privileges.—Jack D.

An Answer

We noticed in yesterday's Daily Tar Heel that Dr. Carl C. Taylor of State College had addressed the North Carolina Club. And then we remembered that Dr. Calvin B. Hoover of Duke had talked to this student body, and that Dr. Benjamin B. Kendrick of North Carolina College for Women had appeared on a Polity Forum program. And we saw the answer to a question that has bothered at the same time those men filled with brotherly love and those men filled with the modern craze for consolidating.

The idea of an annual Duke-Carolina banquet was excellent. That is not a grudging concession on our part. It is rather a tribute prompted by sincerity. But very few people will accept attempts at friendship as such. They make the mistake of seeing sentimentality in such efforts. The blood of a few martyrs to public ridicule doesn't stand much chance against campus determination to misunderstand.

The idea of consolidating in some way State, Carolina, and N. C. C. W. may have been excellent as a means of guaranteeing their existence on less money. But we believe it would fail dismally to bring the three schools any closer together.

We believe we were permitted a vision of at least the tail-end of an inspiration. Already this year a State, a Duke, and an N. C. C. W. professor have come to Carolina. If more professors from the various North Carolina colleges and universities would come to Chapel Hill and let us see their wares, the quality of their learning and therefore of the knowledge they give their own students, our respect for those students would increase remarkably.

The inspiration was just a little too quick for us to see how it was to be worked out. Perhaps exchange of professors would be advisable.—V. A. D.

A Good Speech But——

The Governor has spoken; in a long and statesmanlike document he has advanced his support of so many ideas in political economy that the sixty day legislature, were it to consider seriously every one of them, would have to meet for a full year. The Governor is to be congratulated on the foreward looking policy he so diligently pursues. The fact that he may be only echoing the opinions of experts, as he has admitted in part, does not detract from his decision to support those experts.

However, he as all the rest of our governors have been, is bewildered by the question of revenue. The time has changed from that when the Old North State was an agricultural commonwealth, when we were affluent in the days before rayon, and of substitutes—when Old King Cotton was still alive. Our land has become exhausted, prices and plagues have made farming a rich man's hobby, and sent the so-called "poor-whites" and colored population from hill to mill. The real wealth no longer lies in property—that is in land.

No governor, however, has dared to lay the burden of taxation on the shoulders of those most capable of bearing it. An exhausted and debt-ridden class are asked to carry the burden of government for the rest. The economic situation of the state, as in no other time in our history, demands a sales-tax and a luxury tax to furnish the backbone of the financial system. There is a reason why governors and politicians fear to tax sales—well organized mill owners and merchants associations.

The state crys out for a fearless leader who will modernize the business of the commonwealth along lines of efficiency, and let the burden of taxation rest upon those shoulders best capable of bearing it—the mill owners, the tobacco industry, and the purchasers of luxuries rather than the helpless farmer.—Jack D.

With Contemporaries

Objectivity

The greatest aim of educators in the last two decades has been to make education a science. To make use of exact and objective methods, and to determine general principles, formulae, and laws have been considered ends in themselves. One of the outcomes of this aim has been the notorious objective examination, on which the student merely puts down numbers or underlines phrases. This type of examination is regarded as sacred by many; by others it is regarded as an evil attendant upon large classes; but its use is so prevalent that few students take any other type of examination during their first two years, and even after that they remain unfamiliar with other types of examination.

The chief and obvious advantages of the objective examination are two: it can be quickly scored, and it grades all who take it on the same basis. The advantage of quick scoring makes it indispensable in large classes. But because it scores all alike it is used frequently in smaller classes. It would be foolish and futile to urge that objectives be abandoned in large classes; to grade any other type of examination and give out grades of five levels would be impossible, not to mention the mere magnitude of the task.

The use of objectives in classes where size does not make it compulsory is, however, to be deplored. In the first place, the advantage claimed for it, that it grades all on the same standard, is a false one. It is true that the examinations do grade all on the same basis; but does not mean that that basis is a good one. An examination on a totally unrelated subject would grade all on the same basis, and would give that lofty ideal of educators, a normal distribution curve. The objections are numerous and serious. Objective examinations must contain a good many catch questions, and insignificant points. Their success depends on that, for everyone who has made the slightest study of a subject would be able to pass objective questions on the main points of that study. This results in preparatory study being devoted to memorizing or finding devices to remember trivialities. Study must be calculated to produce a memory which will function while the examination is being taken and will allow the memorized material to clear out and make space for more just as soon as the examination is over.

It is to be hoped that the committee which is now investigating the subject of comprehensives will provide some steps so that these examinations will not have to be objective. A large proportion of the faults of the modern college are bound up in the problem of objective examinations.—The Minnesota Daily.

One Flunk, Twenty-Five Dollars

(The Daily Northwestern)

Grapevine telepraph brings news of the proposal to require students to pay a fee of twenty-five dollars for every course in which they flunk. Whether this proposal embodies a good idea or not, it is certain that it presents a remarkable one.

The motive is obvious. Too many students do not take their education seriously enough because they do not think of it in terms of dollars and cents. Make them pay for poor scholastic work and they will have a tangible reason for not letting their studies lapse. Undoubtedly the plan would decrease the number of students who regularly fail one or more courses . . .

There would be another by-product of this proposal, if it is carried out . . . Students worried about the necessity of paying twenty-five dollars for flunking would feel obliged to perfect new and better means of cribbing until that venerable art would attain to heights unprecendented in the history of education.

a Correspondent" is the topic that Dr. Sullivan has chosen for his speech.

Following the Address of Welcome by President-Elect Frank P. Graham tonight, J. W. Noell, president of the North Carolina Press Association, will make the response. The main speaker on the night's program is to be Governor O. Max Gardner.

The Newspaper Institute is being sponsored jointly by the N. C. P. A. and the University, in the interest of newspapermen all over the entire state. While here the visitors will be given a chance to inspect the campus and any of the buildings which might be of interest to them.

Some of the noted journalists who will be present at the institute and have a part on the program are: F. F. Shedd, publisher, Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, and president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors; Mark Ethridge, managing editor of the Macon (Ga.) Telegraph; L. B. Weathers, Cleveland Star; and numerous other such outstanding news men.

STUDENTS TO BE GIVEN MEDICAL APTITUDE TEST

There will be given on February thirteenth an Aptitude Test to students who wish to enter a medical school next year. This test is required by many schools, and will probably be used as part evidence of the fitness of the applicant by most of the schools. Therefore, those who expect to study medicine next year, whether here or elsewhere, should put their names in the office of the dean of the medical school as soon as convenient so that we may know just how many are expecting to take the test.

Ahl Has Article In School Journal

In the January issue of the High School Journal, Miss Frances N. Ahl, of Glendale High School at Glendale, California, offers solutions for many of the difficulties encountered by high school and college students in the preparation of term papers. Her article, "The Technique of the Term Paper," considers in detail each step in the procedure.

The editorial section includes a comment by Dean N. W. Walker, of the school of education, on the Mississippi educational situation and on the proposed merger of the board of trustees of the three North Carolina institutions of higher learning. In the latter case, the dean approves the principle, but warns that undue haste may possibly damage the prestige of the schools.

There is an article by J. A. Parker on "Prognosis in Modern Language Study," and one by P. M. Cheek entitled "One View of the Poetry of Vergil." J. Henry Highsmith has compiled a list of North Carolina high schools accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. The local school has been recognized by the association since 1916. Highsmith is the state high school inspector.

WBIG TO PRESENT LIVELY PROGRAM

The Mythical Night Club of the Air will present tonight the "Goofy Hour" from six to seven o'clock from station WBIG in Greensboro.

The entertainers are Chief Goof, Jack Wardlaw; Hal E. Tosis, Hillard Wilson; Asthma, Art French; Coo Coo, Bix Ramsey; Loony, Bill Alsbrook; and Wawa, Brooks Tryer. There will also be guest artists from the lunatic asylum and such numbers of "The refrain from 'Spitting' " and "Hamberger, Hashional Hamphen."

Goofy time and weather reports will be broadcast and the insomnia triplets will sing the "Eating Song" from the uproar "Cavelieria Cateferia."

The musical instruments used during the hour will be the Hungarian Zitherphone, Siamese Wind Phone, squeek-a-phone, and African guitar. The program is sponsored by the Neverstick Fly Paper Company, Incorporated, and is staged for the benefit of the home for ancient Oyster openers.

Otto Steinreich, most prolific of the Daily Tar Heel's reporters during last quarter, wrote forty-seven feet and four inches of copy for the paper, the office records show.

Duke Professor To Read O'Neil's 'Marco Millions'

On the evening of January 18, Sunday, at eight-thirty, Mr. A. J. West of Duke University will give a reading of Eugene O'Neil's remarkable play Marco Millions as the fourth of the series of Playmaker readings for the year.

The play concerns Marco Polo, the Venetian explorer of the thirteenth century, and is an attempt to establish him as the good citizen and truth rather than the renounced liar that he has always been considered. It is one of O'Neil's best known plays and is obviously the work of a genius.

As usual the public is cordially invited to attend the reading in the Playmaker Theatre.

In every college town there is one outstanding smoking tobacco

At Illinois it's

ALONG Green Street, where campus leaders stroll . . . in the great slate-roofed fraternity houses of Champaign . . . there is one pipe tobacco which always rolls up the biggest vote. At Illinois it's Edgeworth, every time.

A pipe—Edgeworth. That is the smoking combination which has won the college man. Harvard, Cornell, Michigan, Stanford, Dartmouth — all agree with Illinois. Natural merit has made Edgeworth the favorite tobacco in America's leading colleges and universities.

College men everywhere respond to the appeal of pipes—packed with cool, slow-burning Edgeworth. Be guided by their verdict: try Edgeworth yourself. Find it at your nearest tobacco shop—15¢ the tin. Or, for generous free sample, address: Larus & Bro. Co., 105 S. 22d St., Richmond, Va.

SMOKING TOBACCO

Edgeworth is a blend of fine old burleys, with its natural savor enhanced by Edgeworth's distinctive "eleventh process." Buy Edgeworth anywhere in two forms—"Ready-Rubbed" and "Plug Slice." All sizes, 15¢ pocket package to pound humidor tin.

TAR HEELS WIN OVER GAMECOCKS BY 38-8 SCORE

Alexander Is High Scorer; Carolina Defense Good But Passing Was Ragged.

Holding the South Carolina Gamecocks scoreless during the first nine minutes of play and running up thirteen points during that period, the Tar Heel basketball team won last night's game by a 38-8 score. The score at the end of the half was 18-3 in favor of Carolina.

The strong defense which Coach Ashmore's men have shown during the preceding games was at a peak last night. There was a marked raggedness in the floorwork of both teams as well as inability to find the basket at times.

Tom Alexander, though he had to leave the game on four personal fouls was high scorer with nine points.

Chuck Collins Back For Winter Practice

Coach Chuck Collins returned to the "hill" late yesterday to start preparations for winter football practice, which begins the first of next week. He was in his new Chrysler coupe with the new number ninety-nine license plate.

Collins left Chapel Hill shortly after recovering from an attack of "flu" early in December, and has been at his home in Oak Park, Illinois, since that time.

ELECTRIC LOCOMOTIVES ARE SHIPPED TO CHILE

Four electric locomotives, built on the first order ever received from Chile by telephone, have been shipped to the only government-owned railroad that is operating at a financial profit.

Electrical equipment was built and installed by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, the cabs and mechanical parts were built by the Baldwin Locomotive Works and the "Belray," of the Christian-Smith steamship lines, has come from European waters to transport the locomotives to South America because it is the only vessel with hatches of sufficient size to permit the loading of the large cabs below deck.

After approximately 30 days on the water, they will reach Chile and be put in service on 110 miles of the main line of the Chilean State Railways system between Santiago and Valparaiso within a few hours after being unloaded.

DOPING 'EM OUT

By

BOB BETTS

Although the basketball season is still in its early infancy, certain teams and players are already beginning to stand out in the "Big Five," group. For the first time in a number of years several teams have a good opportunity to win the state championship.

Carolina Prospects Good

Prospects are very bright for a successful basketball season here in Chapel Hill. Coach Jim Ashmore has whipped a fine defensive team into shape. The Tar Heels have yet to allow their opponents to score more than twenty points on them this season. In spite of this great defense, the Davidson Wildcats beat the Tar Heels by the close score of 18-17 last Saturday night. Captain Marpet, Alexander, and Paul Edwards have all played brilliant ball at the guard positions. Marpet is starting where he left off last season, and Edwards and Alexander both appear to be better than they were a year ago.

Sandy Dameron at center, is playing a great game and leading the squad in scoring; the Clinton boy seems to have found himself at last and should have his best season. The forwards, however, offer a serious problem to Coach Ashmore, as they are having trouble in locating the basket with any degree of regularity. Jimmie Moore, Wilmer Hines, and Tommy Cleland seem to be the best bets at the forward posts. These boys should improve with experience and practice. The team has a good passing attack and functions well as a whole. There are a large number of reserves to draw from; they may oust some of the present regulars before the season is much older.

Duke Again Strong

Over in Durham, Coach Eddie Cameron has started his Duke Blue Devils off on what looks like another championship drive. With a fast attack built around the tall center, Joe Croson, the Devils appear to have their last year's dazzling speed and attack. Co-captain Rogers is holding down one of the guard posts, and along with Croson, constitute the only veterans on the squad. Capelli, from last year's freshmen team, has proved a sensation in the games so far at the other forward position. Shaw and Roberts are filling Werber's and Farley's shoes with success, as Duke also has a good defensive team. In Pete Carter, Garber, Combs, and Hill, the Dukemen have some good reserves. Duke lost many of their stars last year, but they still have enough to cause trouble in both state and conference circles.

Davidson Dark Horse

Monk Younger's Davidson Wildcats have proved to be the real dark horse of the state race so far. Unheralded and unsung, the Davidson team has already scored victories over North Carolina and N. C. State college. Captain Bill Goodson and Proctor are the Presbyterians' two crack guards. Skinny Pierce has solved Younger's center problem. Dean Rusk and Martin, forwards, have been tossing goals with success. Davidson has a tight defense and a good offense. They should finish around the top of the heap.

State Has Possibilities

North Carolina State has a quintet that bids to partly attone for a bad football season. Sam Gurneau, the big chief, is playing a nice offensive and defensive game at center, for the Techmen. Sermon has a fine understudy for Gurneau in Morgan. Morgan was the regu-

SCRIMMAGE FOR FRESHMAN QUINT

Enright Gives Plays to Team; Meet Walkertown High Saturday.

The Freshmen had another brisk workout yesterday afternoon in the Tin Can. For the first part of the afternoon, the squad practiced getting their eye on the basket by shooting "crip" shots from the sides and down the center of the court. After this had been worked on, Coach Enright showed the men a pivot and had them practice this.

After the preliminary work, the whole squad ran through the few plays that it has been given. Then Enright had a first team composed of: Minor, center, Weathers and Fisher, forwards, Harris and Jones, guards, practice the plays against a skeleton team composed of Webster, center, Barclay and McIver, guards, De Rose and Salamini, forwards. The first team was a little rugged at first but after a little practice began to look better. These two teams ran through the plays separately and were dismissed. The remainder of the squad was divided into teams and a scrimmage was held. Coach Enright with his coaching eye, took these scrimmage games as a chance to uncover new material. This sort of procedure will continue for the next week or so, giving every man an equal opportunity to prove his worth.

Boxing Mentors To Pick Fighters for Bouts With U. S. C.

Carolina's boxers, who are to open their season against South Carolina here Friday night at 8 o'clock, will take their last heavy workouts this afternoon.

Coach Crayton Rowe will at that time pick the seven Tar Heels to battle the Gamecocks. The field of possible varsity competitors for this opening meet has narrowed down to 14, but there are only seven places, and more than one post may be decided on the basis of competitive bouts tomorrow.

CAGERS GETTING PERIOD OF REST

No Games Will Be Played By Basketball Team Until Next Tuesday.

Beginning today the Tar Heel cagers are enjoying much needed rest from a strenuous series of seven games in a nine day period. They will remain idle until next Tuesday night, January 20, when the Wake Forest Demon Deacons come here for the first of the two game series with that institution.

During this long grind the basketball team has proven itself to be one of the strongest defensive clubs in the South. None of the teams met to date have been able to successfully penetrate the excellent guarding of Marpet, Alexander, Dameron, Edwards, et al. During this period they have met two of the strongest teams in the section, Davidson and Furman, so they have had a fair test of their defensive ability.

In several of the games, however, there has been a decided lack of success on offense, only forty points being scored in the two difficult games. This may be attributed largely to the inability to sink foul goals. The eyes of the quint have been generally good on making good field goals, but failure to follow up the long shots by some of the men has caused the Tar Heels to lose a number of points.

Light Work for Team

During the next few days Coach Ashmore probably will send the team through light workouts to give them a chance to rest up for the long grind, but it is expected that they will have several long scrimmages the latter part of the week to smooth out the flaws in the attack before the Wake Forest game.

Only two games will be played during the coming week, Wake Forest and V. P. I., coming here. The following week also has only two games carded, but they are against major opponents. State college comes here January 27 and the Tar Heels journey over to the Duke gymnasium for a game Saturday night, January 31.

Intramural Results

Ruffin Defeats Mangum

Behind the sharpshooting of Smith and Royster, Ruffin easily defeated Mangum by a score of 29-18. Smith led the scoring with eleven points while Royster was a close second with eight. McBride played a nice floor game for Ruffin, garnering four points. For the losers Blythe led with twelve points to account for two-thirds of his team's scoring.

Old East Forfeits

Carr received a forfeit, to get a victory in their first game this season, when Old East failed to appear.

Graham Smothers Steele

Graham smothered Steele under an avalanche of baskets to easily get a 39-3 victory. In all, Graham used a total of eleven players. Grindstaff, Olivero and Dinstman led the Graham attack with eight points each, Larberbaum running a close second with six. For the losers Blue and Harris showed up best, Harris getting Steele's only field goal.

Furman Loses To Tar Heels In Close Game

Starting with a rush and gaining a small lead, the Tar Heels displayed a perfect exhibition of freezing the ball during the closing minutes and defeated the highly touted Furman University basketball team Monday night by a twenty-three to sixteen score.

Captain Marpet, Carolina guard, played the finest game of his career Monday. He led in the scoring with eleven points and guarded his Purple opponents closely. Sandy Dameron, Tar Heel center, was a little off his usual form and accounted for only three points.

Southern, forward, and Olsen, guard, showed up best for furman accounting for four points each.

NEW DEPARTURE IN EDUCATION IS EMBARKED UPON

Institute of Advanced Study to Be Established With Gift by Bamberger.

New York, January 13.—(IP)—A university without rules for its students, lacking impressive looking buildings, and with its entire work centered about a small but distinguished faculty, is to be established here.

It is the Institute of Advanced Study, made possible by a gift of $5,000,000 endowment made last June by Louis Bamberger and his sister, Mrs. Felix Fuld.

The aims of the new university, which will bear many of the aspects of the original university of the middle ages in its form of organization, was outlined here by Dr. Abraham Flexner, director of the new institution, who gave four general principles on which it will be established.

"The first of these," he said, "is that there shall be no intrusion of those collegiate ideas and practices that are necessary in a college but hampering in a university. I mean by that that we shall have no room or time for athletics or extra-curricular activities, and no attempt will be made at paternalistic control of the student body.

"Secondly, we will make no attempt at great size. Quality will be the first concern. For example, if we can find no first-rate teacher of mathematics we will have no course in mathematics.

"The faculty will cooperate in the management of the institute and have places on the board of trustees.

"We hope that the remuneration of our faculty members will be more fully commensurate with the importance of the positions.

"Although these principles, in many ways, are the expression of a break from tradition, we intend to imply no criticism of other universities.

"We can hope to do what I have described only because we are starting new and are not bound by tradition. Most of the post-graduate schools in this country were built on colleges. We have the advantage in that we are starting fresh and free. This freedom may result in many mistakes which the older universities have escaped. But that is part of freedom.

"So far as other universities are concerned this is in every way a friendly effort."

QUINLAN PLEASED BY SHOWING OF WRESTLING TEAM

Mat Coach Not Satisfied With Present Physical Condition However.

The Carolina grapplers, victorious over Princeton last week, returned to Chapel Hill Sunday morning to prepare for their next match with Navy at Annapolis this week-end. In Navy, the Tar Heels will face an even more formidable foe than Princeton, as Coach Quinlan has wasted no time in putting his men back to work. The Tar Heels are still far below perfect condition, and a great deal of hard work will be necessary if Carolina is to continue its winning ways started against Princeton last week.

The team snapped into its workout Monday with plenty of life and determination which indicates that Navy will have no easy time when Coach Quinlan's men advance upon Annapolis Saturday. Except for Mayne Albright who developed a charley-horse the team came through the Princeton meet without any semblance of an injury. Albright's injury was a minor one, however, and he will be at his regular position against the Middies.

Coach Quinlan was well pleased with the showings made by all the men against Princeton, but he is not satisfied with their condition and will use the rest of the week in an attempt to better it. The reserves worked out under Coach Abbott while the varsity was away, and with such constant work the entire squad is expected to be in shape in a short time.

COLUMBIA VISITOR DIES IN VILLAGE

Dr. Vivienne McClatchy, traveling representative of Columbia University, died here Monday at the home of Wilbur D. Steele, where she was taken ill with pneumonia, Monday, January 5.

Dr. McClatchy came to Chapel Hill last fall. She made her home first with Mrs. G. Wallace Smith on Pittsboro road, but left there to go keep house for Mrs. Wilbur D. Steele when the latter was stricken with pneumonia.

The deceased won her doctor's degree at the University of Chicago in 1924 and had since then won recognition in the academic field. She was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Xi fraternities, and was also associated with the American Psychological Association, American Association of University Professors, and many other honorary organizations and societies. She was a native of Texas. The remains will be taken to Ardmore, Oklahoma, for burial there.

Football Managers Chosen

Bob Schnell and Ward Thompson were selected football managers for the 1931 season at the meeting of the Athletic Council Monday night.

Varsity Awards Approved

The Athletic Council approved the lists of varsity monogram and freshman numerals awards for the football and cross country teams, but would not announce them yesterday. Coach Bob Fetzer stated that these awards will be made at the football team banquet next Monday night.

STUDENTS REPORT ON Y CONVENTION

Three Cabinets Meet for First Time in Winter Quarter Monday Night.

Meeting for the first time since the beginning of the winter quarter, the three Y. M. C. A. cabinets convened at seven-fifteen Monday night. At the freshman friendship council, Ed Lanier, self-help secretary of the "Y," asked for corrections to the student directory, offered a talk of encouragement regarding the decline in the council's membership and issued a call for new men.

Fourteen of those present at the council volunteered to attend try-outs for a quartet which will be selected Thursday night at seven-thirty in the freshman council room. A talk by Bob Reynolds on the Detroit Y convention concluded the program.

The program of the sophomore cabinet was made up of speeches by Bob Barnett and Frank Hawley. Barnett's talk concerned itself with a general discussion of the Detroit conference. Hawley spoke on the more specific topics of the racial problems of the negroes and the whites. His other subject was the honor system as found in the Southern schools, compared with the system in schools of other divisions of the country.

The junior-senior cabinet had much the same program as did the sophomore cabinet. John Park outlined the routine of business of the conference. Ed Hamer went into a fuller discussion of the speakers and their subjects. He also talked of the various problems of the different Y. M. C. A.'s all over the country, and how these organizations met their difficulties.

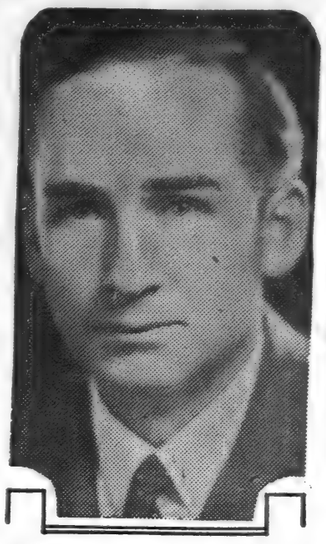
To become a prominent motion picture comedian is a real and very profitable cinematic distinction in any event, but to become the leading comedian in talkies, and to do it in the course of two years is the achievement of Joe E. Brown, who is now starring in "Going Wild" at the Carolina Theatre.

Brown was famous for many years on the stage and in vaudeville, his most famous play being "Twinkle, Twinkle." He essayed a couple of silent pictures, but did not care for the screen until the talkies came in.

First National and Warner Brothers instantly recognized his genius as a comedian. He was signed for an important role in "On With The Show," the first all-natural-color talking picture, and scored an instant hit.



Immediately he was given the leading comedy role with Marilyn Miller in "Sally," which proved to be one of the greatest successes that ever has come to the screen.

He was then teamed with Winnie Lighter in "Hold Everything," the prize-fight farce in which Georges Carpentier also appeared.

The success of this picture clinched his hold on stardom, and he was starred by First National in "Top Speed." This fast moving comedy with a spectacular motorboat finish, proved one of the outstanding pictures of the year.

Bees keep busy by instinctively turning to the thing which most needs doing, and not by social organization.

Institute Speaker

The managing-editor of the Macon, Georgia, Telegraph-News, Mark Ethridge, is among the newspapermen from other states who are appearing at the Newspaper Institute, in session tonight at the Carolina Inn.

Canine Candidate!

To the amusement of the fans and to the disgust of the referee, an extra player entered the basketball court in the midst of the game between Carolina and Furman Monday night. He sneaked in from some obscure corner of the Tin Can, entirely without the approval and consent of Coach Ashmore.

He even began active play without observing the necessary formality of reporting to the referee. Finally one of the team managers persuaded him off the court, but this was accomplished only by giving him a ball of his own to practice with.

The team's new recruit, who was just about as useful as a fifth at bridge, could not be found for an interview after the game. But judging from his appearance on the court, he is one-fourth black Airdel, one-fourth hound, and the other two-fourths plain DOG.

The series of moving pictures presented by the departments of commerce and chemistry will be continued Wednesday evening at seven o'clock in Venable hall. Pictures to be shown this week include "Arteries of Industry," "Copper Smelting," and "Making Lenox Pottery."

First Flying Smokers' Compartment!

Miss Valentine La Dor, pioneer airplane hostess, is handing a passenger an Old Gold with the assurance that "there's not a cough in a plane-load." She and five other hostesses, commencing January 10, will fly as the third member of the crew on the 18-passenger de luxe planes of the Eastern Air Transport, Inc., on the New York-Washington division. The hostesses will provide cigarets to passengers to be smoked in what is believed to be the world's first aerial smoking compartments in the airplane public carrier field in the U. S. These compartments with their special equipment and ventilation mark a new stage in catering to the comfort of flying passengers, and they are for the use of both sexes. Free coffee, tea, and biscuits will also be served. Beginning today, the regular crews on these runs will comprise the pilot, co-pilot and hostess. The planes leave New York and Washington thrice daily, each way, with stops in Philadelphia.

The outlook at Wake Forest is dark and gloomy. Both N. C. FRESHMAN ELECTION

CENTRAL COUNCIL RECEIVES REPLY FROM VIRGINIA U.

"Dean's List" Revealed as Optional Attendance Reward For Good Work.

The University of Virginia in a communication to the special committee appointed from the Central Administrative Council has disproved the contention of some of the members of the North Carolina faculty, who want to repeal all optional attendance here, that the University of Virginia has no liberal attitude toward absences from classes.

In a letter to the Daily Tar Heel G. O. Ferguson of the executive office refers to, "The Dean's list—Any student who passed, in the preceding term, on all courses taken, aggregating not less than fifteen term-hours, with an average grade on all courses of at least 85 percent, will be placed on the Dean's list.

"A student on the Dean's List is not subject to the regulations limiting absence from classes, nor does absence from any class entail on such student any penalty, affecting class standing, imposed for absence alone.

"About one-fifth of our students are usually on the Dean's List. We believe that the list is a stimulus to better work.

"We also have a regulation which provides that a student who receives 'Intermediate Honors' as a result of his first two years of work is not required to attend classes so long as he does not fail on a class. To receive 'Intermediate Honors'

University Women Hear Address On "Negro Folklore"

The Chapel Hill branch of the American Association of University Women met at the Parish house of the Episcopal church, Tuesday night at eight o'clock.

During the short business session preceding the program, Mrs. E. R. Mosher, legislative chairman, outlined briefly the legislative program which is being sponsored by various North Carolina groups, the various measures of which are to come before the present legislature.

Miss Nora Beust introduced the speaker, Dr. Guy B. Johnson, of the University Institute for Research in Social Science, whose subject was "Negro Folklore." He pointed out that the negro in the United States is rich in folklore. In the sea islands of South Carolina and Georgia can be found the best. He brought out the fact that a great many folk tales are told here as in Africa. With some of the animal characters changed to suit the American animals.

Another phase of Dr. Johnson's talk was an explanation of the difference between folk stories of Jamaica and the United States. It was found that the "spider" is the leading character in Jamaica and the "rabbit" in this country. "Negro folklore in the south is a mixture of African, Asiatic, and European stories." "Considerably more than one half the southern negroes are of African descent," says Dr. Johnson.

Di Senate Picture

A group picture of the members of the Di Senate will be taken Friday morning at chapel period in front of Murphey hall. All members of the senate are requested to be present on time.

KENNEDY TO GIVE VESPER CONCERT

The second vesper organ concert will be presented by Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, Sunday afternoon at 4:45 o'clock. The program is selected from the works of comtemporary American composers. It also includes numbers from the English and French schools of composition. Between 450 and 500 people attended the first vesper concert played by Professor Kennedy, November 23. On the following Sunday, January 25, a concert will be presented by Professor T. Smith McCorkle, head of the violin department. He will be assisted at the piano by Mrs. McCorkle.

The program for Sunday is the following:

Part One.

1. Sonata in E Minor ..... James H. Rogers
2. Allegretto Scherzando ..... J. W. Thompson.
3. Barcelle in E ..... Faulkes

Part Two

1. Offertoire in C Minor ..... Batiste
2. Cloister Scene ..... Mason
3. Afterglow ..... Groton

DI DEFEATS TWO OF THREE BILLS

Professor McKie Is Visitor and Unofficial Critic of Meeting.

The Di senate at its meeting on Tuesday night considered three resolutions. The first resolution was submitted by Senator McIver, as follows: Resolved: That the Di Senate go on Record as Favoring the Privilege of Smoking on Classes. This resolution received little support and was defeated in short order.

Senator McIver introduced another bill which read: Resolved, That the University of North Carolina, N. C. C. W., and State College be Combined at a Central Location. This bill was defeated by a large majority after being opposed by a number of senators.

A third bill was passed in which the senate favored cooperating with the Debate Council in broadcasting information regarding the University. Senators McIver, Dungan, Whitaker, Medford, and Ramsay spoke on the resolutions.

A resolution was passed placing a fine of fifty cents on all senators entering the hall without a coat or sweater.

Professor George McKie of the English department, who is a former member of the Di, was a visitor and unofficial critic at the meeting.

Debaters To Hear Lear

The regular meeting of the debate squad Thursday night at 7:30 will be devoted to an address by J. M. Lear, professor of insurance, on the subject of "Unemployment Insurance." Lear was scheduled to address the debaters last Thursday, but was prevented from appearing by illness. The question will be used on the trips to Boston, Northwestern and Texas.

North Carolina Club Conducts Research In Welfare Problems

The North Carolina Club was established in 1914 by Dr. E. C. Branson, who has since remained its guiding spirit. This organization is composed of university students of all classes and schools and faculty members who meet fortnightly throughout the college year to study the state's civic, economic, and social problems; the number in the club averages about fifty per year.

The subjects are practically always research enterprises, and the results are entitled to college degree credit whenever they approach the high level of research standards in the university.

Below is quoted a paragraph from the club's year book. "It has been hunting down the problems and puzzles of life and livelihood in the mother state. It has been busy defining conditions, causes, and consequences, and equally busy considering remedial constructive measures. It has been trying to realize in vivid way the forces, influences, tendencies, drifts and movements, the ideals, institutions, agencies, men and measures that made North Carolina what she was day before yesterday. It has been taking stock of what North Carolina is today and what she can be tomorrow."

The outstanding purpose of the club is to interest university students in the problems of the home state, to arouse them and prepare them for active participancy in community, courty and state affairs, and to put them in way of growing into effective leadership in the life beyond the campus walls.

The North Carolina Club has been very influential in raising public sentiment for the passing of reforms and other bills enacted for the welfare of the people. An example of this is the passing of the county reform bills by the state legislature in 1927. In 1918 the club had as its yearly topic "County Government and County Affairs in North Carolina." The thought which this created throughout the state developed nine years later into the above-mentioned bills.

The program for this year is an agricultural one. The papers on which the various speakers of the club will talk will be assembled and published in a volume at the end of the year, the joint product of all agencies in the state interested in the improvement of our agricultural conditions.

Below are the yearbooks, which have been published by the North Carolina Club since its founding:

1915-1916 The Resources, Advantages, and Opportunities of North Carolina.

1916-1917 Wealth and Welfare in North Carolina.

1917-1918 County Government and County Affairs in North Carolina.

1919-1920 State Reconstruction Studies.

1920-1921 North Carolina, Urban and Industrial.

1921-1922 Home and Farm Ownership.

Third Snow of Season Covers Campus

The third snow of the current winter season blanketed Carolina's campus yesterday with a heavy coat of stark, chilling whiteness. The snow which began at about ten o'clock yesterday morning had, by three that afternoon, powdered up the trees and ground with a considerable depth.

The first snow-fall of the three came the Wednesday before the Christmas holidays. In this vicinity it was reported to be some twelve to fifteen inches deep and in other parts of the state even reached a level of twenty to twenty-five inches according to the weather bureau. Some particles of this snow still remained here-abouts after being on the ground twelve days and was noted here after the vacation.

The second of the group of snows came early in January after the return of the students. It was very light however and barely managed to sprinkle a thin coating on the trees, shrubs and turf.

This last white cover seems to hold forth the promise of being as heavy as the first one. The sky was laden all yesterday afternoon and the flakes continued coming down with no apparent abatement. It is seldom that any of the southern states are troubled with any snow whatsoever until early in February and it sometimes comes as late as March.

Sparrow Tells of Loan Association

At the meeting of the Chapel Hill Kiwanis Club Tuesday evening, W. O. Sparrow gave a talk on the Orange County Building and Loan Association. The club also heard B. D. Sawyer, district trustee, who gave a report of the district trustees' meeting in Charlotte last week.

The local club will observe the sixteenth anniversary of Kiwanis International with a special program next Tuesday. In cooperation with the American Red Cross, the Kiwanians are arranging to conduct a dental clinic at the Carrboro school.

Freshman Elections

The attention of the freshman class is brought to the fact that the election of the class officers is to be held tomorrow. The balloting is held in the lobby of the "Y." Only one man may be voted for in each office.

Those running for office are: for president—Ike Minor, John Phipps, Otto Prochazka, and Red Rankin; vice-president—John K. Barrow, T. H. Broughton, Joe Gardner, Harold Meade, and James M. Tatum; secretary—Bob Gold, John Leake, Shelley Sims, and Joe Tobin; treasurer—Walter Groover, Lasley Hudson, Dave McCatheron, and Gus McIver.

END "EAST LYNN" CAST SELECTION

The tentative cast selection for the Playmaker production East Lynn, has been finally made and is as follows: Mr. Jess as Sir Francis Levison; Mr. Bissell as Archibald Carlyle; Mr. Ward as Lord Mount Severn; Mr. Oettinger as Justice Hare; Mr. Deans as Richard Hare; Mr. Zimmerman as Mr. Dill; Mr. Wrigley as an Officer; Little Willie is still open; Miss Winburn as Isabel; Miss Norwood as Barbara Hare; Miss Walker as Miss Carlyle; Miss Bowers as Joyce; Miss Reed as Wilson.

The first rehearsal for the entire cast is to be held Friday evening at 7:30. All those who are to take parts in the production are asked to get copies of the play from Mr. Selden.

TWO BILLS PASS QUICKLY IN PHI

Representatives Oppose Any Interference With University Activities or Salaries.

The Phi assembly met on Tuesday night, and due to a great amount of new business, failed to consider any of the bills on the calendar. The new business consisted of the passage of two new resolutions and an amendment to the constitution.

The two resolutions were:

1. Resolved: That the Phi Assembly go on record as opposing any impending bill before the Legislature providing for the abolition of service rooms and barber shops operated by students at the University.

2. Resolved: That, the Phi Assembly go on record as opposing the proposed 10 per cent. cut in the salaries of the officers and teachers employed by the state.

The first resolution was introduced by representative Lanier and was passed by a unanimous vote. Representative Speight proposed the second bill, which was passed by a large majority.

The amendment to the constitution, which was suggested by Representative Douglas was approved by the society. It provided that a person must attend at least one meeting before being accepted as a member of the assembly.

Officers Chosen for University Orchestra

Tuesday night, the student officers of the university orchestra were elected. Frank Jaycocks was elected president, Arlindo Cate, vice-president, and James Phofl, secretary. The orchestra is composed of fifty pieces, and deserves to be called a symphonic orchestra because of the instrumentation. The duty of the student officers is to administrate the student personnel of the orchestra. The orchestra membership is composed of students, faculty members and their wives. Orchestra practices are on Tuesdays from seven p. m. to nine p. m.

The orchestra does not present many public programs, because it is essentially an organization for the study of symphonic literature. However, several formal programs will be presented during this year. Various groups from the orchestra will act as accompanying organizations for certain soloists.

GOVERNOR OPENS PRESS MEETING IN GERRARD HALL

Emphasizes Duty of University To Realize Crisis Facing The State.

"North Carolina's joy ride is over," declared Governor O. Max Gardner in the opening address to the session of the North Carolina Newspaper Institute being now held in Chapel Hill. "This state is at the end of its borrowing period. Pay day has arrived."

The Governor's address followed a short welcome by Mr. House, executive secretary of the University. President Graham, who was scheduled to deliver the speech of welcome was unable to attend the meeting due to the inclement weather and to his recent illness.

President J. W. Noell, as first speaker on the program, told of his conversion from a former attitude of opposition to large appropriations for the University, to his present one of support for the spending of every cent which the treasury of the state can afford in an effort to utilize to the fullest extent the educational advantages gained by the students. He was of the opinion that the state today faces a similar, though not as great, crisis as it did at the end of the Civil War. Much credit should be given the Governor for his attempts at remedying the situation with his live-at-home program. Not only farmers and merchants, but also newspaper men, should feel obligated to support the plan in their buying of paper. It should be urged upon the people that taxes are not too high in consideration of the benefits accomplished.

In a preliminary exposition of his views as to proposed expenditures, an item of vital impor-

Professors Publish Elementary Text for High School Pupils

In their recently published text, Sept Contes de la Vieille France, Professors Hugo Giduz and Urban T. Holmes have made seven of the twelve Lays of Marie de France readily available to students of elementary high school French.

Holmes is a member of the Romance languages department, and Giduz is on the staff of the teachers' training school.

Marie de France, whose works are the first of French writings by women, lived in the thirteenth century. She tired of the then popular custom of translating from the Latin and, as a result, decided to set down in French the stories of the traveling minstrels. The Lays are the sum of her efforts.

The editors of Sept Contes de la Vieille France have retold the stories in modern, simple French using only the present tense throughout. There are brief footnotes and, at the end of each story, questions and exercises.

Although the vocabulary is comprehensive, the editors have used cognates wherever possible in the text in an attempt to avoid mere mechanical translation with the accompanying thumbing of the vocabulary.

Tax Revision Needed

As the present state legislature will probably make a very drastic reduction in state expenditure, it might also (and obtain more constructive results) make drastic revisions in the present revenue system. One of the greatest and seemingly unsolvable problems confronting practically all state governments is that of reducing taxes and yet increasing revenue.

Instead of the well known cry of "reduce taxes" the demand should be "revise taxes." For a number of reasons legislators have failed to realize that certain elements of the tax system have outgrown their usefulness and that new conditions call for revision in taxation. No doubt a great many people realize that a revision should be made, but only one has taken upon himself the task of presenting a constructive plan of revision. I refer of course to Mr. Brummit and his proposed corporation tax of intangible values.

There is no reason why the present legislature should not undertake very sweeping revision in the tax system and one of the best places for that revision to take place is in the income tax. A very highly progressive income tax would go far toward aiding North Carolina in the solution of the problem of obtaining increased revenues without increasing the taxes on the already heavily taxed landowner. Of course, some will argue that North Carolina already has an income tax. That is granted. But does she have a highly progressive one? One that is not a burden upon the average citizen, and yet one that provides sufficient revenue. In a word, one that conforms to the ability to pay principle. Along with making the income tax more progressive, the revision should "provide for a scientific classification of the forms in which income accrues, assessment by impartial assessors, and publication of income tax returns." If such a revision were made, the state would be provided with increased revenue, an opportunity to reduce the high property tax, and a very positive means of reducing inequality in wealth.

Lewis Turned Babbitt

Sinclair Lewis has always possessed the admiration of a certain small class of Americans who, while loving their country, have thought it unfortunate that we have been so long undeveloped intellectually, and have placed such a high value on material and financial success instead of striking a "happy-medium" between the two.

This group heard with pleasure the announcement that the satirist was to be the first American to receive the Nobel Award for literature. It was generally conceded that he had done exceptional work, and had, for an American, an unusually detached point of view.

The idol has more than feet of clay, however. The iconoclast's words have broken him. In a series of idiotic interviews, the Nobel winner has discovered that in the ten years since he wrote Main Street America has grown both intellectual and sophisticated. It is not understood whether he subtly refers to the referring powers of his book or whether he considers our coming of age to be arrived at through natural laws. In either case his argument is altogether astounding when on all sides we have Huey Long's, Bill Thompson's, Cole Blease's, Tom Heflin's, Tom Blanton's, Ma Ferguson's, Prohibition, W. C. T. U.'s, D. A. R.'s, a never dying Ku Klux Klan, and an endless caravan of demogogues and misled crusaders.

But what is most galling, is the fact that the author whose very winning of the Nobel Award depends upon hard, realistic, caustic, bitter criticism, has said that he will culminate the flowering of his genius by "writing a beautiful book."

The Teaching Profession

"Teaching as a profession ranks among the biggest and most important businesses in the United States," according to Dr. Thomas C. McCracken, of the University of Ohio. He claims that those who select the teaching profession are working to relieve human ills. "They are people who would not be happy unless directly aiding others."

In spite of the fact that teaching is an industry, many people engaging in it are inadequately trained. Up until rather recently such was the case in the south more than elsewhere. Our own state of North Carolina has, during the last decade, made progress in putting public school instruction on a higher plane. But there is still room for further advancement.

Even now, salaries paid teachers in our state institutions of collegiate rank are low, as compared with other colleges and universities of equal size and rating. After many long years of labor on the part of progressive citizens, teachers in the public schools of North Carolina are receiving salaries which barely afford a respectable living, a living that would do credit to the honorable teaching profession.

The fact which stares us in the face is that reduction of existing salaries will greatly lower both the caliber of persons who will become teachers, and will lessen the prestige of the profession. We believe that there are enough moneyed interests in North Carolina to enable the educational institutions of the state to weather the storms of demand from within and the competition from without, until the dawn of a better day. The matter is a serious one, which concerns the future of the entire citizenry of the state.—J. C. W.

GOVERNOR OPENS PRESS MEETING

tance to the University since it involves appropriations and salaries of state institutions and employees, the Governor stressed the fact that today North Carolina is facing a period of great difficulty in its climb of progress. Young men of this college generation have to deal with new forces as they participate in the making of important history. Theirs is the responsibility of shaping the destiny of the commonwealth. The front line of progress is never straight, but consists of a jagged line, more advanced in some parts than in others.

Governor Gardner emphasized his interest and knowledge of student affairs from first-hand experience. Yet he realizes at the same time his debt to the state, and endeavors to put forth an honest effort to reconcile the two interests to the mutual advantage of both as far as possible. His plea was that the University display the same loyalty and patriotism in admitting and facing honestly the problems before all.

In the Gogernor's opinion, a necessary remedy for the situation is a complete reorganization of the constitution and underlying philosophy of government in the state. The people must realize that the time has come, with North Carolina second only to New York in bonded indebtedness, paying more in two years now on debts than the entire state debt amounted to in 1913, for the economic "joy ride" to cease. Though not a dollar was spent dishonestly, and there should be no regret for those expenditures, yet at a time such as the present, when conditions of the farmers are critical due to the vast drop in revenue for this year as compared with last, continued burden of taxation would lead but to disaster.

CENTRAL COUNCIL RECEIVES REPLY FROM VIRGINIA U.

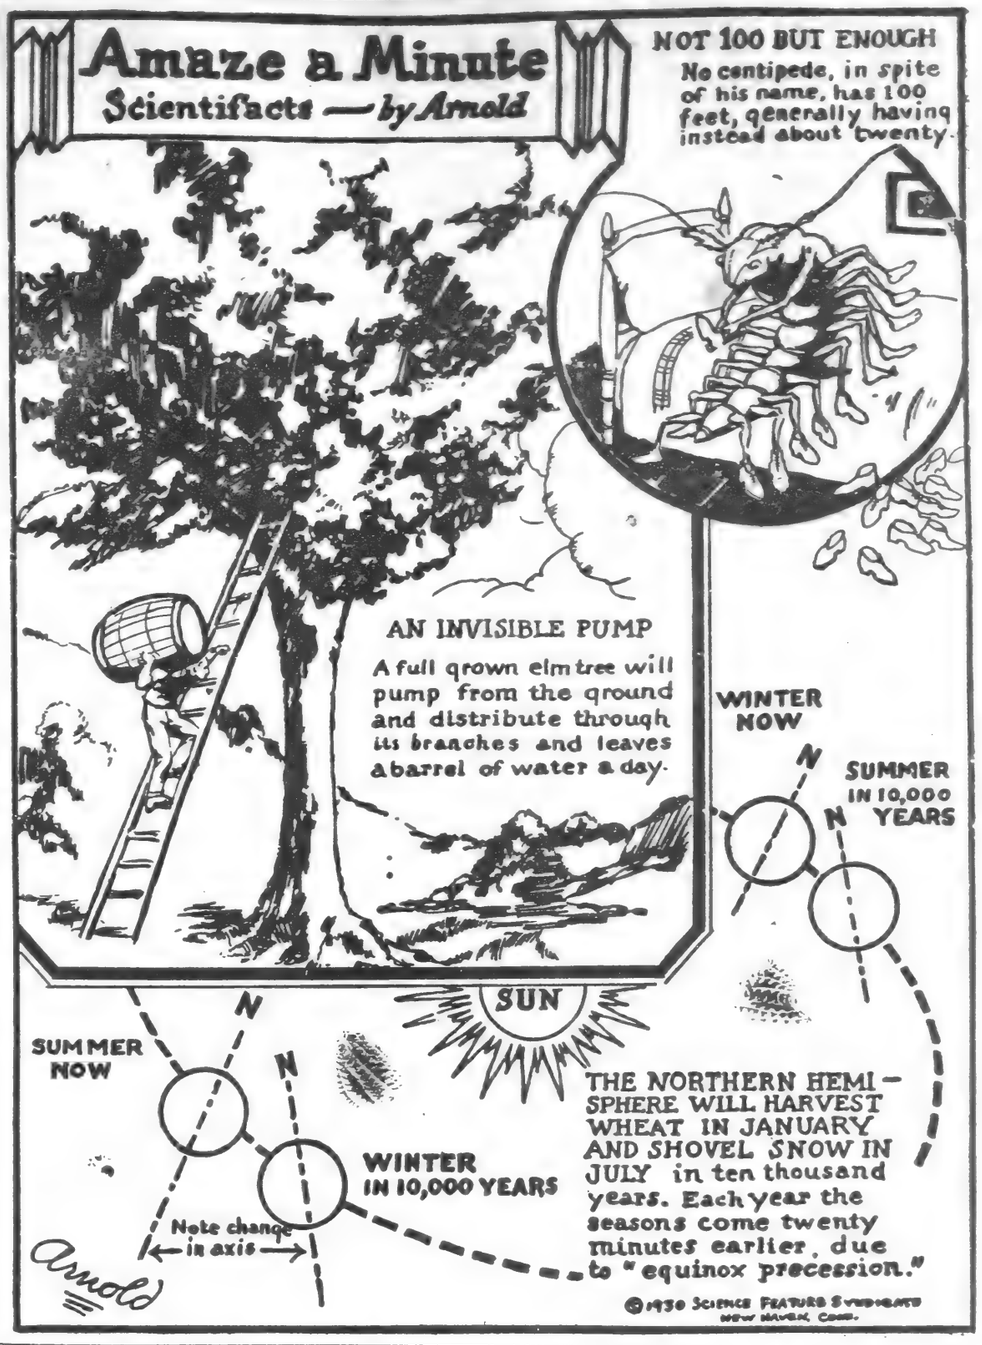
a student must make an average grade of 85 on two years of specified work.



"These regulations have now been in effect for several years. "The student body has recently organized the 'Student Senate,' which we hope will present the point of view of the students in regard to academic matters. The 'Senate' so far has presented only a few matters for the consideration of the faculty. We hope that additional suggestions will be made from time to time."

It is easy to see that the so-called conservative University of Virginia is more liberal in regard to the rule on absences from classes than the absence legislation which the faculty enacted last March, which would provide that only honor roll students among the juniors and seniors would be permitted to absent themselves from classes without excuse, and which some faculty men are seeking to have repealed all together.

Club Elects Officers

At a recent meeting of the country club new officers were elected. Harold Meyer was succeeded as president by E. L. Mackie. John Couch was elected vice-president, Mrs. H. C. Nolen, secretary, and Dr. A. S. Wheeler, treasurer. S. H. Hobbs, Jr., and Mrs. C. T. Woollen were elected to the board of governors.

No plans for future activities were formulated at this meeting.

With Contemporaries

Keen-minded critics of the educational system in the United States often condemn university students for not taking an active interest in politics and current events of the day. "Unlike students in foreign universities," they say, "the average American colege men are interested in little else than football and women. They don't care if the five-year plan in Russia works out, if the country adopts a high or a low tariff, or if Herbert Hoover or Franklin Roosevelt is elected the next president of the United States."

In the face of all these animadversions, many of which are justified, it is gratifying to read that the National Student Federation of America has gone on record as being overwhelmingly in favor of modification of the eighteenth amendment.

College students are on their way to be real thinkers of a nation. Given a broader outlook on events of international importance by their courses in the universities, graduates and undergraduates should be in a good position to judge the merits of both sides of any practical question.

If the vote taken by these college leaders at their recent convention in Georgia may be taken as the concensus of university students throughout the United States, then certainly the administration and legislatures in Washington should give deep consideration to the wishes of college thinkers.—Daily Trojan.

Rex Enright To Coach Backfield At Georgia

FRESHMAN COACH TO LEAVE HERE FEBRUARY FIRST

Athletic Council Accepts Resignation With Regrets; No Successor Named.

COACHED HERE TWO YEARS

Was Star Fullback at Notre Dame University During 1925 Season.

Rex Enright has accepted a position as backfield coach at the University of Georgia it was learned yesterday by the Tar Heel from officials at the University of Georgia. At the meeting of the Carolina Athletic Council Monday night that body accepted the resignation of the popular freshman coach with regrets, after having found it impossible to give him an offer as tempting as that at Georgia.

The salary which Enright will receive at Georgia is between five and six thousand dollars it was learned, though the exact figure could not be determined.

Leaves February 1

Enright will leave Chapel Hill February first for Athens where he will assist Coach Harry Mehre with winter football practice. Since his contract with the University does does not expire until the end of the present academic year, he will return at the end of winter football practice to complete his work here.

The University gave him permission to absent himself from his duties here to become familiar with his new work during February. While he is away from Chapel Hill, Coach Bo Sheperd, who has assisted Enright with the freshman cagers, will have full authority to direct the destiny of that team.

Notre Dame Fullback

Enright was fullback on the Notre Dame team of 1925, and was noted for his ability at hitting the line. He was considered to be unusually fast and shifty for a man of his size, and opposing teams met with much difficulty in stopping him. The freshman coach was a regular on the basketball team also.

He came to the University in the fall of 1928, succeeding Lester Belding as head freshman mentor. Being thoroughly schooled in the teachings of Rockne, he has been very helpful to Coaches Collins and Cerney by drilling into the yearling grid aspirants the fundamentals of this system.

The record of games won and lost during the two year period, in which he has coached the freshmen, has been unimpressive, but the developing of the individual for varsity experience has proven invaluable.

No Successor Named

The athletic council failed to name a successor to Coach Enright at its meeting Monday night, referring the matter to the committee on football. It is understood that the freshman mentor will not be selected from the outside, but that one of the present assistant coaches probably will be promoted. In this event, either Odell Sapp or Ray Farris will take over the football reigns.

Sapp, who completed his football career in 1928, has had two years experience as assistant freshman mentor, while Farris, 1929 captain, has served under Coach Enright for one season. If one of these men is elevated to the head coaching position, a member of the 1930 varsity football team probably will be added as a third assistant.

Tar Heel Pugs Strong

With the South Carolina meet scheduled for tomorrow, many students are discussing Carolina's chances of again attaining the top rung position in the Southern Conference. Last year Florida and V. M. I. fought it out with the 'Gators emerging the victor. Carolina placed third. This year, the Tar Heels have three veterans, Captain Goodridge, Obie Davis, and John Warren. Last year Goodridge went to the semi-finals before he was defeated by Florida's representative. Obie Davis and John Warren also made good records before they were eliminated. In addition to these veterans, the Tar Heels boast of two of the flashiest performers ever to come out of the freshman ranks, Platt Landis, light heavy, and Marty Levinson, feather. Both of these men have a terrific punch and both can box with the best of them. However, V. M. I. has almost the same team this year that finished in second position last season. In addition, Virginia has greatly strengthened their team, and Duke is not to be taken too lightly either. But all in all, it looks as though 1931 will be Carolina's big year in boxing.

Yankees Rebuilding

The New York Yankees have already started rebuilding. The first move made by "Marse" Joe McCarthey as manager was the release of Harry Rice, outfielder, to the Washington Senators via the waiver route. You may recall that Harry Rice was one of the principals in the trade that sent Waite Hoyt, long a star hurler for the New York club, and Mark Koenig, short stop, to Detroit for Rice and Carroll. Carroll has since been waivered out of the American League to the Cincinnati Nationals, and the release of Rice to Washington leaves the New York team without a man obtained in that gigantic trade, while the Tigers have two men who will prove of great value to the Detroit club during the coming season.

Here and There

The signing of Glenn Wright, captain of the Brooklyn Dodgers, leaves that club with only two men who are still unsigned, Babe Herman and Dazzy Vance, two of their most valuable members . . . the Cubs announced the release of Ray Moss, relief pitcher, to the Los Angeles club in the Pacific Coast League . . . Leon Brogden of Kinston was elected captain of Wake Forest's football team. Brogden is also a star forward on the Deacon's basketball team . . . Freddie Sington, Alabama's all-American tackle, has just been elected to Phi Beta Kappa . . . Ed Dudley gambled $3,500 on one shot. It was in the Los Angeles open. Ed chipped one out of the rough, over some trees onto the green from where he holed out to capture first prize in the richest professional golf tournament.

South Carolina Pugs Tough or Ambitious?

South Carolina either has a mighty tough boxing team or else a mighty ambitious schedule-maker, think the University of North Carolina boxers, who open their season against the Gamecocks here Friday night at eight o'clock. The Gamecocks are fighting the Tar Heels Friday night and Duke Saturday night. College boxing teams seldom aspire to more than one meet a week.

WRESTLERS WILL LEAVE TODAY FOR BOUTS WITH NAVY

Tar Heel Matmen in Good Shape But Middies Said Stronger Than Princeton.

The Carolina wrestlers will leave here tonight for Annapolis where they will meet the strong Navy grapplers Saturday. The team will be in better shape than when it met Princeton last week, but will be confronted with even stiffer opposition. Last year Navy won from the Tar Heels by a score of 22-8 and was undefeated during the rest of the season. The Middies are said to have another strong team, but Carolina is stronger than last year. Captain Fred Stallings, who won by a fall last year, and Fred Ferguson, who won a time decision, are being depended upon to furnish the majority of Carolina's points again this year. Much depends, however, upon the way Coach Quinlan's new stars perform.

Percy Idol, star 165 pounder, is the only casualty at present. Idol developed a cold during the past week, but will probably be at his regular post Saturday.

Coach Quinlan will probably use the same lineup that appeared against Princeton, although Charley Lawson has been giving Pete Usher a stiff run in the 115 pound class lately.

Following the Navy match, which will see Carolina opposing a strong intersectional rival for the second successive week, the Tar Heels will return to face a two weeks training grind in preparations for their first Southern Conference foe, V. P. I., which will be met here January 31.

TRACK WORKOUTS BEING HELD DAILY

Cinder Team Forced to Practice At Tin Can Only When Winter Squads Are Idle.

Practice for the track team during the winter quarter, and particularly during the bad weather is greatly handicapped by the lack of room for workouts. The cinder squad has to use the Tin Can track and jumping pits only when the regular winter sports teams are not working.

This makes it necessary for the workouts to be held before three-thirty and after five-thirty.

Dale Ranson, assistant track coach, is directing the work of the team at present, but Head Coach Fetzer will at an early date be actively engaged in grooming the squad for the Southern Conference Indoor Track Meet which will be in the Tin Can here on March 7.

Under the present plan of training, regular practice is held daily for all events, excepting the pole vault and high jump, from two-thirty until three-thirty. The pole vaulters and high jumpers work out on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays after five-thirty.

On account of the fact that a number of the members of the track squad have afternoon classes, it has been necessary for Coach Ranson to conduct workouts for these men after five-thirty at the same time that the pole valuters and high jumpers practice.

At this early date it is difficult to make any predictions as to the strength that the Tar Heels will be able to muster for the indoor meet, but the coaches expect to present a formidable aggregation.

PRESS INSTITUTE CONVENES TODAY IN SECOND MEET

Discussion of Journalistic Problems To Be Continued By Prominent Speakers.

The seventh annual Newspaper Institute of the University and the North Carolina Press Association convenes for its second session today at ten o'clock in the ballroom of the Carolina Inn.

Fred Fuller Shedd, publisher of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin and president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors will address the conference on "Education for Newspaper Service." "Facing Present Conditions," will be discussed by four North Carolina editors; J. T. Fain of Henderson Times-News; R. E. Price, Rutherfordton News; Don Elias, Asheville Citizen-Times, and Roland Beasley of the Monroe Journal. Following this Albert Coates of the University Law School will speak on "Criminal Law and the Press" at ten o'clock. At 2:30 an interesting talk, "Making 'Em Read it," will be given by the managing editor of The Telegraph of Macon, Georgia.

The weekly group will be presided over by Lee B. Weathers of the Cleveland Star; the topics for discussion will be "The Audit and Commercial Printing," which will occur at 2:30 together with the daily group which meets the same time to discuss other topics of importance.

A buffet supper at the Inn will be served at six o'clock, after which, at 7:45, the meetings will continue with an address on "Observation of a Correspondent," by Mark Sullivan, a celebrated political writer and historian.

At nine o'clock a guest performance will be given by The Carolina Playmakers which concludes the program for today.

BIRMINGHAM AND ATLANTA ALUMNI HEAR SAUNDERS

Carolina alumni of Birmingham and Atlanta will meet in those two cities within the next few days to discuss athletic relations, according to announcement from the Central Alumni office yesterday.

There are approximately twenty-five alumni of this University residing in Birmingham, and tonight they will gather to hear an address by J. Maryon Saunders, executive secretary. Mr. Saunders is in Birmingham to attend a meeting of the American Alumni Council, which will hold its sessions there Friday and Saturday.

The following Monday Mr. Saunders expects to be present at a gathering of the Alumni of Atlanta, seventy-five in number. He will show pictures of the Carolina-Georgia Tech football game at both the meeting in Birmingham and the Atlanta meeting. University alumni in Atlanta are especially interested in the football relations of their alma mater and Georgia Tech.

Aged Chapel Hill Woman Passes Away

At her home on Franklin street Mrs. Lucretia Marriott died Tuesday night after some days of waning health perhaps affected by the recent bad weather. Mrs. Marriott was one of Chapel Hill's oldest citizens.

Her son, Dr. Marriott, has gained some distinction in the Washington University hospital. Before his death several years ago, her husband was a prominent professor at the University.

At the time of her death Mrs. Harriott was living with her sister, Mrs. Joshua Gore.

COACHES SELECT MEN TO BATTLE GAMECOCK PUGS

John Warren, who will either fight lightheavy or unlimited.

The failure of "Speedy" Boring to return to school and the failure of Colley to get into condition automatically places Biggs in the bantamweight class. Colley has only been out for about a week, and naturally, he has been unable to get into shape. However, he should be ready by the V. M. I. meet on January 16, which will be fought in Lexington, Virginia.

Martin Levinson has been chosen to answer the gong in the featherweight division. Marty has been going great this year beginning where he left off last season, and should pile up a great record.

Little need be said about the lightweight class, for Captain Goodridge will take good care of that position.

Obie Davis has been showing plenty of stuff in his pre-season bouts, and is another Tar Heel of whom great things are expected. Obie has developed a sweet left jab and has been cutting his opponents to pieces with it. Davis will be Carolina's hope in the middleweight class Friday night.

C. C. Jackson, who fought in the freshman ranks last year, has been moving along so rapidly that he has been chosen to represent the Tar Heels in the welterweight class. Holderness, who was at first thought to be Carolina's best in that weight, was definitely put out of the South Carolina meet because of a split head. "Red" suffered his injury in the intramural tournament. The stitches have just been taken out a couple of days ago, and Coach Rowe thought it better to leave the slugger out of the first meet. Another potential welter, Patterson, weighs 160 pounds and won't be able to get down to 149 unless he cuts off a leg.

The greatest difficulty lies in picking a lightheavy. If John Warren participates as a heavy, then Miller, a south paw, will fight in the 175 pound division. If Warren is entered as a lightheavy, then Miller will fight in the unlimited class.

The Tar Baby mitmen will also open their season by fighting Oak Ridge in the Cadet gym. Last year, a great Oak Ridge squad took over the freshmen, 5-2, and the Tar Babies are out to even things up. The lineup for the freshmen is as follows: Glover, bantamweight; Raymer or Holt, feather; Hudson, lightweight; Allsbrook or McIntyre, welter; Guthrie, middleweight; Brown or Pace, lightheavy; and Strickland or Pace, heavy.

LOCAL GOLF CLUB RECEIVES TROPHY

The Spalding Sport Shop, under the direction of Allen Koontz, has presented the Chapel Hill Country Club with a large seal bearing the figure of a golfer in a typical pose. This handsome piece will take the place of the president's cup and will be called the president's trophy.

It is intended that an open tournament shall be played each year on a non-handicap basis to determine the winner of this seal. The name of the winner will be engraved upon the award and he will automatically become ineligible for competition again for three years. Last year the title was won by Dr. Lawson who turned in a score of twenty-eight for the eight-hole course.

The trophy is now in the hands of Dr. Lawson, the chairman of the Golf committee, but will be presented to the President at the next meeting.

NO PRACTICE FOR QUINT YESTERDAY

Ashmore Gives Regulars Day of Rest as Reserves Hold Long Scrimmage.

Coach Jim Ashmore declared a day of rest yesterday for the regulars on the Tar Heel basketball team, weary after playing seven games during a nine day period. During this long grind the cagers succeeded in winning six of the seven starts, losing one to the fighting Davidson College Wildcats by the narrow margin of one point.

The reserves spent the afternoon in a long scrimmage session with almost every one on the squad seeing action.

Before the Tar Heels play their next game, which is carded for the Tin Can next Tuesday night against Wake Forest, it is expected that there will be certain changes made in the Tar Heel lineup. Coach Ashmore has not been pleased with the showing of the forwards to date, as was evidenced by his shifting Paul Edwards, guard, and former center and forward, to a forward berth in the South Carolina game. Edwards played a nice game against the Gamecocks, and it is highly probable that this shift will be of a permanent nature, but if Wilmer Hines, Tommy Cleland and Jimmy Moore show development during the next few days, Edwards may return to the guard post.

The South Carolina game showed further the superb guarding ability of the Tar Heels, but it displayed equally as well the erratic way in which Coach Ashmore's men have scored both field and foul goals. At the beginning of the first half of the game Tuesday night, the Carolina outfit was decidedly off at finding the basket, and it was only during the final minutes of play that they ran up the score to thirty-eight points.

Sandy Dameron, who is high point man to date and who has played an excellent floor game this year, was off on his shooting against the Gamecocks as were others on the squad. He rang up seven points during the first half of the game, but failed to tally in the final stanza.

Tom Alexander, guard, played against South Carolina, probably the best ball that he has played this year. Though he committed four personal fouls in the second half of the game and was forced to retire, he copped scoring honors for the evening and kept his man well covered on defense.

KING'S DAUGHTERS MEET IN BUSINESS SESSION

The King's Daughters met on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. R. B. Lawson and conducted a business meeting with the president, Mrs. J. E. Lear, presiding. Matters connected with their work of giving aid to the poor were discussed.

The King's Daughters realized $131.08 from the motion picture which was shown in their interest two Sundays ago. This money will be used to care for needy families. Since a little while before Christmas twelve or fifteen families have been provided with food, clothing, and fuel by the organization.

SOPH STARTS RIGHT ON U. N. C. MAT TEAM

Donald Conklin, star member of last year's freshman mat squad at the University of North Carolina, broke into the varsity ranks in a big way this year. Coach Quinlan picked the ambitious soph to wrestle in the 145-pound class against Princeton, and Conklin justified his confidence by winning a time decision that proved the margin of Carolina's 16-14 victory.

H. F. COMER ADDRESSES DUKE UNIVERSITY "Y"

H. F. Comer of the local Y spent the greater part of Monday at the Duke University campus. For three hours he was busy interviewing various committees of their Y.

After taking supper with several of their cabinet members, he attended their meeting and spoke for three-quarters of an hour on "the place, function, and message of Y. M. C. A. work on College Campuses."

TSUMAS MISSED PRACTICE BUT WON MATCH BY FALL

Harry Tsumas, North Carolina's star 155-pound wrestler, missed autumn practice by being out on cooperative engineering work, but that didn't seem to cramp his style. At Princeton last Saturday, in Carolina's opening meet, Tsumas showed old form in winning his match from Princeton's best 155-pounder by a fall.

"Spend More" Plea Attacked By Dean

Dexter S. Kimball, dean of the schools of engineering of Cornell University, in a statement issued through the graduate school of business of Stanford University, California, at which institution he has been for the past few months visiting professor, vigorously challenges the much talked about "spend more" solution for the present business slump. According to this authority, to suggest that consumers deliberately increase their expenditures at a time when millions of them are out of work is absurd and illogical.

The present business depression, observes Mr. Kimball, lacks that general attitude of hopeless resignation which has characterized like periods in the past. The flood of temporary measures, such as outright charity relief, the reduction of working hours, the maintenance of working forces and of wage levels, and the use of private and public moneys for carrying on building construction and similar projects, suggested to alter the present industrial depression, deserve consideration as common-sense methods of supplying employment until industry is again placed on a sound basis, says Kimball.

But, the real problem for the future, he believes, is not the cure but the prevention of business depression. The condition of overproduction of goods and the present imperfections of the processes of distributing them must be corrected, he asserts. "It is not too much to hope that a more scientific spirit in distribution, fostered by professional training in business, will come to supersede our present empiricism and guess-work methods, and eventually lead us out of the existing muddle of the distribution problem," states Mr. Kimball.

MARK ETHRIDGE LAUDS SCHOOLS OF JOURNALISM

Editor of Macon Telegraph Says Newspapers Are Improving.

Mark Ethridge, managing editor of the Macon Telegraph, talked before the seventh annual newspaper institute yesterday at two-thirty on the subject of how to make people read the newspapers. When asked to speak on this subject, Mr. Ethridge jocularly replied that if he knew how to make people read his paper he would have William Randolph Hearst for his office boy, Walter Lippman to do all editorial research, and William Allen White to take dictation.

It is Ethridge's opinion that the handling of news is the only way in which one paper is different from another. An intelligent display of news should result in having the front page give a cross section of the information in the paper. Crimes and scandals should never be given front page space in any reputable paper except when the persons involved are of such position and social standing that the facts pertaining to the case are of interest to the majority of the readers.

Mr. Ethridge ventures that the laziness of desk editors is the cause for the great number of crime stories appearing on the front pages of many of the nation's papers. It is much easier to write heads for a sensational divorce case, or a murder, or a burglary than it is to write heads for less spectacular news items.

The staffs of newspapers, Ethridge averred, have changed tremendously for the better within the last five or ten years. He stated that there are very few men now on the staff of any city paper who have not received either an A. B. or A. M. degree. The schools of journalism have done a great deal to raise the standard of newspapermen in the last decade.

Mark Ethridge further stated that he is very much in favor of journalism schools because they give the prospective reporter a background of the profession which he would otherwise have to learn from his own experience as a reporter. The journalism schools save the newspapers the task of experimenting and developing men who later might prove unfit for the work. By handing the editor of the paper a record of the prospective reporter, the journalism school shows the editor the candidate's possibilities as a newspaper man. By starting in the beginning with a competent staff, the paper will naturally progress more rapidly.

There are four qualities desired in a good reporter, as outlined by Mr. Ethridge: first, that he be curious; by curiosity is not meant nosiness or poking in affairs of no interest except to the people concerned. Curiosity, in the sense of the newspaperman, is the desire to know what everything is about, and why things are conducted as they are.

Second, a reporter should have the ability of relating in his story facts which would answer any question which might occur to a person after he has read the article.

Third, education plays a great part in the life of a modern re-

DAILY TO STAGE A STRAW BALLOT ON ATTENDANCE

Student Body Asked To Vote On Optional Attendance Questions.

In an attempt to find the general sentiment on the campus in regard to optional attendance for juniors and seniors as well as securing the student feeling concerning numerous other current questions before the student body at present the Daily Tar Heel will stage a campus-wide student straw ballot today. Ballot boxes are to be placed in the Y. M. C. A. lobby and in the editorial office of the Tar Heel in the basement of the Alumni building.

For the past two weeks the question of optional attendance has caused no little discussion among members of the faculty and student leaders, but as yet no conclusion has been reached. Some of the deans of the different schools are heartily in favor of the optional attendance, while few are strongly opposed to it.

Both of the two literary societies have expressed their feeling favoring optional attendance for the two upper classes. There has been quite a bit of talk on the question by the members of the student body themselves, and the daily paper has had several editorials and open forum letters on the question.

The Daily Tar Heel has sent letters to fifty-three of the presidents of the leading universi-

Frazier To Discuss Third Party Move

Professor K. C. Frazier, of the history and government department, will address the Graduate Club tonight at 7:30 in the Smith Building. The subject for this occasion will be a discussion of the third party movement in the United States. This topic is appropriate in view of the fact that recently Professor John Dewey of Columbia University challenged Senator George Norris of Nebraska to lead a third party movement in this country. Professor Frazier is well acquainted with the scope of this question, having talked with the Nebraska senator, other political leaders, and interested individuals. Mr. Frazier will talk on this issue with the idea of drawing some connection between it and the present economic depression.

BACON TREASURER ALPHA PSI DELTA

Psychological Fraternity Passes Resolutions Regretting Death Of Dr. McClatchy.

The Gamma chapter of the Alpha Psi Delta psychological fraternity met Wednesday evening, January 14, with H. N. Dewick presiding. During the business meeting, Miss Mabel Bacon was elected to serve the rest of the term as secretary-treasurer.

As a part of the program, Dr. J. F. Dashiell, who is a member of the Council of directors of the American Psychological Association, gave a report of the December meetings of the Association at Iowa City. He mentioned in his report, the opening during the meetings of a new psychology laboratory there. It is for graduate students only and has 200 rooms for research.

Following Dr. Dashiell's report, A. G. Bayroff spoke to the group on "General Orientation and Specific Training."

The fraternity adopted resolutions concerning the death of Dr. McClathcy who during the past year was director of the North Carolina Extension division of Columbia University. Dr. McClatchy taught at the University of Texas and at Florida State College for Women until this year. The resolution follows:

RATE RAZOR HITS AT MONOPOLIES

C. C. Todd Editor of New Monthly Paper Devoted to Attacking Public Utilities.

The new year has launched itself in an antagonistic flurry of radicalism down in the eastern part of the state with the birth of a brand new unmarred monthly paper. It is The Rate Razor, and has as its staff a solitary person. Mr. C. C. Todd, is the one-man editor and publisher. Tarboro, a small town of about four or five thousand population, has the distinct and unique privilege of being the chosen site of the paper's advent from its chrysalis.

This paper, if one takes it with a grain of salt, is very cutting in its new-born attack on monopolies of any kind, and threatens to be a very influential factor in coming political battles. The Rate Razor is painted in a very distinctive manner by being the "Hydra-monster of all public utilities," and to this end it works. Although having as its goal the abolishment of public utilities, the sheet carries current topics of interest including the actions of a famous Polish pianist, sayings of a prominent city mayor, deductions about different senators' views, a few dry satirical expostulations on "remote control" (mainly of things that are controlled) with an article written by the most famous humorist in the United States. The paper carries no advertising section, not having enough space to make it profitable. The subscription price is only a dollar a year, the sheet being published once each month.

The motto of this unusual paper is "A Monthly Paper Devoted to Razoring Rates of Monopolistic Utilities."

FRESHMEN ELECT LEAKE SECRETARY

Lack of Majority in Other Offices Make Run-Off Necessary.

A most unusual situation occurred when the results of the freshman election were tabulated. It was revealed that the office of secretary was the only one to which a candidate was elected. John Leake, of Wadesboro, was elected secretary of the class of 1934.

As no candidate for the office of president, vice-president, or treasurer received a majority of the votes cast, it will be necessary to hold another election next Tuesday during the same hours as the one held yesterday. Mayne Albright, secretary of the Student Council, will be in charge of the forthcoming election.

The two candidates for each position having the largest number of votes will be voted on to decide which of the two will receive the office. Ike Minor and John Phipps will be the two candidates for the presidency. James Moore Tatum and John K. Barrow are the candidates for the vice-presidency, and Lasley Hudson and Gus McIver are the candidates for the office of treasurer.

An unusually large percentage of men voted at this election. There were 564 ballots turned in at the polls.

NEWSPAPER MEN SEE GUEST BILL

Playmakers Present Program of Two Plays Before Members Of Institute.

The convention of the North Carolina Newspaper Institute, which is in session here this week, was entertained last night at nine o'clock at a guest performance presented by the Carolina Playmakers.

Professor Koch made the introductory speech. He told of the recent work of the Playmakers, of their origin, aims, and accomplishments.

The two productions presented were Cloey and Git Up an' Bar the Door. These two plays were given before the student body recently.

Cloey was a play about Winston-Salem folk of some twenty years ago. The characters of this feature were the same as when it was presented previously. Mrs. Motsinger was played by Marion Tatum, and her daughter, Cloey, by Mary Ewart. Joseph Fox took the part of Joseph Hall, a book agent, and Elizabeth Perrow portrayed Gracie, a girl from next door.

The second play of the evening, Git Up an' Bar the Door, a farce of Mississippi folk life. The cast, with one exception, was the same as the one which presented the play before. The scene was laid in the kitchen of a simple farm house in the hills of Mississippi about thirty years ago. Charles Elledge, Bess Jones Winburn, Kent Creuser, Lubin Leggett, and Marjorie Good of the original cast remained, the sole change was that of Philip Milhous, playing the part of Tol Nolan.

The various members of the Institute expressed their appreciation of the guest performance and complimented the performers on their splendid production.

INTERFRATERNITY COUNCIL CHANGES PLAN OF RUSHING

Final Period of Silence Reduced To One Day at Meeting Tuesday Night.

The Interfraternity Council met in the Coop Tuesday night to discuss matters concerning rushing season. Rushing rules were changed for the winter and spring quarters.

In the fall quarter the period of silence was extended through freshman week until the eighth day of classes. The rushing season then beginning continued for nineteen days. The second period of silence lasted from midnight on the nineteenth day until six o'clock on the twenty-first day. Pledging took place at two o'clock on that day.

The rushing season for this quarter began at twelve o'clock yesterday, January 14. It will continue for fourteen days, until January 28. The period of silence begins at twelve o'clock on the fourteenth day and ends at six o'clock of the following day. Thus the period of silence lasts for one day instead of two. Rushing lasts until nine o'clock on all nights except week-ends and the final night. Pledging will be on the afternoon of the fifteenth day.

In the spring quarter, rushing will begin five days after classes begin and lasts for fourteen days. As in this quarter, the period of silence begins at twelve o'clock on the fourteenth day and ends at six o'clock on the fifteenth day.

Officers of the Interfraternity Council who have charge of the enforcement of the regulations are: Jack Ward, president of the council, John Cooper, secretary and treasurer, M. D. Holderness, Art Sickles, and Will Yarborough.

NEWS INSTITUTE CLOSES SEVENTH ANNUAL SESSION

Mark Sullivan's Address This Morning Is Feature of Last Day.

Today the Newspaper Institute closes its seventh annual convention. They convened Wednesday night for the first meeting in Gerrard hall, when Hon. O. Max Gardner opened the meeting with an address on the present conditions of the state.

Yesterday morning the Institute heard Fred Fuller Shedd, publisher of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, and president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, talk on the subject of "Education for Newspaper Service." After this talk there was a general discussion of facing present conditions, in which J. T. Fain, of the Hendersonville Times-News; R. E. Rice, of the Rutherford News; Don Elias, of the Asheville Citizen-Times; and Roland Beasley, of the Monroe Journal, took part. Professor Albert Coates of the University Law School gave an address on "Criminal Law and the Press."

In the afternoon at two-thirty Mark Ethridge, managing editor of the Macon (Ga.) Telegraph, gave his views on "Making 'Em Read It." In his talk Mr. Ethridge stated that in order to have the largest number of readers there must be variety in the paper. On the front page space should be given for crimes, sports, politics, society, and other news in ratio of their importance. He says too much criminal news or too much political news spoils it, but that the best method is to combine the two. He also stressed the importance of features that would appeal to the lower classes as well as the upper classes, to men as well as to women.

Immediately after this address the Institute was divided into weekly and daily groups for discussion. The weekly group was addressed by W. Clement Moore, industrial engineer and business analyst of Wolf and Co., Philadelphia, who discussed "The Audit," and by J. C. Andrews, of the Ayden Dispatch, who discussed "Commercial Printing." Lee B. Weathers, of the Cleveland Star, was the presiding officer.

The daily group were presided over by John A. Park of the Raleigh Times. The speaker was Frank Daniels, of the News and Observer, whose general topic was the "Classification of Local and National Advertising."

At seven-forty-five last night the celebrated political writer and contemporary historian, Dr. Mark Sullivan, delivered a speech on "Observation of a Correspondent." At 9:00 o'clock the members of the Institute were guests at a performance of the Carolina Playmakers.

W. W. Ball, editor of the Charleston News-Courier, at ten o'clock this morning will talk to the Institute on "The Editorial Page," after which John N. Wheeler, president of the Bell Syndicate of New York, will address the body. The remainder of the morning will be given over to group discussions, and the session will close for this year with a report of the legislative committee by J. L. Horne, Jr., of the Rocky Mount Evening Telegram.

To The Faculty

A clash of minds and of attitudes has been engaged in for nearly two weeks over the question of whether the students of this University should have the privilege of optional attendance upon classes. During a temporary lull in this intellectual battle, and at a time when the smoke has cleared sufficiently so that we believe to be able to see with clear enough vision we desire to see in print the following paragraphs.

After an analysis of all possible reasons which might have animated the forces mobilizing to make class attendance a purely compulsory matter, and in fairness to their stand we feel it our duty to admit that they are sincere in what they are attempting to do, there seem to be two—which if the student body and the liberal members of the faculty can disprove, there is no case against optional attendance.

The first and by far the most important is the admission on the part of some of the faculty that there has been a serious break-down in instruction at the University. On the face of it this reason seems to have strength enough of its own to deny optional attendance to the student body. But the astounding point of the matter is that the faculty committee has given no evidence whatsoever that it has been guided by anything else than impressions. They have met with cases where honor roll students, immediately upon securing optional attendance in their junior years, who have begun to flunk their work. This has not been the rule, of course, as the honor roll of this and all previous quarters will prove. There are weak individuals in all organizations, of course. Professors have been faced with half-empty class rooms day after day, and have gained another strong impression. They have met with examples of men who failed work because of missing lectures and class work which happened to be vital to passing an examination. Here, too, this has been chance and not a fault of the system. Neither the committee, nor a single member of the committee has made any extensive survey of the grades received by students here during the past decade. It may be proved as a result of such a survey that optional attendance was linked to a so-called break-down in instruction here, but the fact is that it has not been. And, further, on the basis of honor grades it appears that optional attendance had actually benefitted instruction, there being a greater percentage of honor grades under full and partial optional attendance than under required attendance.

Even if it were proved that the liberal plan had lowered the grades received, the fact that classes are increasing in size each year, and that an unusual number of educational experts have left the University for positions elsewhere can not be overlooked as reasons why instruction seems to be less effective.

In a court this impression-evidence would be termed hearsay evidence and be ruled out as bearing too little weight. To prove optional attendance wrong it is necessary to offer expert testimony in the form of surveys and affidavits. On the other hand the student body has offered to submit such surveys and affidavits from college and university presidents, students reactions to their contacts with professors in class rooms, and others.

Out of the discussion of methods of teaching effectiveness, and the nature of privileges which can be safely extended to students, has come the suggestion that President Graham secure a sum of $1,000 each year to be awarded to the instructor or professor who in the opinion of students and faculty had done the best job of teaching in the year which would have elapsed. Professors have no incentive other than their own conscience to be good teachers. All the rewards go to the men who do the most research or the most writing, no matter how mediocre or useless they may be. Teaching to some is boring; that is to be regretted but is altogether natural. There are only a limited number of Kenan Professorships, and the young men very rarely get them. It is generally admitted by undergraduates that many classes are irksome and highly uninteresting. There is no spur on teaching efficiency, no reward to the professor who without ever calling the roll can command an audience by his sheer intellect alone and not by all the force of a truant-officer system.

The second argument advanced by the advocates of compulsory attendance is the fact that the constitution of the state and the charter of the University dictate that it is the obligation of the University to the people of the state to paternally force students to study and compell them to attend classes. We had the privilege of hearing the governor of the state explain just how antiquated the constitution of the commonwealth is, and how a modern and changing order can no longer operate under it. We take the governor's word as being expert opinion and rise to ask the question of the faculty as to whether paternalism isn't just about gone and why they should choose to be guided by principles belonging to another age. There is a law on the statute books of North Carolina which forbids the exhibition of snake shows and "hootchie-cootchie" dances within the confines of the University village. These two institutions having passed out of existence, and the University being saved, there is no longer any need for such a law. Time changes most things. It has certainly changed the attitude of men.

The next development sociologically seems to point toward extreme individualism which naturally will depend upon self-reliant and independent men. While the state may become more paternalistic, persons will become more selfish and less willing to aid one another according to Professor W. F. Ogburn, head of the department of sociology at the University of Chicago.

Paternalism or compulsory attendance is directly opposed to this theory of self-reliance, which uniquely enough is what we have been told here at the University is the ideal toward which every young man should point. We have been admonished to think independently along social, political, and business lines. We have been told that the University is merely our beneficent Alma Mater leading us on to Light and not a task-master driving us to work, and rubber-stamping us all with a mechanical degree if we do not prove recalcitrant. In short, we have been told to stand on our own feet—to think for ourselves. Why then this quarrel between the class room theory, and actual practice.

These gentlemen seeking a return to the principles of another age have assumed that the burden of our acquiring an education lies upon their shoulders, and theirs alone. After all, we as students have a right in the matter; we are the ones being educated. The responsibility lies equally with instructor and student. Pledged by his word of honor, which he now stands ready to give, the student should feel that education is a cooperation between student and faculty, and not as now a game between the two in which the student does his utmost to get by with as little as possble and still pass the course to the imagined chagrin of the instructor.

So far as we have been able to ascertain, no wide-spread effort was exerted to find what the students wanted when optional attendance was first granted them. It was a faculty experiment, not a joint student-faculty move. And because of this few students felt the responsibility of cooperating in it.

The students of the University seek the opportunity of proving that they are capable of prospering under liberal measures, and ask the members of the undergraduate faculty to enter into a pact with them to educate incoming students through the class room, the student forums, and publications to the high responsibilities which a new age and a famous university impose upon them. They raise the question of whether it would not be far better to accomplish the same results—more effective teaching — with less painful experience.—Jack D.

A Suggestion

There are many ways in which student opinion expresses itself, but there is at present no agent of student opinion on this campus which makes it an aim to spread among the students a criticism of the various courses taught in the University and of the professors teaching them. Of course students often advise their friends not to take certain courses and not to get certain professors, and on some occasions may even sing the praises of a particular course and its instructor. But such a method of transmitting information which influences a student's curriculum and thus either makes his education more advantageous or less, as the case may be, is certainly not the most desirable one.

There should be some publication containing an intelligent student criticism of the courses of instruction and the instructors. This suggestion is not a new or novel one, for just such publications exist in some northern universities. Why doesn't some student organization tackle the problem? The student council or the student federation might consider the possibility of putting such a plan into effect.

No organization undertaking such a proposal would have difficulty in getting a number of capable juniors and seniors to write their honest opinions of the courses they have taken. These criticisms could be published in pamphlet form and sold at the Book Exchange for a sum sufficient to pay for the printing. Such a pamphlet would be of great assistance in helping students choose their courses.

Pity the Poor Rich!

"The joy ride is over," says Governor Gardner, "and pay day has come." North Carolina stands today at the end of her borrowing period and must begin to pay her bills. According to the chief executive, the debt must be paid by the citizens of the state in proportion to their ability to pay, yet in his message to the General Assembly the governor excludes the class most able to pay—the rich.

Instead, he proposes to cut the salaries of every employee of the state in all of its branches by ten per cent. However, he excludes employees who earn less than fifty dollars per month and those whose salaries have been cut since December, 1929. The plan of the governor may seem to be an excellent one to some, but is not he going too far? Some state employees, the high state officials, can well stand the cut, but how about the already underpaid teachers of the state? Must education be forced to carry a burden greater than it can bear?

North Carolina may well be proud of her educational system, but with a decrease in appropriations for the schools and a ten per cent cut in the salaries of the teachers, this system will soon be on a decided decline. This University, known throughout the country as "the bulwark of liberalism in the South," has built up one of the strongest and ablest faculties in the nation, yet with decreases in salaries as compared with other Universities, many able members of that faculty are leaving yearly for other institutions. We cannot blame them for seeking better-paying positions although we hate to see them go. If the University of North Carolina is to retain its strong faculty, salaries equal to those of other institutions must be paid. A reduction of ten per cent would be unwise and would tend to tear down the work of many years in building up or gathering together such a faculty as we now have. May the teachers, then, be exempt from this salary reduction.

Why isn't the wealthy class called upon to bear its share of this burden? A higher inheritance tax on large fortunes would provide a part of the much needed revenue. Then, why not levy a greater tax on large incomes? The rich are able to pay more; therefore, in accordance with Governor Gardner's idea of a just tax system, the rich must be made to pay in proportion to their ability. Why must the poor rich escape their share of the burden?—B. H. N.

The Reality Of Space

Those of us who have gone through that painful experience of having one of our fingers caught between the edge of a door and the door post, will not be inclined to agree with the Ether theory of the eminent English scientist, Sir Oliver Lodge. This theory, and it is supported by a large number of the great physicists of today, maintains that matter consists mostly of empty space; that the portions of matter in space are all distantly separated from each other in proportion to their size.

Matter is constructed only of minute electric charges called electrons and protons. These electric units are so extremely minute that they are separated from each other like the planets in the solar system; the greater part of the atom being empty space. If we could take a solid body and magnify it sufficiently, we would see it something like the night sky—just a vast field of space with bits of matter scattered throughout it.

This theory should be of great consolation to us next time an offending door crushes a finger. Instead of cursing the door, the doorpost, or fate, we can look calmly upon our bruised throbbing digit and placidly philosophize on the theory of space. Deductive reasoning will assure us that the finger had merely been caught between two spaces sprinkled here and there with electric charges, and therefore had no right of being bruised. The throbbing of the finger can be waved aside as a result of the unusual experience. And the pain—well, it is then that we realize the full significance of the reality of space.

Training Grounds

There is no denying the fact that in many ways big business has obtained a definite hold on colleges and universities; especially on this side of the Atlantic Ocean. Back in the good old days—if there ever was such a time—the very names 'student' and 'university' were sufficient to denote an entire lack of interest in mundane affairs and in commercial matters. Universities were then sanctuaries to which the student might retire to meditate in peace and to work out complex problems merely for the joy of finding a solution. Many discoveries by students had far-reaching effects and it was because of these that business men began to interest themselves more and more in universities realizing that some of the discoveries could be of immense profit to them.

No doubt this interest on the part of business concerns has been a good thing inasmuch as it has made a college education possible for many people who would otherwise have had to do without its benefits. But there is another side to the question. What has become of a college course under the influence of the business world?

There are still some courses left which are not taught with one eye on the possibility of the student securing a position after he graduates. These courses are becoming fewer every year. In a craze for utilitarianism students seek out courses which will make money for them after they graduate. They pursue their studies to obtain higher and higher degrees not because they wish to have these honors but because their added dignity will enable them to command a higher salary when they become consulting economists, chemical engineers, head chemists or the hundred and one things which a university fits the student for.

Some progress in learning has been made by this method but the price of this progress is too high when one considers that with the advancing years universities are likely to become mere preparatory schools—training grounds, as it were,—subservient to the big industries. —McGill Daily.

Trial By Ordeal

While the educational system remains as it is, January and May, being examination months, will retain the odium which they have acquired in the course of several generations. The most blase college rakes are given to pause about this time and take a hurried look at this and that, while the serious student loses what little semblance of humanity he may possess and gives himself over to sleeplessness and worry. Seniors in particular feel the touch of approaching disaster: one slip here means no degree next spring

There is a large and growing body of opinion tending to establish more frequent and more serious examinations as an educational principle, and despite wails of protest from those who will be the victims of any such regulation, there is much to be said in its favor. At present, it is not only possible but very common for students to go through courses without doing a tap of work from October to April and then to cram the whole subect in three or four weeks. It goes without saying that monthly examinations to count in the final mark would keep the students up to date with their work while at the same time reducing the amount of cramming which would have to be done in April and May.

There are freshmen who will approach their faculty buildings this morning with a great deal of trepidation, on their way to take their first university examination. There is something about it entirely different from high school. The depressing rules and regulations on the cover of the examination books has some effect and the strange vigilator adds somewhat to that nervous feeling; and the fact that three or four subjects are being written in one room is at first more than a little puzzling. But there is always one source of comfort for the neophyte:—he can't possibly know as little as he thinks he does.—McGill Daily.

Are College Students Too Young?

Each incoming group of college freshmen seems to be younger.

Formerly the average age for college entrance was 18 or 19; but not students enter at 17, 16, and 15. In exceptional cases they are even younger than that.

The cause no doubt lies in the promotion principle of the elementary schools. This is based on the ideal that if a student has a high I. Q. and is capable of a greater achievement than the average members of his class he is sent to the grade of his achievement. Consequently, he is hurried through school and is ready to enter college before he has any idea of what college is all about, what he wants to make of himself, or how he wants to spend his next four years.

There is too great a change from high school to college, and too many of us are hurried into it.

Just because one is intellectually intelligent, doesn't always mean that he is socially intelligent.—Daily Kansan.

Large Crowd Expected Here Tonight For First Boxing Matches Of Year

TAR HEELS WILL MEET GAMECOCK TEAM IN TIN CAN

Hard Luck Hits Team as Colley Is Declared Ineligible and Miller Is Hurt.

Tonight will usher in the opening meet of the 1931 season for the University's boxing team, when the Tar Heels meet the Gamecocks for another "battle of the Carolinas" in the Tin Can at eight o'clock.

Boxing, which has become probably the most popular indoor sport, has drawn numerous spectators to their bouts, and arrangements have been made to accommodate a capacity house.

Hard luck again stalked through the Tar Heel camp, this time leaving two victims in its wake. Coach Crayton Rowe just learned that Cheatham Colley, a bantamweight, who boxed for the University three years ago and who was to be one of the mainstays on this year's team, has been declared ineligible, because he was not in school last quarter. The second victim was Miller, a south paw light heavyweight. Miller was boxing with K. O. Wilson, freshman heavyweight last year, and was butted over the eye. This definitely puts Miller out of the running as a starter against the Gamecocks. Instead, Wilson will be the Tar Heel entry.

There was no heavy practice yesterday, and instead, Coaches Rowe and Allen put the mitmen through their paces, punching the light and heavy bags, shadow boxing, and skipping rope. In the main, the workout was just to keep the boxers' weight down.

The Tar Babies, who journey over to Oak Ridge Saturday for a meet with the Cadets, engaged in an intensive drill, the last one before the meet to see who shall represent Carolina. Their lineup is as follows: bantamweight, Glover; feather, Raymer or Holt; lightweight, Hudson; welterweight, Allsbrook or McIntyre; middleweight, Guthrie; light heavyweight, Brown or Pace; heavyweight, Strickland or Pace.

There will be seven bouts, and according to the National A. A. U. and Southern Conference rules, each bout will consist of three rounds of two minutes duration. The boxer winning the majority of the rounds will be awarded the decision; if at the end of three rounds, there is no superiority shown, an extra session will be fought, the decision to rest upon the result of the extra round only.

LEONARD HOME SCENE OF SMALL FIRE YESTERDAY

Yesterday the home of Grady Leonard, local insurance man, was the scene of a small fire. The alarm was given about three o'clock in the afternoon. The local fire department was on the scene in a few minutes and quickly extinguished what might have been a serious fire.

The blaze started in a bedroom upstairs and was caused by a burning cigarette stub. The mattress on the bed and the upholstering of a sofa caught fire and filled the room with smoke. The damage was slight.

HEEL PRINTS

K. C. RAMSAY

THE LAST WINTER SPORT will get into action tonight when the boxing team meets the South Carolina Gamecocks at the Tin Can, and we believe that there is a treat in store for those who witness these bouts. Coaches Rowe and Allen have been busying themselves to get a strong septet of boxers ready for the opening fights, and a victory for the Tar Heel outfit is predicted. Captain Noah Goodridge, John Warren and Obie Davis are expected to be the star performers for Carolina because of their experience and ability, but Martin Levinson, freshman of last season, should give some very stiff opposition to the Gamecocks tonight.

With the South Carolinians fighting North Carolina tonight and Duke tomorrow night, there is speculation as to how their men will stand the two consecutive nights of fighting. They may throw all of their strength into one of the engagements, and forfeit some of the bouts in the other, should any of the men not be in the best of condition. In this event, as the Tar Heels are the first to be taken on by the fighting Gamecocks, it is likely that the South Carolinians will throw their full strength against our mitmen.

WE ARE VERY SORRY TO learn that Coach Rex Enright will not be back at the Hill next year. The freshman mentor has been very valuable in training yearlings for future varsity experience, and he will be missed. The new position at Georgia is a good promotion, and we wish him the best of success in his new work.

The resignation of one man always brings forth the discussion of who will succeed him. The football committee of the athletic council is now busy looking for a successor, and it is expected that they will have an announcement to make at an early date.

KEEPING STEP WITH THE widespread cutting of expenses that is going on in North Carolina, it is highly probable that a former Tar Heel grid star will be promoted to take Enright's place. During the past two years the athletic council has been signing up the outstanding senior athletes for coaching positions, and at the present time there are several such athletes who are capable of taking over the reigns of the head freshman football coaching position. The two likely candidates from this group are Ray Farris and Odell Sapp.

If either of these two is promoted, there will be a vacancy in the ranks of assistant freshman mentor. It is not at all improbable that one of the stars on the 1930 football team will be signed up. Jim Magner, Strud Nash, Ned Lipscomb, and others would be good men to assist coaches Collins, Cerney, Fetzer, Sapp and Farris in training football players here.

It has already been stated by the Tar Heel that Bo Shepard may take over the coaching of the freshman basketball team when Coach Enright leaves. He has assisted both the varsity and freshman cagers during the past two years, and was a stellar performer on the court when a Tar Heel regular during the days of Carolina Southern Conference basketball championship teams.

Wrestling Team Leaves To Meet Navy Saturday

The Carolina wrestlers left Chapel Hill last night for Annapolis, Maryland where they are to meet the Navy Saturday. It will be the second intersectional meet and the last long trip of the season for the Tar Heels who will return to face the leading Southern Conference teams during the remainder of the year.

Coach Quinlan will present the same lineup he used a week ago in defeating Princeton. This lineup will see Pete Usher in the 115 pound class, Captain Fred Stallings in the 125, Mayne Albright in the 135, Don Conklin in the 145, Harry Tsumas 155, Percy Idol 165, Marion Cowper 175, and Fred Ferguson in the unlimited. The team as a whole is in better condition than when it met Princeton although Percy Idol will be handicapped by a cold.

Coach Chuck Quinlan and Manager Wallace Case attended the team which left after a light workout in the Tin Can.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

Phi Gam's Win Forfeit

The Phi Gam's received a forfeit in the intramural basketball league yesterday afternoon when the Theta Kappa Nu's failed to appear.

Lewis Defeats Steele 30-9

Lewis easily defeated the Steele dormitory basketball team yesterday afternoon to win their second victory of the season. Hinton and Edgerton staged a great race for individual scoring, Hinton finally winning out by the margin of one point. Gardner and Francis finished out the scoring with five and two points respectively. For the losers Ritter led the attack with five points. Blue played a nice floor game for Steele.

Deke's Win Close One

The Deke's defeated the Phi Kappa Sig's yesterday afternoon by the close score of 25-21. Newcombe led the Deke's with 10 points, while Willis ran a close second with nine. For the Phi Kappa Sig's, Markham was best with thirteen points, followed by Walker with six.

T. E. P.'s Win Second

The Phi Alpha's weakened by sickness were defeated by the strong T. E. P.'s 22-5. The Phi Alpha's played with two players who had just been released from the infirmity. Witten and Bessen did the scoring for the Phi Alpha's. For the winners, Patterson and Peres, with five points each led the attack.

A. T. O.'s Win 59-23

The A. T. O.'s led by Allen Smith, with twenty points, easily defeated the Delta Tau Delta's by the high score of 59-23. The winners used a total of ten players, with only one player failing to score at least two points. Roulier, with eight points led the Delta Tau Delta's.

Sigma Nu's Forfeit

The Sigma Nu's forfeited to the Chi Phi's by failing to appear for the scheduled game yesterday afternoon.

Smith Guest

This Saturday the occupants of Smith dormitory, the graduate club, will be entertained at the Carolina with a free show. The members of the club are requested to be at the doors of the theatre at seven o'clock Saturday night.

BARIUM SPRINGS TO MEET FROSH WRESTLING TEAM

Bouts Scheduled for Tin Can at Four O'clock Saturday Afternoon.

Coach Peyton Abbott's freshman grapplers will open their season here tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock against a strong team from the Barium Springs Presbyterian Orphanage. The Orphanage boys will be participating in their third meet of the year, having already won decisive victories over Oak Ridge and the Davidson freshmen.

Since neither the Tar Heel freshmen nor Barium Springs have any representative in the unlimited class, there will be only seven regular matches instead of the usual eight. However, there will be several exhibition bouts between reserves of the two teams following the regular match which will not count in the scoring.

Coach Abbott has not definitely decided upon his lineup as yet, but will make his choice from a number of men who have done good work this past fall and since Christmas.

Some of the outstanding men in the 115 pound class have been Thad Hussey, former Augusta Military Academy star, Matheson, and Jack Tillery. These men have been doing good work all season and look to be good prospects. Kenneth Kennedy, J. W. Jones, and R. M. Carver have been showing up best in the 125 pound class while Mark Best, Charles Bissell, and Mort Hiller are the leading candidates for the 135 pound berth.

A. J. Coward and Carroll Cahoon have been showing up to advantage in the 145 pound division with Lewis Slung and Marshall Thompson leading the other candidates in the 155 pound class.

Franklin Blythe and Sam Efland look best in the 165 pound class, while Bob Wells seems to have the 175 pound class all to himself.

Following the meet with Barium Springs tomorrow, the freshmen will again be seen in action January 31 when the V. P. I. freshmen will be met here.

Gift Fountain Installed In Pharmacy Building

Just before Commencement last spring the entire student body of the School of Pharmacy voted to make a gift to the school. The gift selected was a Frigidaire bubbling drinking fountain. There was a delay in the filling of the order and the fountain only reached Chapel Hill last week. It has been installed in the corridor on the first floor of the Pharmacy building near the main entrance.

Letter Boxer

JOHN WARREN, UNLIMITED UNC BOXING TEAM.

John Warren is starting his third year on the Tar Heel varsity boxing team tonight. During the two years that he has been on the team, he has made many impressive showings. He is a brother of Ad Warren, 1926 Southern Conference champion, and now a professional heavyweight.

TENNIS TEAM IS WORKING INDOORS

Bryan Grant Returns to University; Ed Yeomans Out for Winter Quarter.

The University of North Carolina freshmen and varsity tennis squads complete their second week of winter practice today on the hardwood court in the Tin Can under the direction of Coach John F. Kenfield.

Freshman candidates reporting for daily workouts are Harley Shuford, John Dillard and Merle Carson. The varsity squad at the present is made up of "Sonny" Graham, Lucas Abels, Lenior Wright and Philip Liskin.

Wilmer Hines, national junior tennis champion, and Hinkey Hendlin, member of last year's varsity team, are seeing service on the Carolina basketball team and will not be available for winter practice.

FIRST YEARMEN WILL PLAY HIGH SCHOOL QUINTET

Walkertown High School Comes Here Tomorrow Night for Game at Tin Can.

The Tar Heel freshman basketball team meets Walkertown High School tomorrow night at the Tin Can in the second encounter of the season for the yearling outfit. Since meeting defeat at the hands of the Randolph-Macon first year team after having practiced only two days, they have been working hard under the direction of Coaches Enright and Shepard, and have shown considerable improvement.

Many combinations have been tried to get a smooth working quintet on the floor, and it is not certain as to who will start in tomorrow night's game. One combination that has been together several times and has shown promise is composed of Fisher and Weathers, forwards; McGlenn, center; Jones and Poe, guards.

Coach Enright has had many scrimmages recently, and practically every man on the squad has had a good chance to prove

LANG AND GREENE BROADCAST FROM RALEIGH STATION

University Students Tell of Work of National Student Federation.

In the weekly broadcast over station WPTF at five o'clock Wednesday afternoon, Red Greene and John Lang spoke about the convention of the National Student Federation of America held at Atlanta during the Christmas holidays. Red Greene told of the election of officers, of the appointment of committees and of numerous interesting incidents which occurred on the trip.

John Lang in his talk went into the details of the Federation's work and stated that there are 500,000,000 students who are members of the organization, and that the expenditures of the organization in its efforts to sponsor student welfare amounts to $100,000. Lang said that the work of the N. S. F. A. was endorsed by President Herbert C. Hoover; Ray Lyman Wilbur, secretary of the Interior; Owen D. Young, great financier; Dr. Butler, president of Columbia university; Dean Hibben of Princeton University; and President Frank Porter Graham of the University.

John Lang wished to impress on his audience that the youth of the present day are not drunkards and nitwits, as many people would have us believe, but that they are intelligent, thinking persons who are capable of maintaining an organization such as the N. S. F. A.

In his discussion of the present session of the legislature Lang evinced great confidence in the foresight of the members of the General Assembly and said that he was sure that there would be no further cut in the appropriations for the educational system of the state.

Lang further went on to state that the legislature was wise enough to find some means whereby the institutions of the state might be perpetuated without burdening the tax payers any further. He suggested that a luxury tax would do much to relieve the situation, in that it would put the burden of taxation on those best able to bear it.

In closing, he asked the General Assembly to remember that for every dollar invested in the educational system of the state ten fold value was received in return.

ties in the United States asking them such similar questions as are contained in this straw ballot. Yesterday only one university president had been heard from, but when more replies are received they will be published in the Tar Heel.

The statistics which will be secured from the university presidents together with the results of this straw ballot are to be turned over to a committee who will make the final decision on the matter. The final record of the student straw ballot will probably have considerable weight with the committee and for this reason the students are requested to voice their opinions by voting in this ballot.

The four other questions on which the students will be asked to voice their ideas are ones which have been in the minds of the faculty members lately, and the students are asked to give these questions due consideration before casting their ballot.

Recommended Appropriation For University Smallest Since 1921

The article carried in most state papers a few days ago which gave the appropriations recommended by the budget bureau seems to have given many of the University professors and alumni the wrong impression.

The article stated that the bureau recommended an appropriation of $2,680,969 for next year. The word "appropriation" was misinterpreted, for it included with the money appropriated by the state all other University income, such as student fees. The figures for other state institutions were misquoted in the same manner.

Many people who read the figures thought it a big boost, when, as a matter of fact, the University gets $200,000 less than the amount appropriated in the years 1929-30 and 1930-31 by the 1929 legislation. The amount recommended for each year of the next biennium, $575,600, would be $100,000 less than the amount consigned for the year after the twenty per cent cut of last spring.

If the present recommendation is adopted, it will be the lowest amount the University has received since the year 1921.

COMMITTEE APPROVES EXPERIMENTAL COLLEGE

The legislative committee on education of the state of Wisconsin gave complete approbation to the work of the experimental college at the University of Wisconsin, in its report to the 1931 legislature.

"The college has been well worth the cost and effort," the report affirmed in its short history of the experimental college, as developed under the direction of Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, its director.

Commenting on the new curriculum plan, the report says: "The basic thought back of the plan is to judge a student not by the number of courses he has completed, and the credits obtained, but by his actual mental attainments. The tedious bookkeeping of credits will be done away with. What a man knows and what he can do with his mind will be the test under the new plan."

"Greater vision, leadership, and research cannot help but come from this new school of education," the report concludes.

day. The successful Alabama coach announces that he has made no plans for his work at Duke as yet, but that he wants to see what he is facing over there before plans are formulated. The Duke campus, no doubt, will give him a royal reception, and are very enthusiastic over the prospects for next year. It should take some time for the Duke gridders to adjust themselves to their new coach, and for the new coach to become accustomed to the change in surroundings, but ere next fall comes around, we believe that there will be big things going on over there.

CHUCK COLLINS AND BILL Cerney will be busy with the football aspirants of the campus next week, when winter football gets underway, so both of the "neighboring institutions" will soon be preparing for the event scheduled for the Duke stadium next November.

STATE COLLEGE CONTINUES to be perplexed with its coaching problems. Moon Mullins has signed at Wisconsin, so another name has been dropped from the list of possibilities. They have some potential candidates for a strong grid team, and if they succeed in the attempt to get an able coach, they will be heard from next fall.

porter, as it is often necessary for him to use references to ancient mythology, the classics, or even mathematics. For this reason a reporter must possess a good education.

Fourth, as in all other occupations, character is a great factor in the life of a reporter. No paper can afford to employ a reporter who misrepresents facts, or who makes facts where there are none.

The small town paper is a cross between two types of papers as exemplified by the New York Times, which prints only news and no features, and the New York Journal, which has a preponderance of feature stories.

In the opinion of Mr. Ethridge, the open forum column is the most vital column on the editorial page. The theory of the open forum column is that if the paper permits the populace to say whatever it pleases the people cannot object to what the paper says.

In answer to the question whether editorial writing were a dead art, Ethridge answered that it was if the man in charge of editorials were weak and timid, but if a strong, courageous man be in charge, editorials have as much influence on the minds of the people now as ever before.

Ethridge went on to say that feature articles are very good if the right kind are printed and if there are not too many of them. The features should be balanced so that they will appeal to everybody, to both "high brow" and "low brow" alike.

fraternity, in its meeting on the 14th of January, 1931, wishes to express its feeling that in the death of Dr. Vivienne Robinson McClatchy it has lost a member whose place cannot be filled. The keenness of her intellect, the sharpness of her perception of theoretical issues, the quickness of her appreciation of practical problems, the finely critical character of her scientific attitude, and the vigor of her insistence upon fundamental values, were suffused with a human sympathy and a personal charm. It is the conviction of the fraternity that not only have we and the psychological profession and the rapidly widening circle of particular friends, but also has the world in general for whom she was laboring to bring the light of learning, suffered an irreparable loss.

"Be it therefore resolved that this expression of appreciation be sent to the family of Dr. McClatchy; and, in order that there may be a general knowledge of our action, that the secretary be instructed to present copies to the local papers; and also that it be spread upon the minutes of this meeting."

DISCUSSION OF FEATURE STORY ENDS INSTITUTE

John H. Wheeler Makes Address To Newspapermen on Closing Day of Conference.

Featured by an intensely interesting address by John N. Wheeler, president of the Bell Syndicate and president-elect of the North American Newspaper Alliance, the seventh annual Newspaper Institute, sponsored by the North Carolina Press Association and the University, was brought to a close here yesterday.

Injecting a good deal of sparkling wit, Mr. Wheeler gave a highly entertaining talk on his experiences in securing syndicated features. He told of his many trials and tribulations covering a period of several years, in securing the General Pershing feature now appearing.

"The feature story is an indispensable factor in newspaper publishing," he asserted. "Romance, health, and money are three fundamental subjects for features, and of these the highly romantic is the most important in its reader appeal."

Ben Sronce, editor of the North Wilkesboro Patriot, presided over a discussion of the weekly group on the subject of features. He stressed the importance of the home-made feature, or column, in connection with the everyday affairs of the rural community and small towns.

O. J. Coffin, head of the University department of Journalism, and Louis Graves, editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly, contributed to this discussion. Editor Graves took occasion to explain that the reason he took a two-week vacation at Christmas time was not because he was lazy, as some of the brethren had alleged, but because the plan suited

DATE IS SET FOR 1931 MAY FROLIC

Seven Fraternities Plan Dances To Be Held May 8 and 9.

At a meeting Thursday night of the committee of the May Frolic, plans were discussed for the dances to be given during the spring quarter. Definite dates were set for May 8 and 9. The committee is negotiating with orchestras but an engagement has not yet been made.

The May Frolic is an annual affair staged by several fraternities on the campus. This year the seven fraternities who will present the set are: Beta Theta Pi, Sigma Chi, Sigma Nu, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Kappa Sigma, and Zeta Psi.

Arthur Sickles, representing the Sigma Chi fraternity, is chairman of the dance committee and has as his assistants a representative from each of the six other fraternities: Dail Holderness, D. K. E.; Willis Henderson, Sigma Nu; Tom Follin, Beta Theta Pi; John Jemison, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Buck Snow, Zeta Psi; Clyde Dunn, Kappa Sigma.

Last year the dances were given during the week-end of May 2 and 3 in Bynum gymnasium with music furnished by the Florida Rythm Ramblers. Dances were given by several other fraternities during the week end.

DUKE PROFESSOR TO READ MARCO'S MILLIONS SUNDAY

Eugene O'Neill's Satire Is Fourth Monthly Playmaker Readings.

At eight-thirty tomorrow night in the Playmaker Theatre, Mr. A. J. West, professor at Duke University, will read Eugene O'Neill's satire, Matco's Millions. This is the fourth of the readings which the Playmakers present once each month. The first of these readings was on October 12 when Professor F. H. Koch rendered Shakespear's Hamlet. As a second presentation Paul Green read his own play Tread the Green Grass, November 9. The last of the fall quarter readings was Professor Koch's rendition of Dicken's, Christmas Carol, December 7.

In this work O'Neill shows the character of the Venetian explorer as it really was, and not as the romantic writers have pictured it.

The cause for his going to China was primarily in order to make money. With him business came first. When the Chinese princess fell in love with Marco, he catered to her only so long as it did not interfere with his money making schemes.

The scenes of the play are laid along the route from Italy to China, on the junk, where the love scene takes place, and en route back home. The opening action of the story occurs in various places in Italy.

The king makes him a general in the Chinese army. His shrewdness in defeating the enemies of the then ruling house makes him a popular hero with the common people. He accomplishes these feats by employing modern American methods. This bit of satire is some of the best to be written by the present day authors.

Another of the choice bits of comedy in the story is the episode on the junk. Marco Polo is entrusted to take the princess to the young prince, in another part of the kingdom, for the wedding ceremony. On the trip the princess, who is really in love with Marco makes advances to him, but he is either too dumb or too money-minded to realize this.

The princess safely delivered and a few more exciting events having taken place, the adventurer returns to his native land with great riches.

STATE Y CABINET CONVENES TODAY

Hon. J. Stitt Wilson to Be Main Speaker of Meeting in Raleigh.

Ed Hamer, president of the state student Y. M. C. A. cabinet has called the second 1930-31 meeting for today. The meeting will be held in Raleigh at the State College "Y".

The morning sesison starts at 10:30 o'clock and will be opened by Dr. E. McNeal Poteat, pastor of the Pullen Memorial church in Raleigh, leading in the devotional period. The business session will follow along with commission reports. Then there will be a discussion of the specific problems facing the different campuses.

The delegates will be the guests of the State College "Y" at a luncheon at one o'clock. The Honorable J. Stitt Wilson, ex-mayor of Berkley California, will be the after-dinner speaker.

The president of each individual "Y" and the general secretary of each college "Y" are the only ones eligible to be present. If there is no general secretary, one member of the faculty of the college may attend. Mr. Harry Comer and Ed Hamer will represent Carolina.

As special guests at the meeting all the officers of the Y. W. C. A. there may be present. Josephus Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, has also been invited.

INFIRMARY SICK LIST DECREASES

Only Twenty-Four Cases in Infirmary and Eighty-Five On Sick List.

Latest reports from the infirmary show that there has been a great decrease in the illness prevalent on the campus in the beginning of the week. At the first of the week rumors were circulated to the effect that school would be closed down, as in the "flu" epidemic of 1928, because of the number of ill persons.

There were fifty-nine persons confined to the infirmary, at the first of this week, and over 100 on the sick list. The report from the infirmary yesterday showed that there were only twenty-four cases in the infirmary and eighty-five names on the sick list. No one seems to know the cause for the sudden cloud of illness which descended upon Chapel Hill during the last week.

The attendant in one of the town drug stores stated that there was more medicine sold and more prescriptions filled during this week than at any time since the influenza epidemics of '18 and '19. Persons have diagnosed their ailments as cold, grippe, influenza, asthma, pneumonia, etc.

When the circulation of rumors in regard to an epidemic was at its height the infirmary received many calls from out in

GEORGE ADE TELLS OF COLLEGE LIFE IN THE 'GRAY' EIGHTIES

"As I check over the primitive conditions and the limited opportunities of the far away eighties, I can think of only one great privilege we enjoyed which is now denied the student of any inland college," reveals George Ade in his article on The Gray Eighties in the February College Humor. "We were given the best that the theatre had to offer and the expense was trifling. Music, the drama, food, stimulation and tobacco, all rounded out an evening of riotous living for a grand total of four bits! But student life, outside of the class work and the literary societies, was just plain starvation. We had the Y. M. C. A. and a Scientific Society (to which I contributed a paper on "Cellular Structure of Seed Coats") but any one who classes them as thrilling diversions from the dull routine of the curriculum is either imaginative or crazy.

"In the eighties it was the fashion for young men to go out serenading at night—standing around in the moonlight, singing very sentimental songs to young women who were concealed behind curtains above. As I look back upon it, it strikes me that this nocturnal practice never led up to anything worth talking about and was simply another evidence that we were not half as devilish as we thought we were.

"I am going to wind up this discourse with the story of what the average soph or junior really did in one day back yonder. He arose from a straw tick in a most unattractive room at about seven-thirty a. m. and ran to a boarding-house where he ate a frugal breakfast, consisting largely of oatmeal. Soon after eight o'clock he went to a recitation and at nine he went to another and at ten he attended chapel! Usually he had a third recitation in the morning and ate dinner about twelve-thirty. He did most of his lab or shop work in the afternoon. When that was over he was practically through for the day.

"Along about sun-down he

J. STITT WILSON IS GUEST OF 'Y' DURING WEEKEND

Ex-Mayor of Berkeley, California, to Make Address in Methodist Church

The Honorable J. Stitt Wilson, ex-mayor of Berkeley, California, will speak here tomorrow, under the auspices of the local Y. M. C. A. In the morning he will talk at eleven o'clock from the pulpit of the Methodist Church.

That evening at 7:30 he will make another speech in the Methodist Church. Afterwards there will be a combined reception and forum meeting in the dining room of the church building.

For the past ten years Wilson has been a lecturing professor from the University of Southern California. He has spoken at various universities throughout the country, and has spent two years in Russia. He is recognized as an authority on the customs and habits of the Russians.

He was one of the big four of the Detroit Y. M. C. A. convention. His speeches were the most interesting and entertaining of those given according to the opinions of the five members of this student body who attended the meeting. To have been recognized as outstanding along with such speakers as Norman Thomas, Reinhold Niebuhr and Dr. George Coe is sufficient proof of power and ability as a proficient speaker.

The outstanding features of his addresses lie in the field of social problems, politics, philosophy, and religion, ethics and the European unrest.

Registration For Quarter Is 2621

To date a total of 2621 students have been registered in the University for the winter quarter. Although this is a larger number than that of last winter it is far below the fall quarter registration of 2764 students.

Before the students left for the Christmas recess there were 985 upperclassmen registered and on the second of January 1306 freshmen and sophomores registered making a total of 2291 in the academic school and 104 in the Law school.

Since then 226 students have registered late making the total of 2621 for the quarter.

FIRST DAY'S VOTE FAVORS KEEPING CLASS PRIVILEGES

Voting to Continue for Two More Days to Determine Student Feeling on Situation.

After one day of voting on the current campus questions, the students yesterday showed themselves strongly in favor of optional attendance for juniors and seniors, only one vote being cast against it. Over ninety per cent of the persons voting were dissatisfied with the present method of instructing, while a still larger number advocated faculty-student meetings as one means of clearing up the situation.

Many were also of the opinion that a survey of the educational methods and curriculum would help the matter. Out of the entire ballots cast only two admitted that the lack of interest in the class work was due to themselves, compared to five placing blame on the professors.

Yesterday was the first day the ballot has been run in the Daily Tar Heel, but it is the plan of the managing-editor to publish it for the next three issues of the paper. In this way a more accurate result will be secured. It is, of course, understood that the members of the student body are on their honor not to "stuff the ballot."

The final result of this campus wide straw vote will be turned over to a committee, who will give the final decision on the question. The Daily Tar Heel has sent such similiar questionaires to many of the leading universities and colleges in the country, and the replies from these will also be turned over to the committee with the final tallies of this campus vote.

Students who have not yet cast their ballots on these questions are asked to do so immediately, as the final scores will probably have no little influence on the members of the committee to decide the question.

TAR HEEL STAFF MEETS TOMORROW

Meeting of Editorial Board at 5 P. M. and City Editors At 7 P. M.

The staff of the Daily Tar Heel will hold its regular weekly meeting tomorrow night in room 104 of the alumni building at seven-fifteen. The editorial writers will meet at five p. m. The sports and city editors will meet for a short session at seven o'clock.

In accord with the new custom which has been inaugurated the evening will not be occupied with reviewing the errors made by the staff during the previous week, but the whole session will be devoted to an address by a prominent and experienced journalistic figure.

At the last meeting of the staff Professor R. D. W. Connor, former editor of the Tar Heel made an informal, but interesting and instructive, talk to the group.

Members of the staff who are unable to attend tomorrow's meeting are requested to obtain an excuse from the managing editor before the meeting. All not receiving such will be marked absent. Two consecutive unexcused absences automatically drop one from the staff.

"Pay Day Has Arrived"

In Thursday's and Friday's issues of the Daily Tar Heel there appeared certain editorial comment bearing upon North Carolina's most perplexing problem of taxation. The Thursday editorial brought forth clearly the need of tax revision with the view of taxing those most heavily who are able to be so taxed. The Friday editorial went further and suggested as a possible remedy the levying of higher inheritance taxes on large fortunes and of higher income taxes on large incomes.

We shall, in this issue, attempt, not to propose a panacea for the evils of and conditions resulting from our present taxation system, but rather to take another step in outlining specific remedies. There can be no question as to the inadequacy of present funds. We feel it the more keenly here because the University is almost entirely dependent on the state; it is the child of the state and must have the necessities of life with which all fathers must provide their children if they are to be healthy, growing beings; it is not—which so many politicians imagine—a plaything of the state, to be given only such sustenance as (to put it glibly) can be afforded. The University, to remain healthy and to continue its growth (which state of things is essential to both the intellectual and cultural development of the people and the future eminence of the state), must be endowed with the material resources adequate to the furtherance of its activities.

If, as Governor Gardner has suggested, "pay day has arrived," the University must not be made to pay. It is clearly the problem of our legislators to discover some means of revenue by which the state's indebtedness may be met, some plan by which state institutions—and we mean not only the educational institutions, but also those for the care of the naturally dependent—will not have to suffer. It seems to us that the solution might be found in the levying of taxes on luxuries, and by luxuries we mean primarily tobacco and talking pictures. During the war an amusement tax was levied, and why should we not in North Carolina now, when our educational institutions are being threatened, take such action? Why is it not also just that such a tax be placed upon tobacco consumption? It seems, by all indications, that the manufacturers of cigarettes are not suffering from financial relapse. The tobacco factory and the moving picture theatre, their owners and patrons, these constitute a considerable element of the group which at the present time is most able to bear the brunt of increased taxation. The state must have additional revenue and it should not hesitate to call upon those who are reaping profits from the sale of luxuries. Such a tax would, we believe, go far in solving the problem.—B. M.

Crown Them With Laurels

A local professor recently made the statement on class that the student body of the University was not articulate. In explaining this he said that there was too little reward for a good teacher on this campus to justify a member of the faculty in taking a real, active interest in his teaching. This situation exists, not through any fault of the administration, but of the students. At present, the only possible way in which the administration can judge a man's ability is according to the research work he does and the books he has published. Under such circumstances a man is economically bound to devote his time to these things rather than to his teaching.

This state of affairs is caused by the inarticulacy of the students. Very few, if any, ever articulately give a teacher credit when he has presented a course in a stimulating and intellectually interesting manner, or has given his students something in addition to the cut-and-dried routine of the course. The man who gives "crips" is known all over the campus, but the man who really gives his time to teaching and makes something of a course is usually avoided as one who "works the hell out of you."

This situation is certainly deplorable. Perhaps many of our best teachers will go on for years in subordinate positions, and others who would be good teachers feel themselves forced to devote their time to other activities in order to gain recognition.

The remedying of this condition lies with the students. If they boost the men who are teaching well, these men will receive the recognition they deserve. A good teacher will receive as much credit as a good author. Certainly the standard of instruction on the campus will be raised.—H. B.

Our Straight-Line Students

In spite of everything that Dr. Coker and the grounds committee of the University can do, many of the students are fast making the campus as ugly as is possible with the effort that they intend to put forth. Intelligent planning of the pathways on the campus has produced a network which is both strategic in its placement and symmetrical. Students going from the Book Exchange seem to think that the paths are not quite strategic enough in their placement and most of the time save themselves ten steps by cutting across the grass plot to Saunders. They save themselves probably ten steps and utterly ruin the grass plot. In dozens of similar places the students show that they know that the straight line is the shortest distance between two points. They also show that they care very little about the appearance of the campus and about the feelings of others.

The charm of Chapel Hill and the University campus is in its informality. Beauty is entirely consistent with informality but not with carelessness. Those who take pride in their surroundings do not like to see carelessness as glaringly evident as it is on the campus at present. We owe it to ourselves and to the University to take more pride in our surroundings for it is largely from this source that the best in citizenship will come.—O. W. D.

With Contemporaries

The Quarterback Behind You

Football would be a complete mystery without him. He should have been a radio broadcaster, for at every game he makes a play-by-play report with gestures, explanations and illustrations. He sees everything and describes it with loud expletives and choice selections from football history. He beat George Washington out of the full back position on the Army team in 1779. He made the winning touchdown against Oxford in the War of 1912.

If someone fumbles the ball during a play, you know within the next three minutes who was responsible, how he happened to do it, and just what the coach ought to do to him. When the opposing team threatens to score, he shouts down that they are going to pass, that the ends should spread out, that the tackles should rush the play, and that everyone else should cover his man. When the local eleven approaches the goal line, he announces that a touchdown is certain if they use a fake kick play. They fail to score by a pass and he shrieks, "I told you so!"

With this expert in action, there is little need to watch the game. Like the noble ladies of ancient Rome who would rather have their slaves describe the chariot races than take the trouble of watching them with their own eyes, the spectators seated about this man would rather listen to his eloquent and stirring account of the game than to see it for themselves. Perhaps the athletic authorities might provide this man with a loud speaker, so that the entire audience of some fifty thousand might understand football for the first time in their lives. A salary and a title might be appropriated. At least such obliging service ought to be rewarded by a silver-plated megaphone or a cigar large enough to completely fill an extra large mouth.

When Greek meets Greek there is but one thing asked: Did your house make a C average?—Minnesota Daily.

Gone—The Golden Gullet

In these days of crisp and clipped speech, one must cross the Atlantic or trek into the Middle Western hinterland to locate a university in which debating has not lost its former high standing as the aristocrat of all the arts. Here in the East, campus enthusiasm, more fickle than a woman's heart, has long been on the wane with regard to an activity which once evoked the aspirations and admiration of countless undergraduates.

There was a time when debating societies flourished on every Campus. Freshmen gifted with silver tongues were noted by every rushing committee and received the same solicitous attention that is now accorded to football luminaries. While college men who evinced an interest in music, drama or painting were viewed askance, debaters basked in mingled sentiments of wonder and envy. The golden gullet ranked with the educated toe.

All has since been changed. Whether countless after-dinner orations have dulled our appreciation for the somewhat florid and unrestrained expression of college rhetoricians, or whether we simply are indifferent about hearing two teams argue a question which usually has no interest for us, it is difficulty to say.

Only in the cloistered halls of England's colleges does the old tradition seem to be cherished. Many a parliamentary career has had its roots in the training afforded by an Oxford or Cambridge debating team. Yet on Columbia's Campus, artificial methods must be used to restore this old activity to a robust life. It is to be hoped that the attractive encounters scheduled with foreign teams together with the proposed tour of the Middle West will help in drawing new blood to a venerable activity.—Columbia Spectator.

DISCUSSION OF FEATURE STORY

both advertisers and readers.

Presiding over a discussion for the daily group, J. A. Parham, managing editor of the Charlotte Observer, asserted that no standard daily newspaper today can hope to get along without features. Broadly speaking, he thought habit-forming features—those that disappoint readers when omitted—were the best. Were he limited to one feature, he would select the funniest comic strip obtainable. He thought much "so-called news" could be eliminated to make room for features where space was tight.

INFIRMARY SICK LIST DECREASES

the state inquiring as to the condition of affairs. Several calls came from anxious mothers who wished to know whether their sons had fallen prey to the "epidemic." One mother went so far as to have an ambulance sent to the University to bring her son, who was confined to the infirmary, home.

At no time was the situation out of hand and now that things are changing for the better it is especially safe to precdict that before long the infirmary will be functioning on its old basis with three or four people on the sick list at the maximum.

Red Cross Asks Town To Raise Relief Fund

John Barton Payne, national chairman of the Red Cross sent a telegram Thursday to Joseph Hyde Pratt, chairman of the local chapter, requesting that Chapel Hill raise $600 for the relief of drought sufferers. The national fund is to be $10,000,000 and is to be devoted to aiding the farmers whose crops were destroyed by last summer's drought.

A few days ago farmers in Arkansas marched into a town and demanded food for their starving families. Such incidents bring the drought problem forcibly before the public's eyes. Governor Gardner alluded to this incident the other night in his speech here before the newspapermen.

Contributions to this fund may be made at Eubanks' drug store, at the M store, or to Maurice Hill, Red Cross treasurer, at the Consolidated Service Plants.

VARIED PROGRAMS ARE PLANNED FOR PRESENT QUARTER

Entertainment Committee to Bring Spanish Dancer Here February 6th.

Many entertaining programs in various fields have been scheduled during the coming months at the University and at other places in the state.

The two events of interest for January are the vesper organ concert, to be played by Professor Nelson O. Kennedy in the music building, Sunday at 4:45 o'clock, and the violin concert to be presented by Professor T. Smith McCorkle, Sunday, January 25, at 4:45.

In February, two organ programs will be presented. One of the guest series concerts will be given by Frederick S. Smith on the 7th, and Professor Kennedy will play his third vesper concert on the 15th. The entertainment series will present Carolya Goya in "The Spanish Dancer" in Memorial Hall on the 6th, and Bruce Bairnsfather will deliver a lecture February 20. On the traditionally unlucky day of Friday the 13th, the South Atlantic Glee Club contest will be held in Aycock auditorium of N. C. C. W. On Wednesday, the 18th, the University symphony orchestra will present one of the two programs it will play this year. A piano concert to be played by T. Hays Barker on the 25th will round out the entertainment for February.

March will bring a great variety of programs. The glee club will open up the month with a concert at Southern Pines on the first of the month. On the second, the entertainment series will present Gay McLaurin. A guest series program will be presented by B. F. James on Wednesday, the 4th, followed by another vesper concert to be presented on the 8th by Professor Kennedy. George M. Thompson will play the second program, Tuesday, 24. To finish the month the entertainment series will have the Kedroff quartet in Memorial Hall, on the 31st.

April promises the greatest number of programs of any month. The final piano recital will be given by T. Hays Barker on the first day of the month. The entertainment series will bring its programs to a close with "Agna Enters" to be presented on the 7th. On the next day, a student piano and organ recital will be offered. On the 10th, the concerts will be played by Edwin Steckel. Thursday, 16, an unusual treat will be waiting when the University band will play the only program it has scheduled so far. Professor Kennedy will present another of his vesper concerts on the 19th, and on the 20th a general student recital will be played.

The symphony orchestra will present its last program on May 15. The last vesper concert will be played by Professor Kennedy on the 17th of the month, and the final organ recital will be given by B. F. James on May 20. In addition to the above events, the community music club will continue to hold its weekly programs.

Open Forum Policy

The open forum is not to be used for the purpose of canvassing the campus for political elections, stated the officials of the Daily Tar Heel yesterday, after receiving several letters concerning the recent freshman elections. No such letters will be printed on any occasion.

HIBBEN TO RESIGN FROM PRINCETON

Educator Has Held Presidency Of University for Nineteen Years.

President Hibben of Princeton has just confirmed rumors that he will resign from the presidency of the university next year. His successor has not yet been named.

In the nineteen years that Hibben has been president at Princeton the endowment of the university has increased more than four-fold, the faculty has almost doubled in number, half again as many buildings have been added to the campus, and the enrollment has grown more than 700.

It is said that Dr. Hibben is largely responsible for destroying the illusion that Princeton is "the country club of the nation." He has done a great deal to restore emphasis to the college as an institution of learning and has put social and athletic aspects of university life in better perspective.

The university endowment, which totaled a little more than $5,000,000 when Dr. Hibben took office in 1912, has reached the $23,000,000 figure. The entire budget of the university the year he took office was approximately $830,000, while the budget this year totaled $2,700,000.

The faculty has increased from 182 professors, instructors, and assistants in 1912 to 331 this year. The present faculty contains many scholars of national reputation and some of international reputation. Of the seventy-one buildings on the Princeton campus, twenty-nine have been erected during the administration of Dr. Hibben.

The general trend of sentiment at Princeton seems to indicate that a Princeton man, imbued with the atmosphere traditions, and spirit of the university would be the most desirable man for the position.

The difficulty which Princeton university is now experiencing in regard to choosing a president has been experienced on our own campus when the trustees were looking for a man able to capably fill the position vacated by Dr. Harry W. Chase. Princeton seems to agree with the policy of the University in that they also deem it essential that the new president be an alumnus of their university.

WINTER GRIDIRON PRACTICE STARTS NEXT WEDNESDAY

Equipment Will Be Issued From Emerson Field Monday And Tuesday.

Equipment for winter football practice will be issued Monday and Tuesday of next week from the store room at Emerson field and practice will officially start Wednesday afternoon, according to information received from the offices of the department of athletics yesterday afternoon.

Plans are being made to take care of the usually large number of students who answer the call for the winter training. In the past one hundred and more have answered the call, and it is likely that this number will be equalled this year if not exceeded.

Director of athletics, R. A. Fetzer, recently made a statement to the press calling every member of the student body to take part in some form of competitive games, and it is believed that this will prove itself a stimulus to the support that is given athletics in general.

Coach Bill Cerney announced that definite plans for carrying out the winter football program have not as yet been definitely formulated. The officials are waiting to determine the number of men on the squad before settling down to a definite policy.

During the past two winters, the squad has been divided into four squads, and each of these groups has been given the name of one of Carolina's outstanding opponents. Two games were played each week in Kenan Stadium, one on Wednesday and one on Saturday. The team winning the largest percentage of games during this series of contests was given a suitable award. Medals for improvement and ability also were awarded to outstanding individuals developed during the eight weeks of drills.

Attendance at these intra-squad games have been largely attended, and many students are hoping that the coaches will see fit to continue their former policy.

Lengthy drills on the fundamentals of the game will take up most of the first half of the session, and it is likely that great emphasis will be laid on blocking and interference running since this defect was evident in the attack of the Tar Heel football team last fall.

TIGER MATMEN DEFEAT RUTGERS

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 14.—The Princeton wrestlers scored four falls and one time advantage to defeat Rutgers, 23-15, here this afternoon. Rutgers got falls in the 145 and 155-pound classes and a default in the 118.

Capt Colmore, in the 126-pound event, furnished the principal thrill of the meet by defeating Kusanobu with a half-nelson in 3 minutes and 50 seconds.

In the 165, 175 and unlimited events, Rutgers was clearly outclassed. Royster, Billings and Rutherford scored falls in their respective classes to give the Tiger victory.

Editor's Note: The decisive victory of the Princeton team over Rutgers follows the defeat handed them by Carolina's star matmen last Saturday.

Frosh Matmen To Fight Today

Barium Springs Team Comes Here This Afternoon; Exhibition Bouts Carded.

While the varsity is meeting Navy, the freshman grapplers, under the direction of Coach Peyton Abbott, will have their hands full when they battle the strong Barium Springs Orphanage team. Coach Abbott has a likely-looking bunch that is expected to give a good account of itself against a team that has already won over the Davidson Wildkittens and Oak Ridge.

The meet will be held at the Tin Can at four o'clock and will be followed by exhibition bouts between reserves of the two teams. These exhibition bouts, however, will not be counted in the team score.

FRESHMAN FIVE PLAYS TONIGHT

Walkertown High School Scheduled for Game With Tar Heel Yearlings at Eight.

Coach Bo Shephard had his first two teams out in the Tin Can yesterday afternoon for a final workout before their second game of the season which is to be played tonight, against the Walkertown High School. The Tar Babies started their season against Randolph-Macon and they were beaten by a close score. They played this game after only two practices and showed their raggedness. Since that time the squad has gotten over its first awkwardness and a team has been rounded together that should put on a good exhibition of basketball tonight. Coach Shephard has taken over the duties since the departure of Coach Enright for Georgia, and although he intends to stress the fundamentals of the game as most important, he has ordered his men to go out and win ball games.

The first five men, composed of Minor, center; Fisher and Weathers, forwards; Jones and McCachern, have been working together all this week and they run a little smoother every day. Coach Shephard has given them a few plays and these have been practiced over and over again to insure a smooth attack tonight. Jones and McCachern are both two very steady guards. They are aggressive and hard to be fooled. They both will bear watching tonight. Coach Shephard is lucky to have two such dependable men around which to build a team. Weathers and Fisher continue to work well at the forward position. Weathers still displays an unerring ability to ring crip shots; while Fisher, although he is not as aggressive a player as Weathers, is steady and has a dead eye on shots from the fifteen foot mark. Minor, the lanky center from Charlotte, is improving with practice and should solve the coach's pivot problem without any difficulty.

Students of Montana State College went on a strike for five days because of the new regulation requiring girls to be in their dormitories by eleven o'clock instead of 2:30 as formerly.—Furman Hornet.

Dekes And A. T. O.'s Tie For First Place In Intramural Standings For Fall Quarter

List Is Compiled From Results of Tag Football, Cross Country, And Boxing Competitions—Names of All Campus Organizations Listed in Order of Points Scored.

At the end of the first quarter's intramural competition the A. T. O.'s and the Deke's were tied for first place leading the entire field by twenty-five points. The A. T. O.'s collected 175 points by virtue of their runner-up position in the fraternity tag football league, ten points collected in cross country, and eighty points gathered in the intramural boxing tournament. The Deke's gathered the same total, but their points came by virtue of their third place in the intramural tag football league and 100 points gathered in the intramural boxing tournament by virtue of Holderness' winning of the welterweight championship. Ruffin dormitory scored 150 points by winning the intramural tag football championship. The Phi Gam's made 130 points, gathering sixty-five in both tag football and intramural boxing. New Dorms finished out the first five with 111 points, gathering eighty-five points through its runner-up position in the dormitory tag football race, one point in the intramural cross country race, and twenty-five points gathered in the intramural boxing tournament.

By comparison with last year's fall quarter standings three teams who finished in the first five last year finished in the first five again this year. The Beta's, winners of the intramural cup last year, led the field with 192.5 points at the end of the fall quarter, seventeen and one-half more points than the total gathered by this year's leading A. T. O.'s and Deke's. Last year's first quarter standing for the first five are as follows:

Last Year

Team	Points
Beta's	192.5
New Dorms	118
Ruffin	96
D. K. E.	90
Mangum	85

This Year

Team	Points
A. T. O.	175
D. K. E.	175
Ruffin	150
Phi Gam's	130
New Dorms	111

A record of individual performances, scoring points for playing on winning teams and points for actual scores is kept by the intramural department. The athlete scoring the largest number of points is awarded a cup known as the Grail Cup. Donald B. Waugh, all round athlete of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity, was awarded the Grail Cup last year, the seventh year that the Grail Cup has been awarded. The team scoring the

Intramural Results

Graham Wins Over Mangum

Graham defeated Mangum yesterday afternoon by the close score of 20-17. Halley and Oliverio led the victors with eight and five points respectively. For the losers Wells was best with six points. McRae at guard for Mangum also played a nice game scoring four points.

Mangum (17)	Graham (20)
Blythe, W. W. (3)	Johnson
Blythe, F. W. (2)	Larberbaum
Gaddy (2)	Halley (8)
Wells (6)	Grindstaff (3)
McRae (4)	Oliverio (5)

Scoring substitutes: Graham; Spettaccino (2), Dinstman (2).

Old West Swamps Carr

Old West literally swamped Carr under an avalanche of baskets to win by the high score of 41-27. Henson, Crouch, and Daniels staged a race for individual scoring honors, Henson finally winning with fourteen points, followed by Crouch and Daniels with eleven and twelve respectively. For Carr Teale was best with seven points. By a peculiar coincidence the Carr individual scoring starting with Barham, with two points, and went right up the line: 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and ending with Teale's seven.

Old West (41	Carr (27)
Henson (14)	Robbins (6)
Crouch (11)	Teale (7)
Daniels (12)	Kennerly (4)
Sayre	Hyatt (5)
Woodley (4)	Barham (2)

Scoring substitutions: Carr, Aman (3); Old West, Jarman (1).

Independents Beat Grimes

The Independents badly defeated Grimes dormitory by a score of 32-15. Cromartie and Roberts, with fifteen and eleven points respectively, led the winners. For the losers Humpheries was best with six.

Tar Heels Win Bout By 5 To 2

Levinson, Goodridge, Davis, and Jackson Win on Decisions; Warren Gets Forfeit

The Tar Heel boxing team copped the meet from the South Carolina Gamecocks last night by a 5-2 score. The Gamecocks won the featherweight and lightheavyweight fights on decisions, while Levinson, Captain Goodridge, Jackson, and Davis took their fights on decisions. John Warren, heavyweight, won by a forfeit.

A complete story of the bouts will appear in the Sunday morning paper.

GRAPPLERS READY TO MEET MIDDIES

Tar Heel Team Takes Final Workout at Annapolis Preparing for Bouts Today.

Coach Chuck Quinlan's grapplers will face their second opponents of the season today in the strong Navy team at Annapolis, Maryland. The Tar Heels left here after a short practice session Thursday and worked out again at Annapolis yesterday in order to limber up for this afternoon's battle.

Captain Fred Stallings in the 125 pound class and Fred Ferguson in the unlimited division, Carolina's only winners against Navy last year will again be in togs and are being depended on to furnish valuable points.

Mayne Albright and Harry Tsumas, who led the attack against Princeton last week, are again expected to make a creditable showing. With the exception of Percy Idol who has a cold, the team is in much better condition than last Saturday.

WAKE FOREST IS CARDED TO MEET TAR HEEL QUINT

Deacons Come Here Tuesday Night for Game; V. P. I. Vs. Carolina Friday.

The Tar Heel basketball quintet faces only two teams next week, and both of these come to the Tin Can. Wake Forest is carded for a game on Tuesday night, and the V. P. I. Gobblers will meet the Tar Heels Friday.

The University Band will be at the game Tuesday night to play before the contest starts as well as during the half. This will be the first appearance of the band this quarter.

Wake Forest up until the present time has not shown any marked strength, having already dropped two games to Big Five teams. Joyner, Earp, Webb, Edwards, Gardner, Captain Mills, and Broughton are the mainstays on the Deacon team, and with much practice, it is likely that they will present a strong aggregation when they visit the Tin Can Tuesday night.

Little is known of the strength of the V. P. I. basketball team at present. The Gobblers were of average strength last year, but did not have a leading aggregation.

Since the South Carolina game last week, Coach Ashmore has kept the basketball team busy in trying to iron out the rough spots which appeared in the series of seven games. Scrimmages have been held almost daily, and work on following up shots and foul goals have taken up a large part of the cagers time.

Coach Ashmore seems pleased with the showing of the team so far this season.

SOCIOLOGY GROUP HEARS ELLWOOD

Duke Professor Discusses Trends Of Sociology Before Alpha Kappa Delta.

Dr. Charles Ellwood of the department of sociology of Duke University addressed Alpha Kappa Delta, honorary sociological fraternity last Tuesday night at the home of L. M. Brooks, on the subject of "Backgrounds and Trends of Present Day Sociology."

After some rather complimentary remarks about the local department, and pointing out that the substance of his remarks would be found in Odum and Jocher's Introduction to Social Research, Dr. Ellwood proceeded to lay before the group his own interpretation in the light of many years experience of the whole sociological movement. According to his opinion, as to many others, there are three groups: first, the philosophical sociologist, as typified by Comte and to a large degree by Spencer; second, the relatively pure sociologist, who feels that sociology has a clear field for research, but who does not go so far as the extreme behaviorist in his interpretations; and third, the so-called pure sociologist, who revels in statistics correlation, and the general playing around with methods freed from any physical or utilitarian ambition.

Concluding his remarks the speaker outlined the policy of the Duke University sociology department.

Intramural Boxing Champions Guests Of Paulsen At Dinner

"Dean" Paulsen, one of Carolina's most rabid boxing fans, entertained the intramural boxing champions at a banquet in the Carolina Inn. This banquet is given annually to championship winners in each class. Those entertained this year were: Cliff Glover, bantamweight champion; Furches Raymer, featherweight champion; Bob Gold, lightweight champion; Dale Holderness, welterweight champion; Gutherie, middleweight; Brown, lightheavy; Greer, heavyweight. Besides the champions "Mac" Gray, of the Intramural department; and Coaches Rowe and Allen, of the varsity boxing team were present.

After the banquet, which was described by "Mac" Gray as "an awful big dinner," short talks were made by "Dean" Paulsen, Coaches Rowe and Allen, and "Mac" Gray congratulating the men on the splendid showing made in the tournament. The gold medals, presented annually to the champions in each class by the Intramural department, were then presented.

FRESHMAN BOXING MEET POSTPONED

Today's Bouts With Oak Ridge Leather Pushers to Be Held in February.

Today's boxing match scheduled between the Carolina freshmen and the Oak Ridge Cadets has been postponed, and will probably be held sometime in February. The bouts, which were to be at Oak Ridge, will probably be shifted here, leaving the freshmen with only two trips on their schedule, one to Blacksburg where they will meet the V. P. I. frosh and the other to Durham where they will take on the Blue Imps of Duke.

Under Coach Allen's instruction the freshmen have been developing unusually fast and are expected to present a strong team when they open their season here with the V. M. I. rats next Saturday.

Cliff Glover in the 115 pound class and Furches Raymer in the featherweight have been showing particularly good form, as has Paul Hudson in the lightweight division. Glover and Raymer both won championships in the Intramural bouts while Hudson went to the finals only to lose a sensational match with Red Holderness, varsity welterweight.

Vernon Guthrie has been the class of the middleweights while Jim Pace seems to have the heavyweight berth sewed up at present.

The welterweight class is the scene of a close race between Red Allsbrook and Don McIntyre, while Peyton Brown and Jim Wadsworth are fighting it out for the lightheavyweight berth.

ALUMNI LOYALTY FUND COUNCIL TO GATHER TONIGHT

The alumni loyalty fund council is scheduled to convene in the office of President Frank Graham for their annual meeting this evening at 7:30 o'clock.

At this convention the council will submit a report of its activities for the past year and make plans for this year. The presiding officer will be the president of the council, Leslie Weil, of Goldsboro, who was graduated from the University in 1895.

Other members of the council are: Felix A. Grisette, '22, Chapel Hill, director of the alumni loyalty fund; H. G. Baity, '17, Chapel Hill; Allen J. Barwick, '00, Raleigh; Burton Craige, '97, Winston-Salem; Frank Porter Graham, '00, Chapel Hill; A. W. Haywood, '04, New York City; J. G. Murphy, '01, Wilmington; Ira W. Rose, '06, Rocky Mount; J. Maryon Saunders, '25, Chapel Hill; C. Felix Harvey, '92, Kinston; C. R. Warton, '12, Greensboro; and L. R. Wilson, '99, Chapel Hill.

SAUNDERS SPEAKS ON LOYALTY FUND

Felix A. Grisette, director of the alumni loyalty fund, was scheduled to address the members of the American Alumni Council at the annual winter meeting in Birmingham, Alabama, Friday and Saturday, but due to the assembly of the alumni loyalty fund council today, he was unable to attend.

J. Maryon Saunders, executive secretary of the alumni association, is attending the meeting and will read Mr. Grisette's address on the subject of "Some Practical Aspects of University Fund Raising."

The purpose of the organization is to bring the alumni workers of all the colleges of the United States together to discuss problems arising in their work.

FINAL RETURNS OF FROSH ELECTION

The final statistics of the freshman election were not available in time for yesterday's Daily Tar Heel and so are printed today. For the presidency the number of votes received by each candidate were as follows: Ike Minor, 245; John Phipps, 189; Red Rankin, 96; and Otto Prochazka, 34. The number of ballots cast for the office of vice-president were: John Barrow, 239; James Moore Tatum, 144; Joe Gardner, 91; and Harold Meade, 47. The votes polled for the secretaryship were: John Leake, 295; Bob Gold, 188; Joe Tobin, 54; and Chelley Sims, 26. The number of votes received by candidates for treasurer were: Gus McIver, 271; Lasley Hudson, 155; Dave McCatheron, 100; Walter Groover, 34.

As no candidate received a majority in any offices except in that of secretary, to which John Leake was elected, it will be necessary for an election to be held next Tuesday at the Y. M. C. A. during the same hours as the last one. At the forthcoming election, the two candidates in each office who received the highest number of votes will be voted on again. The men to be voted on are: for president, Ike Minor and John Phipps; for vice-president, John Barrow and James Moore Tatum; for treasurer, Gus McIver and Lasley Hudson. Mayne Albright, secretary of the student council, will have charge of the voting.

The subject discussed in the mathematics seminar last Wednesday was "The solutions of partial differential equation from a geometrical standpoint." Dr. Ernest L. Mackie, associate professor of mathematics, was in charge.

Community Chorus Plans New Cantata

The Community Chorus meets Monday night at 7:30 in the music building for the purpose of re-organizing for the coming year. It is the plan of the chorus, stated President George Lawrence, to give a cantata sometime this coming spring, patterned on a simplier scale to the "Messiah." Music for the cantata is to be taken from some which is already available at the music building.

Membership in the chorus is open to all who care to join, students, faculty members, and townspeople.

George Ade Tells Of College Life in '80's

strolled out and partook of a modest meal which was known as supper. On nine nights out of ten he had nothing to do after that except go to his room and sit down and talk or study a little or pop corn over a gas burner or play a few hands of penny-ante. He didn't devote any time to housekeeping and his evenings were undisturbed by the present feverish flare-ups and celebrations which now help to make college life a more or less continuous jamboree. In other words, we had not found out what a college was for. When we get together now and blow about the good old days, we are simply discussing a lot of things that didn't happen, because practically nothing did happen at any Middle West college during the eighties. If we are sentimental regarding a college experience of long ago, it is because of the fact that we met and lived with a few men that we liked. It may be true that the university of 1931 has become too gay and festive and intricate but at least it is an improvement over the complete vacuum which we established along about 1885."

The Treasury department warns the public against fake hundred-dollar bills, but isn't this "false optimism?"—San Antonio Evening News.

YEAR'S RESEARCH IS REVIEWED BY TENTH BULLETIN

Publication Shows Work Done By Faculty and Graduate Men in 1930.

The Graduate school has recently published its tenth bulletin, entitled the Research in Progress. It is composed of short abstracts on the research carried on by faculty members and graduate students for the year ending July 1930.

This bulletin is circulated throughout the state and among the members of the legislature, alumni of the University, newspaper editors, and colleges. The material is so arranged that it serves as a handy reference to last year's research.

Due to the recent growth of the Graduate school it has been necessary for the editor to present only very brief abstracts of the large bulk of material.

Since the research falls so distinctly into separate groups, the review has chosen a new method which classifies the abstracts according to their subject matter. The faculty is divided into their respective schools.

It would be difficult to choose certain abstracts and say they are outstanding, but a few will be listed to illustrate the nature of the bulletin.

In the department of Botany Dr. W. C. Coker has published notes on more than twenty species of fungi in the Journal of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society.

Professor T. F. Hickerson, of the department of Civil Engineering, is completing his work on the analysis of rigid structural frames, which he expects to include in the material for a book on "Analysis of Continuous Beams and Rigid Frames."

Dr. Collier Cobb has presented at meetings of various societies during the year the following papers: "The so-called 'oil-domes'" of the North Carolina coastal plain, "Changes in the use of the Loess-loam wheat soils of the Mississippi valley," and "Further studies of cave dwelling along the little Tennessee and Nantahala Rivers."

STAINBACK AND HAYES ADDRESS A. I. E. E. MEETING

Professor Raymond F. Stainback and C. P. Hayes, Jr., addressed the local student branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers Thursday evening in Phillips hall.

Hayes, who attended the recent convention of the institute in St. Louis, gave a report of the proceedings there. He was also present at an assembly of all the southern student branches in the same city. The larger convention meets biennially; so that, every two years it is possible for the annual student meeting to coincide with that of the parent group.

Hayes urged that Carolina men present papers at future student section conventions.

Professor Stainback lectured on "The Three Electroid Vacuum Tube" and its applications, especially to radio.

In the business session the question of an engineering dance and an "open-house" were taken up, but nothing definite came of the discussion.

PRESS TO ISSUE BOOK ON STATE'S HIGHWAY SYSTEM

C. K. Brown Writes About North Carolina Road Improvements.

State Highway System of North Carolina by C. K. Brown will be issued by the University Press within a few days according to an announcement made by press officials recently.

The volume calls attention to the fact that among the many marked improvements instituted by the state in the past ten years the construction of a modern system of highways has had the most favorable comment and has attracted the most attention among the people of other states.

The first nine chapters trace the history of public roads in North Carolina maintained by local authority a century or more ago to the last of the bond issues for the highway system in 1927. The remainder of the book concerns various phases of the state highway program as it has been conducted between 1921 and 1929.

POSSIBILITIES OF THIRD PARTY ARE CONSIDERED GOOD

History Professor Gives Political Views at Graduate Club Meeting.

Professor K. C. Frazier, of the history department, in his talk on "Party Government, and Possibilities of a Third Party" Friday night at the first meeting of the Graduate club, pointed out that the presence of a third party would be more in the nature of a threat to the two existing parties rather than a permanent political organization.

The speaker began his talk by describing the underlying principles which had caused the early growth of the political parties. Following their growth to the Civil War, he explained the effects that this great war between the states had on the political realignment of the parties in the United States. He stated that the present Republican and Democratic parties have little similarity to the old Federal and Democratic parties, as many seem to think.

The history professor believed that unless the two existing parties voice the opinions of their electorates more than they have been doing in the past, the chances for a third party are extremely good.

Speaking of the plan of a third party as proposed by Professor John Dewey, of Columbia University, he said that this idea would be more in the nature of an academic way of looking at politics rather than a furtherance of any political end. Mr. Frazier though that Dr. Dewey's party would recruit its members from the intellegencia only.

In closing the speaker stated that there were now many similarities between the two political parties of today in regard to progressive and liberal questions. "This similarity might serve as a source of realignment of a liberal party in the United States as opposed to the Democratic and Republican parties today, which, are very conservative," he concluded.

Layman, Invited To Speak Before Law School, Scores Lawyers' Ways

The University law school had a journalist and political commentator down from the Newspaper Institute yesterday, to give a layman's criticism of the legal profession; and what R. R. Clark, of the Greensboro News, told the embryonic lawyers was a plenty.

The veteran newsman didn't think the legal profession topped the others in number of crooks, but he was emphatic in declaring that "the legal profession is distinguished for protecting its crooks."

Clark pointed to the fewness of disbarments of lawyers and of prosecutions of lawyers by lawyers, and declared that this "exaggerated lodge brother idea" is degrading the profession and hurting every self-respecting lawyer.

He touched on the layman's long-standing dissatisfaction with cross-examination methods, he aimed at discounting the witness' testimony rather than at getting the truth; then his criticism fell hard on methods of jury selection.

Jurors are picked too often, he charged, not for intelligence and impartiality, but for their politics and their partial beliefs. The Judicial Conference, he reminded, worked out a greatly improved method, tending to fairness and impartiality of selection, but the "lawyer-controlled" Legislature ignored the profered method.

The "huddle system," the inefficiencies, and waste of time in court procedure came next, and then Clark scored present methods of selecting judges, tending as they do to hurl judges into politics as partisans, and making it inevitable to avoid reflection in their decisions. Appointments solely in payment of political debts would be as bad or worse, he said, urging that some way must be found to keep the judicial office from being the football of politics.

The public, long-suffering and patient, will take most anything, Clark concluded, but when public sentiment does rise, recent illustrations in the state show that the judicial system can meet the demands and deal out justice, swift, sure and right.

The lecture was unusual in that lawyers invited a layman to come in and criticise their profession, and were greatly impressed by the lawman's candor, frankness, sincerity and common-sense. The Greensboro newspaper man is the first of a number of laymen who are students of the administration of justice, invited by Professor Albert Coates, criminal law instructor here, to join with lawyers in bringing present-day issues into the classroom.

Doughtie Lectures To Civil Engineers

Members of the William Cain student chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers met for the first time this quarter last Thursday evening in Phillips hall.

J. W. Doughtie lectured in the place of C. S. Dickie, the speaker originally scheduled. The subject of the illustrated lecture was the Carquinez Strait's bridge. Doughtie's talk was based on the notes of the designing engineers.

The bridge, the longest one of the cantilever type in the world, stretches across the Carquinez Strait in California. It attracted much attention in 1927 while it was being constructed, because it exceeded in length the famous Quebec bridge. Engineers, recalling the difficulties encountered in the Quebec project, like the loss of the central span, were astonished when the suspended span of the Carquinez bridge was raised in thirty-five minutes.

PERSON HALL WILL HOUSE ART EXHIBIT

Plans for an exhibition of paintings to take place in Chapel Hill this spring were completed at the meeting last Saturday of the North Carolina Association of Professional Artists. The association voted to accept President Graham's invitation to conduct its first exhibition at the University. It will open the same day as the meeting of the American college Publicity association, April 23, and will remain open about ten days. The band room of Person hall is to be the gallery in which the pictures will be hung.

The society was organized last year so that the people of North Carolina might have an opportunity to see what native artists are doing and so that these artists might be able to present their work to the public. The association is made up of about fifteen artists who are at present living or working in this state. Mary deB. Graves is the president; Charles Barkerville, Jr., of New York City, is vice-president; Isabelle Bowen, of Raleigh, is secretary; and William Steene of Chapel Hill is treasurer.

DUKE PROFESSOR TO MAKE FOURTH READING OF YEAR

A. J. West Will Read Eugene O'Neill's Satire on Historical Figure.

The fourth of the readings which the Playmakers present once each month is scheduled for eight-thirty tonight in the Playmaker Theatre when Professor A. J. West of Duke University will read Eugene O'Neill's Marco's Millions, satire in which the author vividly portrays the shrewd, business-like character of that famous historical figure.

The first of these monthly readings was rendered on October 12 by Professor F. H. Koch who read Shakespeare's Hamlet. On November 9, Paul Green read his own play, Tread the Green Grass, as the second presentation. Charles Dickens' immortal Christmas Carol, rendered by Professor Koch on December 7, was the third Playmaker reading.

In this satirical comedy to be read tonight, the author shows the Venetian explorer as a fortune seeker with an insatiable appetite for money. This desire makes Marco an inconsiderate, impassive, calculating man of business who is ruthless in removing all obstacles to the attainment of his desire.

STUDENTS FAVOR LIBERAL POLICIES IN STRAW VOTE

Approximately Half of Student Union Cast Ballots in Attendance Census.

The second day of straw balloting brought out the fact even stronger that the students are heartily in favor of optional attendance for the junior and senior classes. Only two of the total votes cast were against the question.

As was brought out in the first day's votes, the students voting yesterday thought that a quarterly faculty - student meeting would be a good scheme to settle mutual problems. A still greater number of persons pointed out that the methods of instruction are the main cause of the lack of interest on class work, while three blamed themselves and the same number placed the fault on the professors.

Approximately half of the members of the student union have cast votes so far, but by running the ballot both today and Tuesday the officials of the publication hope to secure a much more accurate result. Due to the importance of these questions to the faculty members, as well as to the general welfare of the students, the Daily Tar Heel urges that all persons who have not yet voted will please do so.

Ballot boxes are placed in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. building and in the editorial offices of the daily paper in the basement of Alumni building.

Freshmen To Have Election Tuesday

The runoff of the freshman election will take place in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday from eight-thirty a. m. to five o'clock p. m. Mayne Albright, secretary of the Student Council, will preside over the election due to the fact that Greene, president of the student union, will be busy with exams at that time.

DEBATE COUNCIL SPONSORS TALKS ON SALARY CUT

University Students To Discuss Proposed Reforms Over WBT Tomorrow Night.

Four University debaters are scheduled to broadcast over station WBT in Charlotte Monday night. The debaters, Hamilton Hobgood, Clyde Shreve, Bill Speight, and J. C. Williams, will speak on the subject of the proposed consolidation of the University, State College, and North Carolina College and on Governer O. Max Gardner's plan for reducing the salaries of all state employees to the extent of ten per cent.

The debate will go on the air at ten-thirty and will terminate at eleven o'clock. Williams will discuss the proposed consolidation of the three educational institutions. Hobgood will discuss general financial conditions relevant to North Carolina institutions of collegiate rank, and will also speak of the lamentable lack of funds for use in the public school system of the state. Shreve and Speight will take up the discussion where Hobgood left off and will talk on the ten per cent salary cut proposition.

The topics to be discussed are of vital interest to the majority of people in the state. Each speaker will be on the air for seven minutes. The program is sponsored by the Debate Council of the University, in cooperation with the Di and Phi.

These topics on which the debaters are to speak have caused considerable discussion among the members of the faculty of the three institutions within the past few weeks. Each of the student papers of the schools have printed quite a few editorials and open forum letters on the subject.

The governor's plan of a reduction of the state employees' salaries, besides being one of the big topics for discussion in the state newspapers, has also been foremost in the minds of the citizens of the state. It is at present one of the bills which is causing much discussion in the General Assembly.

Many persons are of the opinion that by cutting the salaries the standing of the state institutions in regard to other state-supported centers of higher learning will drop to a low level. Others, however, seem to be convinced that there should be a cut somewhere, and it can come better in the educational system than anywhere else.

ORGAN CONCERT WILL BE GIVEN THIS AFTERNOON

The second vesper organ concert will be played by Professor Nelson O. Kennedy at four-forty-five this afternoon. The program is varied in nature, including works of English and French composers as well as compositions by Americans.

The first vesper concert played by Professor Kennedy was attended by more than 450 people. Today's program follows:

Part One

Sonata in E minor, James H. Rogers; Allegretto Scherzando, J. W. Thompson; Barcelle in E, Faulkes.

Part Two

Pruning And Hacking

The apprehension of some before the legislature convened lest that body become panic stricken when it faced the question of rising operating costs and decreasing revenue may be dispelled by the action of the legislature during the past week. During the early days of the session there was much talking and little acting. Panic stricken utterances emanated from Raleigh on all occasions and some of our noted tax reduction fanatics talked as if the legislature was prepared to jump into the question of reducing operating costs with an axe and begin hacking in every direction.

Of late we have noted a definite trend towards a sensible solution of the tax question. While nothing has been done the legislature has at least refrained from commencing the hacking process and are considering appropriations and revenue with an idea of balancing the two. Instead of hacking it appears that the legislature will prune. Undoubtedly there will be cuts along the line, but we think that those who are dependent upon the state for their salaries need have little concern. Institutions may suffer the loss of appropriations but these losses will not affect salaries. There are too many arguments against general salary cuts for the legislature to tamper with it unless conditions become much worse than they are at present.

Those directing the actions of the legislature are keeping their heads and as long as they approach the question of taxation with deliberation we may feel confident that pruning and not hacking will be the order of business.

With Contemporaries

Unwise Frugality

The proposal to reduce salaries of State employed by Governor O. Max Gardner, alumnus of N. C. State and Carolina, has met with fierce resentment at each of the State institutions.

Alpha Phi Gamma, national journalism fraternity, representing student opinion, at a meeting this week deplored the proposal, saying that if the reduction became a reality disastrous effects would inevitably be witnessed in State educational institutions.

The young journalists instigated a movement which other honarary fraternities and the student body as a whole could well follow.

If adopted, the economy proposal, while directly and adversely affecting the faculty, in the long run will have a more detrimental effect on the students. It is a foe to be fought by the far-sighted students, the seers, who, looking ten or fifteen years in advance, can see State College becoming a satellite to the great Duke University, all because of the stunting of growth by reducing the feed bucket in 1931.

A college degree has a fluctuating value, its worth depending on the current status of the alma mater. Ten or twenty years from now our degree will be valued according to the rank at that time of State College. It is to our interest to see State College grow.

The maximum salary for a professor here is $4,500, which is low in comparison with other colleges of similar size. Most of the instructors here could step into outside jobs at a higher salary; those who could not should be discharged as incapable.

The 10 per cent cut would drive efficient professors from State College, bar the most promising young instructors from our doors, and in the end seriously lower the standard of the student body and graduates.

Years of constant work on the part of great educators, money expended, and interest taken by high State officials have placed our college on the map. Annually students from many other states matriculate here. Easily this progress can be counteracted by destroying prestige and reputation—one false step means the downfall of the tight-rope walker. The same is true of a reputation, whether it be of a man, a business, or a college.—The Technician.

MINNEAPOLIS SYMPHONY TO PLAY IN GREENSBORO

Greensboro, January 17.—The Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Henri Verbrugghen, is the next attraction of the Greensboro Civic Music association. The musicians will play at Aycock auditorium, North Carolina college, February 11, Wednesday, at 8:30 o'clock in the evening.

The Minneapolis orchestra is made up of eighty-five musicians, representing nearly every country in the world. Two of them have been with the organization the entire twenty-seven years of its existence. Most of them have been members for twelve years or more.

Henri Verbrugghen for more than fifteen years conducted symphony orchestras in Europe and Australia before being chosen seven years ago by the Orchestral Association of Minneapolis as its new conductor.

Aldermen Propose Zoning Law Change

Wednesday night the board of aldermen of Chapel Hill met for the first time in 1931. The meeting was presided over by Mayor Pro-tem C. L. Eubanks, Mayor Zeb P. Council being sick with an attack of influenza and unable to attend.

Town Manager J. M. Foushee announced the resignation of L. B. Lloyd, chief of police, and the appointment of C. H. Wright as acting chief. The town manager also announced the appointment of J. W. Huskey as patrolman.

The board passed two ordinances on the recommendation of the judge of the Recorder's Court concerning drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

The town manager was authorized to obtain some sugar maple trees and have them planted along Franklin street immediately.

February 11 was set as the date for a public hearing of the proposal to change the town's zoning law so that a house may be divided into three apartments. This will allow a family to provide two apartments for boarders, which is illegal under the present zoning laws. R. M. Trimble of the school of engineering was appointed to fill the unexpired term of the late Dean Braune. This term does not expire until May.

In addition to Acting-Mayor Eubanks, M. E. Hogan, P. L. Burch, and B. S. Thompson were present at the meeting.

Scholarships Open In Aviation Field

Any student desiring to compete for the aviation scholarships sponsored by W. E. Boeing, chairman of the Board of United Aircraft and Transportation Corporation and the various Boeing manufacturing and operating companies, offering courses at the Boeing School of Aeronautics, Oakland, California, may obtain complete information from the registrar of the company.

These scholarships have a cash value of $7,190. and range from the complete private pilot, master mechanic, and master pilot ground school courses.

Any undergraduate, including the 1931 class, with one or more years in any approved American college or university, is eligible to compete for these scholarships. Each applicant must have maintained a scholastic standing classifying him in the upper one-third of his class for his entire college enrollment period and will be required to write an essay not exceeding 2,000 words on any one of the following subjects: Trends of Development in Air Transportation; Progress of Safety in Aviation; Trend of Airport Design and Development; Radio as an Aid to Aviation; Importance of Proper Co-ordination of Federal and State Laws Governing Air Transportation.

Floyd In Charge Of Troop School

The troop school which was held at the University last year will be continued next Thursday at seven-thirty in Davie hall, when Captain D. B. Floyd will open the initial meeting of the quarter.

Captain Floyd is an officer of the regular army formerly stationed at Fort Bragg and now stationed at Raleigh. He is in charge of the troop schools at Raleigh and at the University.

The purpose of the school is to train men as reserve officers in the army. The maintenance of these schools throughout the country is a part of the program for national defense. In his lectures Captain Floyd outlines various methods of military procedure and tactics.

Caroline Coed: "Promise me an A!"

At The Carolina

The week's bill at the Carolina theatre begins the week with the showing of Richard Barthelmess's latest release, "The Lash," taken from the best seller novel current at the present under the title "Adios." The picture, which follows closely the action and plot of the book, deals with the story of Joaquin Murietta, the notorious Spanish bandit. Most of the picture transpires in Old California before that territory became a state of the union, and Barthelmess is Don Francisco, who is a kind of Robin Hood, Don Juan, and a number of other historical characters rolled in one.

Tuesday's attraction is Lawrence Tibbet in "New Moon," the second starring feature for the famous Metropolitan opera figure. Tibbet's previous picture, "The Rogue Song," will be remembered from last year for its enthusiastic reception.

Another scenario adaptation of a popular novel will be seen on the screen Wednesday with Robert Ames and Evelyn Brent in "Madonna of the Streets," taken from "The Ragged Messinger," by W. B. Maxwell.

Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor, perhaps the screen's most popular pair of lovers, appear Thursday in "The Man Who Came Back," the sixth successive picture in which this couple have been starred as leading man and leading lady. The picture is a romantic drama with regeneration as the main theme. Others in the cast include Kenneth MacKenna, William Holden, and Mary Forbes.

Friday comes "Bachelor Father" with Marion Davies in the leading role. This well known motion picture comedienne has a celebrated string of successful productions to her credit, dating back before the pre-talkie days with such silent features as "Little Old New York" and "Tillie, the Toiler."

Ann Harding in "The Girl of the Golden West" is the attraction Saturday. This star is another one of those whose stage experience proved invaluable to the talkie screen when the vitaphone came to stay, and since her last appearance in "The Trial of Mary Dugan," when the stage production was so popular on Broadway, Miss Harding has lived in Hollywood making pictures.

Saturday night at 10:45 there will be a showing of the fourth foreign picture, this time a feature in German with an all-German cast. The production is "The Kibitzer."

Labor Head Will Speak at N.C.C.W.

Greensboro, January 17.—Miss Francis Perkins, industrial commissioner and head of the department of labor of New York, will be the next speaker of the lecture course at North Carolina college. Miss Perkins comes to the college for two public addresses February 19 and 20.

The speaker's topic is "Government's Part in the Solution of Modern Work Problems." In her public addresses and in a series of conferences with smaller groups, she will consider the problems occasioned by unemployment.

Miss Perkins has specialized in sociology and economics in Chicago, Pennsylvania and Columbia universities. She is a native of Boston. In January, 1929, through appointment as industrial commissioner by Governor Roosevelt, she was made head of the department of labor.

A second speaker of the lecture course for the month of February is Salvador de Madariaga, director of Spanish studies, Oxford university, England, and former chief of the disarmament section of the League of Nations.

HENDERSON ADDRESSES DUKE GRADUATE CLUB

Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the mathematics department of the University, spoke before the English graduate club of Duke University Thursday night.

Dr. Henderson was invited to Durham to speak on Bernard Shaw. The University professor has written a highly-praised biography, and spoke to the Duke club about some phase of the English dramatist's life and works.

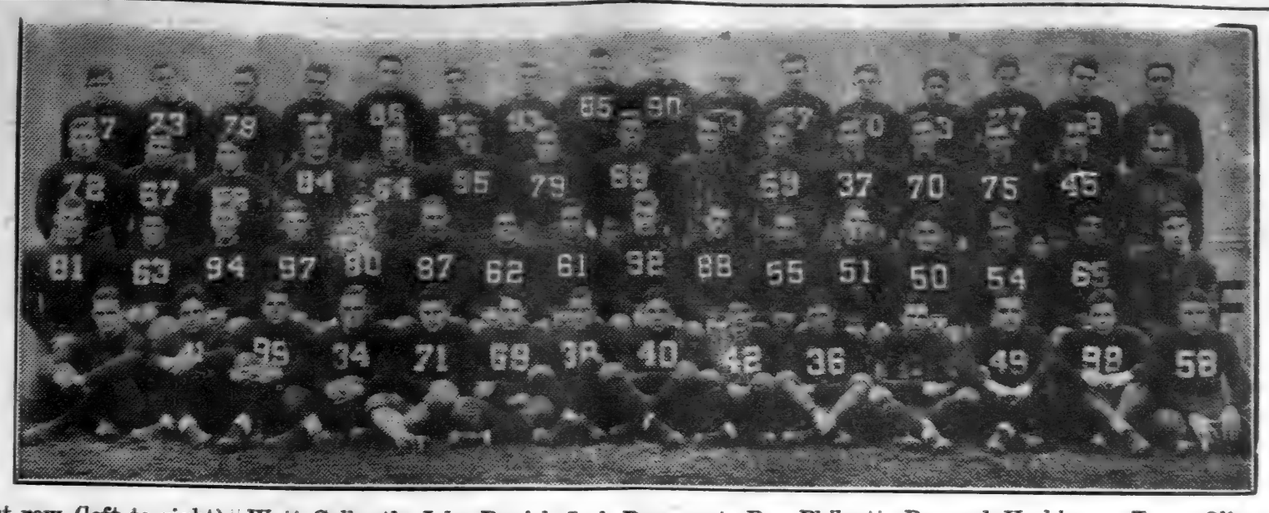
TAR HEEL RING PERFORMERS WIN OVER GAMECOCKS

South Carolinians Only Able to Take Two Bouts; Good Sportsmanship Prevails.

The "battle of the Carolinas" proved to be just another floop as far as the South Carolinians were concerned for their pride and hope was decisively defeated 5-8 by the Tar Heel mitmen Friday night in the Tin Can. The bouts, which were witnessed by 2,000 fans, were devoid of knockouts but were very interesting and hard fought.

The Gamecocks won the opening and closing bouts, while those in between were taken by the Tar Heels. Scott defeated Biggs in the 115 pound class and Callahan beat Wilson in the lightheavy class, while Levinson, Goodridge, Jackson, and Davis took the count of their opponents. Warren, Carolina's heavyweight, won his match by forfeit.



In addition to some good bouts, Carolina students saw as fine a spectacle of sportsmanship as they will ever see. Captain Goodridge had his opponent, Sam Faile, in such a condition that a half-hearted punch would have put the South Carolina battler down for the count. Instead Noah toyed with him and kept him up during the closing minute of the fight. It isn't very often that fighter will throw away a knock-out to save an opponent from further punishment, and Goodridge's act was appreciated by the students who gave him a great ovation as he left the ring.

The opening fight, between Biggs and Scott, both bantamweights, was the dullest fight on the card, and the spectators were relieved when it was over. For three rounds the battlers did little more than clinch, and it was Scott's superiority in wrestling that won the fight for him, and not any superiority in boxing. In the first round, Scott jabbed at the Tar Heel's face and soon had the claret flowing from Biggs' nose. Biggs missed quite often, and was unsure of his footing, slipping twice to the canvas for no count. It was Scotts' round by a wide margin. The second stanza was uneventful, both boys leading and then falling into a clinch. However, the Gamecock was better at infighting and also won this round. The third session was by far the most interesting round of the fight. Biggs came out with a rush and started mixing it up, but the South Carolina battler broke up these rushes by going into a clinch. Toward the end of the fight, Scott counted with five hard rights to Biggs. The boys were in a clinch as the round ended. It was just a formality giving the decision to Scott, for he had the fight all the way.

Levinson, another sophomore, made his varsity debut in great style. Marty started where he left off last year and gave his opponent a severe drubbing. This fight was chock full of thrills and action and was the best fight of the evening. Brailford got a sample of what he was in for in the opening round, when Marty shot three hard rights and lefts to his body. Brailsford mixed a bit of wrestling with his boxing and threw Levinson to the canvas, but the Tar Heel fighter was up wading in before the referee could start a count. The hard wallopping sophomore concentrated on Brailsford's body and soon had the Gamecock in bad shape. The second round was a repitition of the first, Levinson continually beating Brailsford to the punch. A hard right and left

CAROLINA TRACK TEAM INVITED TO MILLROSE GAMES

Farmer To Enter 50 Yard Sprint Event; Relay Team To Be Picked.

The invitation committee of the Millrose Athletic Association has again singled out the Tar Heel track team by extending the University an invitation to participate in the twenty-fourth annual running of the world famous Millrose Games, which will be held this year February 7 in Madison Square Garden in New York. The great honor that has been bestowed upon the University track team can be more fully realized by the fact that only about three southern schools are chosen to enter teams in these games. Last year the Tar Heels entered two events and considering that they ran against the world's best, they did remarkably well. Charley Farmer, Southern sprint champion, entered the special 50 yards sprint and placed fourth. The southern champion relay team, composed of Garrett, Gay, Barkley, and Farmer also entered this event and placed second. This year there will be another relay team entered and Farmer will again enter the special sprints. Coaches Ransom and Fetzer are willing to give anyone who wishes to try out for a place on the team an opportunity to show their skill. All the candidates should report tomorrow. If the weather is bad, practice will be held in the Tin Can at two-thirty; if the weather permits, workouts will be held in Emerson Field at four o'clock.

Following in the footsteps of football, the proceeds of the games will be donated to the Unemployment Fund. Two of the most famous track events—the Wanamaker Mile and the Millrose "600" will be run. The Rodman Wanamaker Trophy is the reward of the victor in the mile run. So far there have been three trophies awarded. To gain permanent possession of the cup, one must win the race three times. Joe Ray of the Illinois A. C. won the first two cups outright. Since then the first leg on the new trophy has been won by Ray in 1924; by Paavo Nurmi in 1925; in 1926 J. J. Connolly was returned the winner; Lloyd Hahn won in 1927-28 while Ray Conger won in 1929 and 1930.

The "600" has been an annual event of the Games. The beautiful Post Trophy was won twice by Meredith, Caldwell, and Eby before it became the permanent possession of Alan Helffrich, who won the race in 1923-24

1930 Football Team To Be Banqueted Tonight

Monograms and Numerals To Be Awarded Track and Grid Men.

Fifty-four sport writers, coaches, University officials and other important personages will honor the football squad of 1930 at the annual testimonial banquet at the Carolina Inn, Monday night at six o'clock. Authorities stated yesterday that coaches of nearby institutions and several prominent speakers have been secured to address the assembly at which the freshmen and varsity gridders and the cross country teams will be guests. Though the nature of the program was veiled in secrecy, in the promise of numerous "surprises," it was understood that O. Max Gardner, governor of North Carolina, has been invited as a principal speaker of the evening.

Letters in football and cross country as well as numerals will be awarded eligible athletes. Though the information that twenty-two monograms would be awarded came from unauthoratative sources it is understood that about that many men are eligible for such awards.

Non-comittal as to the nature of the evening's entertainment, officials stated yesterday that a number of surprises and excellent features would be embodied in the program.

FRESHMEN DO FINE WORK ON BUSINESS DIVISION

The business staff of the Daily Tar Heel announces the following men as those who have done outstanding work on that division of the paper. Pendleton Gray, John Manning, R. D. McMillan, Jr., Al Olmstead, and Bernard Solomon have done creditable work on the advertising staff of the paper. Jack Hammer, Frank Dale, and John Barrow were the outstanding men on the collecting end of the staff for last quarter. W. C. Grady, and Ed Michaels also did excellent work.

All the men listed here except John Manning are freshmen.

MARPET, DAMERON LEADING SCORERS

Pair Have Aggregated 101 Points In Seven Engagements This Year.

Seven games down and six victories in the bag, Sandy Dameron, center, and Captain Artie Marpet, guard, are still leading the scores of the Carolina quint.

Dameron has fifty-two points on twenty goals and twelve fouls. Marpet has forty-nine on twenty goals and nine fouls. Other Tar Heel leaders are: Wilmer Hines, forward, with thirty; Tom Alexander, guard, with twenty-seven; and Paul Edwards, guard and forward, with seventeen.

The Tar Heels don't play again until they meet Wake Forest here next Tuesday night. They have been utilizing their time to do needed work on offense. Coach Jim Ashmore has been trying new forward combinations, and prescribing a long period of practice shooting fouls.

Carolina's defensive play has been outstanding to date. Only Davidson has scored as many as eighteen points, and seven teams have been held to a low total of

BARIUM SPRINGS WRESTLERS BEAT TAR BABIES 25-3

Hussey, Only Freshman to Score, Gains Time Advantage Over Opponent.

The Carolina freshmen wrestlers opened their season here yesterday in the Tin Can, losing a one-sided match to Barium Springs by a score of 25-3. Of the six bouts, Barium Springs won the first five by falls to clinch the victory early in the afternoon.

Thad Hussey, 115 pounder, saved the Tar Heels from a shutout by getting a time advantage over Blue of Barium Springs in the final bout of the regular match. When nothing happened in the first two minutes, Blue was given the advantage only to have Hussey come off the mat and keep the advantage throughout the rest of the match. In the second period Hussey was given the advantage which he kept throughout the bout.

Donaldson, in the 126 pound class, Shaffer in the 135, and King in the 165 pound class looked best for the Orphans while Marshall Thompson in the 155 pound division put up a great scrap before Jackins finally pinned his shoulders to the mat. The results of the individual bouts are:

115 pound class. Hussey (NC) won a time decision over Blue with a time advantage of 5:50.

125 pound class. Donaldson (BS) won by a fall over Cope in 6:39.

135 pound class. Shaffer (BS) won by a fall over Best in 3:22.

145 pound class. Forte (BS) won by a fall over Cahoon in 5:00.

155 pound class. Jackins (BS) won by a fall over Thompson in 5:22.

165 pound class. King (BS) won by a fall over Blythe in 6:15.

Score: Barium Springs 25; Carolina freshmen 3.

FIFTEEN QUINTS LEAD RACE WITH PERFECT RECORD

A. T. O.'s Have Highest Number Of Points in First Week's Competition.

Results of the first week's play in the intramural basketball league show that out of thirty-nine teams entered in the league fifteen have a perfect average with no defeats. In the dormitory league five teams have no defeats registered; with Graham, Aycock, and Ruffin having won two games while Old West, The Question Marks, and New Dorms have won one each. Five teams have won one and lost one, these being Carr, Grimes, Manly, Independent, and Lewis. Only four teams in the dormitory league have failed to win at least one game thus far. In the fraternity league four teams have won two games for a perfect record these being the A. T. O.'s, Phi Gam's, Deke's, and T. E. P's. Six teams have a perfect record on one victory and no defeats, these are the Sigma Zeta's, Theta Chi's, Kappa Sig's, Kappa Alpha's, Beta's, and Zeta Psi's. Two teams, the Chi Phi's and Delta Tau Delta's have won one and lost one for a .500 percentage.

The A. T. O.'s have scored the highest number of points thus far, having scored fifty-nine points against the Dela Tau Delta's and defeating the strong Sigma Nu's by a 34-10 score in the first game of the season. Sigma Zeta ran up the next highest score in their 41-22 defeat of the Lambda Chi Alpha's. Graham, in the dormitory, led the way with their 39-3 defeat of Steele.

The system of points differs slightly from that of last year in that the individual players receive five points for each game in which they play and win and one point for each game in which they play and lose. The team scoring is the same with fifty points given for entering, fifty points given for each league champion, and fifty points for the campus championship winner. One other rule has been put into effect this year that was not used last; this is the rule that eliminates from active competition any team forfeiting twice in succession.

Man, Once Protected From Feminine Wiles, Must Fear Beautified Co-eds

By John Patric

"In former times," says the San Francisco Examiner, "a man had some protection against the wiles of a designing female who intended to trap him into matrimony. A law was passed by the Parliament of Paris in 1610 to this effect:

"'Whoever attracts into the bonds of marriage any male subject of His Majesty, by means of rouge or powder, perfumes, false teeth, false hair, steeled corsets, hooped petticoats, high heels or false hips, will be prosecuted for sorcery, and if convicted the marriage shall be declared null and void'."

Carolina co-eds, says Miss Elizabeth Patterson, operator of the local branch of the Mayfair Beauty Shop, are, by and large, the most consistent beauty shop patrons with whom she has ever worked. "But," she added, "beauty work of today brings out natural grace and charm, and is not founded on deception."

Leading beauty magazines predict an almost complete return to long hair. "When short skirts were in vogue," says an article in a leading beauty publication, "bobbed hair was 'cute.' But short hair and long, stately dresses cannot be reconciled."

Fads and fancies (such as colored fingernails), which have been popular in the cities, do not go in Chapel Hill, adds Miss Patterson. Marcelling and permanent waving are the "most called for" operations.

A surprising number of men students of Carolina, some of them facetiously inclined, but many in earnest, have telephoned the beauty shop during the few months of its existence here, seeking not only marcels, but often times facial treatments of various kinds. One of the good local barber shops has always been recommended to these students.

While Caroline Coed has been having waves, curls and kinks more or less permanently set into her locks, the more fashionable of the young colored women of Chapel Hill have been patronizing a shop in Durham operated after the manner of "Madame Queen," where a special apparatus removes the waves given by nature, and leaves their hair perfectly straight, and stylish.

Paul Whiteman Will Play At Wisconsin Junior Prom

The University of Wisconsin has signed up Paul Whiteman to play for their gala social event, the Junior Prom, this year. The prom-goers have been looking forward to this dance for some time and are pleased to learn of the contract.

Mr. Whiteman, who has been the modern musical dictator of the country for so long, is now called the "King of Jazz." He was a favorite of music lovers in Chicago when he played at the Edgewater Hotel of that city. From there he went to the Pennsylvania Hotel in New York City, where has was greatly liked. At present he has one of the best aggregations of jazz artists in the business.

DOUBLE HEADERS LISTED ON WEEK'S SPORT CALENDAR

Wake Forest and V. P. I. Cagers To Invade Tin Can While Boxers Meet V. M. I.

Six events grace the University athletic schedule for next week, and they are to be run off on three double header programs at home.

The varsity and freshman basketball teams meet Wake Forest in the Tin Can Tuesday night. The varsity quint meets V. P. I. here Friday night, and the freshmen meet Oak Ridge. The varsity and freshman boxers meet V. M. I.'s mitmen here Saturday night. All freshman events begin at seven o'clock, all varsity events at eight-thirty o'clock.

The wrestlers, who have just engaged in tough contests with Princeton and Navy, two of the strongest teams in the east, will go idle for the week, while they train for their next meet, scheduled for the Tin Can January 31 with V. P. I.

Carolina's basketball team will be watched with especial interest as it resumes its schedule against Wake Forest Tuesday night. The Tar Heels will have had a week's rest from games, and Coach Ashmore has been using the whole period to work on the Tar Heel offense.

WEEK'S SPORTS SCHEDULE

Basketball

7:00 O'clock

Jan. 20—Wake Forest Frosh vs. Carolina Frosh here.
Jan. 20—Wake Forest vs. varsity here.

7:00 O'clock

Jan. 23—Oak Ridge vs. Frosh here.
Jan. 23—V. P. I. vs Varsity here.

Boxing

Jan. 24—V. M. I. vs. Varsity here.
Jan. 24—V. M. I. Frosh vs. Carolina Frosh here.
Against V. M. I. the Tar Heel boxers will be carrying on against a veteran team that proved the sensation of last year's Southern Tournament. Carolina beat the Cadets in a dual meet last year, but the Cadets came back strong to place second and prove a big threat in the Tourney, while Carolina's best efforts netted but a fourth place. The Tar Heels looked good, despite the loss of Platt Landis, star sophomore heavy, in their opening meet with South Carolina last week, and are expected to give the Cadets much trouble.

ninety-four points. The Tar Heels, however, have missed sixty-four of 100 foul tries, and have to find a better scoring pair of forwards if they are to triumph over the many outstanding teams in the Big Five and the Conference.

Paul Edwards was shifted from guard to forward in the 38-8 victory over South Carolina of Tuesday, and scored six points and lent new height to the Tar Heels' floor combination. Edwards stands above six feet and worked a bit at forward last year.

Coach Ashmore may keep the big boy at forward, or he may pick new starters from such reserves as Hendlin, Kendall, Henry, and Beale, everything depending on the way the different forward aspirants show up in the intensive week of work now underway.

Campus Calendar

Playmaker Reading

Mr. A. J. West, professor at Duke University, will read Eugene O'Neill's satire, "Marco's Millions," at eight-thirty tonight in the Playmakers Theatre.

Vesper Concert

Professor Nelson O. Kennedy will give a second vesper organ concert this afternoon at four-forty-five in the music building. He will play a varied program taken from the works of French and English composers.

Staff Meetings

The editorial staff of the Daily Tar Heel will meet at five o'clock this afternoon, city editors at seven tonight and reporters at seven-fifteen. All the meetings will take place in Alumni building, and the usual rule regarding absences will be in effect.

Community Chorus

The community chorus will meet at seven-thirty tomorrow night for the purpose of reorganizing and planning a spring cantata.

Mechanical Engineers

The local student branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers will discuss important business matters at a meeting Monday evening at seven-fifteen in 206 Phillips hall. All mechanical engineering students are urged to be present.

of the school of law, has published during the year the following articles: "Some Phases of the Doctrine of Exemplary Damages," in the North Carolina Law Review; and "Borderland of Hearsay, in the Yale Law Journal. Dean McCormick is now preparing a general textbook on the subject of the "Law of Damages."

The wide research of Dr. Otto Stuhlman, Jr., of the department of Physics, includes such subjects as the characteristics of electrodeless discharge, the motion and bursting of gas bubbles rising through liquids, and the molecular structure of water.

In addition to the work of the faculty the theses of graduate students who are getting degrees are listed in the bulletin. Many graduate students have also been working under the direction of faculty members, and their researches are listed.

to the stomach, followed by a terrific right cross to the jaw had Brailsford hanging on for dear life. In the closing seconds of the round, Levinson shot over a terrific left to the button, and only the bell saved the Gamecock from a knockout. The third round saw Levinson landing hard in Brailsford's midsection and soon had him groggy. Levinson's experience proved to be too much for the game South Carolinian and the Tar Heel easily won the decision.

It was only Captain Goodridge's good sportmanship that prevented him from adding a K. O. to his record, but he was contented to just take the decision. Faile hardly landed a punch throughout the fight while Goodridge landed at will. At best, it was a good workout for the Tar Heel star. In the first two sessions, Goodridge concentrated on Faile's face, which was soon as red as a beet. Goodridge shot over rights and lefts, which had the South Carolina battler blue in the gills. Faile came out for the final round full of fight and rarin' to go, but a terrific right cross knocked that idea out of his head. Goodridge's left jabs soon had Faile primed for the kill, but the Tar Heel captain refused to put him away, toying with him until the close of the round.

Cecil Jackson, sophomore welterweight, also made his debut in fine style, beating Green in a toe-to-toe slugging match. Green showed a good right cross, but Jackson's rights to the head and his superior boxing skill gave him the decision. Jackson was the aggressor throughout the fight, his hard lefts and rights to the body hurting the South Carolinian greatly.

The closest fight was between Obie Davis, middleweight, and Stonley Hartin. This fight went four rounds with the Tar Heel senior finally getting the decision. Davis spotted his opponent four pounds, which the Gamecock used to great advantage in the clinches. As a whole, however, the fight was nothing to write home about, too much clinching marring the bout. Davis' left jab was working to perfection, and he kept off the South Carolina man with it. The first round was even, Davis' left jab counting heavily, while Hartin scored at infighting. It was Hartin's ability to score in the clinches that gave him the second stanza. Obie came back with a rush in the final round to take it by a slim margin. Both boys were tired as the fourth round opened, but Davis outlasted his opponent. Hartin failed to break clean in the clinches and was warned twice by the referee. Toward the end of the round, Davis was attacking fiercely with left jabs and right counters.

The final fight—between Hugh Wilson and Bill Callahan, was a Mutt and Jeff affair with Jeff on the long end of the decision. Neither boys did anything in the first round but look daggers at each other and then go into a loving embrace. The second round showed more action on the part of the fighters, both boys mixing it up. "Wild Bill" started missing and missed plenty but he landed just as often. Wilson did a bit of clubbing himself and opened a cut on Callahan's forehead. The South Carolina boy won the fight on the third round, but for awhile it seemed as if Wilson was going to add another knockout to his list. He landed a terrific right to Callahan's mid-ruff that absolutely did him no good, but Wilson did not follow up his golden opportunity with the result that Callahan won the decision.

SOCIAL WELFARE THEME TAKEN BY J. STITT WILSON

Former Mayor Traces Evolution In Social Theories and Depicts Present Status.

"A sense of moral responsibility for social welfare must be awakened in the American mind to meet the present situation," said Hon. J. Stitt Wilson in his address in the Methodist church Sunday. Mr. Wilson divided his address into two parts, giving one part at the morning service and a continuation at seven-thirty in the evening.

Using a blackboard, Mr. Wilson pictured the two streams of history, justice and injustice. Beginning with the history of Rome, up through the birth of Christ and down to the presest, the stream of justice to humanity widens and pushes back the stream of human injustice, according to Mr. Wilson.

The pyramids of Egypt, the roads of Rome, and the great cities with their tremendous walls were built by slaves under the lash, pointed out Mr. Wilson. He then showed the trend upward with the coming of Christ and later the Religious Reformation, in which social standards were recognized.

The second great movement for social welfare, according to the ex-mayor, were the governmental revolutions of the eighteenth and seventeenth centuries. Louis of France had said, "I am the state," and Charles I of England, with less words, had ruled with the same theory of divine-rights. With the coming of such men as Cromwell in England and Washington in America, the rule was wrung from the hands of these monarchs all over the world and put into the hands of the people. With the idea of social welfare, the government had been made a factor of social protection instead of oppression, continued the speaker.

With the account of these two episodes, Mr. Wilson brought his remarks to the situation of the world today, and called it the worst condition in the history of this country. Mr. Wilson has traveled throughout England and in many countries of Europe, studying the social conditions, and he is qualified to express his opinions as correct.

The underlying cause of economic strife in this country is the organization of the big trusts to furnish power and other necessities of the people, he says. Such large companies eliminate all possible labor and expense, and in so doing, add to the army of unemployed and starving men of America. He pointed to the example of a remedy in Ontario, where the power of the Niagra falls is harnessed on the Canadian side by the government and furnished to the people at cost. This prevents any private company from having a monoply on the power of that country.

After living in England for three years, Mr. Wilson can trace the progress of the English to raise their people out of social tragedy. The motivating force, he said, is the great Labor party. The beginning was slow and it required all the efforts and time of the great men who gave their life to creating a party that would aid the people in their struggle.

Mr. Wilson is intimately ac-

Senate To Discuss Political Measure

The Di senate convenes tonight in its regular weekly meeting to discuss the two next bills on the calendar which are: Resolved: That the campus political parties should print the names of their candidates and their platforms at least two weeks prior to the election. 2. Resolved: That the United States Congress should pass the pending bill authorizing the expenditure of $25,000,000.00 to aid the Red Cross.

Fifteen minutes prior to the meeting, the president has called a meeting of the executive committee. The regular meeting will be at seven o'clock.

SEATS FROM OLD HALL TO BE PUT INTO AUDITORIUM

New Building Will Be Ready For Use in This Quarter.

The new Memorial Hall is nearing completion and is expected to be open for use around the first of February or the following month.

The floor is to be equipped with a cork carpet similar to that in the reserve reading room of the library. Benches will be those from the old Memorial Hall which are now being used for outdoor occasions under Davie Poplar. Due to insufficient funds it was impossible to install plush bottom individual seats. Having a seating capacity of over 1800, with 600 balcony and 1200 downstairs, the new building will seat 250 more than the old.

Stone tablets that adorned the former structure have been replaced, with the letters repaired and are placed around in the lobbies and stair halls. Those of the Confederate dead have been placed in the auditorium and near the stage.

Having a depth of 35 feet and a width of 60 feet, the stage is different from any other on this campus. A pernicium arch opening makes up the front, made more attractive by an asbestos curtain. On the stage is an automatic fire skylight built so as to work of its own accord in case of emergency. Backstage is furnished with a grid and six private dressing rooms with ample toilet equipment. There is also a spacious storing room for scenery and costumes. Of especial interest is the projection room for talking pictures.

As to the heating of the new hall, a blower is to be installed in the basement which blows air through radiators installed under the windows. The air is blown to the stage through mushrooms placed under the seats. The finest thing about this system is that it requires no janitor and very little trouble, because a control will be set by the Johnson Control Service System which may be turned on or off at any time desired.

STUDENTS OPPOSE CURTAILMENT OF CLASS PRIVILEGES

Results of Straw Vote Shows Overwhelming Majority for Optional Attendance.

The results of three days of voting on the current campus questions bring out the fact that the students are strongly in favor of optional attendance for the two upper classes. Out of the 771 students voting in the straw ballot, only seventeen are opposed to the question.

All of the 771 members of the student union who took part in the campus vote answered the question on optional attendance, but many failed to check all of the last four. Of those expressing their opinions, however, 460 stated that they were not in sympathy with the present methods of instructions, while 180 were convinced that the systems used were not at fault.

When asked as to whether a quarterly faculty-student meeting would clear up the difficulty, 584 voted for it, while 110 voiced their opinions against this remedy. Concerning the last two questions asked, 421 stated that the methods used was the cause of the lack of interest in the class work, 31 placed the blame on themselves, and 66 blamed the professors.

The number of votes on the last question was second to the total answer to the first question on optional attendance. The final tallies of the fifth question show that 720 students on the campus favor the idea of making a survey of the educational methods and the curriculum, against 46 opposed to this method.

The ballot is being run in the paper today for the last time, and the Daily Tar Heel requests that all who haven't cast their votes in this straw-ballot please express their opinions today. A ballot box is placed in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A.

FINAL FRESHMAN ELECTION TODAY

The freshman election run-off will take place today in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. The polls will be open from 8:30 A. M. to 5:00 P. M.

The candidates for election are: for president, Ike Minor and John Phipps; for vice-president, John Barrow and James Moore Tatum; for treasurer, Gus McIver and Lasley Hudson. John Leake was elected secretary in the first voting. Mayne Albright will preside over the election in the absence of Red Greene, president of the student union.

RED CROSS AIDS MANY SUFFERERS IN MIDDLE WEST

Organization Rallies to Relief of Inhabitants of Drought-Stricken Areas.

Mobilized to cope with one of the greatest and most serious famines of recent years in the United States, the American Red Cross is responding to the call of sufferers throughout the Middle West and Mississippi Valley.

Food, clothing, and other relief is being distributed in thirty-five counties, or almost one third of Kentucky. About five thousand families, or 24,530 persons, are being fed in that state. Bitter cold has intensified the suffering of drought-stricken farmers in the Kentucky mountains, and hundreds of women with children in their arms are flocking to relief headquarters for aid. In many instances these farmers sold their last few chickens or stock and after helping their neighbors who were less fortunate, appealed to the Red Cross for aid.

Drought sufferers in Kentucky include many small farmers who regularly contribute to the Red Cross, and they now look to that organization for help. Children in such families constitute the major need, for clothing for them is badly needed.

In the midwestern area 186,540 persons are being fed by the Red Cross west of the Mississippi river—in comparison with 59,125 persons being fed by the same chapters December 31, 1930.

An army of Red Cross volunteer workers estimated at between ten and fifteen thousand men and women directly in touch with relief work in the Middle West have virtually given up their businesses and household duties. Business men in Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Missouri have turned over their offices and clerical help to the Red Cross. "It is one of the most striking displays of unselfishness since the World War," reported one of the Red Cross executives in the drought area.

Dr. William DeKleine, medical director of the Red Cross, says that the health situation in Arkansas is not bad, notwithstanding the prevalence of a few cases of pneumonia, typhoid fever, and pellagra. The most important need is plenty of nourishing food and warm clothing, according to Dr. DeKleine. Physicians in all parts of the stricken area are contributing their services in an effort to prevent epidemics.

Infirmary Reports Sickness On Decline

At three o'clock yesterday afternoon the University infirmary reported fifty-nine students on the sick list and approximately forty in the infirmary.

This report shows a marked decrease as compared with the number of students ill last week when at one time there were 181 students on the sick list with about sixty-one confined to the infirmary.

With such a noticeable change taking place infirmary officials report that there is little likelihood that the epidemic of heavy colds and influenza on the campus will reach the seriousness of the one in 1928.

GRAVES OPPOSES GOVERNOR'S PLAN FOR SALARY CUT

Local Editor Suggests Increased Income Tax as Solution to State's Financial Needs.

In an article in the current issue of the Chapel Hill Weekly the editor, Louis Graves, advocates an increase in the present income tax instead of the proposed ten per cent reduction in the salaries of state employees stating that a luxury tax would be more justifiable than the proposed cut. Regarding the luxury tax, Mr. Graves writes "If all the liquor drunk in North Carolina were taxed, the resultant revenue would put the state on easy street."

In upholding his proposal of increased income tax, Mr. Graves states that the reduction advocated by Governor O. Max Gardner in his recent address to the General Assembly would mean simply depriving a certain class of ten per cent of their wages. In the end it would amount to a ten per cent income tax on state employees. Mr. Graves argues that income taxes should be distributed among the entire population and that if the legislature wishes to obtain more money from income tax than is already obtained from the six per cent tax, it should do so by raising the general levy and not by increasing the burden of one particular class.

Graves is of the opinion that the employees of the state and local governments are not generally overpaid. The problem of dealing with those who are overpaid is not to be settled by a "horizontal slash" in salaries.

Engineers Will See Electrical Exhibits

The Charlotte office of the General Electric Company has notified Professor J. E. Lear, of the department of electrical engineering, that the meter display truck of the corporation will be on exhibit from three to five p. m., to-morrow in front of Phillips hall.

The exhibition which consists of meters, transformers, time switches, and the like, is housed in a commodious truck. E. G. Howe, the General Electric meter expert, and H. D. Hamrick are supervising the city-to-city tour of the truck.

RADIO SPEECHES DEAL WITH TWO PROPOSED BILLS

Four University Students Discuss Possible State Legislation Over Station WBT.

Last night from ten-thirty until eleven o'clock, four University students, J. C. Williams, Hamilton Hobgood, Clyde Shreve, and Bill Speight, talked from radio station WBT in Charlotte on the proposed consolidation of the University, State College, and North Carolina College, and on Governor O. Max Gardner's plan for a ten per cent reduction of the salaries of state employees. The talks were sponsored by the debate council of the University in cooperation with the Dialectic Senate and the Phi Assembly. Each speaker talked for seven minutes.

J. C. Williams opened the discussion by favoring the proposed consolidation of the three institutions. He contended that the plan as outlined by Governor Gardner in his address to the General Assembly would increase efficiency and economy. He stated that it was a waste of time and money to maintain a school of engineering at the University and a similar one at Raleigh because both schools are small. The same thing is true of other departments of instruction. "The hey-day of the small college is past; the age of big business in educational circles is just ahead," stated Williams. "Education must yield to the consolidation program which bids fair to embrace every phase of human endeavor."

Hamilton Hobgood, following Williams, discussed general educational conditions in North Carolina, pointing out the checking of recent educational advancement which has grown out of an insufficiency of funds. He presented the financial needs of the public school system of the state with emphasis on the needs of the colleges and the University. He stated that the school system must move forward or retreat rapidly. "A detriment accruing from one year's operation under financial embarrassment," continued Hobgood, "is often sufficient to offset ten years of constructive effort. Repeated efforts of late on the part of the people through their representatives to alleviate their taxation burden at the expense of education will not yield the best results."

Clyde Shreve opened the discussion of the proposed ten per cent cut in salaries. He praised the interest which Governor Gardner has manifested in the problems of state during the elapsed portion of his administration. The speaker was of the opinion, however, that there are enough taxable moneyed interests in North Carolina to enable the school systems of the state to get through the present depression without retrogressive measures." If North Carolina is to continue to move forward with such unprecedented strides as have characterized the policies of the state since the days of Vance and Aycock, then the people of the state must assume with zeal, the present difficulties which, unless counteracted, will blight our educational opportunities of tomorrow."

Bill Speight concluded the series of talks by discussing the ten per cent cut proposition with

Student Interest In Civic Affairs

The complaint is often heard that college students evince too little interest in civic affairs. This complaint bears weight when political questions, especially questions of international importance, demand attention. But permit a crisis in the management of the state's affairs arise and one discovers an amazing amount of interest in what is going on.

At present the state institutions face drastic cuts in appropriations. Every student newspaper connected with an institution dependent on the state for support has expressed vigorous opposition to any such cut. This opposition seems directed against any cut in appropriations for any department of the state and not just against the cut for the educational institutions.

The present crisis has focused student opinion on the methods of taxation and on the system of government. Undoubtedly it is educating North Carolina's undergraduate citizenry in government. But it is also serving to bring to the front student opinion on the subject of taxation. And student opinion is not likely to reflect the effects of lobbying. It is unbiased and although based partly on theory we think the legislature could do worse than consider some of the proposals submitted by student writers.

But above all things the present controversy in regard to appropriations is serving to prove that students are interested in the conduct of the state and that students have definite opinions as to the means of correcting the causes of the present ills.

Congratulations

When an idea is at the same time very clever, very expedient, and very happy, then by all means and for heaven's sake congratulate those who had the idea. And by all means and for heaven's sake remember that the more extravagant the praise the better. It won't be extravagant enough.

We don't know just whose idea the Movie Guild was. But it was clever because it took advantage of a nice distinction between selling tickets on Sunday and tearing off tickets on Sunday. One is illegal. The other isn't. Our consciences don't balk at our congratulating an evasion of a ridiculous law.

The idea was expedient because if Chapel Hill was to have Sunday movies for charity, she was to have them for charity, and not for those pikers who out of the generosity they felt toward the other half of the world contributed two cents.

The idea was happy because it arranged to provide pictures for some reason unusual. And, it arranged to give some point to the most utterly useless three hours in the week.—V. A. D.

Readers' Opinions

Here's The Man

To the Editor:

I read with great pleasure the proposal of J. C. S. in Friday's issue of the Tar Heel to publish a prospectus of the University's courses. I wish to state that if he or his friends would like to see such a prospectus in print, I would be glad to contribute enough money to start the printing and would also be willing to contribute as much of my time to the venture as I could spare.

Yours sincerely,
JACKSON OLIVE.

Editors On World Peace

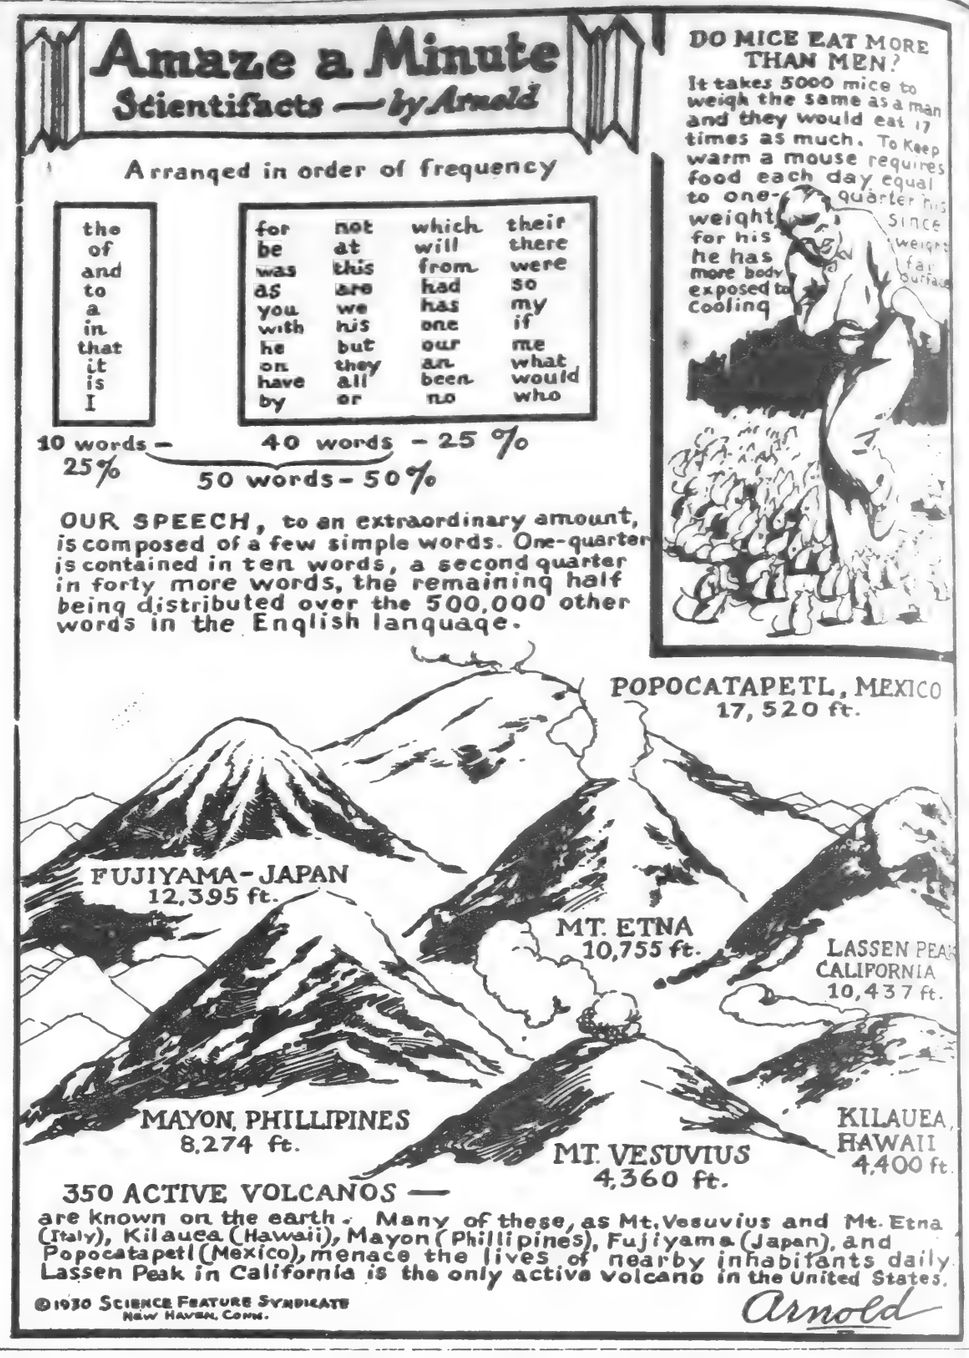
We were quite interested to see an announcement the other day made by the department of journalism at the University of Tennessee regarding editorials to further World Peace. This surely is a most excellent time to start printing editorials dealing with this matter, but we are fully expecting to see a bunch of the usual blah appear advocating love feasts and functions of similar nature. Our pacifist agitators always want to start at the end instead of at the beginning of a venture.

We are hoping a great deal to see some of the more enlightened editors of the South come out with some sensible plan to unify the youth of the world which is practical. The only way in which the world can enjoy permanent peace is to get the youth of the various nations to understand each other and do away with all suspicions of the others' motives. This is truly a collossal task and one which cannot be done by the love feasts. It seems to us that the most logical starting point is for the respective nations to send their youth to all parts of the world for at least part of their education. Travel is the greatest aid for international peace, and education and understanding will run it a close second. When the two are combined some lasting results should be forthcoming.

The student youth of the world is growing up in most cases in a stiffened atmosphere of formality. It is being narrowed by local contacts and feelings and by the reading of local text-books to see what other men, who usually have had no better international experience than they, have to say on the various subjects. This is naturally to be deplored, but how can it be helped when most of the students of the nation have very limited means and foreign travel is so expensive? If the governments were to cooperate with the students in this matter of foreign travel and study, invaluable gains would result. A task of this magnitude would call for a great deal of money as subsidies and partial payments from the various governments, but would surely be worth it to the nations cooperating. Our war debt in 1919 was over twenty billions of dollars.

What sane German boy would come near sending a ten inch shell into the Rheims cathedral if he could have seen it in its quiet, age-old beauty? What Frenchman would have used dum-dum bullets to shoot at boys with whom he had gone to school? War is the most futile thing possible. Our youth can see its futility if it is given a chance to understand and appreciate.

Southern editors can further a great cause if they so desire. —O. W. D.



Over-Emphasis Of Football

The football season of 1930, with its victories, its defeats, and incidentally, its ties, is fast fading into the land of memory while a new sport season—basketball—holds the spotlight. Recently much has been said concerning professionalism in college sports, evidently referring to football in particular.

College football has achieved such popularity, merited or unmerited, that there seems to be a tendency toward professionalism, a characteristic which will do much harm to the sport. This professionalism does not apply strictly to the players themselves, the majority of whom are bona-fide students, but it does apply to the methods used by some institutions in securing promising high school or prep school athletes and to the practice of ballyhooing the big games. While they have aided in the building of a strong team for the glory of the coach, these practices have been harmful to the school itself. Cries for championship teams have caused football to become over-emphasized as a college activity.

Remunerations in the form of money are few, but in many schools players are given tuition, room, and board free plus an easy job. Some schools actually bid against one another in recruiting athletes. These practices are illegal and heavy penalties should be imposed for such infractions of collegiate football rules. Discriminations in favor of athletes in awarding scholarships should not be made, for more deserving students may be deprived of opportunities of a college education so that dear old Alma Mater can have a good team. However, athletes should not be discriminated against, but all such awards should be made on the basis of scholarship and not on athletic prowess. After all, colleges are—or should be—educational institutions and not mere groups of buildings around a football stadium.

Colleges should dominate football, not allowing the sport to become the prime motive of their existence. Publicity has placed football on a plane with prizefighting as a sort of ballyhooed circus. Colleges are often rated according to the strength of their football teams and their records. Scholastic standards of measurement are ignored. Thus, both school and students are injured by this tendency to overshadow the prime objective of the institution—the instruction of youth. Athletics should not be honored and scholarship ignored.—B. a view to presenting a feasible alternative. He commended Governor Gardner's efforts in behalf of the citizens of the state, but he called attention to the Governor's failure to propose placing a tax on luxuries in order to supplement the meager funds of the state treasury. The speaker commented on the profits which are being realized by such corporations as R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company and the Duke Power Trust. He was of the opinion that a scheme of taxation on luxuries would be better than a reduction of salaries. Concluding, he said, "I predict a bright educational future for North Carolina only in the case that our leaders of the state determine to distribute justly the burden of taxation rather than to impede progress by decreasing taxes to too small a quotient."

are being met rapidly by the national organization and its chapters. A Red Cross field director describes men crying when they come to ask aid of the organization after describing pitiable scenes of want and privation. They beg work in order that they may buy supplies, for they are reluctant to ask for charity. The cold weather in Oklahoma is complicating the relief work and making distress more acute. The lack of sufficient food and clothing has made the situation critical.

quainted with many of the great leaders, including Ramsey McDonald; he says that these men were hated by the upper class when they first undertook their task. The British had clung to their two parties so loyally that it was difficult to form the party. When they finally had enough followers they were faced with the problem of educating the low society that made up the Labor party. This was done, the speaker added, by tens of thousands of pamphlets circulated to the homes of every voter.

In the course of a quarter of a century a party had been organized that knew the problems of the country, through the circulated pamphlets, and a party that held tremendous power in its hands. With this power, continued Mr. Wilson, the laborites set to work to restore social welfare. He enumerated the changes brought about: The old age pension was allowed to women; the city milk supplies were in some cases controlled by the government; the working hours of the miners were decreased by half an hour, and the mining conditions made better; the government began a program of building houses for the workers and renting them at low rates. Thousands of houses were built in every city, and enormous numbers were removed from the slums. The slogan was to rid England of her slums. Mr. Wilson assured the audience that even with these aids the conditions are still severe. Wages in that country are low.

As the Religious Reformation made the world safe for religion, and as the governmental revolution made the world safe for democracy, there must be an economic revolution to insure the social institutions of property, believes Mr. Wilson.

Carolina Expected to Unleash New Offensive Against Wake Forest

CLASH TONIGHT MAY UNTANGLE BIG FIVE FIGHT

Flash Victory Over Raleigh Y Raises Hopes for Deacon Win.

Carolina's basketball representatives, defensively proven already, are expected to show new offensive powers as they resume competition with a game with Wake Forest in the Tin Can here to-night.

The Tar Heels have been concentrating for a solid week on perfecting their offense, on practicing at shooting fouls, and on practicing at following-up shots. Coach Ashmore may even parade forth a new set of forwards, but regardless, the Tar Heels are expected to present a much smoother offense.

The up-and-coming Deacons, who beat Raleigh "Y" 42-18 last week, as compared with the 46-13 score by which Carolina beat the same team, will be met in the Tin Can at 8:30 o'clock. The varsity attraction will be preceded by a Carolina-Wake Forest freshman game at 7 o'clock.

Wake Forest and Carolina will be meeting for the first time of the season, and the result is expected to give the first line on the relative powers and chances of these two ancient foes in the very muddled race for the Big Five title.

The Deacons dropped their first two Big Five tilts, only to show big improvement against Raleigh "Y". Carolina hasn't played but one Big Five engagement, and lost that, to Davidson, 18-17.

In their first seven games the Tar Heels proved a powerful outfit on defense, and though they lost one of seven games, they didn't let any opponent have more than eighteen points. Coach Ashmore is expected to present a stronger offense against Wake Forest, and several new forwards are expected to get chances.

Captain Artie Marpet, All-State guard, and Sandy Dameron, 77-inch center, starred in the first seven games. Edwards, Hendlin, Kendall, and Hirsch are among the up-and-coming youngsters expected to get tries at forward as the Tar Heels take up their schedule with the Deacons.

It is understood that Coach Ashmore may present some new forward combinations along with Sandy Dameron, center, and Captain Artie Marpet, who starred in the early games. Paul Edwards, Hinkey Hendlin, Kendall, and Hirsch are the new forwards who have been showing best during this last week's inter-squad scrimmages.

Wake Forest's probable lineup is Earp and Brogden, forwards; Webb, center; and Edwards and Gardner, guards.

THE SECOND BIG FIVE game for the Tar Heel quintet comes tonight, and the fandom of the state is watching this event carefully. Many were disappointed over the Tar Heels' losing their first Big Five game to Davidson, and some possibly lost faith in the chances of Ashmore's men to come out on top. The Wake Forest Demon Deacons are not expected to show considerable strength, not having won a single contest against leading North Carolina teams, but a reversal of form is to be expected.

In spite of their poor showing against the best college teams, they displayed marked superiority over the Raleigh Y. M. C. A. last week. It may be that they have found themselves. In any event tonight's contest will have much bearing on the outcome of the Big Five basketball title. A win for Carolina would put the Tar Heels back in the running, and a win for the Deacons would show that they have improved considerably. They already have lost too many games to make it likely that they will be title contenders.

CAROLINA'S FIVE TO TWO victory over the South Carolina Gamecocks indicates that Coaches Rowe and Allen's leather pushers can be expected to do big things this year. The Gamecocks are recognized not to be one of the strongest teams in the Conference, but the bouts gave the Carolina fighters a chance to try their abilities. Biggs will need to improve considerably before he will be a recognized featherweight. Levinson displayed his usual ability at fighting. He, however, allowed himself to slug unsuccessfully on several occasions last Friday night. Captain Noah Goodridge is the same skilled fighter with a harder punch. Jackson's fight was very good for his first varsity bout. Obie Davis always seems to meet

NAVY GRAPPLERS TOO STRONG FOR TAR HEEL TEAM

Annapolis Matmen Keep Five Year Record Clean By 19½ to 12½ Win.

Navy's grapplers, undefeated since 1926, proved too tough for Coach Chuck Quinlan's Tar Heels Saturday and tossed the Carolina matmen for a 19 1-2-12 1-2 loss at Annapolis, Maryland. A crowd of over 1600 spectators witnessed the match which was packed with thrills from start to finish.

Navy gained its points by virtue of three falls, a time decision, and a draw, while the Tar Heel points were acquired by a fall, two time decisions, and a draw. Although the Tar Heels were never in the lead, each bout was close and hard fought, and had Carolina won by a fall any of the bouts taken by Navy, the long string of victories piled up by past Middie teams would have been broken.

Pete Usher very nearly did just that in the first bout of the afternoon. Although losing by a time decision to Styles, Usher almost threw his man at one time. However, the opportunity was lost when Styles managed to slip one shoulder off the corner of the mat before Usher could pin him. It was a close call for the Navy boy, but he came back to take the advantage and finally earn a time decision of 2:15.

The most spectacular event of the afternoon came when Captain Fred Stallings met Theobold in the 126 pound class. Theobold, undefeated in the 118 pound class last year, met a man who was also undefeated in dual meets last year, and both men came out of the fray with their records still clean. They wrestled for a total of sixteen minutes with neither man getting sufficient advantage, the match was called a draw. At the end of the regulation ten minute period neither man had any advantage, and, at the end of the two extra rounds of three minutes each, Stallings had an advantage of only two seconds, not enough to give him the match.

Goodman followed this up by winning a fall over Mayne Albright in the 135 pound class. The fall came after a fast battle in which both men showed

Twenty-two Gridders Receive Monograms at Testimonial Banquet

SEVEN AWARDS MADE VARSITY HARRIER STARS

Freshmen Given Thirty-Eight Numerals in Football and Cross-Country.

The University held its annual testimonial banquet for its football and cross country teams at the Carolina Inn last night and rewarded the outstanding performers by awarding twenty-two varsity monograms, seven varsity cross country monograms, twenty-eight freshman football numerals and ten freshman cross country numerals.

The select twenty-two of the varsity football squad, which won five games, lost three, tied two, and finished second in the Big Five on one of Carolina's hardest schedules in history, were: C. G. Blackwood, Winston-Salem; J. D. Branch, Salisbury; T. R. Brown, Greensboro; S. M. Chandler, Durham; C. P. Erickson, Oak Park, Ill.; E. D. Fysal, Wilson; J. U. Gilbreath, Topeka, Kan.; H. M. Hodges, Fayetteville; H .C. House, Weldon; E. R. Lipscomb, Greensboro; R. A. McDade, Lenoir; H. S. McIver, Summerfield; J. E. Magner, Philadelphia, Pa.; J. R. Maus, Greensboro; Capt. E. S. Nash, Charleston, S. C.; E. H. Newcombe, Charlotte; R. A. Parsley, Wilmington; F. W. Slusser, Blacksburg, Va.; G. D. Thompson, Goldsboro; N. A. Underwood, Sanford; Erwin Walker, Charlotte; and C. L. Wyrick, Greensboro.

Chandler, Hodges, McDade, Newcombe, Underwood and Walker were receiving their first monograms. Erickson, House, Magner, Maus, Captain Nash, Parsley and Wyrick, received a letter and two stars for three years of service. The other nine boys received a letter and a star for two years' playing. Roy McDade had the most playing time to his credit, 507 of a possible 600 minutes, followed in order by Branch, Thompson and Fysal.

A minor sports monogram for cross country and two stars went to Captain Cliff Baucom, of Marshville, while first monograms were awarded T. L. Cordle, Greensboro; J. B. Farris, Charlotte; R. B. Hubbard, High Point; Captain-elect C. A. Jensen, East Orange, N. J.; M. M. Jones, Asheville; and J. H. Pratt, Chapel Hill. The Tar Heel harriers were undefeated in dual meets and placed fourth in the Southern Conference Run.

The twenty-eight freshman gridders receiving their "1934" numerals were J. C. Adair, Pinehurst; R. P. Anacaukas, Rockford, Ill.; G. T. Barclay, Natrona, Pa.; G. F. Brandt, Washington, D. C.; V. H. Crance, Fayetteville; S. S. Eanes, Lexington; J. C. Frankel, New York City; J. A. Gardner, Salisbury; N. A. Hackney, Durham; G. P. Johnson, Weldon; C. M. Jones, Wilmington; W. R. Jones, Rockingham; E. B. Kahn, Roxbury, Mass.; M. J. McGill, Philadelphia, Pa.; E. McIver, Jr., Durham; F. M. Matheson, Taylorsville; J. J. Mulligan, Philadel-

WALKERTOWN HI LOSES TO FROSH

Tar Babies Face Formidable Deacon Yearlings on Hardwood Tonight.

The Freshman quintet, led by Weathers, won a decisive victory over the Walkertown High School team Saturday night in the Tin Can by the score of 47-18. The outcome of the game was evident from the start, the Tar Babies leading throughout and showing a vast improvement over their last performance. Their attack was smoother and they were ringing the basket with ease.

Weathers, clever and hard-fighting ,forward, led the Carolina attack with twenty-two points, and was ably assisted by Fisher. McCachern, guard, also played a steady game. Coach Bo Shephard used a big number of substitutes and they all gave promise of developing into a strong team.

The yearlings play the Wake Forest freshmen tonight in the first game of a double-header at the Tin Can. The Baby Deacons have a strong team and the game tonight should be hard-fought throughout. Albert Edwards, former Durham High School star will be in action for the visitors and will bear watching.

The Tar Babies had a brisk practice yesterday and ironed out a few of the most prominent errors. They are improving fast and will give all they have against the Baby Deacons tonight.

Intramural Results

"Forfeit Day" was observed in the intramural basketball league yesterday, three teams losing by forfeits. According to the new ruling of the intramural department two forfeits in a row automatically eliminates a team from active competition this season. The forfeits yesterday were: Zeta Beta Tau forfeited to the A. T. O.'s; Theta Kappa Nu forfeited to Phi Delta Theta; Sigma Nu forfeited to Sigma Chi.

Phi Kap's Win

The Phi Kappa Sigma's defeated the Sigma Phi Sigma's by the close score of 27-23. Loftin, for the losers, led the individual scoring with fifteen points. Close behind him came Markham with twelve points. The Sigma Phi Sigma's entered a protest against the use of Markham, who is a member of the varsity squad and who has participated in one of the preseason "Y" games with the varsity. Whether or not it will be allowed will be announced within the next few days.

S. P. S. (23)	Phi Kap's (27)
Davis (6)	Manning (3)
Loftin (15)	Odum (6)
Geiger	Walker (6)
Loveland	Barnhill
Caldwell	Steer

Scoring substitutes: Sigma Phi Sigma, Jackson (2); Phi Kap's, Markham (12).

Phi Gam's Win 52-7

The Phi Gam's easily defeated the Delta Tau Delta's by the high score of 52-7. The Phi Gam's presented a smooth working offense and an airtight defense. The record up to date this season is held by the A. T. O.'s, with 59 points, although they did not hold their opposition to as low a score as the Phi Gam's yesterday afternoon. Hubbard and Dewey led the Phi Gam offensive.

Phi Sig's Get 22-21 Win

The Phi Sig's won over the Chi Phi's in the closest game of the season so far, defeating the Chi Phi's by the close score of 22-21. The Chi Phi's led by a 10-6 score at the half, but the Phi Sig's came back in the last half to win by a one point advantage in true "Frank Merriwell" style. The score stood 21-20 in favor of the Chi Phi's with 30 seconds to play, when Mitchell dropped in a long one from the center of the court to win the game. Teachey was high scorer with twelve points, for the winners, while Abels and Thompson were best for the losers.

hard opposition and have to go an extra round. If he learns to land his left with a greater degree of accuracy, he will give many of the best much trouble. Hugh Wilson, as usual, was able to take punishment. He landed several hard and shaking blows, but was unable to follow these up, and as a result lost the bout.

The first real test for the Tar Heel mitmen comes Friday night when the V. M. I. Cadets visit the Tin Can. There will be many stiff workouts this week preparing for these bouts, and some lively exchanging of blows should be seen when these two outfits meet.

THE NAVY SUCCEEDED IN sinking the Carolina matmen, but it was with great difficulty. At no time were the Tar Heels ahead of the Middies, but the bouts were all very close, we have learned. The students will not get an opportunity to see the matmen in action until Saturday, January 31, at which time the varsity and freshmen meet the V. P. I. teams.

THE GEORGIA BULLDOGS seem to be having things their way in conference basketball up to date, having taken six games and lost none. There are many other teams which are not defeated as yet, however. . . . Wallace Wade says that he does not expect to put out a wonder team over at Duke next year, and maybe not for two years. The development of young men is more important than going to Rose Bowl games, the famous coach was heard to say. . . . Tar Heel football fans will soon be going to the stadium to see what Collins and Cerney are doing this winter. Things should be getting lively down there by the middle of next week. . . . Duke seems to have gotten a habit of sinking the navy—football and now a basketball victory to their credit. . . . Nothing has yet developed concerning a successor to Rex Enright. Carolina isn't the only college with coaching problems either. Our brother institution must be going to do without a coach; they are taking a long time in signing one.

This bout was followed by Don Conklin's victory over Sharpe in the 145 pound division. This was another close bout in which the time advantage was slight. However, Conklin had Sharpe very close to a fall when the bout ended.

In the next bout Harry Tsumas lost by a fall to "Murph" Silverstein, Navy's undefeated 155 pounder, in another furious scrap that saw plenty of rough stuff. Both boys went at it hard from the beginning but at the end of three minutes and thirty seconds, Silverstein pinned the Tar Heel's shoulders to the mat with a bar and body hold.

In the 165 pound class bout Coleman, said to be one of the greatest wrestlers ever at Navy, won by a fall over Percy Idol in five minutes and forty-two seconds. Idol, weakened by a cold which kept him from working out any last week, put up a game scrap, but finally went down before the superior strength of his opponent.

With the meet sewed up for the Navy and Carolina trailing by a score of 19 1-2 to 4 1-2, Marion Cowper and Fred Ferguson set to work to add eight more points to the Carolina total. Cowper won a decision over John Kirkpatrick in the 175 pound class and showed great skill doing it. Kirkpatrick fought in the unlimited class last year and made a good record, but he was no match for the veteran Tar Heel.

In the final match of the day, Fred Ferguson overcame a weight disadvantage of twenty pounds to win by a fall over Kane after nine minutes and twelve seconds of hard fighting. As in the other bouts, both men showed aggressiveness and skill, but Ferguson had the advantage all the way through.

Summary:

118 pound class. Styles (N) won over Usher with a time advantage of 2:15.

126 pound class. Captain Stallings (NC) and Theobold drew, Two extra periods.

135 pound class. Goodman (N) threw Albright with double bar in 7:03.

145 pound class. Conklin won over Sharpe with a time advantage of 2:30.

155 pound class. Silverstein (N) threw Tsumas in 3:30 with bar and body hold.

165 pound class. Coleman (N) threw Idol in 5:42 with bar and body hold.

175 pound class. Cowper (NC) won over Kirkpatrick with a time advantage of 3:46.

Unlimited class, Ferguson (NC) threw Kane in 9:12 with crotch and half nelson.

Y Officers Attend Meeting In Raleigh

President Ed Hamer and Harry Comer, general secretary of the local Y. M. C. A., attended a state-wide meeting of "Y" delegates from all the colleges of this state at Raleigh Saturday.

Dr. E. McNeil Poteat, pastor of the Pullen Memorial church of Raleigh, led the devotional period with a short address on, "The Fishermen of Men."

Reports of the various commissions of the different "Y's" on conferences and preparations were given. A brief summary of the Detroit convention was followed by a discussion of present day racial problems. The meeting was then adjourned for a luncheon, at which the cabinet at Raleigh was host.

The Honorable J. Stitt Wilson, who spoke here on Sunday, was the guest-speaker for the afternoon. His subject for discussion was the "Task of Modern Civilization" in regard to the institutions of property. After his talk there was a fifteen minute forum on any questions which any of the members might want to bring up for consideration.

Dr. E. M. Poteat, Miss L. Ivan, of the Raleigh Times, Deans E. L. Cloyd and S. Brown of State College, and five girls from the East Carolina Teachers College were guests of honor.

Engineers Praise Original Founders

The local student branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers met for the first time this quarter in a business session Monday night in Phillips hall.

The chief business before the branch concerned the purchase of the photographs of several of the past presidents and honorary members of the society, all of whom have become famous in some phase of mechanical engineering work. Some of the specialists whose photographs were considered were active in founding the society in 1880.

While the pictures were flashed on the screen, D. A. Harrell and J. C. McLean, sophomores in the school of engineering, gave brief biographies of the subjects.

Members of the local branch finally voted for the purchase of a number of the pictures. They are to be placed in the design room, laboratories, and classrooms of the mechanical engineering department.

FOUR UNIVERSITY MEN WRITE FOR SOCIAL MAGAZINE

President Frank Graham Has Article in "The Annals" on The Industrial South.

The most recent issue of The Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science has as its topic "The Coming of Industry to the South." William J. Carson, Ph. D., assistant professor of finance at the University of Pennsylvania, and editor of this periodical says: "This volume of The Annals is designed to show the scope of industrial development in the South and some of its consequences. It analyzes many of the problems that have arisen as industries have grown and as communities in the southern states have changed from a predominantly agricul- industrial society. It describes many adjustments that are under way and obstacles that limit their progress, and suggests steps necessary for the progressive adaptation of economic and social life to industrial changes in the future. It also indicates essential features of a program to restore and preserve agriculture and at the same time promote the development of industry in a balanced economy."

The majority of the contents of this volume are by Professors in southern universities and colleges and other southern authorities. Of these, the number of articles written by men connected with the University of North Carolina is five; the universities which are represented by the next highest number of articles are the University of Virginia and the University of Tennessee, each having two.

One of the most interesting articles is that by President Frank P. Graham on "Southern Industrialism: A Way of Economic Recovery and an Opportunity for Social Mastery"; in it he stated that we have the opportunity not only to install the new machinery seen on all sides and to utilize the new technique of our agricultural and engineering colleges but also to make active and real, nobler human attitudes than have yet characterized the history of in-

MINOR IS CHOSEN FROSH PRESIDENT

Barrow Elected Vice-President, And McIver Treasurer, by Overwhelming Majorities.

At the runoff of the freshman elections yesterday Ike Minor of Atlanta, Georgia, was elected president of the class of '34, John Barrow of Zebulon became vice-president, and Gus McIver of Durham, treasurer.

All the victorious candidates won by tremendous majorities. Minor had 275 votes to Phipps' 188; Barrow received 300 votes while Tatum polled 162; McIver received more votes than any other candidate, 306 to Hudson's 154.

Evidently some of the freshmen refused to vote after their original candidate had been eliminated, as only 463 ballots were cast yesterday as compared to 564 votes balloted in the first election last Thursday.

All day youthful politicians stood in front of the Y. M. C. A. waving multicolored slips of paper, with their candidates' names printed thereon, attempting to convert opponents' votes into their own coffers. This method of electioneering seems to have been very effective, as the most widely advertised candidates were elected by very wide margins.

John Leake of Wadesboro was the only candidate who was elected last week.

National Playwriting Contest Now Open

The fourth annual National Playwriting contest conducted by the Drama League of America and the play department of Longman's, Green and Company is now open.

There are three separate divisions or contests for which different prizes are offered. The first of these divisions is a full length play, which may be of any number of acts or scenes and any theme. These manuscripts should be sent in to the state chairman for North Carolina, Professor Frederick H. Koch.

Then there is the one-act George Washington play that is to have a theme appropriate to produce during the celebration of the George Washington bicentenial in February 1932.

And lastly there is the religious play that must have a full-length, ethical, and non-sectarian plot, but that need not necessarily be based on Biblical incidents. All religious plays must be sent direct to Mrs. A. Starr Best, contest chairman, 828 Michigan Avenue, Wilmette, Illinois, before March 31, 1931.

The state judges will select winning manuscripts of each of the states not later than June 1, 1931, and forward them to the contest chairman for the national judges. The state judges are: Professors A. P. Hudson, E. E. Ericson, and Preston C. Farrar of the English department of the University of North Carolina.

The prize winning plays will

FIRST YEAR MEN HEAR MR. COMER

"Y" Secretary Discusses Stitt Wilson's Ideas at Friendship Council Meeting.

The freshman friendship council had its regular Monday night meeting at seven-fifteen o'clock. After the routine was completed, President McLeod introduced the speaker for the evening, Harry Comer.

Mr. Comer cordially invited the members of the council to come to see him at any time, either in his office or at his home. He then launched into a discussion of J. Stitt Wilson's speech of Sunday, and urged the freshmen to think of an individual's right to property as a major revolution being enacted in our own time.

In the sophomore cabinet, Tom Worth, the newly elected vice-president, presided over the meeting. Since the speaker of the evening did not put in appearance, there was a round table discussion on optional attendance. The ten percent cut in professor's salaries was threshed out as well as the racial problems of the negroes.

The junior-senior cabinet had a short session, being addressed by Beverly Moore, the chairman of the Human Relations Institute. He gave a brief resume of the work done by the "Y" group towards getting the Institute here in the spring.

Maennerchoer Choir Perform Feb. 9th

The Maennerchoer chorus will give its performance on February 9 in the music building. The organization will be under the direction of Dr. Harold S. Dyer, head of the music department. The chorus numbers sixty to seventy men's voices. Probably some of the numbers will have an organ accompaniment. The pianist of the chorus is Harry Lee Knox, a freshman who has shown great promise so far this year. The chorus is something in the way of a new experiment and should have a strong cultural and musical effect on the campus.

Flute Recital

Lamar Stringfield, a flute player and composer of national repute, will present a recital in the Playmaker Theatre, January 30, at eight-thirty. Mr. Stringfield is a resident of Chapel Hill and is very well known in the state for his compositions and recitals.

Weekly Radio Talk

Mayne Albright, former president of the Philanthropic Assembly, will speak this afternoon at five o'clock over station WPTF. In his talk Albright will give the history, purpose, organization, and present status of the Di and Phi societies.

Meyer Ill

Harold D. Meyer of the sociology department is ill with influenza at his home on Pittsboro road.

YACKETY YACK STAFF INAUGURATES CHANGES

The present staff of the Yackety Yack has made a decided change in the make-up of the fraternity pages in this year's annual. In place of individual pictures of the members of a fraternity there will be a group with individual's names listed below. A reproduction of the fraternity coat-of-arms will be engraved on the top of the page opposite the first one; in the center will be the roster compiled as last year, and at the lower part a picture of the fraternity house.

Due to the fact that the old cuts are badly worn, and that several national fraternities do not allow reproductions of their pins, the Yackety Yack staff has adopted the absolute use of coat-of- arms.

LOYALTY COUNCIL GETS FAVORABLE REPORT ON FUNDS

Grisette's Annual Report Shows More Contributions Than Ever Before.

The annual report of Director Felix A. Grisette, the election of officers and the laying of plans for next year's activities constituted the chief items of business at the annual meeting of the Alumni Loyalty Fund Council which took place in the office of President Frank P. Graham Saturday night. Leslie Weil of Goldsboro, chairman, presided at the meeting.

The report of Director Grisette revealed small gifts from 2,054 alumni totaling $40,163.66 In addition to these donations a conditional gift of $50,000 to be used for a designated purpose, and a definite commitment for a large sum of money to be used for student loan purposes, probably $100,000, were announced. It was further announced that three prominent University alumni had written the University in their wills during the year.

Mr. Grisette said that contributions had come from alumni living in 134 cities and towns in North Carolina, thirty-one states other than North Carolina, twelve foreign countries, and from sixty different classes. This wide participation of alumni is greater by 10 to 1 than that of any previous year in the University's history, despite the fact that 1930 was a year marked by a great financial depression.

Although the number of contributions was much greater, the depression of the year was very noticeable in the amounts of the gifts. Mr. Grisette announced that approximately 48 per cent of the contributions, or almost one out of every two, was for five dollars or less and that 16 per cent of the entire number were for only one dollar.

"When we take into account the fact that during previous years an alumnus seldom failed to give less than $10, it is easy to see what our total might have been if this year's individual gifts had been as large as in previous years," Mr. Grisette said.

Allen J. Barwick, well-known lawyer and a graduate of the University in 1900, was selected to succeed Mr. Weil as chairman of the Council during 1931.

MANY STUDENTS ARE AROUSED BY CAMPUS QUESTION

Overwhelming Majority in Favor Of Giving Privilege to Juniors And Seniors.

Methods Are Attacked

A Large Percentage Favor Faculty-Student Meetings Quarterly.

Eight hundred and two votes were cast in the four-day straw balloting on some of the important campus questions to make the largest number of persons taking part in any sort of campus-wide straw ballot in several years. Of this final result only eighteen of the group expressed their opinions as being opposed to optional attendance for the juniors and seniors.

The question, asking the students if they thought a general survey of educational methods and curriculum, was advisable, received the second highest number of votes with 740 advocating the survey to only forty-nine opposed. It is also easily seen that the majority of the students favor regular quarterly faculty-student meetings as a means of considering mutual problems. Of the total casting votes on this more than seventy-five per cent seemed to stand for these meetings, the actual number being 610 for to 118 against.

More than sixty per cent of the persons taking part in the ballot were not in sympathy with the present methods of instructing. When asked where the blame should be placed for lack of interest in class work practically seventy per cent of the voters named the methods as the fault while ten per cent of the entire number of votes placed the blame on the students, against twenty per cent accusing the professors.

Yesterday was the last day that the ballot would be held, and the officials of the Daily Tar Heel wish to thank those taking part in the voting by expressing their opinions.

Civic Club Plans Musical Program

Meetings of the literature and music department of the Community Club were scheduled for this week. The meeting of the literature department has been postponed from this afternoon, until February.

The music department will sponsor its regular monthly program tomorrow at 3:30 o'clock in room three of the music building. Mrs. L. M. Brooks will have charge of the program which will center around the subject "The Influence of the Indian on American Music." The lecture will be illustrated by local artists. Voice selections will be given by Mrs. George Lawrence, Mrs. Gustav Harrer, and Miss Lena Mae Williams. Violin compositions will be presented by Mr. and Mrs. T. S. McCorkle and Mrs. A. S. Wheeler and Miss Mary Frances Odum will play several piano selections.

Mrs. Shine Is Better

Mrs. Hill Shine, who has been ill at her home on Rosemary lane for the last week with double pneumonia, is reported to be much better.

Peace Time Service

The entire United States has been called upon to aid the American Red Cross in its efforts to relieve suffering in Arkansas and other states. President Hoover recently appointed an advisory committee composed of many prominent men to aid the Red Cross in its efforts to raise ten million dollars for relief work. The United States Senate has been stirred to action. And it is apparent that there must be real suffering if the Senate is really seeking to act and not to investigate.

This suffering is a national problem. Droughts and depression have caused conditions which we usually picture as existing in foreign countries and not in the United States. An appeal will be made to the students of the University and to the townspeople to contribute to the Red Cross fund. It is an appeal which should be answered by everyone, no matter how small the amount.

We are prone to dig deep into our pockets to aid those in foreign lands, forgetting all the while that such conditions may exist near home. We have been called on often this year to contribute to charitable organizations. And we may be tired of hearing of more appeals for money. But we cannot say that this is just another appeal. Americans, just as we are, are actually in need of food. Posters used so effectively to encourage giving to foreign relief might possibly be used advantageously in this drive.

Let us for a moment forget that the depression has hit us as well as the sufferers in other states; let us forget that the appeals for aid have been many and frequent this year and let us give something to aid the Red Cross in its efforts to relieve those in the middle west. And no matter what our political creed may be and no matter what we may think of the disagreement between President Hoover and the United States Senate, let us give something now.

"Seconded-Handed"

An article in Tuesday's edition of the Tar Heel made a statement to the effect that there was a probability of the contractors being forced to use the old benches which were formerly in Memorial hall in the beautiful, modern auditorium which is now nearing completion. These benches have for the past six months or more been warping and rotting in the rains and snows of this Chapel Hill climate, yet because of lack of funds they must be put back into use—to preserve their tradition, no doubt.

Not only is there a chance of being forced to use these age-old benches, but it has been rumored that there is a possibility of having to buy a second-hand curtain for the stage of the new building.

To us this situation seems to be in a pretty bad way, but it apparently does not seem so to the law-makers in the Capital. Not satisfied with the condition of the University funds, they intend to make the situation even worse. To have to use second-hand benches and second-hand curtains is bad enough, but if this ten per cent cut goes through, all of our faculty will be taken away by better paid institutions, and the first thing we know we will be having everything just alike. That is, during chapel period we will sit in second-hand benches, look at a second-hand curtain, and then we go to class only to hear a bunch of second-hand professors.—C. G. R.

"Now Is the Time . . . ."

"Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their country." The red menace of Communism is slowly, insidiously, extending its baleful influence throughout our land. Etc. Representative Fish and his committee of defenders of the faith have risen in wrath and recommended to the House of Representatives that Congress take immediate steps to outlaw the Communist party in America, cancelling the citizenship of its members; deport all alien Communists; prevent further naturalization of Communists; and bar Communist publications from the mails. The committee declared that there are between five and six hundred thousand organized Communists in the United States today, with headquarters in New York directed from Moscow.

The committee was assuredly acting sincerely in submitting its report, but its recommendations appear radical and heedlessly alarming. The committee is recommending that the United States government revert to the methods used in former times to suppress revolutionary movements, methods which time has proved unsuccessful. All the monarchies used harsh methods to suppress movements toward democracy—and failed. In the latter part of the nineteenth century Germany engaged in a long combat upon the Socialists, and accomplished nothing. Russia itself, after centuries of terrorism and strict suppression of liberal movements is today the cradle of Communism, that specter which is haunting the Fish Committee now.

History should teach us that any such measures as are proposed would be both useless and unfair. If Communism is powerful and vital enough to overthrow our present government, suppression will but quicken the fall. Invariably it has happened in the past. If no real danger threatens, suppression is a useless curb upon freedom of thought.

And besides, we may perhaps learn a great deal from Communism. We have nothing to fear, but something to gain. There was perhaps some justification for the use of harsh restriction in monarchies, olligarchies, dictatorships, etc., but in our great and liberal government, "of the people, by the people, for the people," what have we to fear from Communism?—H. B.

OPEN FORUM

The Tar Heel And Boxing

Editor Daily Tar Heel:

Last Friday night it was my good fortune to witness the boxing meet between North and South Carolina universities.

I admit readily that I have seen better cards, but I arise in indignation to the way these bouts were written up in the Tar Heel.

It is not South Carolina's fault for not having better material with which to give Carolina's team more opposition; neither is it the fault of the new men wearing Carolina's colors. There was not a man fighting who was not trying to win and do his best.

I think it mighty poor sportsmanship for some fellow, who in all probability has never been in a ring, to come out in his college paper and say which was the poorest bout. After all what does the boy get for training hard and living right? A few pats on the back and see his name in the papers.

In the case I refer to, his first varsity fight in which he was naturally nervous and conservative. Then to be referred to as the poorest fight, I think it downright dirty.

This is the first time I have written an article for this paper; however on several occasions I have seen my name in print relating to my activities on former boxing teams. For this reason I think myself qualified to have an opinion of how a boxer feels in the squared circle—and out.

Wants New Seats

To the Editor:

I read with keen disappointment the article in this morning's Daily Tar Heel stating that the seats from the old Memorial hall are to be put into the new auditorium. It certainly is a disheartening bit of news and there isn't much that we can do about it. But may I offer a suggestion, which I believe is basically sound, and perhaps with some alterations should prove practical.

Why can't we sell seats to individuals—the money received will be used for buying seats for the new auditorium that will be adequate, comfortable, and in harmony with the structure. At $5.00 a seat it would be possible, out of the student body, faculty, towns people, and friends in the state, to sell 1800 seats. If the receipts from these sales aren't sufficient to pay for the new seats it would not be very difficult for the school or some kind "uncle" to make up the difference.

To add stimulus to the purchase of the seats it may not be a bad idea to have the purchaser's names placed on the various seats. This method was used, to a certain extent, in building the old Memorial hall and I believe the same method, in another form, would help to put the finishing touches on the new auditorium. Thank you.

Respectfully submitted,
N. G.

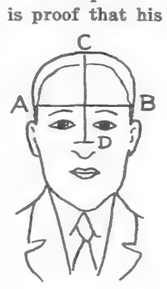
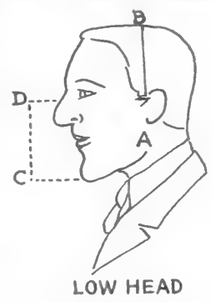
LEARNED PSYCHOLOGIST INTERPRETS BALLOTING ON CLASS ATTENDANCE



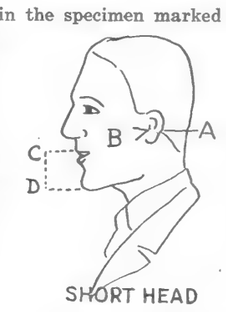
English Bagby Studies Craniums of Representative Voters; Diagrams Helpful.

"Psychology and phrenology," said Dr. English Bagby in an exclusive interview yesterday with Simon Legree, "if used by one of the experts in our department, even by Dr. Dashiell, would have made the Daily Tar Heel balloting unnecessary. A new discovery of cranial measurements which I began studying during the War, and have just developed, enables me to ascertain the political views and beliefs of students by a mere glance at the bony sheath which protects the temporal lobe and other parts of the brain. For instance, the very instant I meet with a new class, I can predict accurately that, for example, 23% will fail, 14% will believe I am nothing but a bag of wind; 3% will use psychology in later, life, and so forth.



LONG HEAD

"Take the specimen that I have marked "long head", for example. The great length of line from 'C' to 'D' is proof that his brain capacity is sufficient to enable him to absorb the contents of an ordinary course by attending one class each week. Naturally he is opposed to required attendance. In the specimen marked "Narrow Head," the length of the line from the bridge of the nose to the top of the cranium, identical with the length of line 'A-B', gives us evidence of a highly developed frontal lobe, and four-square judgment. Such a man will naturally have the good sense to favor optional attendance.



NARROW HEAD

"In the specimen I have marked 'Low Head', we find a man of marked mental characteristics. The size of the nose and the comparatively short line 'A-B' indicates close coordination between the Post-Central Convolution, the Pons, and the Cutaneous Kinesthetic area. Such a coordinated individual is naturally very ambitious. He believes that the more other people are absent, the higher will be his own grade, relatively, and naturally votes for optional attendance, but never misses a class himself.

LOW HEAD

"The average man we find in the specimen marked 'Short Head'. He is on the Daily Tar Heel staff, a member of Sigma Nu. He is willing to listen to reason, and if he votes at all, it will be to change something. If, as indicated by my careful measurement of the length of the line 'C-D' he believes things are all right as they are, he will not take the trouble to vote."

SHORT HEAD

Such a Lawman Would Impress Anybody

"The . . . lawyers . . . were greatly impressed by the lawman's candor, frankness, sincerity and common sense."—Daily Tar Heel.

With Contemporaries

A Proletariat Abe Lincoln?

Like Greta Garbo, Al Smith, Senator Borah, Sinclair Lewis, C. Lindbergh, Art Shires, One-Eyed Connolly, and Jim Bausch, Oklahoma's new governor, "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, is a news "natural." He fairly exudes colour. His life flaunts itself before you; you are aware of the odor of oil wells, of stale rooms where men and women wash and eat and linger without ventilation; you visualize a lank, cadaverous-faced man with monotheistic fanaticism tempered by a spoken zeal for liberating the labourer; you picture him espousing an obtuse philosophy that has for its skeleton a hatred of opulence, of culture, of professional taciturnity.

You cannot imagine him changing his underwear, or washing his teeth, or bathing daily. Bred where life was a ceaseless circle of eating, working, sleeping, where intellectuality was harboured rather than allowed freedom, where taxes were believed to be the spending money of politicians with a yen for gambling and drinking, where amusement was an implement of the Devil and his iniquity, he grew into a crustaceous manhood with no knowledge of languor or beauty; indeed he had a contempt for them so strong that facets of them such as clean white shirts, neckties, and two pairs of trousers belonging to two different coats were like a red flag waved before his thin, dun-coloured face.

He has begun with a marvelous or wealthy state still in its adolescence. It remains to be seen whether he will inculcate in it his stringent puritanism and his benevolence to God—whether it will tolerate his scourge on the dilettante, his rapier-like advances on higher education, and his proposed obliteration of gentle pastimes like football.

He has begun with a marvelous orchestration from his own vocal chords. He seems tireless. He actually walked across the state, when not riding free as a hitch-hiker, campaigning. Had Brinkley won in Kansas, he and Murray would have had the whole sociological world agog. As it is, Oklahoma's first man will be quite a big noise by himself.—The Daily Kansan.

What a Great School That Would Be

Although the day of mergers has seemed to have reached and passed its day of glory, it still seems to be quite the thing in North Carolina. We have already experienced it on our campus; and now we read that a merger of the state colleges of North Carolina—namely, University of North Carolina, N. C. State, and N. C. C. W.—has been recommended by leading educators in this state, and has the governor's approval. The new plan calls for only one board of trustees and is expected in every way to strengthen the three institutions. The merger will not be a physical one, each campus and all campus activities remaining the same as they are now. All diplomas, however, are to be given in the name of the University of North Carolina. We hope that these colleges may derive as much benefit from their approaching merger as we have acquired from our recent similar experiment.—Queen's Blues.

Calvin Coolidge will go down in history as the President who though he didn't make any breaks, got all of them.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

BOXERS TO MEET V. M. I. CADETS SATURDAY NIGHT

Cadets Said To Be Team to Defeat to Cop Southern Title.

Having put the South Carolina fights on the right side of the ledger last Friday night, the Tar Heel mitmen were busy at work yesterday, pointing to the meet with the V. M. I. Cadets, which will be their most important as far as championship hopes are concerned. The bouts, which will be the main show of a doubleheader will start at eight-thirty Saturday night in the Tin Can. In the preliminary at seven o'clock, the Tar Babies will meet the V. M. I. freshmen.

The Cadets were runners-up to Florida in the Conference Tournament last year, and instead of being weakened, their squad has been considerably strengthened, having lost very few of last year's aggregation and being reinforced by several promising freshmen. It is generally known along the southern front that the Cadets are the team to beat to win the itle.

The Tar Heels may be able to call on two new men for the V. M. I. fights, Dale Holderness and Bill Miller.

Neither Holderness, hard-hitting senior 145-pounder, nor Miller, sophomore southpaw heavyweight, were available for the opening meet with South Carolina, but Coach Rowe thinks both men will be ready for V. M. I.

Miller was kept out of the South Carolina meet by a bad cut over the eye, but his injury has been healing rapidly, and the Southpaw, always hard to fathom, is almost sure to get a try against the Cadets. Wilson, who boxed this weight, lost one of the two bouts the Tar Heels dropped to South Carolina, and Coach Rowe wants to see how Miller will go.

Holderness should get a chance also, although Jackson, who boxed in the 145-pound class against South Carolina, won his match and looked good doing it. Holderness, an intramural champ, out for the varsity for the first time, hasn't had quite the experience of Jackson, but is agressive and a hard-hitter of much power.

Cagers Run Up 30 To 13 Score Over Deacons

The Tar Heel basketball team, after playing rather erraticly during the first half, came back in the closing period and ran up a 30-13 score over the Wake Forest Demon Deacons. The floorwork of the Tar Heels was excellent, as was the defense, the Deacons getting only three field goals during the game.

Sandy Dameron found himself in the second half after missing several crips early in the game and copped scoring honors with four field goals and three fouls for an eleven point total. Carolina continued to miss fouls, getting only six out of sixteen.

At the end of the half Carolina was leading 13-6. Wilmer Hines made three baskets to lead the scoring during the first half. Carolina sank only one foul goal out of seven tries, while the Deacons made five of six good.

Hines and Edwards, forwards; Dameron, center; and Captain Marpet and Alexander, guards started for the Tar Heels. Deacon's taking the floor at the beginning were Earp and Brogden, forwards; Webb, center; Captain Mills and Gardner, guards.

Wake Forest	3	7	12

Freshmen Win 23-17

The Carolina freshman quintet defeated Wake Forest's yearlings by a 23-17 score in a game preliminary to the varsity contest. Malloy of Wake Forest was high scorer with nine points. Carolina's forwards, Weathers and Fisher played stellar ball. Weathers scored eight points.

HIGH SCHOOL MIT AND MAT TEAMS TO BATTLE HERE

First Annual Boxing and Wrestling Tournament Scheduled for February 12 and 13.

The first annual interscholastic boxing and wrestling tournaments for North Carolina high schools will take place in the Tin Can February 12 and 13. These tournaments have been added to the already long list of high school contests held at the University because of the rising popularity of these two soprts.

There will be a cup awarded to the school winning the boxing championship and one to the school winning in wrestling. Both tournaments will be scored on a point basis. In boxing five points will be given to the man winning his bout. In wrestling the winner of the match will receive five points only if he throws his man, if he should win by a decision he will be given only three points.

In the boxing tournament there will be three rounds of two minutes each and one minute between rounds. The total wrestling time will be six minutes. After two minutes of any wrestling bout, the referee will have power, at his discretion, to cause each wrestler in turn to get down on the mat for a two minute period. A thirty second time advantage is required for a decision.

The first preliminary in both boxing and wrestling will start at three o'clock in the afternoon, Thursday, February 12. The second preliminary will take place at ten o'clock on the morning of February 13. The finals in both tournament will be held at eight p. m. Friday evening.

Ruffin Wins 50-31

Ruffin won over Mangum by a 50-31 score in a game which was much closer than the score indicates. At the half Ruffin led 29-8, but Manly rallied in the second half to score twenty-three points while Ruffin was scoring twenty-one. Ginsberg, of the losers, led the individual scoring with eighteen points, while Royster and Yerton, of Ruffin, ran up sixteen points each to lead their team. Ginsberg had his eye on the basket at all times and was easily the individual star of Manly.

Mangum Wins Thriller

Manly defeated Grimes by a narrow margin, 22-19, to win one of the closest games of the season so far. The score at the half stood at 17-10 but Grimes staged a rally in the last half to come within one point of a tie score. They held Mangum scoreless throughout the third quarter and in the final quarter scored three baskets to bring the score up to 20-19. With thirty seconds to play and one point needed for a tie, Bell missed two foul shots and the ball was grabbed by McRae who dropped in a long one for the final basket of the game. Watson and Wishnefsky, with nine and six points respectively, led the Grimes attack, while the three Blythe brothers were best for Mangum.

Hurdling Said Most American Event In Track

To the number of sports which go to make up the track phase, hurdling is truly the most strikingly American in its action.

The American hurdler is the best in the world—a bold statement, possibly unbelievable to many, knowing that an expert hurdler must have perfect mastery of form. In this mastery of form the American youth is more expertly adept than any other person on the two continents. By nature and disposition he takes his training more seriously; especially in details and mastery of technique than our friends across the sea.

The hurdler must have speed, second only to the specialized dash man, stamina and endurance of a quarter-miler; a natural ability as a jumper; a cool head, and a dash and daring, equal to that required of the participants of our most strenuous competitive games. Coupled to these ennobling qualities, he must be patient to the extereme so that he will be able to master the form which is vital for a championship performance. A willingness to endure innumerable bumps and bruises not encountered in any other track event is required of the man who would make a success of this phase of sports. He should acquire a machine-like precision along with unerring accuracy because a slip of even a fraction of an inch may spell the difference between a brilliant victory and an ignominious spill, which is usually as painful physically as it is mentally. Each of the ten hurdles is truly a hazard, and none realizes it as much as the veteran hurdler.

America has time and again sent back foreign teams with the bleak side of a long count because of the fitness and superb prowess of its athletes. In the

Frosh Expected To Put Strong Team In Ring Against Cadets

The freshmen pugs, who will open their season Saturday night against the V. M. I. Rats, are coming along in great shape and are expected to present a strong team. Cliff Glover, Furches Raymer, and Paul Hudson have all been working hard and have shown vast improvement since Christmas.

Don McIntyre, new freshman welterweight prospect, has been looking better lately and will probably get the call in his weight Saturday. He packs plenty of wallop in his right hand but will have much to learn before he becomes a finished fighter.

Boxing Very Popular

Although there has been a lot of ink spilt about football killing interest in other sports, there seems to be more people attending boxing matches this season than ever before. Especially is this true of intercollegiate boxing. Both Durham and Chapel Hill have had as many as two thousand fight fans in one evening this year, and the season has just begun. North Carolina State College is the latest addition to the fistic fraternity in the Old North State. Since the University of North Carolina introduced the cauliflower industry into Big Five circles a few years ago, it has enjoyed a rapid growth and now threatens basketball as the main winter sport. With Duke, North Carolina State, and North Carolina University all represented with boxing teams, the 1931 season should be a banner year for intercollegiate boxing in this state.

Tar Heels Again Strong

The Tar Heels, Southern Conference champions in '28 and '29 and state champions ever since boxing was inaugurated in the state several years ago, have another strong team. Coach Rowe has molded his team around Captain "Ark" Goodridge, Obie Davis, and John Warren, the philosophical fighter with the sleep producing punch. All of these men are veterans of two years' varsity experience. Captain Goodridge is without a doubt one of the finest ring performers in the entire South. Goodridge lost two years in succession to O'Connor of Florida. Both of these bouts were very close and hard-fought. O'Connor is gone now, and "Ark" is the ace of his division. A calm, fast, shifty fighter, he has presented a tight defense in the past, and he punches hard with both his left and right. John Warren is a careful, alert, pile-driving type of boxer. He is one of the best heavies in the state and Southern Conference. Obie Davis, the plucky Texan, is one of the gamest leather pushers that Carolina has ever turned out. Last season he fought out of his weight most of the time. In spite of this handicap, he won the majority of his fights. Davis looked good in his opening bout against Harris, South Carolina middleweight. The Texas boy

EXPECT 100 MEN OUT FOR WINTER FOOTBALL DRILLS

Equipment Issued and Everything Ready for Work to Begin This Afternoon.

Up until last night football equipment had been issued to sixty-eight freshman and more than thirty members of the varsity squad, and everything was in readiness for the opening of winter football practice which gets underway this afternoon. According to the plans as announced by Head Coach Chuck Collins, practice will continue for six weeks. More than one hundred men should be on the field the first day, it is said.

"Winter practice is more important than fall practice," Coach Collins asserted, "and those who miss winter practice will have little chance of making next fall's team, for, with the hard schedule we face next fall, experience is going to count more than ever."

Coach Collins announced that for winter practice the squad will be divided into four or more teams, and that inter-squad games will be played Wednesdays and Saturdays.

"Carolina next fall faces the toughest competition any university team has met," Coach Collins admonished.

The* FAVORITE tobacco of the Dartmouth man is . . .

IF you want to know the Dartmouth man's favorite tobacco, watch him as he loads his pipe between classes in front of Dartmouth Row. Watch him as he strolls along Wheelock Street and pulls the familiar blue tin of Edgeworth out of his pocket.

A pipe and Edgeworth—this is the smoking combination that has won the college man. Harvard, Cornell, Michigan, Stanford, Illinois . . . all agree with Dartmouth. Natural merit has made Edgeworth the favorite smoking tobacco in America's leading colleges and universities.

College men everywhere respond to the appeal of pipes packed with cool, slow-burning Edgeworth. Be guided by their choice; try Edgeworth yourself. Taste its rich natural savor that is enhanced immeasurably by Edgeworth's distinctive "eleventh process." You will find Edgeworth at your nearest tobacco shop—15¢ the tin. Or, for generous free sample, address: Larus & Bro. Co., 105 S. 22d St., Richmond, Va.

VILLAGE STORES REPORT $1350 IN RETURNED CHECKS

Eight Firms Show Students Are Prompt in Taking Up Bad Checks.

In spite of the numerous bank failures in North Carolina and other states, the merchants in Chapel Hill have suffered slightly in comparison to the total amount of checks taken in. Of eight firms interviewed approximately $1350 worth of checks given by students have been returned because of bank failures. Nearly all of these have been taken up and only a few were difficult to collect.

The following firms were interviewed and gave the number of bad checks they had received.

The Campus Confectionery had two checks for twenty-five dollars and one for ten dollars. There were numerous one dollar checks amounting to about one hundred dollars. Only one check was hard to collect and nearly all the checks were finally collected.

Harry's Grill had about $100 worth returned on account of bank failures. Nearly all were made good.

The Carolina Coffee Shop took in a larger amount than any other firm. Approximately $450 worth of bad checks were taken in of which nearly all were paid by the students giving them.

The Students Supply Store had under $25 worth and all of these were taken up.

Pritchard-Lloyd took about $350 worth and had a few which were not collected. The Carolina Smoke Shop had about $60 worth of which $9.30 is yet uncollected.

The University Stationery Store has on hand approximately $1,000.00 worth of uncollected checks of which only $100 worth is from banks that have closed their doors. A great many of the latter variety of checks that have been given were taken up by the students.

Sutton's Drug Store has $1,100.00 worth of bad checks all of which have been given by students. There are fifteen checks on hand from closed banks and about $100 worth of such checks which have been paid by the students.

The Waffle Shop is the lightest sufferer from this evil. Less than five dollars worth of checks have been given on banks that closed their doors, and all of these have been paid.

early years of the newly-expired decade, the superiority of American hurdlers was again forcibly demonstrated in the Yale-Harvard meet with the united Oxford-Cambridge team. The Americans easily outclassed the English, but all realized that the going would not have been so easy had the Yale-Harvard combination been up against home talent. The Olympic games of 1920 ably show the force and power of American hurdlers, when the three major hurdling events were captured by the boys from the U. S. A.

Here in the South, hurdling is not up to par with the rest of the main sporting items. It is still in its infancy below the Mason-Dixon line, but gaining ground rapidly in the regard of prominent farseeing athletic coaches of the Southern Conference. This fact is attributed to the fact that track is just reaching the major sport stage in the South, and because hurdling is so intricate, and must be developed by tedious and persistent practice.

The first article in the magazine is by Harriett L. Herring, who is a research associate here. The title of the article is The Industrial Development Of the South and is a summary of the author's volume, The History of the Textile Industry in the South. In her article, Miss Herring traces the South from its former agricultural prominence to the important place it now occupies in the industrial world.

Professor Claudius T. Murchison publishes a discussion of southern textile manufacturing. In this article the author gives a number of statistics pertaining to the subject and comments on each separate problem that confronts the industrial South.

Joseph Hyde Pratt, Ph.D writes an article concerning the lumber and forest-products of the South. In this, he gives the advantages that the South possesses over other parts of the country in this particular field.

Thorndike Saville, professor of hydraulic and sanitary engineering at the University gives a review of the power situation in the South. In his article, he shows the various power resources of each state in this section. He also offers several recommendations for the further development of available water power.

LOYALTY COUNCIL GETS FAVORABLE REPORT ON FUNDS

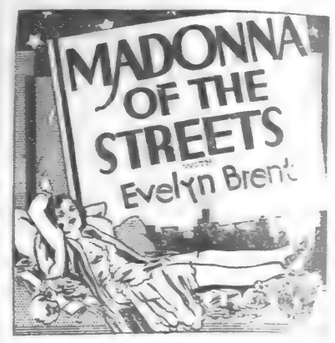
should have his best season this year.

Marty Levinson, the sensational featherweight made his varsity debut last Friday night in an impressive manner. He was using his right very effectively. He needs to develop his left and a little more polish on his defense. Biggs, another sophomore, fills the bantamweight division on the squad, and should improve with experience. Jackson looked good in his first fight against Greene of South Carolina. Although only a second year man, he promises to be one of the best mitmen on the team. He is fast, aggressive, and seems to have a powerful right. Big Hugh Wilson, light heavyweight, can absorb lots of punishment and give a lot in return. However, he needs lots of polishing on offense and defense. When Platt Landis, promising heavyweight, recovers from his injury, John Warren may fill the light heavyweight berth, and Landis the heavyweight division.

Duke To Give Carolina Race

The Duke Blue Devils have a team this year that should give Carolina a close run for state honors. In Floyd Riddick, the Dukemen have the cream of the state bantamweights. Riddick is fast, shifty, and has a big bunch for a little fighter. Captain Martin, the fighting preacher, has been a star leather pusher for three years and has seldom been defeated. Phil Bolick, middleweight, is one of the best fighters in the state. He already has two knockouts to his credit this season. Bolick has a murderous right and an effective left. Two gridiron stars, Don Hyatt and Kid Brewer, defend the lightheavy and the heavyweight posts respectively. Both boys are good and should develop.

State Should Improve



Lieutenant Elm, State's boxing coach, has a hard row to hoe this season. The Techmen have some good material in Karig, Foreman, Beavers, Hull, Captain Demeo, and Red Espey. Espey, State's heavyweight, has already won two fights this year with no losses. However, he has been the only State man to win a fight this year. The Tech squad is bound to improve before many more days pass.

Well, that's the boxing situation at the beginning of the season. It looks as though they will finish in the following order: North Carolina, Duke, and North Carolina State.

Tau Beta Pi Fraternity To Tap Engineers Tonight

CEREMONY BEGINS AT NINE O'CLOCK IN PHILLIPS HALL

High Standards of Scholarship Required for Membership.

DISTINCT HONOR

Seven Honored With Membership at Tapping Last April.

Immediately following the meeting of the American Institute of Civil Engineers tonight the engineering students will assemble in room 206 Phillips hall for the mid-winter tapping of the Tau Beta Pi, honorary scholastic engineering fraternity. The tapping will begin at nine, since Mr. R. S. Phillips will detain the engineering students until that time with his address to the civil engineers.

Membership to this fraternity carries with it a distinct honor, for to be admitted an engineering student must have qualities of scholarship, character, and fellowship. The Beta chapter of the Tau Beta Pi is one of the three national honorary fraternities on the campus, the other two being Phi Beta Kappa, nationally known scholastic fraternity, and the Sigma Xi, honorary scientific research society.

To become a member of the Tau Beta Pi the engineering student must make a record as high or perhaps higher than that of the Phi Beta Kappa student.

The Beta chapter is one of more than sixty such chapters in the United States. The first was organized at Lehigh Uni-

Phillips To Address Engineers Tonight

R. S. Phillips, engineer of the Portland Cement association will address members of the Carolina chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers tonight in room 319, Phillips hall at eight-fifteen o'clock. The subject of Mr. Phillips' talk will be "Monolithic Concrete."

Mr. Phillips has addressed the engineering students on many occasions in the past. His subjects are always picked with the idea of dealing with topics in which the engineers are interested. For this reason his talks are well attended, and many students have expressed their pleasure at hearing him.

SENATE PASSES RELIEF BILL FOR DROUGHT AREAS

Red Cross Opposes Act But Appeals for Volunteer Aid.

While the Red Cross is still trying to feed and clothe thousands of persons in the drought stricken area, the bill which has been passed by the United States Senate voting $25,000,000 for the relief work awaits action by the House. The action of the Senate was against the wishes of President Hoover and the central committee of the relief agency. The report of this agency stated that the Red Cross wished to remain a volunteer organization. This statement was made: "We consider ourselves charged with the responsibility in the drought area. We are meeting the needs and will continue to do so."

Administration supporters wished a postponement of the bill until the Red Cross could have a chance to raise the $10,000,000 they are striving for, but this was voted down. Republicans in the House seem to be doubtful of defeating the bill, and a compromise has been suggested, to permit the government to match on a fifty-fifty basis the amount raised by the Red Cross voluntary contributions.

Meanwhile the Red Cross is proceeding with its work. Information obtained from the American Red Cross News Service states that thousands of families in Kentucky, Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Missouri are being fed and clothed. In Kentucky about 24,530 persons are receiving their food from the relief organization. The reports speak of the need for children's clothing, a need which has been accentuated by the bitter cold. The sufferers apply for help only when they have done all they can for themselves. A field worker wires: "An ordinary sight on the mountain trails is that of a lone family in a broken down oxen-drawn cart or with a half starved mule in the traces, moving away to any destination they can reach where help might be available."

In Arkansas food and clothing are needed to take care of the hundreds of families which have to be looked after by the Red Cross. It is the opinion of physicians that there is no unusual situation as to illness but the cold weather will probably

SAUNDERS MADE DIRECTOR THIRD ALUMNI DISTRICT

Will Preside Over Council Meetings To Be Held Next Year In Florida.

J. Maryon Saunders, executive secretary of the University Alumni Association, was elected director of the third district of the American Alumni Council at the meeting in Birmingham, January 16 and 17. He will preside over the council when they meet next year in Tallahassee, Gainesville, and Winter Park, Florida.

Mr. Saunders made the first address of the conference on Saturday morning. The paper he read was scheduled to be delivered by Felix A. Grisette, Director of the Alumni Loyalty Fund; but, since Mr. Grisette was unable to be there, he referred the duty to Mr. Saunders. The subject of the address, in keeping with the general trend of discussion, was "Some Aspects of University Fund Raising." Following this discussion other phases of alumni work were taken up for consideration and discussion.

After the luncheon at the Tutwiler hotel, where the conference was in session, the afternoon was taken up with discussions of alumni clubs and other organizations for the purpose of closer contact with alumni and alumnae. At four in the afternoon the sessions were closed

TAX COMMISSION FINISHES REPORT

Six Hundred Page Volume Contains Everything Pertaining To Taxation in State.

The report of the State Tax Commission, supposed to have been in the hands of the General Assembly last November, was completed Monday night. The volume, a 600-page mass of statistics and figures, presents detailed studies of everything concerning taxation as it exists in North Carolina.

The entire income tax situation in the state, presenting segregated studies of individual and cooperation incomes, is given in this volume.

The detailed income tax study was made up from an analysis of 63,165 returns for the calendar year 1929 filed by individuals and corporations and 3,249 by partnerships and fiduciaries.

Only 34,661, or 61.3 per cent, of the 56,546 individuals making returns, reported any taxable income. A small group of 418 persons paid 57.2 per cent of the total personal income tax paid to the state, the incomes of these individuals being over $15,000 or over. Of this group 34.8 per cent of the income came from dividends and 16.1 per cent from business profits. The next largest percentage of the total income tax paid by any group was 16 per cent, paid by 29,219 individuals whose income was from $1 to $2500. Of this group 64 per cent of the income came from salary and wages.

Corporation officials paid 25.1 per cent of the total income tax; skilled employees, 3.9 per cent; small business executives, 3.6 per cent; doctors, 3.5 per cent; attorneys, 3.2 per cent; teachers and professors, 2.1 per cent; bankers, 1.1 per cent; farmers, 1 per cent; and newspaper publishers, .1 per cent.

Public service corporations paid 19.6 per cent and manufacturers of tobacco 39.8 per cent of the total corporation income tax.

The total income of individuals and corporations in the state in 1929 was 922 2-3 million dollars, but the taxable returns amounted to only 733 million dollars. A final taxable income of 186 1-2 million dollars remained after deductions of 488 million; this amount yielded a revenue of $7,107, 186 of which 77.5 per cent was paid by corporations. Among the corporations 445 foreign businesses paid $3,026,000.

FIVE DEATHS REPORTED IN VILLAGE THIS MONTH

Two cases of measles and three of pneumonia have been reported by the Chapel Hill health department within the past few days. One of the pneumonia cases proved fatal.

Since the first of January five deaths have occurred in Chapel Hill of which four were white and one colored. Of these five, only two were buried here; the other three were shipped away.

Garrett Ill

Professor M. B. Garrett of the history department has been sick with influenza for the past three days.

Lawrence Ill

G. H. Lawrence, superintendent of public welfare, is ill with influenza at his home on Forest Hills.

LOCAL MUSICIAN IN FLUTE CONCERT

Stringfield Formerly Won Pulitzer Prize for Musical Composition.

The activities of Lamar Stringfield have been brought to North Carolina during this year as he is living in Chapel Hill. To the many people who have been following the work of this young musician during the past few years, the opportunity to hear him perform in person has now come. The radio and concert orchestras have played his compositions for millions of listeners. Though his "Cripple Creek" was performed a number of times, last fall was the first time that Mr. Stringfield had the opportunity of hearing it played except when he was conducting the performance.

The Roxy Theatre Symphony played it at the time and the composer would probably have missed it then had not the conductor, Mr. Joseph Littau, wired him that it was being played in conjunction with the "Mountain Song." Now, word comes from Mr. Littau, who accepted the conductorship of the Omaha Symphony last fall, that the "Mountain Song" and "Cripple Creek" are being played at one of his concerts on the third of February.

Mr. Stringfield's activity in giving to the musical world the music that North Carolina environment inspires him to write, goes on quietly in his cottage in Chapel Hill. His music, which he calls the music of his people, speaks for itself in that it creates a desire in thousands of people throughout the world to play and listen to repeated performances of his works.

On Friday evening, January 30, Mr. Stringfield will make his first public appearance in his native state in four years. He will be assisted by Mrs. Fred B. McCall, pianist. Dr. D. A. McPherson, violinist; and the Faculty Orchestra will play in cooperation with the University music department.

The first part of the program will be devoted mostly to music for the flute, by composers of the seventeenth to twentieth centuries. The second half will be devoted to music composed by Mr. Stringfield, which he has based on themes of North Carolina subjects. His "Mountain Song" and "Cripple Creek" from the "Southern Mountain" Suite will end the concert.

The Playmaker building where the concert is to be played only seats three hundred and forty-five giving ample opportunity to receive the intimate relationship with the performers which Mr. Stringfield believes best for the finest expression from the artist.

Proceeds from this concert will be donated to the Faculty Chamber Orchestra; so that they may buy music-stands and other necessities used by them. The Faculty Orchestra often plays for the Playmaker productions, and as the Music building is not available at this time, the Playmaker Theatre is being used.

Survey Reveals Changing Attitude Toward Education

Dialectic Senate Passes Two Bills

At a short session of the Di senate Tuesday night the bill asking that congress appropriate $25,000,000 for Red Cross work in the United States, was defeated by a vote of nineteen to six. Senators Ramsay and Shreve upheld the bill, while Senators Dungan, Rutledge and Higdon opposed it.

A second bill, Resolved: that campus political parties print a list of their candidates and platforms at least two weeks before the election was passed by a vote of twenty-one to one without discussion.

ALBRIGHT SPEAKS ON DEVELOPMENT OF TWO SOCIETIES

History of Di Senate and Phi Assembly Traced in Radio Talk.

Mayne Albright, former president of the Phi Assembly, was the speaker over station WPTF at five o'clock yesterday afternoon. Albright talked on the history, purpose, organization, and present status of the Dialectic Senate and the Philanthropic Assembly at the University.

In his talk Albright showed that the two literary societies date back almost from the time of the opening of the University in 1795. The University was formally opened February 12, 1795, and on June 3 of the same year the first literary society, the parent of the later societies, was formed under the name of the Debating society. The body met on Thursday evenings and the members "read, spoke, and composed." The objects of the society were the "cultivation of lasting friendship and the promotion of useful knowledge."

The society soon became too large and it seemed advisable to split the body. A new body, known as the Concord Society, was formed August 1, 1795.

The name of the Concord Society was changed to The Concord Assembly of the Philanthropic Literary Society, and the Debating Society became the Dialectic Senate. From the first however, these names were shortened to the "Di" and the "Phi," and these simpler forms have remained to the present time.

From the beginning the two societies met in their respective library rooms on the third floor of South building. By 1820 the libraries contained about one thousand volumes and several fine portraits of former members.

In the year 1834 the treasury of the Phi Assembly was in such condition that the group was able to offer $1,000 to the University towards the erection of a new library, but the financial condition of the University would not permit the erection of the building.

In 1837 there were about seven thousand volumes in the libraries of the two societies, and it became necessary for them to have larger quarters. As a result representatives from the societies petitioned the trustees, who arranged to have New East and New West buildings enlarged. The presidents of the organiza-

COLLEGE HEADS FAVOR IDEA OF OPTIONAL CUTS

Some Would Make Attendance Privileges Contingent on Exceptional Grades.

OPINIONS DIFFER

Several Schools Considering Adopting Liberal System In Use at University.

The optional attendance survey which Jack Dungan has been conducting for the special committee of the Central Administrative Council among the universities of the country has brought forth the information that educational institutions of higher learning in this country are undergoing more of a transformation at this time than they have since the beginning of the Twentieth Century. Education appears to be in a very transitory stage with colleges everywhere seriously asking themselves if their instruction is effective and whether it is time to change their entire theories of education.

At Syracuse University, considered conservative because of its being a church school, Dean Harry S. Gander has advised the committee that " . . . An important change was reflected last year in accordance with which professors are no longer required to report attendance for junior and senior students.

"I think that you will find an exceptionally fine attitude on the part of most, if not all, instructors in the University toward

HOUSE DISCUSSES ECONOMY IN HIGH SCHOOL ADDRESS

Executive Secretary Speaks at Mid-Winter Commencement At Rocky Mount.

R. B. House, executive secretary, delivered the commencement address at the mid-winter commencement of the Rocky Mount high school yesterday evening. The subject of his talk was "The Present Economic Situation, Fundamental Causes, and Remedy."

In the address Mr. House expressed the opinion that the present condition of the state was primarily caused by ignorance of the people in farming, business, industry and every phase of making a living and keeping it when it was made. He pointed out the farmer who still clings to theories and practices in agriculture that his great grandfather used.

It is not a question of finding ways to economize says Mr. House, but one of finding a system of education that will bring the people through the primary grades and continue their education through the University. The salvation of the state depends on the stand the people take for education. The gospel of Murphey, Wiley, Vance, Jarvis, Aycock, E. K. Graham and F. P. Graham must be maintained and a complete educational system open to all and second to none, if the state is to be delivered from tragedy, concluded Mr. House.

We Demand Action

In the recent straw vote conducted by the Daily Tar Heel the students have again indicated their attitude toward compulsory attendance measures imposed upon them by certain departments of the University. The results of the balloting are by now well known, and it is needless here to list them. It is sufficient only to say that the vote more clearly showed, although a straw vote can never be conclusive, that the student body, by an overwhelming majority, favors the retention of optional attendance.

It seems to us that student opinion is now so crystallized in opposition to any proposal or regulation which would tend to destroy the liberties of the students that the faculty must take notice. The Central Administrative Council, the literary societies, and the students themselves, through the straw vote, have stated and shown the position of the student body. If there are any who doubt that the student body as a whole favors optional attendance, who believe that indications of student opinion as mentioned above are not conclusive enough (and these must be few), let them call for an official vote.

The situation demands action, not words. Since the beginning of the quarter the students have been protesting the limitations, and it seems that they are going to continue to do so until their voice is heard. Those members of the faculty under whose jurisdiction the problem of attendance comes already have delayed too long its settlement. If the faculty thinks that a play for time, in which the enthusiasm of the students for optional attendance will wane, will be effective, they are mistaken; for we believe the issue at hand is one which a few weeks or months cannot kill. We demand a uniform rule of attendance for the entire undergraduate school of the University, and we believe that it is high time for a meeting of faculty and students in which the details of the problem may be discussed and some agreement arrived at.—B. M.

Ninety Days!

Rules and regulations, we are told, are made for our benefit. Without them we can never get along with our fellow men. But there are times when rules and regulations exceed human patience, and make us want to cry out in anguish at their unfairness. The most recent example of this that has come to our knowledge is the regulation of the Bank of Chapel Hill which requires a written ninety day notice by any student who wishes to withdraw some money from his savings account.

A very recent plight of a friend, a student at the University, is called to mind. A week ago he decided to open a savings account at the bank so that he would have a safe receptacle for his money. It was not a large sum, but it was his all. Three days later he had need of a few dollars, and went to the bank to withdraw it. To his surprise, however, the teller coldly informed him that he would have to signify, by a signed note, his intention of withdrawing money at least ninety days in advance! This was the first time the student had been told of this rule, not having seen it among the regulations in his pass book. And no amount of explanation could convince the teller that he needed the money right now, and not in the spring.

What boundless source of knowledge do the directors of the Bank of Chapel Hill think we students have suddenly uncovered to forecast three months in advance when we shall need a certain sum of money? Do they think that we have conquered the art of black magic so that we can predict the future? Or are we supposed to consult the stars for this information. If we are expected to do this, they should, at least, present a book on astrology to each student who opens a savings account at their bank.

It seems to us that this ninety-day regulation is singularly unfair to the student depositor. We know of no other bank which actually enforces such a stringent rule. It is only during a period of great duress, when a bank is wobbling feebly on its foundations and needs time to catch its breath, that it will resort to such a regulation. The Bank of Chapel Hill would do well to reconsider this unfriendly measure, for the impression it creates will do it more harm than good.—P. L.

Brutality Crops Out

In a recent United Press report is this dispatch:

Maryville, Missouri, January 12—(UP)—A parade of death, with a mob of 3,000 men, women and children trailing in its wake, started from the county courthouse here today and ended at a little rural schoolhouse where a 30-year old negro was burned alive.

Raymond Gunn, the negro, paid with his life at the place where he assaulted and murdered Velma Colter, a 19-year old white school teacher. He was chained to the roof of the frame school house while a group of men lighted its oil-soaked timbers. He shrieked but once as the flames ate their way to the roof and surrounded him. The mob looked on in silence.

"The mob looked on in silence."

This brief sentence tells us that the human race is still made of the stuff that characterized the early cave-man along with some of the perversions that characterize civilization. It shows that a group of human beings, acting together in the well-known mob psychology, have conducted themselves on a level not merely uncivilized—savages don't behave so—but perverted.

The law was taking its course when the victim was torn from a deputy, but from the mob's standpoint the law was not sufficient nor quick enough. The mob ruled by fear, primarily. Its members do not feel any personal responsibility for what they do. They need the backing of the others, and their brutality they explain to themselves and others as action in defense of a principle.

The mob has not the directness of a savage seeking revenge. It must outnumber its victim 3,000 to 1. It is not savage. It is perverted.—The Daily Trojan.

Youth

Sir Oswald Moseley's recent "dictatorship" manifesto issued in England, calling for the abolition of Parliament and the substitution of a council of five is significant, coming as it does, from one who claims to represent the youth of that land. It is an unusual gesture in an English-speaking country against those older men who have been in control of governments for many years and whose position still seems to be secure. Events within the last decade have fostered in many young men a strong dislike for the somewhat reactionary attitude of the older generation. It must be remembered that Europe, in this modern day, is still under the influence of men whose youth is fifty years behind them. These were the men who led the world into a war which almost wiped out a generation, a generation which, under ordinary circumstances would have filled the positions at present occupied by men well past their prime.

On the Continent, Youth has begun to make its presence felt, more so perhaps than elsewhere. The "Youth Movement" in Germany and in Italy has almost become a cult, and it seems that history may repeat itself and the Nationalist spirit of 1848 reanimate the crusade against conservative governments.—McGill Daily.

with resolutions for the next convention.

The American Alumni Council is comprised of the alumni associations of all the larger colleges and Universities of the United States. The purpose is to stimulate the individual alumni association and to bring to the inexperienced workers ideas which have proved beneficial in larger colleges. All alumni secretaries and editors, other alumni officers, alumni leaders and others interested in alumni activities are welcome to attend regardless of membership in the council.

Every year the council has held conventions to study college problems relating to alumni work. Because of the distance to be traveled many colleges have not been able to partake of the benefits of the council. For that reason the United States has been divided into districts, with annual meetings under the direct leadership of officers of the council. The conference held in Birmingham is division number three, comprising the states of Alabama, Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Virginia.

tions cast lots for the choice of building with the result that New East became the headquarters of the Phi and New West the headquarters of the Di. Since that time, strangely enough, the Phi society has attracted its members from the students coming from the eastern part of the state and the Di has attracted the westerners.

The order and decorum of the societies were upheld by means of an extensive fine system which covered every conceivable offense, and if the fines were not promptly paid, the sum would be doubled. The presidents of the societies were elected because of high scholarship and attention to the duties of the organization.

In the years around 1860 the societies were playing an important part in their relation to the campus. The commencement ball managers, marshals, assistants, and even the commencement speaker were chosen alternately by the two societies.

In the late 1870's the societies made a definite contribution to student life in the form of self-government. By a joint resolution, the societies petitioned the faculty to allow them to take care of all matters of student discipline. This power granted them, the Di and Phi were virtually in control of the campus, and the University saw the beginnings of a form of student government which has since developed and characterized the personality of campus life and of the University itself.

In 1866, by another joint resolution the libraries of both societies were united and given to the University. The official title of the joint library was to be the Library of the University of North Carolina, endowed by the Dialectic and Philanthropic Societies. The University was to furnish $200 and the societies each $150 each year for the purchase of new books.

As time went on, the interest in oratory and debate declined. As a result the societies no longer sponsor formal debates but are interested more in the extemporaneous discussion of current affairs.

their students, especially as it pertains to the provision of opportunities for the exercise of initiative, judgment, and self-reliance."

C. A. Smith, secretary to the faculty, at the University of Wisconsin wrote to the committee—"Student attendance in class is dependent upon the department. We do not keep attendance records, excepting as the departments require it. It seems to work out very well at present.

"The amount of initiative on the part of students seems to be rather large, as the students may petition for a hearing.

"There is a committee now acting on the question of social control at the University, and the students are instituting a representative body to consider and to meet with the committee to discuss the question of social control. The students asked this committee that is acting at the present time on the restudy of social control for a hearing, and at present are working out some way of getting a representative group who will present their views to the faculty committee."

Walter Scott writing from the president's office at Northwestern University said—"This matter has been under the jurisdiction of the various departments and while we have had no general faculty action, there have been in various departments and in various courses certain privileges extended.

"Last year the faculty of the college of liberal arts passed a ruling that students above a certain level of scholarship should not be held to the usual requirements of class attendance."

From the Harvard Handbook on Regulations has come the information that—"Any student who at mid-term or final examination has attained an average of "B" in four courses (in all four classes) may be placed on the Dean's list for the succeeding half of the year. Students whose names are on the list and all seniors in good standing will, except for registration, be trusted by the Dean with greater responsibility and discretion in the matter of attendance. So far this does not interfere with the collective interests of the classes or section to which they belong.

"Statistics indicate that the privilege has not been abused since its adoption in 1925, and that the seniors have used the freedom wisely. In all of the developments which have just been described the college offices and faculty have had the support, constructive criticism, and cooperation of the Student Council."

At Harvard for the fifteen to sixteen days prior to examinations all students are dismissed from class work in order to permit library research. This plan has worked out very successfully, according to the Dean of students there.

From Dean Hawkes' annual report to President Butler published in the Columbia Bulletin of Information, Columbia's stand on attendance is learned—"Some years ago the faculty voted that a student should receive full credit for a course in which he received a mark of "B" on all examinations, tests, essays, etc., regardless of his attendance record on the course, on the theory that if he had mastered the subject matter, the exact way in which he had done it was immaterial. The faculty went a little further this year and decided that no record of attendance need be handed in to the registrar in maturity credit courses.

"Anything which tends to arouse and maintain serious interest in things of the mind ought to be encouraged. If it turns out that the ommission of rules of attendance leads to this result, by all means let them be abolished."

At Purdue M. L. Fisher, Dean of Men, reported that, "We have limited optional attendance for students having distinguished scholastic ratings.

"In certain classes exemption grades are given. A student is exempted from his final examination upon attaining a certain standing with regard to scholarship."

In the handbook of the University the following is found—"Junior and senior students cited for distinction in scholarship are relieved from the University requirements regarding regular attendance on class exercises during the semester immediately following a citation for scholarship distinction.

J. H. Kirkland advising the student committee here from the Chancellor's office at Vanderbilt University said—"Eight cuts are permitted, after which one semester credit is subtracted (several credits being given for each course) for each additional three absences.

"Quality credits will not be subtracted for absence when the student is a senior in full standing with an average grade of "B" in the preceding term."

At Dartmouth College, Robert Strong, executive assistant to the president, refers to class attendance at his institution thusly—"At Dartmouth College students are allowed a certain number of absences, and the number varies according to the grade of work which the student has achieved in the previous semester."

Other schools in the South are considering inaugurating liberal measures similar to those employed at the University as attested by the fact contained in a letter from Dean Massee of the University of Tennessee—"We are thinking of trying some of these liberal measures with high scholarship groups."

There seems to be very little unemployment among persons who make a business of relieving something.

Tar Heels Risk Spotless Conference Record Against Gobbler Quint Friday Night

Imposing V. P. I. Cage Team Offers Stern Competition; Invaders Have Sophomore Varsity.

A fast, smooth-working quint of ambitious sophomores from V. P. I. will invade Chapel Hill tomorrow night to menace Carolina's record of no Southern Conference losses this season. The game will start at eight-thirty o'clock.

The Tar Heels have played but one Conference tilt, and that was won impressively from South Carolina, 38-8. V. P. I. looms a much tougher foe, and unless the Tar Heels get their offense clicking from the start, their record may be spoiled at the very beginning.

V. P. I. opened its season last Saturday night and looked good in a 28-21 victory over Virginia. Five sophomores played most of that game. V. P. I. didn't show a flock of stars, but what is more impressive to the Tar Heels, they presented an evenly-balanced team that clicked as a unit on offense and defense.

The Gobblers' probable lineup for their game at Wake Forest to-night and for their game at Carolina tomorrow night is Captain Baker and Hall, forwards; Belote, center; and Palmer and Wolfe, guards.

Carolina will probably stick to its combination of Edwards and Hines, forwards; Dameron, center; and Alexander and Captain Marpet, guards.

The Carolina-V. P. I. game at eight-thirty o'clock will follow a seven o'clock meeting between Oak Ridge and the Carolina frosh. Weathers, who scored twenty-two points in his last game, and Fisher will likely be at forward; Minor at center, and Jones and McCachern at guard for the Tar Babies.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

Led by Cromartie, Rollins, and Johnson, the Independents defeated the Ransom House by a score of 75-18. Up to this time the high scoring record was held by the A. T. O.'s, made in their 59-23 victory over Delta Tau Delta. Cromartie scored twenty-one points to break the individual high scoring record of twenty, which was later in the afternoon tied by Oliver, of the Kappa Alpha's, who also scored twenty-one points. Rollins ran a close second with twenty points, while Johnson scored nineteen to run a close third. For the losers Smith was best with ten.

At the half the score stood at 37-2, but with the arrival of Smith into the game Ransom House seemed to take heart to run up sixteen points in the last half.

Independents (75)	R. Hse. (18)
Rollins (20)	Hunter, F. (5)
Cromartie (21)	Johnes
Johnson (19)	Sikes (3)
Melvin (5)	Cheek
Roberts (8)	Hunter

Scoring substitutes: Independents: Sanderson (2). Ransom House: Smith (10).

Old West Forfeits

Everett received a forfeit yesterday afternoon when Old West failed to appear for their scheduled game.

K. A.'s Get 54-3 Win

The Kappa Alpha's defeated the Phi Alpha's yesterday afternoon, running up a total of fifty-four points, while holding their opponents to three points. For the second time yesterday afternoon the previous individual high scoring record of twenty points was broken, this time Oliver, of the victorious K.

HI SCHOOL CAGE CONTEST OPENING ON FEBRUARY 7

Two Finalists To Come Here at Conclusion of Season to Fight For Championship.

The second annual high school basketball contest will get under way February 7. All high schools in the state are invited to participate with the exception of the seven largest western high schools: Charlotte, Asheville, Gastonia, Salisbury, High Point, Greensboro, and Winston-Salem; and the eight largest eastern high schools: Raleigh, Durham, Fayetteville, Rocky Mount, Wilson, Goldsboro, Wilmington, and Greenville.

The fifteen schools named above comprise the class A division and have a separate league from the remainder of the high schools in the state, which are in the class B division. At the conclusion of the season the two victorious teams in each league will meet at the Tin Can to decide the championship of the state in their respective groups.

All entrance blanks must be turned into the office of the Bureau of High School Athletics by the faculty managers of the teams before February 7. A conference will be held soon after the entries have been made, at which the faculty managers will arrange the season's schedule. The contest will be run on an elimination basis.

The committee in charge of high school athletics and debating in the state will pay the railway fare one way for the teams coming to Chapel Hill to take part in the finals, and will provide for their entertainment while at the University.

Basketball champions of the past are: Winston-Salem, 1915; Durham, 1916; Winston-Salem, 1917, Durham, 1918; Winston-Salem, 1919; Wilmington, 1920; Chapel Hill, 1921; Greensboro, 1922; Asheville, 1923; Reidsville, 1924; Durham, 1925, 1926, 1927; Wilmington, 1928, 1929; Spencer, General State contest champions 1930. A survey of these statistics show that Durham high school has been state champion five times: Wilmington high school, three times. James Moore, forward on the Tar Heel quintet last season, was a member of the Wilmington aggregation for three years. Chapel Hill, Reidsville, Asheville, Greensboro, and Spencer have each won the championship once.

Intramural Schedule

Thursday

3:30 p. m.—(1) T. E. P. vs. Kappa Sigma; (2) Pi Kappa Phi vs. Pi Kappa Alpha; (3) Lambda Chi Alpha vs. Chi Psi.

4:30 p. m.—(1) Delta Sigma Phi vs. Phi Sigma Kappa; (2) Sigma Nu vs. Zeta Beta Tau; (3) Sigma Phi Sigma vs. Sigma Chi.

Friday

3:30 p. m.—(1) Graham vs. Independents; (2) Mangum vs. Manly; (3) Everett vs. Grimes.

4:30 p. m.—(1) Steele vs. Law School; (2) Beta Theta Pi vs. St. Anthony Hall; (3) Sigma Zeta vs. Theta Chi.

TAR BABY QUINT VICTORIOUS 23-17

Baby Deacons Unable to Match Play of Carolina Yearlings; McCachren Leads Frosh.

Setting a good example for the varsity last night, the Tar Baby quintet defeated the Baby Deacons by the close score of 23-17. This game was the closest and by far the most exciting that has been played in the Tin Can this season. At the half, the Carolina yearlings led by one point, the result a well executed field goal by Harris, substitute guard.

The two teams were very evenly matched and the five points that proved to be the margin of victory were safely guarded by the Carolina players as the game drew to a close. At no time during the game did either team have a greater advantage. The Tar Babies were never headed after the half, and when the score stood 16-14, the Deacon frosh seemed to wilt and the Tar Babies moved ahead to victory. The game ended with the Wake Forest men shooting frantically to narrow the margin of victory. It was Jones, Carolina guard, that broke the scoring ice on a long shot from the middle of the court, after the game had been four minutes old. Both teams had many tries but they were rushed and none counted. Much of the game in the first half, therefore was under the goals, where the scrimmage bordered on roughness.

McCachern, Charlotte boy, acting captain, and stellar guard for the Carolina freshmen was the star of the game. Although he was forced out of the game late in the first half with four personal fouls, he was the outstanding man on the floor. His floor work was good and his defensive play approached excellence. Weathers, forward, who had a little difficulty locating the basket at first, finally struck his stride and ended the

Invitations Issued To 150 Schools For Indoor Games

More than 150 institutions have been mailed invitations to compete in the Second Annual Southern Conference Indoor Games at the Tin Can March 7.

The preliminary announcements and invitations went out today. University athletic officials are beginning preparations already, and plan to go the limit to make this meet even bigger and better than last year's successful initial games.

The Southern Conference institutions will have a program of twelve events, practically the same as last year, except that the sprint and hurdle races may be increased from sixty to seventy yards.

In conjunction with the Conference games a limited number of freshman events will be held as well as scholastic events, and a special one-mile relay for non-conference colleges and universities.

The preliminary invitations were mailed to forty-three non-conference colleges, thirty-five prep schools, and fifty high schools from Washington to the Mississippi, which had signified interest.

Director of Athletics R. A. Fetzer, in making the announcement, however, stressed the fact that the freshman, scholastic, and non-conference events are open to any Southern team, and asked all institutions interested to write to him for information.

Washington and Lee nosed out Carolina and beat a field of ten Conference institutions for top honors in last year's meet. The Tar Heels led the freshman teams, and Augusta Military Academy was first in the scholastic division. A crowd of 5,000 jammed the Tin Can to see that first Southern Conference indoor meet, and to watch such stars as Ed Hamm, Young, of Georgia, Sandifer of W. & L., and Farmer and Barkley of Carolina.

MATMEN LAUNCH RIGID CAMPAIGN FOR V. P. I. MEET

Recent Cold Epidemic Hit Squad; No Meet Scheduled for This Week.

The Tar Heel wrestlers, defeated 19 1-2-12 1-2 by Navy last Saturday, returned to Chapel Hill Sunday morning to settle down to a two weeks training grind in preparation for their first meet at home with the V. P. I. Gobblers January 31. There is no match scheduled for this week. The team is still not in its best condition, although a great deal of improvement has been noticed since the first of the year. The recent epidemic of colds has hit the squad and put several men on the casualty list temporarily.

The work of Don Conklin, sensational sophomore 145 pounder, has been one of the bright spots of the season thus far. Conklin has won time decisions in each of his matches this year and is the only man on the squad with two victories to his credit. In his first bout Conklin had a time advantage of more than nine minutes of a possible ten, while in his second bout he not only won decisively, but came very nearly winning by a fall.

Captain Fred Stallings in the 126 pound division is undefeated, but was held to a draw by

WINTER GRIDDERS SPEND FIRST DAY IN LIMBERING UP

Coaches Run Men Through Exercises; Winter Schedule Soon To Be Launched.

Muscles that have grown flabby through six weeks of rest from gridiron activities were given a primary toughening as ninety winter football candidates went through an hour of intensive limbering up exercises on the freshman practice field yesterday afternoon.

Under the tutelage of several grid mentors, the Tar Heels pranced, cavorted, and stretched, on the soggy field rounding into shape for the rigorous six weeks of winter football activities ahead. A portion of yesterday's practice was spent in passing and charging as the men were divided into five groups for instruction in various positions.

After various primary instruction for several days, the regular winter schedule of games will get under way. There will be at least four, and possibly six teams, the size of the squad determining the number to enter the league. Games will be played on Wednesday and Saturday afernoons in Kenan stadium. Each team will be given the plays and name of a prominent Carolina opponent, and will be composed alike of freshmen and varsity men.

To consummate the season, awards of proficiency in winter practice will be made.

Reorganization Of Dry Cleaners Announced

The Carolina Dry Cleaners has announced the reorganization of their management which became effective January 1. The company was formerly under the management of William Carbine and Royall Brown, both students at the University who owned the company for a year. Pete Glidwell and Evan Vaughn became partners in the company on January 1, and Royall Brown retired from the business. Now Glidewell, Vaughn, and Carbine are equal owners of the business.

Elementary French Course To Be Given For Townspeople

The Extension division of the University announces a class in elementary French to be given in Chapel Hill. This class is primarily intended for town people and faculty members who desire to acquire a practical reading knowledge of French. Those who contemplate taking French examinations for higher degrees will also be admitted to the class.

Beginning next week and extending through the school year, Dr. G. Ward Fenley of the Romance Language department will instruct the class at a time and place convenient to the persons interested. Persons desiring to enroll should notify Morgan Vining, Room 315 South Building; telephone 6431.

Phi Would Give Veto Power To Governor

The Phi Assembly at a meeting noted for its wranglings on correct parliamentary procedure finally passed two bills. It passed one bill giving the governor of North Carolina the veto power. Representatives Sisk, Albright, and Wilkinson supported the proposal while Hairston spoke against it.

The next bill was Resolved: that women should be compelled to pay the same poll tax as men. Representatives Brown and Sisk spoke in favor of the bill, and it was passed by a large majority.

At this point Representative Lanier rose to a point of order and a discussion on correct order of procedure was carried on. Representative Lanier spoke when he could get the floor and told the assembly that only the correct procedure should be used in the discussion of bills. He declared that the real purpose of the Phi was to train men to carry on discussion according to the way accepted in representative bodies.

The assembly decided that the third bill should be tabled until the next meeting.

Saunders Returns From Alumni Meet

The executive secretary of the University Alumni Association, J. Maryon Saunders, has just returned from Atlanta, where he presided over a meeting of the Carolina Alumni of that city, numbering about one hundred.

Mr. Saunders carried with him a film of the Georgia Tech versus Carolina football game, and showed it at the meeting. He states that the alumni were enthusiastic over the pictures and wished to make definite arrangements for the Georgia Tech versus Carolina game next season.

Mr. Saunders arrived in Atlanta from Birmingham, Alabama, where he had shown the same pictures at a group meeting of the twenty-five Carolina alumni there.

Playmaker Tryouts

Tryout productions of two student plays written in the English thirty-one course for playwriting will be given this afternoon and tomorrow at four-thirty in the Playmaker Theatre. Attendance is open only to students in playwriting and producing classes, and not to the entire student body.

The first play tryout, which is to be put on this afternoon, is "Walnut Boards" by William Long. This is a comedy of eastern North Carolina.

The other of these two plays is "Doses of Life," by Tom Loy, a modern comedy of the Carolina folk. Both of the plays were written last quarter in the playwriting class, but due to the press of Playmaker activities, it has not been possible to try these productions out until now.

cause an increase.

In the midwestern area more than three times as many persons are under the care of the Red Cross as in December. In Oklahoma the number of families needing help in the various counties range from 150 to 2,500.

A message from William Butterworth, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce urges support of the $10,000,000 drive of the Red Cross. He commends the record of the Red Cross in meeting such emergencies, and speaks of the willingness of the American people to contribute. He says: "We are pleased to urge that business organizations present this appeal to all their members in order that this present call for additional resources for the Red Cross may be speedily met."

Tau Beta Pi Fraternity Taps Students Tonight

versity in 1885, forty-six years ago, and since that time more than 16,000 engineering students have received the honor of membership, many of whom have later become prominent engineers throughout the country. The University chapter was organized in the winter of 1928, and tonight's initiation will be its fifth.

Every year the fraternity has two tappings, one in the fall for seniors alone, and another during the spring quarter for seniors and rising seniors. The tapping tonight is the first of the year and only members of the senior class will be initiated.

Last April the fraternity honored seven men with membership: W. D. Merritt, instructor of engineering; John B. Pittana, a senior transferred from the University of Sicily, Italy; and C. P. Hayes, George Thompson, Aubrey Parsley, George J. Quinn, and Norman L. Bryan, all juniors.

Theobold of Navy last week. He was forced into an overtime period before he won from Ihrig of Princeton, and then proceeded to draw Theobold for his next opponent. Theobold was undefeated last year in the 118 pound class.

The work of Marion Cowper and Fred Ferguson has also been highly commendable. Both boys lost close decisions on time against Princeton, but came back to win against Navy, Ferguson winning by a fall. Ferguson has weighed in at about 180 for each bout, and has thus been under a great weight disadvantage since he is working in the unlimited class. Against Princeton, his opponent tipped the scales at 216, and at Navy his man came in at an even 200. However, Ferguson's skill and amazing speed offset this weight in each case.

Little is known of the strength of the Gobblers, but they usually present a fairly strong team and will probably come down seeking revenge for the 17-13 defeat handed them by Carolina last winter.

PROPOSED SALARY CUTS OPPOSED BY TWO PRESIDENTS

Brooks and Wright Ask for Increase, Rather Than Cuts, in Their Appropriations.

In a hearing before the joint appropriations committee of the General Assembly in Raleigh Wednesday, Dr. E. C. Brooks, president of State College, and Dr. R. H. Wright, president of Eastern Carolina Teachers College, registered their disapproval of the proposed ten per cent cut in salaries of all state employees, which would include college professors.

Previous to the time these statements were made by the two college heads, on Tuesday both the Senate and the House began debates on a proposed luxury tax, which was one of the alternatives to a salary cut that have been offered by the defenders of the educational institutions. It has not been stated to what uses this new source of revenue will be turned.

Dr. Brooks did not assume the role of a fighter in protesting but asked the committee to permit the institution to adjust salaries of teachers so as not to compel a horizontal cut.

"We do not wish to take revenue from any other department, but if it is possible for the committee to increase our allotment we will be grateful," Dr. Brooks said. He named no amount in seeking an increase.

"East Carolina Teachers' college cannot function as it has on the present appropriations," Dr. Wright said in urging the committee to grant an increase of $40,580 for each year of the biennium. Dr. Wright also had definite ideas about the horizontal salary cut which do not coincide with the governor's plan.

INTEREST SHOWN IN MAENNERCHOER

New Musical Organization Is To Give First Concert Monday, February 9.

A new organization has arisen on the University campus this year which indicates an increasing interest on the part of the students for music and its cultural influence. The University Maennerchoer which has grown out of the Carolina Glee Club, was made possible by the large number of men who made application and successfully passed the requirements for Glee Club membership. The Maennerchoer at present is composed of from sixty to seventy-five men and shows great promise of becoming one of the most important strata of University life.

It is hoped that within a year or two, and it is altogether probable if the interest in vocal music continues to rise, the organization will have increased its membership to a point where a relatively large percentage of the campus is represented. The new music auditorium, with its stage capable of accommodating a chorus of three hundred, offers an outlet for something musically interesting and worth while which was not heretofore available.

The Maennerchoer is to give its first concert on the evening of Monday, February 9, at 8:15, under the direction of Harold S. Dyer, head of the department of

SOUTH ATLANTIC GLEE CLUB MEET NOT TO BE HELD

It has just been learned that the annual South Atlantic Glee Club Contest will not be able to be held this year because of the small number of schools willing to take part. In spite of the cut made in the budgets of many colleges, at the beginning of the year there were nine entries, but soon after the January 15 notice was received that six of the glee clubs had withdrawn from the contest because they could get no financial assistance. The three clubs that did not withdraw were the one representing Duke University, Furman University and the University of North Carolina.

Last year Carolina's organization won the contest and was awarded the cup offered to the winner. After the South Atlantic contest, the glee club went to the national contest in New York City as the representative of the South Atlantic colleges. A limited sum of money was secured thru the efforts of Maryon Saunders and Felix Grissette which was to be used by the club to finance their trip.

LIBRARY TO SEND MANUSCRIPTS FOR NEW COLLECTION

The Library of Congress, in cooperation with the American Council of Learned Societies, is undertaking a summary catalogue of the classical and medieval manuscripts in the public and private libraries and collections of the United States and Canada. The enterprise is confined to material in Greek, Latin, and the vernacular languages of the Indo-European family as spoken in Europe. Americans are thus excluded, and the closing date is set at approximately 1600 A. D.

Herbert Putnam, Librarian of Congress, has written to the University library, asking that information about manuscripts of the above description which the University may possess be given. In addition to fulfilling the above request the library is sending ten manuscripts to be examined, one of the thirteenth, one of the fourteenth, and eight of the fifteenth century; all but two of which are of the Aaron Burtis Hunter collection of manuscripts. Dr. Hunter, formerly president of St. Augustine's School in Raleigh, presented this collection to the University library last year.

The great value of the proposed catalogue to historical and philological scholars in both Europe and America is manifest, since foreign manuscripts in this country are numerous.

A Pipe DeLuxe

On Wednesday night the usual after-supper congregation around Sutton's Drug Store was amazed to see an entirely new and different type of pipe in the hands of one of the campus cowboys.

The eccentric smoker declared his glorified "corncob" to be a genuine Italian Narghile, but it had the appearance of a narrow-necked vase surmounted by a china egg dish, connected to a mouthpiece by a long strand of fancy covered rubber tubing.

The pipe, said its owner, is a souvenir of a trip to the West Indies. He seemed to experience considerable difficulty in drawing the smoke up through the long stem.

CONTRIBUTION OF $391,000 STARTS RED CROSS DRIVE

Will Rogers Offers Aid in Securing Funds for Drought Sufferers in Three States.

Up until January 16, the American Red Cross had received $391,000 towards its $10,000,000 fund for drought relief and had already spent $1,392,640. The sum contributed from the National Red Cross treasury for relief in all states was $1,019,527.73. The chapters in White Plains, New York, Winthrop, Massachusetts, and Brockport, New York sent contributions during the first two days of the drive. Chapters in Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, North Dakota, Colorado, Wisconsin, Illinois, and Texas have already wired their quotas.

Will Rogers has offered his assistance to John Barton Payne, chairman of the Red Cross, stating that he will help each county in Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Texas raise its quota through his shows and that he will also use all over that sum for the relief work. He may also visit Louisiana and Mississippi. He is particularly interested in his home state Oklahoma, from which distressful letters and telegrams have been received. Rogers says, "All the money I raise for the relief of these folks, will be spent through the Red Cross. Why, there's no other organization in the world that can reach

Trucks in Collision

At three-thirty Wednesday afternoon two trucks collided on Cameron avenue. The truck owned by the Southeastern Express company and driven by W. C. Partin was run into by a delivery truck driven by Albert Powell, former student at the University.

Powell's truck was loaded with a consignment of milk, and the force of the impact when the machines collided caused several cases of milk to be broken and their contents spilled all over the street.

Aside from the loss of the milk, both front wheels, the front fender, and the bumper of Partin's car were smashed. Powell's truck had the left front wheel broken, the bumper bent, and the windshield smashed to bits. Partin was unhurt, but Powell sustained a cut finger and an injured knee.

Groves On Lecture Tour

Professor Ernest R. Groves, of the institute for research in Social Science, left Wednesday night for Chattanooga, Tennessee, and Cincinnati, Ohio, where on Thursday night at the former place, he addressed two women organizations on "Wholesome Childhood," and "The Ordeal of Modern Youth." He will be a guest at luncheon today, and Saturday. His talk "Why Men Marry," will be made to a group under the auspices of the Junior New Thought Temple in Cincinnati. Professor Groves is expected to return Saturday.

Howe Visits Here

Dr. Harrison E. Howe, editor of the Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, visited the department of chemistry yesterday morning on the way from Florida to his home in Washington.

REPORT OF LOCAL MUSIC FRATERNITY RECEIVES PRAISE

The Alpha Rho chapter of Phi Mu Alpha, the music fraternity here, gave a luncheon yesterday at the Carolina Inn. After the luncheon, a regular meeting was held. The meeting was presided over by Billy Hunt, president of the chapter. Twenty-four of the twenty-seven active members were present. The main business of the meeting was a report on the national convention of the Phi Mu Alpha, which was held at St. Louis, December 29, 30, and 31.

Dr. Harold S. Dyer, the local delegate to the convention, read the report he made to the board of governors at the convention. This report was returned to the local chapter, being judged one of the ten best reports made at the convention. This honor indicates a wholesome condition in the local fraternity. Phi Mu Alpha represents not only active musicianship on the campus, but active interest in musical life as well. George G. Killinger, an assistant in the psychology department of the University, submitted a report based on an outline of his book dealing with the psychological reactions to music.

The fraternity regularly attends the vesper concerts by Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, who is a member of the Phi Mu Alpha, in a body.

A concert to be given by members of the fraternity this spring is being considered by the executive board. The next meeting will be held February 1, when pledge candidates will be named.

Bilbo Condemned

Four Mississippi state educational institutions were dropped from the eligible list of American Association of University Professors at the annual meeting at Cleveland, which was attended by several University professors.

The association voted to condemn wholesale dismissals of faculty members by Governor Theodore G. Bilbo last June and July. The resolution said that "much damage has been done to the cause of education in Mississippi as well as a great injustice to those dismissed or demoted. "It charged the 179 dismissals and demotions were made "apparently for political reasons, without due consideration of the welfare of the students affected."

The schools placed on the ineligible list "until such time as the administration of educational affairs in the state of Mississippi has been restored to a status acceptable to this association" are: the University of Mississippi, the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Mississippi, the Mississippi State College for Women, and the Mississippi State Teachers College. It was explained that the credits of the students are not involved, but have been jeopardized by the action of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Co-Eds Entertain

The co-eds at Spencer hall entertained those living at other places in the village at a tea from four-thirty to five o'clock Friday afternoon. Following this there was a business session from five until six, to consider plans for the winter dance to be given February 6. Plans for the dance will be announced at a later date.

Seven Engineers Tapped By Tau Beta Pi Fraternity

"COLD SITUATION" CHANGES RAPIDLY

The "cold situation" in the University seems to be fluctuating almost as much as the stock market. Monday of this week there were forty persons confined to the infirmary and fifty-nine on the sick list. Reports issued from the infirmary yesterday show that there are only twenty-five persons in the infirmary but the sick list has increased from fifty-nine to seventy-five.

These facts show that there are a little more than half as many cases of serious illnesses but almost twice as many persons who are suffering from slight or mildly heavy colds.

The doctor in charge of the infirmary states that if all persons would take all possible precautions against colds the amount of illness would be still further reduced.

U. D. C. Chapter Plans Bridge Party-Dance

A benefit bridge party and dance will be given Saturday, January 24 by the local chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy at the Carolina Inn.

Card playing will begin at three p. m. One room will be reserved for those who wish to make up their own tables, and in another progressive bridge will be played for those persons not caring to make up their own tables. Prizes will be awarded the winners in the progressive bridge games. Refreshments will be served at five o'clock.

The evening party begins at eight o'clock and the persons attending have the choice of playing at their own table or of taking part in progressive bridge. Those who are coming to play bridge are asked to phone Mrs. T. J. Wilson, Jr.

Jack Wardlaw's Entertainers will furnish the music for the dance which will take place at nine-thirty in the ballroom of the Inn. The money raised will be given the University for a scholarship.

Spring Is Here

The president of the D. K. E.'s must have seen quite a few swallows, for he seems to be firmly convinced that spring is here, and so has started his pledges to work on the yard. The passerby on Columbia street yesterday afternoon would have seen a sight reminiscent of the days of serfdom and of the "big stick" of "Brother" Roosevelt.

All the little Deke pledges, who during the rushing season thought that they were pretty important, were divided into gangs each of which was placed under the supervision of an upperclassman whose duty it was to see that the freshmen wielded pick-axe, spade, and shovel to the best advantage.

One group of pledges was industriously smoothing out the bumps in the driveway running up to the fraternity house and placing a curbing of bricks around the edge. Another group was plying with spades with good vigor and turning over the soil in the Deke frontyard. The last group was busily setting out potted plants on the greensward where the pledges will soon be gamboling in youthful jollity and silk shorts.

MEN CHOSEN FOR HIGH STANDARDS OF SCHOLARSHIP

Five Seniors and Two Juniors Receive Highest Honor Given Engineering Students.

LOCAL BOYS ARE HONORED

Phillips Addresses Civil Engineers Preceding Ceremony.

Doc J. Thurston, of Clayton; John Andrews, of Biltmore; Robert Edmund Hubbard, of Clifton; Giles Foushee Horney, of Greensboro; Rankin Jones White; Howard F. Chrisco, of Chapel Hill; and Raymond John Ruble, of Chapel Hill, were tapped by Tau Beta Pi last night. Thurston and Andrews are juniors; the other men chosen are seniors.

Before the tapping R. S. Phillips, research engineer for the American Portland Cement company, spoke before the local chapter of the American Institute of Civil Engineers on the subject, "Monolithic Cement."

Membership to the Tau Beta Pi fraternity is the highest honor to which engineering students may aspire. The men were chosen because of outstanding scholarship, character, and fellowship.

The Beta chapter of the Tau Beta Pi fraternity is one of the three national honorary societies on the campus; the other two are: Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity; and Sigma Xi, honorary scientific research society.

The Beta chapter is one of more than sixty chapters in colleges and universities in the

GRAHAM ENGAGED FOR MID-WINTERS

Popular Resort Band to Play for Five Dances in Gymnasium, February 13 and 14.

Paul Graham's orchestra has been engaged to play for the University mid-winter dances to be given under the auspices of the German Club, February 13 and 14. This orchestra has a wide-spread reputation. It has played at Atlantic City auditorium, Coral Gables and "Casino", Virginia Beach. It has been booked for engagements in New York all winter.

The date selected, February 13 and 14 is the last week-end before Lent and one week after the dances at Sweet Briar and Davidson. The dancing will be in Bynum gymnasium and as usual there will be five dances, taking place Friday afternoon and night and Saturday morning, afternoon, and night.

Will Yarborough, secretary-treasurer of the club, states that there are a few vacancies to be filled by immediate application. Cards will be available from him next week at the S. A. E. house. He will make further announcement about them.

The leaders elected last fall to lead the dances are William Dunn of New Bern, Lynn Wilder from Raleigh, and George Bagby of Charlotte.

The executive committee in charge of the dances is composed of John Bullock, W. B. Snow, Jr., W. H. Yarborough, Jr., John Park, Marion Cowper, Henry House, Aubrey Parsley, George Newman, and S. A. Lynch.

An Apology

The editorial appearing in yesterday's Tar Heel referring to the Bank of Chapel Hill was not based on fact and was unjustified. The editor of the Tar Heel wishes to apologize to the bank and to its patrons for the editorial and regrets its publication in the Tar Heel. It did not receive the approval of the editor.

In connection with the editorial we wish to state that the Bank of Chapel Hill does not require ninety days notice for withdrawal of savings accounts or notice of any length of time.

A Little More On Taxation

Now that it is rumored that the University is going to have to put "second-hand fixtures in the new auditorium to match the second-hand salaries" it is going to have to pay the instructors, we cannot help but think about the efficiency of the state taxation system. Why does a state which pays more federal taxes than any other have to face hard times by not having enough money to properly finance the best things in the state itself?

If North Carolina contributes so greatly to the wealth of the nation, why can it not provide for itself adequately? If a state tax was levied on tobacco manufacturing which would amount to something, a raise in the price—or a loss of profit—would naturally result. In the first case North Carolina's competitors would gain at her expense; in the latter case a few people in the state would lose and many would gain immeasurably. It is just another case of profit for the few or good for the many.

Be this point as it may, it seems to us that Mr. Graves made a very relevant statement yesterday morning regarding the tax of liquors sold in the state. Why not the state make money instead of the bootleggers? The income from this source would be a great help to the state at this time.

Another item that would bear investigation is the tax at present levied on buses and motor carriers for hire. These at present are carrying more local freight and passenger traffic than the railroads. The usual state has not recognized this change of traffic readily, and Tennessee is charging the railroads sixteen times the amount of taxes that it is the buses. We haven't seen the latest figures for North Carolina, but the ratio is practically the same. Besides this being an unjust discrimination against the railroads, it is unwise generosity to the bus companies and operatives. A great potential source of revenue is being overlooked in this case.

North Carolina should be able to fill in the gaps in her necessary revenue by a wise taxation policy. The state has built up a most enviable reputation along many lines, and we don't think it wise or economical to crawfish out of its reputation for progressiveness.—O. W. D.

Challenging Mars

Meetings of students in over one hundred colleges throughout the country have been scheduled to protest against military training, and petitions in support of two bills pending in Congress which demand the immediate abolition of the compulsory feature of military drill are being circulated. It is hoped that fifteen thousand signatures will have been obtained by January 1 in support of this legislation.

This is the first time student opinion has mobilized itself to make its influence felt, and we believe that the cause is a good one. Here at Tulane we have never had military drill and we don't want it. We believe that R. O. T. C. courses at a university are a violation of academic freedom. They are not under the administration of the college but of the War Department, and when these courses are required for graduation, in effect it amounts to a strangulation of student opinion by the military authorities.

But our objection goes deeper than this. It is not merely a fight, as we see it, against military drill, but between the principle of militarism and the principle of education. Military drill attempts to train students in the attitude of unquestioning obedience which war demands. It seeks to idealize war and to inculcate among students the mental attitude which makes war possible. Authority and efficiency in carrying out commands of the authority are the principles upon which the whole scheme of militarism is based.

But education is a different matter. It teaches, as a fundamental principle, that one should rely upon his own initiative and judgment and think clearly before accepting commands of authority. Education and militarism are incompatible—Tulane Hullabaloo.

Dyer Will Go To Greensboro

Dr. Harold S. Dyer will go to Greensboro Saturday as a member of a committee which is to make a special study of music education in North Carolina. Dr. Dyer will submit a report based on his study of music teachers training courses.

Just before I came in to write this column, I was standing by Alumni talking to Wex Malone trying to get some ideas. While we were talking a boy approached in knickers and green socks. Wex looked right at him and said, "Well, isn't that the cutest thing on the campus." The boy looked up and Wex hung his head in embarassment. He had taken a complete stranger to be "Mack" Gray. Probably all this pre-Bar work is affecting my roomie's mind.

Which reminds me of a little incident that happened a year or so ago when Wex and I were rooming on the third floor of one of the triangle dormitories. Wex was in the habit of getting up in the morning and looking at the bed while he took off his pajamas, and then throwing the pajamas on the bed for the janitor to hang up. One morning he happened to look out of the window instead of at the bed. Off came the pajamas, and out of the window they went. The expression on the face as they floated down three stories to the ground was perfect. (Living with that boy for the next few weeks will probably be unbearable now.)

My freshman year I donated three bucks to the "Y". Having some Scotch blood in me, I later determined to get the benefit of that contribution. I finally hit on the plan of allowing 1c for each drink of ice-water gotten in the lobby. The "Y" still owes me a little over fifty sips of the clear, cool, sparkling fluid. Since this is my last year, I have my doubts as to whether I will be able to complete my three hundred drinks, so if you would like to drop in the "Y" and have some ice-water on me, the pleasure would be mine.

An Open Forum letter suggests that students help in the completion of the new auditorium by buying seats at $5.00 each. The idea isn't new but the price is slightly higher than Sophomores in the past have dared to ask freshmen for Chapel seats.

A certain young fellow used as an excuse to break a date with his local femme that he had to go out of town on business. When she later saw him dressed in his "Tux" in a neighboring city, she became suspicious of his truthfulness, and another Carolina romance went on the rocks. I am happy to announce, however, that they are again being seen together, although they insist that they are "just friends." I'll bet that in two weeks they are as goo-goo eyed as they were before Christmas.

Hal Kemp, a favorite of the first water, dropped in my estimation when I heard his new record "Fraternity Blues." Guy Lombardo, however, rises a couple of degrees with his "You're Driving Me Crazy." And say, have you heard Guy's record of "St. Louis Blues" in which a fellow holds a single note for at least a minute?

The Law School dance has been postponed until a month after the Bar and term exams. The committee apparently hopes that the majority of the law students will be able to maneuver again by that time.

All of which reminds me that exams are just over the hill and I must be on my way. Toodle-oo.

Our own staid prexy, says an elderly lady who spent her girlhood in Chapel Hill, was just one of the boys during his college days. Her memory book, with sweet verses from the Graham pen, contains newspaper clippings of youthful escapades in which the educator figured. Also his card—the old rascal—it was in her book:

Startling as may seem this latest idea, coming right on the heels of the Wickersham report, the Bible (Isaiah xxxvii-36) contains this:

"Then an angel of the Lord went forth, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians a hundred and four score and five thousand; and when they arose in the morning, behold, they were all dead corpses."

* * * *

Difficult as it may seem to fry every county, even with corn as plentiful as it is, a Mississippi weekly a few years ago proposed something which the Sun's proposal does not dim. The town council was reported to have:

"Resolved, that we build a new jail, and

"Resolved, that materials from the jail be used in constructing the new, and

"Resolved, that the old jail be used until the new one is finished."

Why Editors Get Gray

". . .I arise in indignation to the way these bouts were written up in the Daily Tar Heel. . . I think it a mighty poor sportmanship for some fellow who in all probability has never been in a ring, to come out in his college paper and say which is the poorest bout. he (the fighter) was naturally nervous and conservative.

"Virginia May Love," says the Daily Tar Heel. Why, bless your heart, folks, of course she may! And she needn't wait for the Tar Heel to consent.

"The Targum," Rutgers undergraduate newspaper, celebrated its sixty-second birthday this week. The first undergraduate newspaper at Rutgers it appeared shortly before the first football game was played there in 1869 with Princeton.

After an illness of two weeks Mr. E. H. Winston has returned to the law school.

Basketball Team Will Meet V. P. I. Tonight In Second Conference Game

GREAT DEFENSIVE RECORD OF U. N. C. QUINT AT STAKE

Freshmen Will Play Oak Ridge At Seven; Varsity Go Scheduled for Eight-Thirty.

The Carolina basketball team is romping along toward a record for defensive performance, but V. P. I., playing the Tar Heels in their second Southern Conference game here tonight at eight-thirty o'clock, following an Oak Ridge-Carolina frosh game at seven, may rock Carolina's hopes and send the Tar Heels' mark the way of all records.

Carolina's quint record to date is not for offense, as was the football team of 1929, but for defense. The Tar Heels have let eight teams down with an average score of 13 3-8 points, and only Davidson has been able to score as much on Carolina as 18 points. Such teams as South Carolina, Wake Forest and Furman have been turned back on the short end with scores of eight, thirteen, and sixteen, respectively.

No team has scored more than six field goals on the Tar Heels, while one opponent was let down with two, and two more, including Wake Forest, were limited to three. With Captain Artie Marpet and his vigilant assistant guards, Tom Alexander and Page Choate, playing brilliantly, Carolina has twice held the enemy without a field goal for as much as thirty minutes.

Quite a defensive record that! Coach Jim Ashmore is wondering how long Carolina's able goal-defenders can keep the pace, while everybody is thinking that V. P. I. may prove a serious menace to the Tar Heels' record.

The Gobblers have an almost all-sophomore team which proved a smooth, fast-working evenly-balanced machine in opening its season last Saturday with a 28-21 win over Virginia. They meet State, Wake Forest and Carolina on this tour, and will probably start Captain Baker and Hall, forwards; Belote, center; Palmer and Wolfe, guards.

State downed the Gobblers 22-18 Wednesday night.

Wilmer Hines will probably play one forward for Carolina, with either Paul Edwards or Jimmy Moore likely to get the other forward post. Neither of these boys featured against the Deacons, and Coach Ashmore is still worrying about his forward power. Sandy Dameron will be at his old center post, with Tom Alexander and Captain Artie Marpet at the guards.

Former Conference Champ Coaches Frosh at U. N. C.

Archie Allen, who won a Southern title in his weight in 1929, and who went to the finals of the Southern Tourney last year, only to lose a heart-breakingly close bout to Rainey of Virginia, is helping coach the freshman boxers at Carolina this year.

Intramural Schedule

Friday

3:30 p. m.—(1) Graham vs. Independents; (2) Mangum vs. Manly; (3) Everett vs. Grimes.

4:30 p. m.—(1) Steele vs. Law School; (2) Beta Theta Pi vs. St. Anthony Hall; (3) Sigma Zeta vs. Theta Chi.

Note to Managers: Please do not forget that two successive forfeits renders your team ineligible for further competition in basketball.

Intramural Results

Phi Sigma Kappa Gets Win

Led by Wolke and Mitchelle with six points each the Phi Sig's defeated the Delta Sigma Phi's by the narrow margin of three points, the final score being 19-16. For the Delta Sigma Phi's Johnson was best with eight points to take individual scoring honors.

D. S. P. (16)	Phi Sig (19)
Perry (2)	Wolke (6)
Bacon (2)	Peetz (5)
St. Clair	Mitchelle (6)
Johnson (8)	Fitzgerald
Battley (2)	Whittenton (2)

Scoring substitutes: D. S. P.: Suggs (2).

T. E. P.'s Beat Kappa Sig's

The T. E. P.'s defeated the Kappa Sig's by the low score of 11-7 yesterday afternoon. This is the lowest score game recorded thus far this season. Eisenberg led the T. E. P.'s with seven points while for the losers Eagles was best with three points.

T. E. P. (11)	Kappa Sigma (7)
Eisenberg (7)	Eagles (3)
Fine (5)	Tyree
Friedman	Blackwelder (2)
Brownstein (3)	Finch
Peres (3)	Staples (2)

Sigma Chi's Win

The Sigma Chi's, led by Jarett and Hardin with eight and seven points respectively, defeated the Sigma Phi Sigma's by a score of 31-18. For the losers Haselwood was best with seven points.

Sigma Chi (31)	S. P. S. (18)
Jarett (8)	Loftin (4)
Wood (6)	Haselwood (7)
Lipscomb (2)	Davis (6)
Sickles (4)	Lowland
Shuford	Van Echep (1)

Pi Kappa Phi Wins Over Pika's

Pi Kappa Phi defeated the Pi Kappa Alpha's by a score of 36-17 yesterday afternoon. Dixon, for the Pi Kap's, came within two points of the individual scoring record for the season so far, getting a total of nineteen points. McLeod ran second with ten points. For the losers Cassada was best with seven points. Woerner played a nice floor game for the Pika's figuring in the scoring with three points.

Pi Kappa Phi (36)	Pi K. A. (17)
Dixon (19)	Woerner (3)
Hogan (2)	Stamps (5)
Spencer	Cassada (7)
Hockaday (4)	Weeks
McLeod (10)	Bisnar

Scoring substitutes: Pi K. A.: Shoemaker (2). Pi Kappa Phi: Slater (1).

Chi Psi's Lose

The Lambda Chi Alpha's defeated the Chi Psi's by a score of 28-18 yesterday afternoon for their first win of the season. Davis and Fleming led the individual scoring with eight points each. For the losers, Phillips was best with four points, being closely followed by Mitchem and Reynolds with three points each.

L. C. A. (28)	Chi Psi (18)
Long	Glascock (2)
Bowman (2)	Phillips (4)
Prevost, A. (6)	Reynolds (3)
Davis (8)	Mitchem (3)
Fleming (8)	Young (2)

Scoring substitutes: L. C. A.: R. Prevost (4). Chi Psi: Atwood (2), Dululf (2).

Sigma Nu Forfeits

Zeta Beta Tau received a forfeit when the Sigma Nu's failed to appear.

HIGH CAGE TEAM DEFEATS EFLAND

The Chapel Hill High School basketball team, although playing better defensive than offensive ball, lost to Efland High here Wednesday night, by a score of 21-17. Lawrence was high scorer for the Hill team, while Pendergraph, a recent find, played a good game at guard. Reynolds showed up well on the offense.

The visiting team was above the average on both offense and defense. James, Efland's captain, led the scoring with several beautiful shots. Crutchfield and Pender played well for the visitors.

Coach Brookbank has scheduled a game with Mebane at Chapel Hill for Monday, January 26. A better exhibition is expected than the last, since several star performers were unable to play in the Efland game because of sickness.

OLD JINX OF TAR HEEL RING CAPTAIN IS GONE

Captain Noah Goodridge of the University of North Carolina boxers won all his bouts last year except a couple of close decisions to Captain O'Connell of Florida, one in a dual meet, and another in the finals of the Southern Tournament. The old O'Connell jinx is graduated this year, and Captain Goodridge, looking better than ever, should have a clear field in the south.

Only Two Wrestling Posts Without Vet at U. N. C.

The 145-pound and 160-pound are the only posts for which the Carolina wrestling team has no letterman as candidate. Higdon, a reserve, and Conklin, a sophomore, are the best prospects in the former class, and Idol and Green, two star sophs, are the outstanding contenders for the other berth.

BOEING TO OFFER SCHOLARSHIPS TO YOUNG AVIATORS

W. E. Boeing, chairman of the Boeing aeronautical manufacturing and operating companies and of United Aircraft and Transport Corporation has offered scholarships in aviation.

The winners will be awarded four scholarships at the Boeing School of Aeronautics, Oakland, California. Total tuition value of the scholarships is $1,790, including a $52.75 master pilot course.

Awards for the college year 1931 will be made by a national committee of prominent educators of which Dr. Baldwin M. Woods of the University of California is chairman.

Any undergraduate student may compete, including the 1932 graduating class, who will complete by July 15, 1932, one or more years of study and have maintained scholastic standing high enough to be classified in the upper one third of his class for the entire period of his enrollment. Candidates must write an essay not exceeding 2,000 words on one of five designated subjects.

Those interested in becoming candidates for the W. E. Boeing scholarships may communicate with either the dean or the manager of the Boeing School of Aeronautics, Oakland Municipal Airport, Oakland, California.

TAR HEEL MAT COACH IS MOST VERSATILE

Chuck Quinlan is one of the University's most versatile coaches. He is trainer of the football team, head coach of the wrestling team, and in 1929, he stepped in and coached the Tar Heel boxers to a Southern title.

"There's nothing like a saxophone," says a musical paper. Except, unfortunately, another saxophone.—The Humorist.

Wrestling Team Looking Better

The grapplers looked better than usual Wednesday afternoon as Coach Chuck Quinlan sent the boys through another stiff practice session at the Tin Can.

Percy Idol was able to take a hard workout for the first time in a number of days, and seems to have practically recovered from the effects of a cold which has been holding him back so far this season.

The fight between Pete Usher and Charley Lawson for the 118 pound berth continues to be close and hard fought. Both boys have been showing steady improvement all year, but Usher's experience has given him the upper hand to date. Lawson is a sophomore while Usher is a letter man and has gotten the call in both matches this winter.

Track Team Expected To Be In Shape For Millrose Track Meet

Due to adverse weather conditions and the illness of some of the members of the track teams active practice has been delayed, but Coach Ranson is very optimistic over the prospects and is looking forward to a successful season.

The invitation to the Millrose Games on February 7 asked that a one mile relay team be sent, and an entry for a sprint event to be selected. The team to run in the relay will be selected in a series of time trials beginning one day this week.

Those trying for the relay team are: Brock, Drane, Evans, Farmer, Garrett, Jensen, Jones, Mitcham, Marland, Smith, Stafford, Watkins and Weil.

The rest of the track squad is working in preparation for the Southern Conference Indoor Games to be held here on March 7th.

Men showing the best form are Arnold, and Ruble. In the pole vault both are clearing twelve feet. Ruble has been in bed part of the week with the influenza but is back on his feet again. Farmer is also ill in the infirmary.

George Bagby, who was one of the first place winners in the indoor events last year has been carrying a heavy academic schedule and is beginning training today to prepare himself to surpass his performance in the indoor meet last year when he made a University record of 6'1-4", in the high jump.

Protest Granted

According to an announcement by Mac Gray, the intramural department has allowed the protest of the Sigma Phi Sigma's over the use of Markham, by the Phi Kap's, in their game Monday, January 19. Markham, star of last year's freshman quint, entered the game in the last half over the protest of the Sigma Phi Sigma's and scored twelve points for the Phi Kap's. Immediately after the game a protest was filed with the intramural department, which was acted upon yesterday afternoon by Mac Gray.

The violation is that of rule three, article one, on eligibility which reads: "Members of a varsity squad who participate in a varsity game shall be ineligible to participate in intramural competition in that sport in that season." Markham violated this rule when he played in the first game of the season against the Durham "Y".

HEEL PRINTS

by

K. C. RAMSAY

THE SPURT OF ORGANIZED cheering before the Duke and Virginia football games last fall seems to be lingering into this quarter, judging from the widespread response at the Tin Can during recent basketball and boxing events. It may be that Carolina has waked up to the fact that it is not "prep school stuff" to support the teams. Billy Arthur and Eddie Hazelwood are to be congratulated for the response that they have been getting here of late. We hope that this so-colled revived Carolina spirit is revived to stay. The student council has announced that the election of cheerleader will be held along with the general elections this spring, so that it is certain that campus-wide recognition of the election will be assured. It should no longer be a hit and a miss as to whether Carolina has a capable cheerleading staff. Keep it up Arthur and Hazelwood! It sounds great.

THE SPORTS CARD FOR THE week-end is one of the fullest of the quarter with the basketball team taking on the V. P. I. Gobblers tonight, and Coaches Rowe and Allen's leather pushers meeting the V. M. I. Cadets tomorrow night. Freshmen will play preliminary contests both nights, the quintet meeting Oak Ridge tonight and the boxing team fighting the Cadet freshmen Saturday.

THE GOBBLERS ARE SAID to have a strong team composed mostly of sophomores, and there seems to be some fear about the campus that the Tar Heels' impressive record is in danger. State College downed the Virginia Techs Wednesday night, but it was by a very close score, 22-18. If the Tar Heels continue to play as they did against Wake Forest, they should not find the Gobblers a big stumbling block, but a let up in form may give substantiation to the fear of having the record marred.

THE CADETS MUST BE beaten to win the Southern Conference boxing title, many have been heard to say. V. M. I., runner-up at Charlottesville last year, has most of the 1930 team with gloves on again, and the Tar Heel pugs will have their hands full tomorrow night. Carolina, with Goodridge, Warren, Davis, and Levinson, repeating past performances, and the others showing much improvement, are expected to be in top form and ready to take on the Cadets.

FREDDIE SINGTON MAY BE over at Duke next year if the North Carolina dailies are right. Both the Charlotte Observer and the Greensboro Daily News contend that the All-American tackle and Phi Beta Kappa student is being strongly considered as an assistant to Wallace Wade over at Duke.

STATE COLLEGE IS GOING to take another fling at the Notre Dame system next year. John Smith, All-American quarterback and Notre Dame star in 1925, 1926 and 1927, will take over the reigns February 15. With the dearth of potential material over there, they should put out a powerful outfit next year.

BOXERS IN STIFF DRILL PREPARE TO MEET CADETS

Bouts Scheduled for Tin Can Tomorrow Night at 8:30; Probable Lineup Given.

Coach Rowe put his squad through a heavy workout yesterday, in preparation for tomorrow night's bouts with the V. M. I. Cadets at the Tin Can at eight-thirty, having them punch the light and heavy bags, and then go into the ring for a few rounds.

As a preliminary to the varsity meet, the Tar Heel and Cadet freshmen will meet at seven o'clock.

There is an uncertainty concerning the starters tomorrow in only one division—the welterweight. Coach Rowe has not decided whether he will start Holderness or Jackson. Jackson's splendid fight against South Carolina last Friday strengthened his position, and the chances are that he will answer the gong tomorrow night.

Biggs, bantam, has been showing improvement during the past few days and will open the varsity card.

Levinson, Captain Goodridge, Davis, Warren, and Wilson will start in their respective weights.

Miller, southpaw light heavy, has still got a bad cut over his eye, the result of a sparring bout with Wilson, and has been taking things easy. His eye should be better by next week, however, and then he will take part in the heavy workouts.

Good news was received when Platt Landis reported that his hand was coming along in great shape and will be able to report again in about two weeks.

The Tar Babies have also been taking heavy workouts in preparation for the V. M. I. bouts. The probable starters are: Glover, bantamweight; Raymer or Holt, featherweight; Hudson, lightweight; Allsbrook or McIntyre, welterweight; Guthrie, middleweight; Brown or Pace, light heavyweight; and Strickland or Pace, unlimited.

GOOD SOPH PROSPECTS FOR U. N. C. MAT TEAM

Carolina's strong freshman team of last year is sending a number of outstanding sophomore prospects up to the varsity wrestlers this year. Among those who have shown best to date are Conklin, 145-pounder; Bradley, 155-pounder; and Greer and Idol, 165-pounders.

OBJECTIVE TESTS SUBSTITUTED FOR GRADE METHODS

Abilities of Students Stressed Instead of Time Spent on Courses.

Professor M. R. Trabue, director of the bureau of educational research, left Chapel Hill at noon Thursday for Indianapolis, Indiana, where he will attend a two-day session of the committee on personnel methods in colleges. This committee of the American Council on Education is this year holding its winter meeting at Indianapolis in connection with the annual meeting of the Association of American Colleges.

The committee on personnel methods, of which Dr. Trabue has been a member from the beginning, has recently secured from one of the large foundations a subvention of approximately a hundred thousand dollars a year for the construction and standardization of objective tests in the various college subjects. The object of these tests is to provide college authorities with reliable records of the abilities and achievements of college students in terms which are not influenced, as are ordinary grades, by the personal habits and whims of instructors.

Tests which this committee has prepared are now being used in hundreds of colleges and in thousands of high schools. The Romance language department of the University of North Carolina this fall used tests prepared by this committee for determining the courses and classes in which first-year students should be registered. The American Council psychological examination has been given to all university freshmen for several years. In Columbia University hundreds of students were this fall allowed college course credits for demonstrating their knowledge of French and of other college subjects by means of the American Council tests.

Before he left for Indianapolis yesterday, Dr. Trabue stated that the committee is now spending most of its energy in the production of alternate forms of the tests it has previously prepared.

Campus Calendar

Law School Examinations

Examinations for the law school will begin Monday, January 26, and will last throughout the week. Registration for the second semester will be on February 2. Classes will also begin February 2.

Notice

All members of the local chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers are asked to assemble in front of Phillips hall today at ten-thirty a. m. for the purpose of having a group picture taken for the Yackety Yack. Sophomore mechanical engineers will be excused from chapel.

Concert Postponed

Notice has been received that Professor T. Smith McCorkle, who was to present a violin concert on the afternoon of January 25, will not be able to appear as was scheduled. The concert has been postponed until February 1.

Ford Shows Faith in Future by World Wide Construction Program

Top—The Ford plant at Edgewater, N. J., opposite New York City. Center—The new plant at Long Beach, Cal. Bottom—A model of the plant being built at Dagenham, England.

THE Ford Motor Company's faith in the future of business, and especially in the future of the automobile, is evidenced by the fact that it is spending more than $60,000,000 for new plants and improvements in the United States and in foreign branches and associated companies.

The company has nine new plants under way throughout the world, while plans are being formulated for several others not yet announced. Wherever possible the new plants are being erected on sites accessible to both rail and water transportation so that, with each form of transportation supplementing the other, substantial savings will be effected.

Five of the new plants are in the United States, as follows:

Long Beach, California—This plant, recently completed to serve Southern California, has a capacity of 400 cars a day. Operating at capacity it employs 2,600 men.

Edgewater, New Jersey—The Edgewater plant, one of the company's largest assembly branches, has just been completed to serve New York City and surrounding territory. It has a capacity of 600 cars a day and employs 6,000 men.

Richmond, California — Work was started recently on a plant at Richmond, to be completed next year. It will have a capacity of 400 cars a day and will employ 2,400 men. It will supply cars to the San Francisco area.

Buffalo, New York—This plant will have a capacity of 400 cars a day and will employ 2,500 men.

Seattle, Washington — A site has been acquired and plans for a plant are being drawn.

A new manufacturing plant being erected at Dagenham, England, eighteen miles from London, to supplant the present works at Manchester, will be completed next year. It will be the largest automobile factory in the world outside the United States. Its capacity will be 200,000 cars a year.

An assembly and manufacturing plant is being built at Cologne, an assembly plant at Antwerp, and a service plant at Stockholm. Two branches—one at Perth, Australia, and one at Port Elizabeth, South Africa—were completed.

In addition the Ford Motor Company is spending several million dollars to increase the power capacity of the Rouge plant at Dearborn, Mich., and several million more in miscellaneous improvements.

these people, but the Red Cross."

Still reports come in to the Red Cross headquarters of the conditions of the people in the drought area. In one area in Kentucky there are 592 children in desperate need of everything from food to clothing. In one county only forty out of the usual 300 school children are in school, and on the day of the health officer's visit only three had lunches, these consisting of a piece of rabbit or bacon or nuts gathered from trees on the road to school. Many families were living off roots, cooked or raw. The workers are finding that many apply for help who have never asked anything before and many will not ask now must be offered the help they need.

In Helena, Arkansas, the Red Cross is heating 800 houses in town from wood which is cut by 125 volunteers each day from a woodlot which the chapter has opened back of the levee. In many towns the women are knitting as in war times to supply the need for clothing.

A story from one man in Montana says: "We live in prairie country and our crops were a failure; what little we had has been taken on debts we owed. Don't know how we are going to stay here until spring, and we can't get away for the next three months, either, because of the cold weather."

A man from Illinois writes that this year he got only three or four bushels of potatoes and that they are about gone, and that his corn is gone, too. "All my vegetables were ruined, my pastures burned up. My four head of cattle are living on stocks and fodder now. My wife and I are living on milk of one little cow. We can't pay debts; we can't buy seed, and in short—the end is in sight."

The President is reported to be alarmed at the movement for a special session. He wants to put off the proffered cooperation of us Democrats as long as possible.—Dallas News.

MEN CHOSEN FOR HIGH STANDARDS OF SCHOLARSHIP

United States. The first chapter of the society was organized at Lehigh University in 1885, and since that time more than 16,000 engineering students have been honored with membership. The Beta chapter was organized in 1928, and last night's initiation was the fifth held under the auspices of the University organization.

Last April the fraternity honored seven men with membership: W. D. Merritt, instructor in engineering; John B. Pittana, a transfer student from the University of Sicily, Italy; C. P. Hayes; George Thompson; Aubrey Parsley; George J. Quinn; and Norman L. Bryan.

The fraternity has two initiations each year, one in the fall and the other in the spring. Those students whose grades were not quite high enough to make the fraternity this time may raise their marks by the spring and thus be eligible to be tapped at that time.

Writer Gives Red Hot Rules for Kissing in Gay Nineties

No, children, mama and papa weren't exactly angels either when they were young. They may condemn the actions of the younger generation, but they were not as tame and innocent as they would like to seem. The following article, taken from the Emory Wheel, was published in the Emory Phoenix back in 1895. Written when courtly gallantry was at its height, it shows that the younger generation of that day also had a technique in the art of kissing.

"Kissing is, or should be made, one of the fine arts. While there is no immediate danger of its becoming one of the lost arts, or even lapsing into innocuous desuetude, still it is just as well to do what we can to keep it up as an art standard. For heaven's sake don't make a business of it, and don't jump at it with your hat in one hand and your overshoes in the other. Don't pounce down on a woman's lips as you would on a piece of watermelon, or a ripe tomato and bend her head back until you hear the bones crack in the back of her neck. Don't glue your face to hers and have a good time all to yourself while you're flattening her nose on one of your cheeks. Don't take her by both ears and look into her eyes and try to grab it quick; you are sure to bump noses. These are a few of the things to avoid. A few general rules will now be given which may at all times be safely observed.

"Stand a little bit behind her, just on the right side. Place your left arm diagonally about her form, extending from her right shoulder down to and partially around her waist until the ends of your fingers touch her belt buckle. If she doesn't wear a belt buckle, the arm will get there just the same. Take it easy; don't get excited. Take your right hand and gently brush the golden ringlets from the left side of her alabaster brow, looking meantime into the liquid depths of her azure eyes. Take it easy.

"Don't get excited. Let your hand rest gently for a moment on the warm velvet of her pink and white left cheek. Then gently work the muscles of the right arm until her right cheek rests firmly on your left shoulder, just over the watch pocket. Take it easy; don't be in a hurry; it'll keep. Send a little energy along the line of the left arm. Now stand still as long as you can. Then remove your right hand from her left cheek, letting it drop gently under her chin. Work muscles of your right arm gently. Take it easy; don't hurry. As the chin rises, work neck muscles and let your head fall gently forward. Now a little more action down the left arm, and as the ripe lips, like twin rose-buds, part, revealing pearly gates behind, through which there steals the warm, sweet perfume of her fragrant breath, then—well, you know the rest as well as I do—only take it easy; don't hurry; it can't get away, and it would not if it could!"

music. "The Maennerchoer is the natural outgrowth of conditions which now bring to the campus from fifty to one hundred new men each fall whose vocal abilities justify a training and experience formerly offered only to those thirty men selected in October at the University Glee Club," said Dr. Dyer yesterday. "The advantages offered in this type of training have become apparent to this larger group which represents all departments and classes on the campus, with the result that a concert of high grade music is being prepared on exactly the same basis of rendition as though the group consisted of the selected thirty."

C. B. Overman, the business manager for the Glee Club and Maennerchoer, has asked that the students and townspeople be requested to bear in mind the date of the Maennerchoer concert of February 9th, and give it their support. The music department is very anxious that this group be given a chance to show how very valuable a cultural asset it can be, both to the campus, the town, and even to the state, and support with subsequent comment would go far toward proving or disproving this fact.

Tickets for the concert may be had from members of the Maennerchoer or by applying at the office of the Glee Club.

The local chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi, honorary commerce fraternity, announces the pledging of James Boylan Thompson of Raleigh.

INAUGURATION OF CHASE SCHEDULED BY ILLINI BOARD

Former President of North Carolina To Be Installed at Illinois, May 1.

Trustees of the University of Illinois last week announced the date of the inauguration of President Harry Woodburn Chase, former president of this University. Plans have been made and invitations mailed for the installation May 1.

President Chase went to the University of Illinois in July, 1930 to succeed Dr. David Kinley, who had served the Illinois institution for thirty years, ten as president.

It was with a pang of regret that students and faculty saw Dr. Chase go in the summer of last year. They first learned of his contract to become head of Illinois in February of last year.

The decade in which Dr. Chase served as president here was marked by much progress for the University. Chase had come to the University in 1910 as a professor of philosophy and at the death of President E. K. Graham he was temporarily elected president. There was much opposition among the trustees as to whom they would elect. To satisfy both sides they finally decided to elect "that yankee" until they could find a North Carolinian suitable for the place. After two years of service, and when the time came to get a permanent president, they found that they could not let "that yankee" go. He had in those two years expanded the University as no one else had ever done.

During those years between 1918 and 1930 the University rose from the rank of a low state university to a place with the largest in the country. Through the influence of Chase it became a member of the Association of American Universities. Dr. Chase had served as secretary and treasurer of the American Association of State Universities from 1922 to 1929. In 1929 he was made president of that organization.

Through this and other organizations the president gained national publicity for this institution. He placed it in a position to enjoy the advantages of university organizations and national recognition.

In the decade of his presidency a vast building program was undertaken. Eight new dormitories were erected. Five class build-

Playmakers Present Studio Productions

During the past week, the Carolina Playmakers have presented two studio productions which were written by members of Director Frederick H. Koch's playwriting class.

The first of the two productions was written and directed by William I. Long and had as its theme the walnut boards made by the chief character into the form of a coffin to terrorize his wife. This play was seen at the Playmakers Theatre several years ago when Long presented it in a high school dramatic contest.

The second studio production of the week was presented yesterday when "Doses of Life," a farce of modern life, written by Tom Loy, a member of the playwriting class, was given.

MINOR APPOINTS COMMITTEEMEN

Land Is To Be Chairman of Committee Which Includes Phipps, Defeated Presidential Candidate.

Ike Minor, newly-elected president of the Freshman class, announces the appointing of his executive committee which will aid him in carrying on the duties of the new class. John Phipps, a string rival for the head of the class in the election, was appointed on the committee. Champ Land was given the job of chairman.

The other appointees on the committee are: Otto Prochazka, Jack Hammer, Pen Gray, Hugh Sawyer, Don Shoemaker, Barrie Blackwelder, Dave McCachern, Al Olmstead, Red Boyles, Bernard Solomon, Clarence Peacock, and Joe Tobin.

The first day of the elections was on Thursday, January 15, at which time Minor and Phipps received the two highest number of votes for the presidency. J. M. Tatum and John Barrow were the leading men in the vice- president's post, while Lasley Hudson and Gus McIver led in the race for treasurer. John Leake was the only man to be elected on the first vote.

In the runoff which was held Tuesday, January 20, Minor carried the election with 275 votes to his opponents 188; Barrow won out by a 138 margin over Tatum, and McIver polled 306 to Hudson's 154.

Origin Of Carolina Story Told By Lowell Thomas In Unknown

According to Lowell Thomas, the famous "radio voice of the Literary Digest," this campus has recently changed from a center of higher learning to a den of robbers and gangsters.

In his Tuesday night's talk, the noted radio announcer vividly described a scene which he said took place in this community. The story went something like this: As two students of the University of North Carolina were walking back from the show several nights ago, they were held up by a masked robber who demanded their money. It so happened that at the same time each of the students took from their pockets a small piece of pipe and stuck it into the ribs of the thief. When they got under a light, it turned out mysteriously that the two boys were holding up each other.

Where the students got such strong gin, or where Lowell Thomas got hold of this tale are both complete mysteries to any member of the Daily Tar Heel staff. It is thought, however, that this hair-raising event never took place, but that some students, wanting to hear their names broadcast over the radio, made up the story and sent it in to Mr. Thomas. It is apparent that the Literary Digest announcer could see no flaw in the narrative, and so gave the students their desired publicity.

If, however, such a thing did actually take place, it was not reported to the office of the paper.

STUDENTS OPPOSE CUTS IN SALARIES

Students In Education School Meet To Discuss Proposed Legislative Action.

The students of the department of education met last night on their own accord in room 204 Peabody to discuss the bill now before the state legislature which calls for a ten per cent reduction in the salaries of all state employees.

This meeting grew out of small group discussions of the question and a desire to have a joint expression of the students in the school of education.

After the meeting was called to order by James S. Stanley and its purpose stated, Ed Hamer was elected permanent chairman.

After an hour of discussion three resolutions were passed: (1) That the students of the department of education go on record as unanimously opposed to the bill calling for a reduction in the salaries of all state employees. (2) That as a matter respect for the profession of educational work students should send letters to their representatives and senators asking them to vote against this bill. (3) That county papers and civic organizations should be used as a means of bringing pressure to bear on the state legislators.

These students are of the opinion that the bill is "vicious class legislation" and if passed will lower the educational standards in the state from the rural school to the state university and destroy the progress already accomplished in the development of the state's educational system. They also point out the fact that there is no necessity of the bill, because there are plenty of untapped sources of taxable property which will furnish the necessary money needed to operate on.

SCHWARTZ WRITES GEOLOGY BOOKLET

Dr. Joel H. Schwartz, of the department of geology, in collaboration with Dr. Lee of the United States Bureau of Mines has recently published a technical booklet entitled "Resistivity Measurements of Oil Bearing Beds." At present Dr. Schwartz, who is on leave from the University for one year, is engaged by the United States department of commerce in the capacity of geophysicist in the department of mines.

Dr. Schwartz has three other works on geophysical matter on the press now. He is also planning to present an account of his Raleigh road experiments at the meeting of the American Institute of Mining Engineers which is to take place in New York City during February. These experiments were conducted in collaboration with W. T. Holland.

Eige Gives Material On Methods of Management

E. H. Eige, representative and engineer of the Western Electric Company, Chicago, gave an illustrated lecture on "Time Standard Procedure of the Western Electric Company" Thursday evening.

Mr. Eige, a specialist in the field of methods, presented material of value to those interested in management.

The assembly was conducted by the Taylor and other engineering socities.

DR. BANCROFT TO BE VISITOR HERE

Noted Cornell Professor Will Lecture on "Colloid Chemistry and Medicine."

Professor Wilder D. Bancroft of Cornell University and Mrs. Bancroft will be entertained in Chapel Hill January 27 through January 30. Professor Bancroft has been lecturing at Rollins College, Winter Park, Florida, and is stopping over on his way north.

He is a distinguished member of a distinguished family. His father George Bancroft, the famous historian, was one time secretary of the Navy, and during his administration the Naval Academy at Annapolis was founded. Later he was minister to England and Sweden. His father the late John Bancroft, was a member of the famous group of young Harvard men, including St. Gaudens, La Farge, President Eliot, the younger Agassiz, who were associated with the latter in the rise of the Calumet and Hecla copper mine.

Professor Bancroft himself was distinguished at Harvard as a football player and oarsman, as well as by excellent scholarship. Although offered an attractive opening in Harvard on graduation, his interest in the then newly developing science of physical chemistry took him to Amsterdam to study with the great Dutch master Van't Hoff. From there he went to the Leipsig laboratory of Ostwald at the time when that savant was completing his great masterpiece, the "Allgemeine Chemie," and had gathered about him a galaxy of the ablest young investigators from Germany, France, England and the United States.

Taking his doctor's degree in 1892, Bancroft returned to Harvard as an instructor, and then joined Trevor at Cornell to or-

HOLT AWARDS TO BE GRANTED SOON

The committee of awards for the Holt scholarships announces that all applications for the awards must be handed to the chairman of the committee by February 5. Application blanks can be obtained from R. B. House, executive secretary of the University.

Each year the interest from the Holt loan fund is used to help the most needy students in each of the undergraduate classes of the University. The number is always limited to four students, and the choice is carefully made by a committee of awards headed by Dean A. W. Hobbs.

Each year the committee tries to pick, to the best of its judgment, the most needy case in each class for the awards. For that reason the applicant must furnish letters of recommendation from reliable sources when he makes application.

The awards carry a stipend which covers tuition and other registration fees, in addition to paying a part of the students living expenses. The fund was established by Laurence H. Holt, a graduate of the University.

Entertainment Tickets

Dean Hobbs announced yesterday that all students, faculty members or townspeople who had not secured their entertainment tickets could get them from T. C. Worth in 207 Old East either by mail or telephone.

President Graham Practically Well

President Frank Graham has now recovered from a rather severe case of influenza, and is enjoying normal health. Because of the snow and bitter weather following the Christmas recess, he has not ventured from his home for fear of developing another cold.

President Graham has been confined almost three weeks now. His illness forced him to take to his bed on January 5, 1931. The crisis was reached the following Tuesday night when his condition caused uneasiness. With the good care of his attending physician, this condition was quickly checked, and he has been on the road to recovery since.

Due to the fact that he must present a budget report to the board of trustees when they meet Tuesday night, January 27, Mr. Graham has remained at home using his strength in preparation of this report.

CHANGES PLANNED FOR PUBLICATION

Regular Meeting of Daily Tar Heel Staff Scheduled for Sunday Night.

A special meeting of the Daily Tar Heel staff is called for tomorrow night at 7:15 in room 104 alumni building for the purpose of making an important change in the methods of the publication.

At the first of this quarter a drastic change was made in the staff of the paper by dropping all but twelve reporters from the staff. This plan thus far has proven its worth, and will be continued for the remainder of this quarter.

As to just what change will be made tomorrow night, the managing editor has not said, but it is thought that it will be some revision in the rules governing the staff. Every member of the staff is expected to be present unless previously excused by the managing editor.

At the second weekly meeting held by the staff this year Professor R. D. W. Connor of the history department and former editor of the paper, gave a short talk giving constructive criticism to the paper. He also gave a comparison of the Daily Tar Heel today in contrast to the Weekly Tar Heel in his day.

OPENING OF NEW AUDITORIUM SET FOR FEBRUARY 6

Dance Recital by Carola Goya To Be Initial Performance In Memorial Hall.

The new Memorial Hall, erected on the site of the historic old one, will be opened with a Spanish dance recital by Carola Goya, world-famous artist, Friday evening, February 6.

The performance will feature dances characteristic of the provinces of Spain and will include creations by the artist herself. In her recital, Carola Goya will be accompanied by Spanish music by De Falla, Albeniz, and Granados.

A gypsy dance, known as the "Ritual Fire Dance," arising from the superstitious fear of the people is one of the most popular of the numbers. Music by De Falla accompanies this dance.

The University has been without an adequate assembly hall since the old Memorial Hall was torn down last spring, but the new modern building affords such an auditorium. The balcony, constructed on the cantilever plan, commands an unobstructed view of the stage. Every seat in the hall is so situated that the view is not obstructed. The benches from the old Memorial Hall will be used temporarily until the University has sufficient funds to install individual chairs such as are found in other modern auditoriums.

The memorial tablets which adorn the walls of the old building have been placed on the walls of the lobby and stair halls. The large tablets bearing the names of the University's Confederate dead are on the inside of the auditorium proper, flanking the stage.

The new building has no basement, the main floor being laid directly upon the ground. Over layers of concrete, waterproof paper, and sound-deadening felt the wooden floor surface has been built. More felt has been laid on the floor, over which the carpet has been spread. Thus the floor has been made sound proof.

The hall will have a seating capacity of 1,800, or 250 more than the old Memorial Hall, and is absolutely fire proof.

Mexican Dramatist Interested In Carolina Playmakers' Methods

Mario Sadillo, Mexican dramatic director of great fame, who conducts the summer productions at the Toy Theatre in Atlantic City, New Jersey, has been studying the methods of the Carolina Playmakers for the major part of the past week while he visited the local dramatic group during the past few days as a stop-over on his way to Mexico City.

Mr. Sadillo was at one time a student of Stanislavsky's Moscow Art theatre group in New York and studied under the director who is identified with the leaders in the Russian movement. From his training, Mr. Sadillo is a firm believer of the character's meditation and concentration of a role before the production, which is quite typical of the Russian school.

The Playmakers' visitor is at present director of the Toy Theatre in Atlantic City. This play-house, a community enterprise, seats only seventy-five persons and carries out to some degree the idea of a plastic theatre, where the stage is beginning to be abolished and the actors come more and more in personal contact with the audience.

Mr. Sadillo is now on his way to Mexico City to establish a folk theatre there. He is greatly interested in the folk dramas and in the intermingling of the Spanish with the Aztec Indians in the early history of his country. His visit to Chapel Hill was for the purpose of studying Playmakers' methods and technique.

He expressed much interest in the local dramatic group, and the plays presented, particularly in the work of Paul Green. He wishes to translate some of the folk plays into Spanish and also some of the Mexican musical tabloids into English.

Apples For Sale!

The man who sells apples knows.

Whenever a period of financial depression strikes a country the economists discuss the problem from every angle. They give their individual viewpoints about the problem, its causes, results, and solutions. They hold conferences, call meetings, pass resolutions. The economists really think about the problem.

But the man who sells apples really knows the problem. Young men, strong, healthy men, capable men, many of them educated, with a family depending on them, unable to locate a job of any sort—stand on a street corner and sell apples. They know the problem.

Very possibly the United States has come to the point where serious thought must be given to an economic readjustment of some sort. On the face of it, that may seem a silly statement, but we mean serious thought. Our country as a whole has never had to face the economic problems with which Europe has to deal. Really serious consideration has never been devoted to these problems by the nation or the government as a whole. But now, when starving farmers of the Midwest, thousands of them, make raids on food stores; when able men sell apples on city streets; when starvation, a word which heretofore has had no real meaning for most of America, is all about us, now we must do something.

Will America, the dollar-mad, pleasure-loving, rich-living, god of the economic world turn out to have feet of clay? Is our time of reckless prosperity over? Will we be forced to resort to the dole to keep men alive?

Drastic economic readjustment is inevitable.—H. B.

Wire Pulling Needed

We asked one of the state's lawyers not so long ago to suggest an editorial subject. He replied with four. But one of them: "Explain that the campus needs athletics for the common garden variety of student, as well as for the star. Don't ask, necessarily, for less emphasis on intercollegiate athletics, but rather for more emphasis on campus sports. Carolina has none of that, has she?"

The man in question knew nothing of intramural athletics. He had seen Carolina teams in action. But he had never seen heard of a dormitory team, or of a fraternity team. He had no idea that such a thing as a dormitory boxing squad existed. It was not his fault. He had no way of knowing.

"Don't ask, necessarily, for less emphasis on intercollegiate athletics. . . ." And so he was not a wild-eyed reformer battering against what he considered the existing order for the pure love of battering. Instead, he was asking very sanely and as quietly for something he had no way of knowing already existed.

And he could not know general athletics existed on the Carolina campus because the state papers never mention the fact. We feel that if some arrangements could be made, some wires pulled perhaps, and regular accounts of intramural athletics printed in the papers there would be less misinformation. And a great many people as rabid as the lawyer was mild might forget their set speeches about "over-emphasis on intercollegiate football," "the chosen few," and "unwise concentration."—V. A. D.

Shall It Go On?

Sad to say, there has grown up on this campus somewhat of a barrier between the students and the faculty members. In former times, when this hindrance did not exist, the two classes were free to meet each other on practically the same terms as two men would meet to discuss business problems. Now, however, since the establishment of this gigantic wall, students and faculty members cannot come together without a little uneasiness on the part of the former.

What is this monster which stands in the pathway of close acquaintance between students and faculty? It has been brought to us under the name of "booting." It is the outgrowth of a jealousy between students who did not care to know their professors and those who did. The latter class, perhaps the better informed, had a desire to learn more about the subject than was found in the text or in the lecture. They, therefore, sought the acquaintance of the professors in an attempt to find this desired knowledge.

The other class, when they found they were not making such grades as they thought they deserved, began to rationalize. They made the excuse that the only reason the others were making good marks was due to the fact that they tried to "boot" the instructor. Thus this jealousy arose, and with it the term "booting."

Seeing that those who were "bulling with the professor" (as the after-class conference unfortunately came to be termed) made the good grades, others came to take up this habit, until it began to be used for the purpose of making higher marks rather than in an actual search for knowledge. Because of these persons who used this conference with the professors in the wrong way, today, it has come to be thought that if a man goes up to talk with his instructor after class, it will be whispered, "So-and-so is trying to 'boot' the prof." Or if So-and-so makes a good mark on the course it will be because he had a "boot" on the professor.

Naturally, it is hard for the students to distinguish between whether a person is trying to "boot" a teacher, or merely trying to clear up some point in the lesson. And, in order not to make a mistake, they give the term "booting" to both cases. There, of course, should be some distinction, and it is our opinion that this should be made by the professor only. If he thinks the pupil is truly in search of a clearer understanding of the subject, all well and good. But if he thinks the person is attempting to "boot" him, let him deal with him accordingly—rather than allow students to call both cases "booting" to the disadvantage of both students and professors.—C. G. R.

Prohibition Again!

The Wickersham Commission has just presented its report on prohibition. After months of study and research the commission reached the following conclusions: first there should be no repeal or modification of the eighteenth amendment at present; second, prohibition is not being adequately enforced; third, prohibition should be given further trial and enforcement should be more rigorous. It seems to us that it has taken much too much time to reach conclusions of such little value. Such an investigation was not in the least necessary to discover that prohibition is not being enforced and as for the other two conclusions they are matters of personal opinion and we see no reason why the opinions of the members of this commission are of any more value than those of any thinking citizen.

Will Rogers made a very excellent and correct observation of the Wickersham report when he said that just as we were beginning to get our minds off prohibition and turn to more important and more pressing problems the Wickersham Commission presents its report to add another worry for the already over-burdened Mr. Hoover.—J. OPEN FORUM

Brief for The Sales Tax

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

Right now we are hearing a whole lot about the sales tax and cuts in salaries. The fight on the sales tax started about a year ago. The objectors are well organized and will defeat this law if there are not more people to interest themselves in passing it. I believe that most of the people who cuss the sales tax are the ones who have been told to do so instead of thinking it over.

As I understand it, the advocates of the measure propose a gross tax on merchandise retailed in North Carolina on a sliding scale ranging from 1-20 of 1% to 1% according to the volume.

The first objection usually raised is the cost of collecting this tax. It seems to me this would fit in nicely with collecting on income tax. I happen to be the largest retailer in our county and probably about an average when it comes to being able to pay. Anyway, I am for it. For example, the average retailer in this state won't reach $100,000 volume. If they charged this class merchant 1-20 of 1% it would cost him $50.00 per year. Our competitors (chains) would all have to pay 1% as they would be in the $1,000,000 volume class, which would mean $10,000 per million, whereas small merchants would only be burdened with $500 per million.

At this the ones who object to the sales tax say the chains wouldn't stand for it. They would incorporate each store individually. In this event the corporation commission would collect taxes on their incomes which heretofore have not been paid in our state. Then the objectors say: "They would bill their merchandise from their factories and distributing points outside of the state at such a price that it would show no profit from a retail standpoint." In case they started this crooked method it could be stopped according to our laws, since it is unlawful to merchandise on an unprofitable basis with a view of injuring other businesses.

Of course, the easy thing to do is to cut salaries and insure hard times for years to come. If the time has ever been when our state government needs a big stick it is now. These big Northern concerns that have been sapping the life out of North Carolina for a number of years could certainly be made to share some of the expenses of keeping up the state if the people were not so damned afraid of them. If you agree with me on this, a letter or telegram from you to our representatives in Raleigh right now might help.

BRUCE STROWD.

With Contemporaries

Hymn To Social Progress

An indication of the extent to which certain ideas concerning college and college functions, as well as other contemporary problems, have seeped down from the upper circles of American thinking—i. e., Atlantic Monthly essayist—was the recent convention of the National Students' Federation at Atlanta, Ga.

The students went on record as favoring just about everything the liberal philosophers—i. e., Scribners magazine writers—have sponsored in the last few years. Then want "something done about prohibition. They don't know what, but something. They "deplored" subsidization of athletes. They think there should be a nation-wide conference of college presidents, athletic directors, student leaders. The conference would discuss "commercialism and professionalism" in athletics. They voted too, to bar no student from membership because of race or color. Altgether, a truly noteworthy contribution to social progress, worthy of the most advanced school of advanced thinkers—i. e., Harpers magazine essayists.

It's all too absurd.

There has been a lot of propaganda recently. We are at the dawn of a new age. Students are awakening. Students are becoming alive to social problems. Students are beginning to see the Light. Students are pulling two ways, are divided into two camps, the advanced thinkers will tell you. Half of them are pursuing the illusive nymph of pleasure as in the past; this camp is reactionary, rah-rah, etc., etc. The other camp is "socially conscious."

Really, we can't see much to choose between the two. One group never thinks. It wears a fur coat, drives a yellow roadster. It sprinkles the country with gin bottles and is the origin of the still persisting talk about the younger generation. It goes in for football in a really big way; wears a gold badge and shouts for dear old whatever-it-is.

The other group sponsors socialism—even communism. It is pacifistic. It reads T. S. Eliot Decries 19th Century codes of morals. There was no art before Cezanne. International brotherhood! Liberty, equality, fraternity! Down with capitalism, overemphasized football, Republicanism! Down with reaction! Down with everything! Whoops! That camp never thinks either. The National Students' Federation belongs to it.

Perhaps we're wrong. Perhaps the federation is a sign of dawning social intelligence. Perhaps we are becoming conscious of world problems. It doesn't seem to make much difference. What difference if we concentrate on winning for dear old etc, or on government ownership, so long as we spend our time shouting? What difference if we follow Rockne or Lasky? Affect W sweaters and gin bottles or baggy trousers and socialism?

Where's the progress? We haven't any better heads. There are just as many stupid among us. Just as many stupid signing petitions as driving roadsters. The Experimental college infant who loves the echo of his voice is no more intelligent, more highly developed, more worthy a specimen of the race than the Langdon street person who has never had less than a C—or anything higher. What's the difference between them? What is the difference between picking international brotherhood out of the air, out of Harpers, than picking rah-rahism out of a fraternity house?—The Daily Cardinal.

The Soviet "Menace"

Not content with an already sizeable record of absurd proposals, Representative Hamilton Fish and his committee investigating Communist activities are preparing to submit to Congress a recommendation that alien Communists be deported. Among other resolutions urged are: reestablishment of a bureau of investigation in the department of justice to shadow Communist and kindred organizations; levying an embargo against Soviet exports; exclusion of the Communist and the worker's parties from the ballot.

The publicity-seeking schemes of Solon Fish are no more condemnable than the general apathy with which the American public receives them. We do not ridicule his proposals as such jingoism should be ridiculed because we have ceased to be a thinking people in political matters. Most of us have absorbed the clap-trap disseminated by our capitalistic press until we look upon a Communist much as our self-righteous forefathers looked upon an atheist.

We read censored and unreliable dispatches from Russia uncritically. Nearly every day our police authorities accuse Communists of complicity in uprisings of underpaid or unemployed laborers, perhaps rather than take the trouble to determine the true causes, or, perhaps, rather than reveal the true causes.

There is nothing holy about our form of government. If it sometimes fails conclusively to provide those things that it guarantees, it will be time for us to change. For that reason, the makers of the constitution included in its provisions permitting free speech and preventing discrimination against those of non-conforming political beliefs. The government, though it is often inefficient and often unjust, has not failed. But in every case of discrimination like that proposed by Solon Fish, it not only defies the bill of rights guaranteed to the people, but also admits that capitalism has allowed enough injustices to creep in that it must use extra-legal methods for suppressing movements that would compel it to rectify the unjust practices.

Communism and Soviet Russia are not "menaces" to our government. But they do establish the fact that our governing agents cannot continue indefinitely to abuse the powers with which they are entrusted nor neglect their duties for interests of political self-preservation without eventually making their own positions insecure.—The Michigan Daily.

Birth Control—Inevitable?

Carrying a fervent message of religious zeal and a warning against the practices common to modern marriage, a papal encyclical on marriage has been issued after a lapse of 50 years. Birth control, divorce, companionate marriage, and sterilization of defectives are subjected to a vigorous attack, with the former bearing the brunt.

Taken in its entirety, the doctrine is an expression of beautiful religious ideals. But, like the ideals of most religions, they are in some aspects so impractical at present as to be unacceptable even to many who express belief.

Pope Pius XI bases his objections to birth control on the fact that it is unnatural. Quite true, but it is no more unnatural than abstinence, the only alternative which has been presented so far.

Today birth control may be left to the realm of morals. Tomorrow it may become a practical necessity for the world and for individuals. Eventually it will be accepted. On issues like this the religions of the present day must test their responsiveness to social developments just as those of yesterday did by their attitudes on social customs like monogamy—Daily Iowan.

Cadet Boxers To Invade Tar Heel Ring Tonight

ROWE TO START SQUAD USED IN GAMECOCK MEET

Star Welterweight Out With Broken Nose; Bouts To Begin At Seven O'clock.

A double header is in store for fight fans tonight when the V. M. I. freshman and varsity teams come to Chapel Hill to meet the Tar Heel yearlings and varsity in the Tin Can. The frosh are scheduled to go on first and the first bout is to start at seven o'clock. After the freshman fights are over, the varsity bouts will begin at about eight-thirty o'clock.

No change will be made in the lineup that started against South Carolina last Friday night. These men are: Biggs, bantamweight; Levinson, featherweight; Captain Goodridge, lightweight; Jackson, welterweight; Davis, middleweight; Wilson, light heavyweight; and Warren, heavyweight.

John Warren, veteran heavy, has been unable to show his stuff to Tar Heel fans, winning his fight last week by a forfeit, but if he keeps up his last year's pace, he will be in for a great season. This year's crop of sophomores, the largest ever to make the varsity, has been improving with each workout.

George Biggs, bantam, after a poor start against his South Carolina opponent, has apparently gotten over his defeat, and is improving daily.

Marty Levinson, sensational featherweight, has gotten off to a great start, and should continue his winning ways tonight. Marty has had plenty of experience and there are few intercollegiate boxers who can put anything over on him. In addition to his experience, Marty can hit with the best of them. Levinson lets his opponent batter away at him but most of these blows land on his arms or gloves, while he gets in plenty of hard blows himself.

In Jackson, Coach Rowe has one of the most promising fighters who has ever stepped in a Carolina ring. With time, Jackson will take the place that Archie Allen holds in the hearts of Carolina fight fans. Cecil can hit, and has a splendid defense.

The main reason for Wilson's defeat last week lies in his inexperience. Hugh can hit like a mule, but doesn't hit often enough and doesn't seem to follow up his opportunities. This was clearly brought out in last week's fight. Twice Hugh had Callahan hurt and wobbly and twice Hugh let him recuperate. Had Wilson followed up his opportunity, the fight would have been all over for the Gamecock.

Warren, Davis and Goodridge have all been looking good this past week, and if they maintain their form tonight the visitors will have a hard time against their hosts.

Another Tar Heel candidate was added to the hospital list Thursday, when Jim Hubbard, welterweight, broke his nose while sparring with Patterson. This will keep Hubbard out for a few weeks, and the loss of this promising youngster is a hard blow.

In Nebraska, we read, a special car with a magnet attached is used by the authorities for collecting the nails and odd pieces of metal on the roads. Most cars do that easily enough with the help of nothing but pneumatic tires.—The Humorist.

WIN BATTLE TO DISPENSE WITH ATHLETIC MEETS

North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools Against High School Tournaments.

The North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary schools has won another fight in its battle to abolish national high school athletic tournaments.

Northwestern University through the director of athletics, announced discontinuance of its national interscholastic track, swimming, and wrestling meet, a carnival eighteen years old.

The University of Chicago recently obeyed the recommendations or order of the association by abolishing its annual high school basketball tournament, a national classic for many years.

Through the influence of the National Federation of State High School Athletic Associations, the north central body last spring warned all its members that it must discontinue such national meets or run the risk of disbarment from its body. Most of the universities, colleges, and secondary schools belong to the association and disbarment from its group means that no student's credits would be accepted at an accredited institution.

Northwestern's tournament attracted 350 athletes last spring.

TAR HEELS MAY RESTORE SHIFT

Notre Dame Shift To Be Used In Spring Practice; May Become Permanent.

The University gridders likely will use the Notre Dame shift next fall, it was indicated today when Coach Chuck Collins began winter practice with instructions in the Rockne device.

Coach Collins said the shift would be used in spring practice games, but declined to say whether the addition was permanent. The Carolina coach used the shift when he came here five years ago, but abandoned it after a season or so.

A squad of 100 men answered the winter practice call, but the experienced players were few and far between. Lettermen reporting included Brown and Walker, ends; Hodges, tackle; Fysal, Blackwood and Newcombe, guards; Gilbreath, center; Slusser and Chandler halfbacks.

Rookies reporting who showed to advantage last fall included Smith and Lassiter, reserve tackle and halfback; and Hackney, Phipps, Woollen and Anaucaustas, freshman backs.

Coaches Collins, Enright, Sapp and Farris are drilling the squad on fundamentals this week. Magner and Erickson, graduating backs, are volunteering their services. Line scrimmage and heavy work is scheduled to start Monday.

GOBBLERS TAKE GAME FROM TAR HEELS 31 TO 28

Carolina Leads at Half But V. P. I. Rally in Second Half Proves Disastrous.

FRESHMEN WIN 40 TO 12

The V. P. I. Gobblers ran up a lead of ten points early in the second half and succeeded in taking last night's game from the Tar Heels by a 31-28 score despite a last minute rally.

Sandy Dameron of Carolina and Ben Palmer of V. P. I. tied for scoring honors with twelve points each.

The Tar Heels held a second V. P. I. team scoreless for the opening minutes of the game, but a rally just before the half ended put the Gobblers ahead at 15-14. Dameron made a double foul good as the whistle blew to regain the lead at 16-15.

Tom Alexander was unable to play last night, being confined to the infirmary with influenza.

The starting lineup were: for Carolina, Moore and Hines, forwards; Dameron, center; Choate and Marpet, guards. for V. P. I., Tibbs and Jenkins, forwards; Donaldson, center; Yaggi and Schrieberg, guards; took the floor for the Gobblers.

The Beta's received a forfeit yesterday afternoon when St. Anthony hall failed to appear.

Sigma Zeta's Win Close One

The Sigma Zeta's defeated the Theta Chi's yesterday afternoon in one of the closest games ever witnessed in the Tin Can by a score of 11-5. At the half the score stood 4-3. Feit, of the Sigma Zeta's made a free throw good in the first minute for the only score in the third quarter, the quarter ending 5-3. Both teams were unused to the larger varsity court and seemed unable to get their eye on the basket, trying many long shots, most of which were unsuccessful. In the last four minutes the Sigma Zeta's began to find their "goal eye," getting three baskets in quick succession to clinch the victory. Feit, with seven points was best for the winners while for the Theta Chi's Weeks was best with four points.

Survey Indicates Campus Politics Play Minor Role On Dixie Athletic Fields

Only Georgia and Virginia Schools Report Intervention of Campus Politics In Elections.

(By Don Shoemaker)

"Campus politics or the intervention of fraternities and clubs in the election of athletic leaders is a serious matter in only a few southern colleges and universities," reported the Richmond (Va.) News Leader in one of a series of articles reporting existing conditions in southern schools, a survey launched since the statement of Coach W. A. Alexander of Georgia Tech, in which he attributed decadence of sports at the Atlanta institution to campus politics.

The survey revealed that a few schools, principally in Georgia and Virginia are taking drastic steps to stifle the intervention of politics into athletic offices.

Officials of Washington and Lee University stated that no captains have been elected in basketball or baseball and that no football captain will be elected next year until the end of the season. R. A. Smith, graduate manager of athletics and to whom the statement was attributed said to representatives of the press, "We have had quite a bit of campus politics here in the last couple of years. The new action will take away for fraternities and clubs honors which they seek rather than from the individual." Mr. Smith further stated that captains are unnecessary "due to the fact that the coach can now give different members of the team a chance to assume this responsibility."

In a statement at the recent University football banquet, Coach Chuck Collins said that there will be no election at present for the captaincy of the football team, and though the Carolina mentor denied that politics were involved in preceding elections, it is understood that Carolina is taking the same stand in the matter as are the

DODD MAINTAINS MENTAL POISE IS AID TO VICTORY

Tennessee Flash Not In Sympathy With Current Gridiron Psychology.

Bobbie Dodd, unanimous selection for all-Southern quarterback in 1929 and 1930 and recently appointed Georgia Tech backfield coach, disagrees with the statements of some quarterbacks that psychology is what wins football game.

Dodd who one reporter described as "the boy whose heart pumps ice water," states that the frame of mind and mental poise more than anything else help football teams to win.

The new Georgia Tech backfield coach said that psychology is of the greatest use in the study of the men on one's own team. His advice to quarterbacks is to study their men and to know upon whom to rely for certain types of plays.

Some men, the former Tennessee ace further states, shine in carrying the ball in midfield but cannot do their stuff within the fifteen yard line. Other backfield men need to have a goal line before them to raise the pitch where nothing human can stop them. Dodd's final admonition was, "Use psychology on your own men and you won't need to use it on the opposing team."

PATHETIC STORIES REACH RED CROSS

American Legion Will Cooperate In Aiding Needy Cases.

Hundreds of persons are sending in pleas to Red Cross headquarters asking for aid for themselves or for others in need, and many organizations are cooperating with the Red Cross in putting the $10,000,000 campaign for funds across. Appeals are being made in numerous radio programs.

A statement received by John Barton Payne, chairman from Ralph T. O'Neil, national commander of the American Legion, Indianapolis, Indiana, pledged the support of the American Legion in the drought relief campaign. In the letter was this statement: "The 10,000 posts of the American Legion will cooperate to the fullest extent in this emergency."

The letters received by the Red Cross officials tell of need in all parts of the country. A letter from a woman in a North Carolina community speaks of the number of children who cannot attend Sunday School because they have nothing to wear, and says that grown women are suffering due to lack of clothing enough to keep them comfortable. "There are dozens of little children that haven't had any shoes or clothes bought for them for the winter. Some orphan children; some widow-women's children; and some that have parents who are suffering, too."

Another letter from a North Carolina World War veteran says: "I don't mind hard work. Answer soon for I am in need."

Workers in Louisiana have written in of the families who need food and clothing, and of the fact that their local funds are exhausted.

A letter from a Kentucky World War veteran who had never demanded a government bonus asked for clothes for his family of five children and wished to pay for them in eggs and chickens. In Kentucky rural sections, schools are being forced to close because the children are unable to attend for want of clothing. A dispatch from Logan county, Kentucky says: "I saw a man, wife, and three little children with a little express wagon drawn by a dog, as it passed over United States highway No. 60, which leads across Kentucky."

Reports from Alabama speak of more children unable to attend school because of lack of money to buy books, clothing, and adequate food while Coffee county, Alabama, reports this as a continuation of a circle of hard luck and suffering; this year the drought, last year the flood, the previous year a failure of crops, and the year before the shortage of crops.

From Oklahoma comes a story of a home visited in which was found only a part of a sack of flour and a pound of lard. The father has no work and six small children are in the family.

The workers in Hattiesburg, Mississippi state that the highways are full of men walking from place to place, and from Warren county, Mississippi, they write of the tenant farmers who, on account of bad crops, are moving about, thinking another location might prove better.

Country Club Dance

The Chapel Hill country club had their last dance of the club year last night at the club house. Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Lyons and Mr. S. H. Hobbs, Jr., were hosts at the dance.

The room was decorated with evergreens, red candles in brass candlesticks and with balloons of various colors.

"THE BAND FROM THE SOUTH"

The picture above is a reproduction of a photograph of Kay Kyser, "the man from the South," and his inimitable band, taken around the bench at Davie Poplar. Since leaving the campus, where he is still recognized as one of the University's best cheerleaders, Kyser "went to the city and made good." After finishing an engagement last fall at the New Yorker Hotel, Kyser and his boys went to Dallas, Texas, where they are now playing hotel and radio engagements. His radio programs have a decided way-down-South flavor.

Epsilon Phi Delta Discusses Russia

The Epsilon Phi Delta cosmopolitan club discussed Russia at the regular semi-monthly meeting Thursday night at nine o'clock in the Y. M. C .A. Dean D. D. Carroll, of the school of commerce, spoke on Russia going into perspective of the Russian situation and an analysis of socialism and communism. He explained also the new economic policy of the Russian Soviet government and discussed the five year plan.

After Dean Carroll's talk an open forum discussion of the general subject was conducted, and political, social, economic, and religious aspects of modern Russian life were considered.

The cosmopolitan club will meet again Thursday, February 7.

U. D. C. Will Conduct Benefit Bridge-Dance

The Carolina Inn will be the scene of a benefit bridge and dance to be conducted this afternoon and evening under the auspices of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

The proceeds from the affair will go to a fund to be donated to the University in the form of a scholarship.

There will be card playing in the afternoon at three o'clock and in the evening at eight. Dancing will begin at 9:30.

Badillo Stops Here En Route to Mexico

Mario Badillo, a graduate student in zoology of Johns Hopkins, has been visiting in town for several days making a study of the zoology and botanical departments here, paying especial interest to the libraries of those departments.

Senor Badillo is en route to Mexico via Chapel Hill, to make arrangements for Dr. Duncan S. Johnson's party of students who are making a collecting and study tour to Mexico.

High School To Visit Campus

J. Maryon Saunders, executive secretary of the Alumni Association, recently received a letter from H. M. Chester, principal of the Dunn high school, stating that a group of students from that school will visit the campus today.

They will be shown the stadium, arboretum, library, and other places of interest by Mr. Saunders, Mr. Chester, who was here as a graduate student the summers of 1929 and 1930, and Jack Riley, University student.

ganize the research laboratory which has been one of the most productive in the world, and to found the Journal of Physical Chemistry which is now the leading journal in that branch of science. The journal is now published under the auspices of the American Chemical Society, but is yet edited by Bancroft who determines its policies.

It is however as an investigator that Bancroft is best known. More than anyone he has made the Gibb's Phase Rule, a marvelous instrument in theoretical and industrial chemical research. His investigations on the mass law, electrochemistry, alloys, irreversible reactions, the chemistry of light are of outstanding importance, and he is the leading authority in this country on the chemistry of colloids.

Bancroft is one of the very few Americans who has received an honorary degree from Cambridge University, England, being given the doctorate in science in 1910. He holds honorary degrees from several American universities, is a member of the National Academy, Philosophical Society, and the American Academy, is an honorary member of the London Chemical Society, Societe Chimique de France, and the Electrochemical Society, as well as the leading scientific societies here and abroad.

He is the past president, director and councilor of the American Chemical Society, and past president of the Electrochemical Society and the National Research Council. During the World War he was a Lieutenant-Colonel in the chemical warfare service. He yet maintains a keen interest in sports and is well known as a golf player.

At eight o'clock Friday evening, January 30, in the auditorium of Venable hall, Dr. Bancroft will lecture on "Colloid Chemistry and Medicine," to the North Carolina chapter of the Sigma Xi and the North Carolina section of the American Chemical Society. The public interested is invited. Preceding the lecture there will be a dinner at the Carolina Inn for the members of the two organizations.

Survey Indicates That Campus Politics Are Playing Minor Role

Georgia and Virginia institutions.

Said the Yellow Jacket, Randolph-Macon college weekly on the question of campus politics in athletics:

"Politics have no place on any college campus, particularly on the campus of a small institution. But when one starts out to clean up politics on the campus of almost any college in the country he is liable to find an Augean stable on his hands. It is bad enough when politics enters into class offices and student body offices. But after all these are merely figure-heads in most cases, and no harm is done. The real tragedy occurs when athletics and publications are divided up as spoils of battle. In these fields merit alone should be the determining mode of selection, for when incapable men achieve the offices they play havoc.

Randolph-Macon does not suffer heavily from fraternity politics in athletics and other fields in which real aptitude is necessary, but there have been unpleasant rumors on the past suggesting an evil against which we should be always on our guard."

At the University of Richmond an iron-handed rule against politics is enforced through practice of having captains of teams nominated by Coach Frank M. Dobson although they are voted on by the teams. Sometimes, Mr. Dobson said, only one man seems qualified for the position and he is nominated; at other times there are several candidates among whom selection is to be made. Ability rather than popularity is considered in making the nominations.

Coach Alexander has announced that at Georgia Tech no captain will be named for football until after about a month of work next fall.

Other institutions covered in the survey are unanimous in denying that campus politics is a problem or has influenced sports activities on their campuses.

Among those making such statements to the News-Leader were H. J. Stegeman, director of athletics at the University of Georgia who says, "We have never had any interference from campus politics in the twelve years I have been here."

Dr. Wilbur C. Smith, director of athletics at Tulane, W. S. Gooch, at the college of William and Mary, James Driver, at the University of Virginia; H. G. Crisp, at the University of Alabama; P. B. Parker, at the University of Tennessee; Edward Walker, at the University of Mississippi and Coach Dan E. McGugin of Vanderbilt, all say their experience has not indicated politics is a troublesome influence.

ings were built—Saunders, Murphey, Manning, Venable, and Bingham. Lastly the library was erected, which is one of the largest in the South. With this increase in class buildings and dormitories next came athletic equipment. The Tin Can, the Kenan Memorial Stadium and the tennis courts were all added during Chase's administration.

Of course, he was not the whole force that brought about such changes. He took up a program that the preceding president had begun, and with his unusual ability carried it through. He had the cooperation of a willing state legislature. He was not troubled with a cut in salaries or a reduction of funds. On the contrary, the state appropriation increased from about $227,000. in 1918 to over $880,000, at the time he accepted a position at the University of Illinois.

His work here so distinguished him that he was offered positions as president at many leading universities in the country, among which were the University of Oregon and the University of Cincinnati.

VOLUME XXXIX — CHAPEL HILL, N. C., SUNDAY, JANUARY 25, 1931 — NUMBER 89

FOURTEEN PRINTS ARE IN LIBRARY'S ETCHING DISPLAY

Works of Two Artists Are Exhibited in Entry of Library.

An exhibition of prints opened yesterday in the main entry of the library building. The exhibit is comprised of six etchings of the University by William Steene, until recently a resident of Chapel Hill, and eight illustrations for Shakespeare's The Two Gentlemen of Verona, drawn by Walter Crane, an eminent English illustrator and painter of the 19th century.

Depicting from familiar scenes on the University campus Mr. Steene's etchings have occasioned a good deal of comment among alumni of the University. Decorative composition combined with careful observation, a directness and sincerity of approach distinguish these etchings of William Steene and give them a fresh vividness and charm. Without obvious striving for effects, Mr. Steene achieves a satisfying impression of color and vitality and through rich passages of dark and brilliant effects of light he has been able to suggest the mellowness and traditions of these old buildings and scenes of the University of North Carolina.

Mr. Steene has been living and working in Chapel Hill for several years and the locale, according to Chapel Hill art critics, proves to have been a congenial and stimulating one; for the warmth and brilliancy pervading these etchings are a fortunate reaction to the beauty of Southern environment. His sensitive feeling for the pictorial, his gracious response to shades and textures, and his ability to flood his etchings and paintings with a soft glamorous light give them a vibrant living quality.

Walter Crane achieved a good deal of popularity and prominence during the latter part of the 19th and early part of the 20th century as an illustrator of books and as a mural painter. The illustrations from The Two Gentlemen of Verona, now on display, were given the University Library by R. S. Pickens, an alumnus and journalist of Washington, D. C.

The pictures are reproduced by a special process and were issued in a limited edition of 650 copies. The edition was signed by the artist and the printer.

Any graduate students who desire positions as instructors in the University or in other colleges and universities may secure the blanks for application at the graduate office on the second floor of South building.

Plymouth School Will Need Teacher at Early Date

Ernest Hicks, superintendent of schools at Plymouth, North Carolina, has notified I. C. Griffin of the school of education, that there will be a vacancy for a teacher of high school history and science there. The appointee is to start work February 9.

Trustees To Meet

The University Trustees are scheduled to meet in Raleigh Tuesday. At this meeting the chief question for discussion will be the University budget for next year.

President Frank P. Graham who has been sick for quite a while will present the budget report for the past year if he is able at the time of the meeting to leave his home.

HAYES TO TEACH BRAUNE'S COURSE

The courses in steel structures which were given in the school of engineering by the late Dean G. M. Braune, are to be given throughout the remainder of the year by Nathaniel P. Hayes, structural engineer with the Carolina Steel and Iron Company of Greensboro, who has been appointed active associate of Civil Engineering.

Mr. Hayes is a graduate of the University of North Carolina, having received the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and Bachelor of Science in civil engineering in 1922. For several years following his graduation he was associated with McClintick, Marshall and Company of Pittsburg. During his association with this company, he received experience in all of the divisions of their steel design and construction activities. Mr. Hayes was also employed on the design of the new Niagara River Bridge. For the past three or four years he has been connected with the Carolina Steel and Iron Company and is serving in responsible design, construction, and sales capacities.

PROCONIAN CLUB PUBLISHES PAPER

The first attempt of the Chapel Hill high school to have a paper of any kind is the Proconian. This publication is a bi-monthly and is published by the Proconian club. The name of the paper is taken from the club's name, which signifies that the paper does not intend to be partisan, but rather that it will give both sides of a question, hence the pro and con name.

The first edition of the paper was a seven page, mimeographed, leaflet, in magazine form. There was no headline and the pages were two columns wide.

The avowed purpose of the publication is to give the high school a medium of expression at the lowest possible price. The staff believes in the idea of having a paper, because it gives both the students and the faculty a chance to give their respective ideas to each other.

The front page contained articles of local high school interest. The second page had a masthead of the Proconian giving the names of the students active in this work. There was also a paragraph or two, on the purpose and reason for publishing a school paper. There was an announcement of the conducting of a student forum column, in which an opportunity will be given the students to express their own opinions.

The third page was devoted entirely to sports articles. There were three basketball stories, and an announcement of spring football practice. Then too there was a sports column dedicated to the University's basketball accomplishments and hopes.

Page four contained a library feature story; a book review of the Lone Cowboy, an article on

CHEMISTS PLAN INSPECTION TOUR

Institute of Chemical Engineers Will Hear R. W. Bost.

The North Carolina student chapter of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers will hold a smoker Monday evening at 7:30 p. m. in room 206 of Venable hall. The meeting has been moved up from Tuesday to Monday to avoid conflict with the basketball game Tuesday.

In order to arouse greater interest on the part of the members, the officers have been making extensive plans for the programs to be given at the meetings this quarter. Attempts are being made to obtain speakers who are prominent on this campus as well as some from nearby cities. Several of the most well known faculty members have consented to address the Institute on matters of interest. It is the aim of those in charge of the programs to give the students a chance to hear men of other branches of science and also business and economics give their views of the engineer's position in the business world into which they are preparing to enter.

For the meeting this Tuesday evening Dr. R. W. Bost, professor of organic chemistry, will give a short talk on some subject which he thinks will be of interest to the entire group. His subject has not been definitely announced as yet. George Holroyd, a graduate student, will give a brief outline of his research work to acquaint the underclassmen with what the graduate student does to pass the time away.

Refreshments will be served at the close of the meeting.

The Institute is sponsoring an inspection tour of the industries of the nearby southern states during the spring holidays.

Chorus Rehearsal Of The Rose Laiden

All members, past and present, of the Community Chorus will meet Monday night at 7:30 in the choral room of the Music building. Matters of permanent organization and election of officers will be discussed. The establishment of a permanent charter for the organization will also be considered.

Following this the chorus will rehearse Cowen's The Rose Laiden which will be presented in the spring.

Membership in the Community Chorus is now open to all students and townspeople who enjoy singing in choral form.

JUDGES ANNOUNCED FOR HIGH SCHOOL CONTEST

Greensboro, January 22.—In a bulletin about the North Carolina high school music meet, to be held in this city April 23 and 24, Dr. Wade R. Brown, of the school of music at N. C. C. W., has just announced the names of judges who will serve at the meet.

Dr. Brown's announcement is as follows: "The following distinguished musicians have accepted our invitation to serve as judges for the contest to be held in 1931: J. E. Maddy, professor of public school music, University of Michigan, founder and conductor of the National High School orchestra and band camp; George H. Gartlan, supervisor of music of the schools of the city of New York."

ISAAC E. EMERSON DIES IN MARYLAND

Loyal Alumnus Succumbs to Heart Trouble in Seventy-First Year.

Captain Isaac Edward Emerson, a loyal alumnus of the University of North Carolina, died late Friday afternoon at his palatial home in Green Spring Valley, Maryland. His death was caused by heart disease, from which he had been suffering for some weeks. His wife and daughter were with him at the time of his death. His daughter, Mrs. Charles Minor Amory of New York and Palm Beach, had been attending him constantly during his fortnight of illness.

Captain Emerson was born on July 24, 1858 in Chapel Hill, and was seventy-one at the time he died. He majored in chemistry while at the University, and was always deeply interested in work in this field. He graduated with the class of 1879.

For a time he worked in a drug store in Chapel Hill, and then he went to Baltimore where he started his own business. He worked out and patented the formula for Bromo-Seltzer, the product that brought him his millions. He was one of the early business men who realized the importance of advertising, and his product was well-known in this country and abroad because of this.

In 1916, when the University athletic facilities greatly needed, he donated $20,000 to build concrete stands for the field which is now named Emerson field as a token of esteem and gratitude. The Yackety-Yack for the year 1922 was dedicated to him by the staff for his generous gift.

He was a lieutenant in the United States Navy during the Spanish American war, and served with distinction. His title is derived from the fact that he was captain of the Maryland Naval Brigade from 1898 through 1901.

The University alumnus had large and numerous estates in North and South Carolina as well as in Maryland. He entertained lavishly both summer and winter on his various estates and several times took friends with him on world cruises in his yacht. His summer home near Baltimore is one of the points of interest in that part of the country.

GOVERNMENT POSITIONS OPEN TO STATE RESIDENTS

A great number of appointments for government employment are open to residents of all states except Delaware, Iowa, Maine, Maryland, Vermont, Virginia, and the District of Columbia which have all received their full share of appointments.

The United States Civil Service Commission has announced open competitive examinations as follows: junior medical officer (interne), $2,000 a year, at Saint Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington, D. C.; assistant scientific aide, $1,620 to $1,980 a year; under scientific helper, $1,260 to $1,620 a year; for cotton and rubber investigations in the southern states bureau of plant industry, department of agriculture.

Full information may be obtained from S. W. Bynum, secretary of the United States Civil Service board of examiners, or by inquiring at the post office in Chapel Hill.

Staff Meetings

Members of the Daily Tar Heel staff will meet tonight at seven-fifteen o'clock in room 104 Alumni building. City editors will meet at seven in the editorial office.

All members of the staff are expected to be present unless previously excused by the managing editor. Two consecutive unexcused absences from the Sunday night meetings will result in the reporter's being dropped from the staff.

BOOK BY BINGHAM GIVEN TO LIBRARY

A copy of Machu Picchu, A Citadel of the Incas, by Hiram Bingham, was presented to the University Library last week by The National Geographic Society and is now in its collections.

The book is the final resume of the work of the four National Geographic Society-Yale University joint expeditions which explored and excavated the sacred city of the Incas under the leadership of Dr. Bingham, then a Yale University professor, and now United States senator from Connecticut.

One part of the book deals with the exploration and excavation of Machu Picchu, and a description of the highways of the Inca land, particularly those which connected Machu Picchu with Cuzco, the capital of the Inca nation. It describes the fact that the builders of the Peruvian highlands developed an engineering skill to surpass that of any people of Europe between the downfall of the Roman Empire and the uprising of modern industrial civilization.

Reviewers pronounce the book "a great contribution to our knowledge of pre-Spanish Peru, an imposing record of archaeological work which most always compel the respect and admiration of anthropologists and historians."

The illustrations of this volume are in collotype, and many of them have never been previously printed. It was designed by the director of the Yale University press, Carl Purington Rollins. Only five hundred copies have been printed.

French Club Meets

Le Cercle Francaise, the French club of the University, met for the first time this year at 8:00 o'clock in the Episcopal parish house, with Ben Napier, president, presiding. Peter Hairston was elected secretary of the club.

Professor J. A. Downs, faculty counselor of the club, read two articles from Le Petit Journal, one of these concerning the superstitition about beasts talking on Christmas night, and the other about Christmas mass in Provence.

CHEMICAL FRATERNITY INITIATES SIX STUDENTS

The Alpha Chi Sigma, honorary chemical fraternity, initiated the following six men Friday night: J. O. Turner, J. P. Sanders, Henry Wieland, B. H. Fleming, E. C. Powell and R. C. Pond.

Membership to the Alpha Chi Sigma is one of the highest honors to which chemical students may aspire. The men were chosen for high standards of scholarship, character, and fellowship.

C. C. CRITTENDEN TELLS OF EARLY CAROLINA TRADE

North Carolina Historical Review Publishes Article by University Professor.

Dr. Charles C. Crittenden, of the University History department had the second of his five articles in the North Carolina Historical Review. These articles are a study of the effect of the dangerous coast of Carolina on its trade and growth. His first treatise described the rocky coast minutely, and this one tells of the ships and shipping that went on in spite of the lack of good harbors. The period under observation extends from 1763 through 1789.

"Regardless of the scarcity of safe, deep harbors," says Dr. Crittenden, "ships up to three hundred registered tons were able to trade with North Carolina and so she was not as greatly isolated from commerce as might have been thought. Three hundred tons sound like a considerable weight but when we think of the hundred thousand ton ships of today we realize that these early boats were not at all large.

"The commonest visitors to her ports were the schooner and the sloop. The schooner was a two masted craft, and the average tonnage of this type of vessel was about twenty-three tons. The sloop had but a single mast, although it was much heavier and averaged forty-two tons. These small ships did not attempt to cross the ocean; but engaged in coastwise trade, and sometimes went as far as the West Indies.

"Exceptionally small crews were needed to handle these tiny craft, and oftentimes one or two men were all that were used. It would appear as though boats as little as these would have only a scant carrying capacity. However they transported cargoes all out of proportion to their size.

"Brigs, brigentines, ships, and snows also traded in the Carolina ports. These craft grew gradually larger in the order named. The brigs averaging about ninety-two tons and the largest of the boats, the ships, averaging 140 tons.

"The smaller the harbor was, the smaller was the type of boat that traded there. Since the length of the trip depended on the size of the ship, the craft clearing from the shallower ports made only short voyages and vice versa.

"Ship building was an occupation indulged in less in Carolina than in most of the other colonies. The tonnage for this state in 1769 was one-fourth that of New Hampshire, one thirteenth that of Massachusetts and one-half that of Virginia. In all the thirteen colonies only two averaged building less tonnage than this state.

"The Revolution gave an impetus to the shipbuilding industry and it continued to grow in all the states. The ships built in North Carolina, of the live oak that grew along its coast, soon came to be recognized as the best constructed in this country. The cost of boats built here was a little more than of those built elsewhere, but still they were not beyond the reach of many of the landholders, who had privately owned ships.

"Although influential, shipping never became of primary

Athletics And Politics

Results of the survey conducted by the Richmond News Leader of the role played by politics in the selection of athletic captains in Southern educational institutions show that political influence is seldom felt and that in relatively very few schools is this influence a serious problem. After all, these findings are not revelations, for, judged in the light of our own situation and experience, they are merely what we expected.

Here on our campus—as far as we are able to ascertain—we are not confronted, to any considerable extent, by the problem of control of athletic honors by campus political machines. The University has been fortunate in the past in that it has had so little trouble with politics in athletics.

We must be proud that the University was not named among those institutions in which drastic reform is needed. —B. M.

Not in Order

Several days ago newspapers all over the country carried front page headlines stating that Wickersham's committee had reported to Congress in favor of the Eighteenth Amendment. It was, of course, big news, and the papers wrote it up as such. The people also read the article with great interest. But with how much more delight, rather than mere interest, would this story have been read had it said: "Congress passes bill in aid of famine sufferers"—a thing which is absolutely necessary at the present time.

While the congressmen were discussing the over-discussed question of prohibition, hunger-stricken persons in Oklahoma were raiding a grocery store in search of food; The New England bread lines were steadily increasing; the State of Arkansas was (and still is) suffering from lack of food as never before in its history. Yet these great statesmen, elected by some of the people who were probably at that very time dying of hunger, were receiving money to talk of such a question at such a critical time.

The senators, having passed a bill appropriating $25,000,000 to the Red Cross, were going on about their business with clear consciences. By passing this bill, which it is said will be vetoed by President Hoover, the Senate unconsciously cut down the contributions of the public to the Red Cross. The bill, of course, has not yet passed, but until it is killed, or, if it goes into effect, until it is repealed, the people, when asked to contribute to the Red Cross famine fund, will refuse saying that the senate has already given a big part of their money. Why should they be made to give twice?

Instead of helping the cause the senate has, on the other hand, cut down the funds which would have been gladly contributed. Yet they, having apparently unknowingly done more harm than good, sit back and discuss the Eighteenth Amendment.—C. G. R.

A Challenge!

A professor some time ago said that one of Carolina's greatest curses was the number of unnecessary and uncalled for organizations on the campus. Indeed it might be said that any organization is to a certain extent either a blessing or a curse. There are over four hundred organizations of various types on the campus, but as to what useful functions each of them performs even their members would be at a loss to state. Students seem to have the idea that if they do not affiliate themselves with a number of organizations (whether detrimental or beneficial) their college career is a failure. It is no disgrace not to belong to an organization. On the contrary it is a disgrace to belong to some of them.

However, after a student has joined an organization it is his duty to aid in carrying out its purpose, of course, assuming it has a purpose, and presumably every one of any consequence has. If he discovers that the organization has no useful function and has no constructive aims, then it is his duty himself to waste none of his time with such an aimless body. And by so doing he will perform a valuable service to the campus and future students by aiding in the discontinuance of another of those "orders" which had no reason for beginning and has less reason for continuing.

But if the student should be so fortunate as to find himself a member of one of those few organizations which is striving to obtain a goal and which has a reason for being, then if he doesn't take an active interest in its work, he ought to be kicked out in order to make room for those endowed with more energy and judgment.—J. With Contemporaries

Honor Among Thieves

Coming almost on the heels of President Coffman's decision to appoint a committee of five to discover methods of preventing the theft of final examinations before the examinations are held, is the news of numerous students at the University who were suspended for cheating in the fall quarter final examinations. The students have been reinstated with a grade of failure in the affected courses, but, since the courses in question were required in the students' major sequences, their graduation will be delayed for the space of a year.

Precisely what is to be gained from trickery and deceit in the business of widening and enriching an individual's knowledge? No harm was done the University in the case of these students, for the University's chief concern is not to forestall and to prosecute knavery in its classrooms, but to provide these classrooms, and man them with able and capable instructors. This done, it is clear that the University's mission has been fulfilled.

What gain might have come to these students, had their deception escaped detection? They would have been no richer in learning, for they attempted to circumvent the labors of study by their preconcerted action. They would have added nothing to their name, but they have suffered grievously in the safeguarding of their honor. Their action, if successful, would have made them nothing more than intellectual poseurs. The mastery of a craft or profession does not necessarily accompany a certificate of graduation.

In fine, these students, as in the case of those who stole the examination papers in sociology, gained nothing and lost nearly everything. It is one thing to complete a course with a satisfactory grade which has been awarded as the recompense for study and mastery of the course. It is something else again to complete a course with a satisfactory grade which has been gained only through chicanery and fraud. One represents a distinct achievement, even though the import of that achievement be small. The other is nothing more than an empty shell; a false front.

The existence of fraud in examinations at a modern University is deplorable enough, but the folly and the futility of that fraud is worse. Even a highwayman, if successful, gains a tangible thing. But he who cheats in examinations gains nothing whatever. Where is the profit? —The Minnesota Daily.

Activity Efficiency

On the University of Washington campus, a group of student efficiency experts have devised a revolutionary plan for the handling of student activities. It seems that the modern trend which demands the right man for the right job has impressed these students with the idea that a college campus should be run on the scale of a big business. In short, they want to have a centralized bureau that will handle all appointments to various staffs and committees.

Their motive is to see that no basketball managers turn out to be journalists, and that no writing talent is lost in the mud of some sub-football manager's job. It sounds good. It has all the ear-marks of a very efficient system, but like a lot of theoretical things, it only looks good on paper.

In the first place, how is an ambitious freshman to know whether he is a star reporter in disguise, or a dominating political boss not yet developed when he first comes to college? It is recognized that if a person is to rise to any great prominence in an activity, he must start in on that work as a freshman or at least the early part of his sophomore year.

And then there is a lot of human nature that must be contended with, including the desire of fraternities to perpetuate their control of certain campus jobs and positions.

The University of Washington Daily admits that the idea is a good one, but that it might be a very bad one if politics become an essential part of it. We are waiting, as the Washington Daily is to see just what will happen to this efficiency scheme. If it works, we'll change our minds about efficiency as a campus institution.—Oregon State Barometer.

AT THE CAROLINA

The theatrical bill for this week starts off with "Sunny," Marilyn Miller's second screen production since the musical comedy star deserted the stage for Hollywood. She earned a reputation for herself in "Sally," the first effort, which assured her of a long term contract. The star's dancing in the latter picture attracted great attention, and her dancing in this latest picture is one of its many features, for she does not only dancing with her partner but also a number of solos. Lawrence Gray plays opposite Marylin Miller, and O. P. Heggie and Barbara Bedford are also in the cast.

John Barrymore in "Moby Dick," the talkie revival of the old silent version of Herman Melville's book then called "The Sea Beast," comes to the theatre Tuesday. This book should need no introduction to a college audience, since it is one of the classics of American literature. At the same time John Barrymore needs no introduction either to screen or stage audiences for the famous star was on Broadway and in touring companies for years before he went over to Hollywood. "Moby Dick" contains many realistic shots, among which might be mentioned the chase and conflict with the great white whale, and later the crude amputation of Ahab's (Barrymore) leg which the whale has mutilated. There is a big cast including Joan Bennett, Lloyd Hughes, and Walter Long.

Wednesday sees another of the sophisticated comedies of modern life that have been so popular since the advent of the talkies. This one is "The Boudoir Diplomat," starring Betty Compson. Other comely stars in the feature are Mary Duncan and Jeanette Loff.

Jack Oakie, who has played opposite so many different heroines in the number of pictures made to his credit since he reached the heights of a star, now comes in his latest release, "The Gang Buster," with another new lady (for him) to play opposite—Jean Arthur. In this production the "big chin and grin boy," as he has been called, "takes a crack" at American racketeering.

"Free Love," the feature Friday, brings back to screen audiences the well-known work of Conrad Nagel and introduces for the second time a petite and charming new star, Genevieve Tobin, as the heroine. This lady is one of the distinctive newcomers to the films and even critical Hollywood has been quick to applaud her talent and to predict a brilliant future for her.

The week closes with the showing Saturday of "Top Speed," in which Joe E. Brown and Bernice Claire head the cast. This is another one of those active, fast-moving comedies which have taught movie audiences to appreciate and look forward to the comedy antics of Joe Brown.

Coming at the close of the last Saturday night show, and starting at 10:45 will come the fourth of the pictures brought here in connection with the modern language series. This one will be "The Sea God," a picture laid in the south seas. The feature will be in Spanish and contains an all-Spanish cast.

Teams Have Hard Contests This Week

TAR HEEL QUINT CARDED TO MEET STATE AND DUKE

Boxing Team Goes to Blacksburg for Bouts with Gobblers.

MATMEN VERSUS V. P. I.

Wrestling Team to Make Home Debut in Tin Can Next Saturday.

Carolina athletic teams have a full card ahead of them this week with two events at home and two away. The basketball team will meet both State College and Duke this week for their third and fourth starts against Big Five opposition. The boxing team goes up to Blacksburg, Virginia, Saturday, to meet the Gobbler pugs and the Gobbler wrestlers come here for an engagement on the same date.

All Double Bills

All of the events this week are double bills, the freshmen playing preliminary contests to both basketball games and to the boxing and wrestling engagements.

Program Starts Tuesday

The week's program will get underway Tuesday night at the Tin Can, when the State cagers meet the Tar Heels. This game will have bearing on the outcome of the Big Five race, for the Tar Heels to date have won one and lost one against North Carolina opposition. State on Wednesday night defeated V. P. I., while the Tar Heels lost to the Gobblers Friday. In the state the Red Terrors have dropped a game to Davidson and have beaten Wake Forest.

The real test for the week comes next Saturday night when the quintet goes over to the new Duke gymnasium to meet the Blue Devils. Duke has not lost a game to Big Five opponents since they lost the Southern Conference title to State College in 1929. Carolina will exert every effort to halt the Devils, but the Devils with their Croson and Company will be equally as determined to take the Tar Heels in camp again. The millionaires are the high scoring team of the state up to the present time, and have downed the Navy and Wake Forest. The Maryland five halted them last week when they were on a northern trip, however.

Boxers Take Trip

Coach Rowe and his boxers will pack up Thursday or Friday for their first trip of the year, going up to Blacksburg to meet the Gobbler mit team. Little is known of the strength of V. P. I., but the Tar Heels are expecting to meet some stiff opposition. By Saturday the injured and sick members of the Tar Heel squad should be back in shape barring injury this week, and it is likely that they will be in top form for these fights.

Matmen to Make Home Debut

The wrestling team will make its first home appearance Saturday when the V. P. I. grapplers come here to meet Coach Quinlan's outfit. The matmen have been working hard at the Tin Can since returning from the bouts with the Navy, pointing to the opening home contest, but several of the grapplers have been handicapped by colds, and the team is not in the best of condition.

University of Virginia will play six Southern Conference football games next year in addition to minor games and two invasions of the North to meet Columbia and Harvard.

Seventeen Teams Undefeated In Intramural Cage Race At End Of Second Week Of Play

Due to the entry of five more teams, two of whom have perfect records, the end of the second week of intramural basketball race finds seventeen teams, two more than last week, tied for first place with a perfect record thus far. Graham leads both leagues with four victories and no defeats.

In the dormitory league Graham is closely followed by Ruffin and Aycock, with three victories, New Dorms and Question Marks, with two victories, and the Best House with one win. Three teams, Everett, the Independents, and Mangum, have .500 percentages with two wins and two defeats.

In the fraternity league eleven teams have perfect percentages with the A. T. O.'s, Phi Gam's, and T. E. P.'s leading the way with three victories. Six teams, the Sigma Zeta's, Beta's, K. A.'s, Sigma Chi's, Phi Sig's, and Zeta Psi's, have two games, while the Phi Delt's and Sigma Ep's have won one each. The Deke's and Chi Phi's have percentages of .667, showing two wins and one defeat each to take second place.

The Independents are leading the dormitory league in total scoring with 152 points, although their record shows only two wins as against two losses. Graham and Ruffin are staging a close race for second place with 109 and 105 points respectively, although Graham has played one more game than Ruffin. In individual scoring Cromartie, of the Independents, leads the way to the rest of the field with forty-two points accumulated in three games. Grindstaff, of

ADVANTAGES OF TRACK POINTED OUT BY FETZER

Four Benefits Cited; Foundation For Track Season Laid During Winter Quarter.

Editors Note: This is the first of a series of letters from head coaches of athletics in the University, presenting reasons why there should be campus-wide participation in athletics by students.

Coach Bob Fetzer in the letter which follows calls on the students, "who are not actively engaged in some other form of athletic participation," to come out for track. "Now is the time to report for practice," he says, "for the foundation of the track season is laid during the winter quarter."

It is the policy of the University Athletic Association to conduct training periods in all sports, preliminary to the regular seasons, so that students with undeveloped talent may have an opportunity to perfect their ability prior to the opening of inter-collegiate competition. Off-season drills are now being held in both track and football, and it is with this purpose in mind that Coach Fetzer writes this letter.

To the students of the University:

Track should appeal to every student in the University, who is not already actively engaged in some form of athletic participation. Among other advantages, track athletics offers: first, recreational exercise under the most healthful out-of-door conditions; second, a program including fourteen different events, therefore, an event for practically any physical or tempermental qualification; third, an opportunity for the development of the individual; fourth, a sport in which you can make your practice hours conform to your own schedule; and finally a sport in which the "sky is the limit," where you can measure your ability and skill with the performances of the world's best athletes.

We need men in all the fourteen events. If you have the interest and enthusiasm, the patience and persistence, and the determination to work hard even in the face of discouragements, you are practically assured of success in track athletics.

But, now is the time to report for practice. The foundation of the track season is laid during the winter quarter. In addition to the necessity of starting now for the spring season, the Southern Conference Indoor Meet which will be held at the University on March 7th, offers a real objective for winter work.

TAR HEELS TAKE UP HEAVY WORK ON GRID MONDAY

Initial Scrimmage Probably To Get Underway Wednesday; Schedule to Follow.

The well known blues of spring football—initial heavy work—will face the Tar Heels as the second week of spring football is ushered in Monday afternoon.

"Get your injuries tapped up, men, because we're going to start heavy work Monday," was Collins' final admonition to the squad Friday, stating also that a repiste would be granted Saturday.

Turning out Wednesday for the initial call, ninety-odd gridders have been sent through limbering up exercises and the fundamentals of pass receiving and shifting through the week.

The most notable change seen in the present Carolina system was effected Thursday when the Notre Dame shift was added to the present backfield curricula. Though Collins was noncommital as to the use that the shift would see through next fall, it will be used and practiced extensively through spring work. It is probable that the system will be installed, pending its effectiveness during the spring practice.

First scrimmage sessions will probably be conducted Wednesday, after which teams will be chosen and the regular spring schedule begun.

From the ninety candidates, four or six teams will be formed, given names and plays of Carolina opponents, and pitted against each other in weekly games over a period of six or eight weeks.

LIPSCOMB GIVEN AWARD FOR ALL-AMERICA CHOICE

In recognition of mention on the 1930 All-American football team, Ned Lipscomb, Carolina center, received yesterday from the All-American board a card verifying the selection.

Lipscomb, along with Johnny Branch, and Jim Magner, represented the Tar Heels in this year's selection, the three being listed for honorable mention in the south.

The board responsible for the selection of the team included: Howard Jones, Knute Rockne, W. A. Alexander, and several prominent coaches and grid enthusiasts.

BOTH TAR HEEL BOXING TEAMS DEFEAT CADETS

Varsity Wins Six to One, Taking Three of the Fights by Knockouts.

FROSH GET 4-3 DECISION

Coach Rowe's Men in Excellent Form; Biggs Loses After Putting Up Hard Fight.

Packing murder with their punches, the Tar Heel varsity and freshman boxing teams captured a double bill from the V. M. I. Cadets at the Tin Can last night, the varsity winning 6-1, and the freshmen leading 4-3.

The freshmen won two fights by knockouts, and the varsity copped three bouts by the K. O. method.

In the bantamweight bout in which boys mixed it up freely, Duane (V. M. I.) rallied in the final round to take the verdict from Biggs.

Levinson (U. N. C.) won hands down to take the decision from Captain Buck (V. M. I.) in the featherweight class. The V. M. I. captain was groggy throughout the third round but Levinson was unable to put him away.

Captain Goodridge gave the Tar Heels a 2-1 lead by easily defeating Doyle in the lightweight thriller. Goodridge repeated last week's performance by refusing to knock out Doyle.

Dale Holderness made an auspicious debut being awarded a technical knockout over Eppes (V. M. I.) in the second round, the referee stopping the fight. The Tar Heel welter floored Eppes in the opening session but the bell saved him.

Obie Davis took the middleweight fight from Mason by a technical knockout in the third round as the V. M. I. seconds threw in the towel. Davis' win clinched the engagement for the Tar Heels, making the score 4-1.

Hugh Wilson was awarded a technical K. O. in the second round over Dunn (V. M. I.), a light-heavyweight. After a torrid first session, Wilson came back to knock Dunn out of the ring, and punishing him with body blows before Mr. Short awarded the fight to the Tar Heel.

John Warren, heavyweight, made his 1931 debut by easily taking the verdict over Gill (V. M. I.)

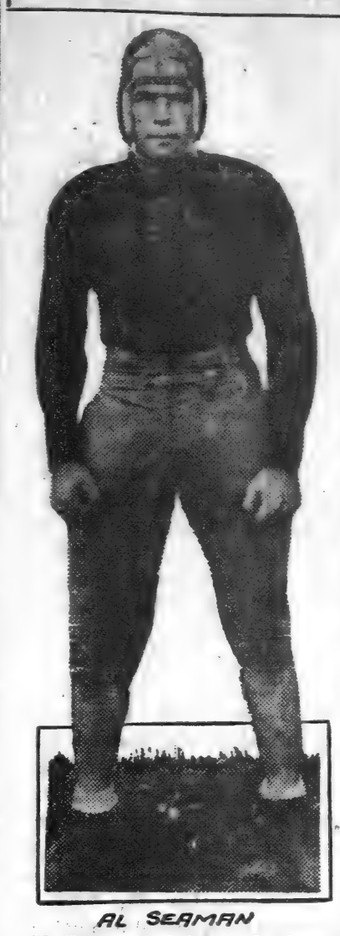
Freshmen Win 4-3

The Tar Babies opened their season successfully last night at the Tin Can, defeating the V. M. I. freshman, 4-3. These bouts were the preliminaries to the varsity match with the Cadets.

Rogers, bantam for V. M. I., took a close decision from Glover.

Raymer, Tar Heel feather, furnished the fans with the first knock-out of the season, finishing Allport of V. M. I. with a right hook in the second round.

Bain, V. M. I., hammered his way to a close decision over Langdon in the lightweight division.



Hudson, N. C., easily took the verdict from Ragland, flooring Ragland for a count of nine in the final round and had the Cadet groggy as the fight ended.

Wadsworth, N. C., southpaw middleweight, lost a close decision to Truott. Both boys stood toe-to-toe and slugged away from start to finish.

Brown, of Carolina, knocked out Spalding, V. M. I., in the third round. This bout tied the score at 3 all.

Pace, heavyweight, beat Dixon of V. M. I. to take the meet. The final score was 4-3.

STAR CAGER

AL SEAMAN

Al Seaman (pictured above) and Ben Palmer were largely responsible for the Gobblers' defeating the Tar Heels Friday night. Seaman kept Sandy Dameron well covered during the game, but was removed near the end because of four personal fouls. Palmer scored six field goals in the contest. This picture was taken last fall when he was playing stellar ball at one of the flanks on the V. P. I. football team.

Over Emphasis Of Football Is Fault Of Crowd

Barry Wood, Harvard quarterback and captain for 1931, believes that big crowds are the reason for over emphasis of football. Wood in addition to being a letterman in football, baseball, tennis and hockey is also a Phi Beta Kappa man.

"Most of Harvard's overemphasis," Wood said, "can be found in the stadium and not down on the playing field. Graduates and other supporters of the Harvard team are even more disturbed about the outcome of a game than the players themselves, most of whom play for the fun of the the game."

Wood, a level headed and clear thinking player, who as forward passer ranks next to the incomparable Bennie Friedman, has no illusions about football. Though it is just a game, a source of pleasure to him, he has made an extensive study of it. As a quarterback he knows the coach's viewpoint as well as that of the player. He is convinced that neither is seriously affected by so-called overemphasis.

Wood blames the spectators for most of the game's irksome features, for the looker-on, he charges, is responsible for the unwholesome fact that college football players compete under a greater mental strain than do members of other sport teams.

"The pressure on a player," he explained, "is greater in football than in any other sport because a gridiron mistake is generally much more costly than an error in baseball or a slip in hockey. Too often the player who muffs a forward or fumbles is harshly judged by the crowd and forced to bear a heavy share of the blame for a defeat."

MORE HARD LUCK INVADES U. N. C. WRESTLING CAMP

Marion Cowper Confined to Infirmary With Flu Since Navy Meet.

ALBRIGHT INJURES BACK

Dependable Veteran Is Being Treated Daily to Get in Shape for V. P. I. Card.

Just when everything was beginning to look rosy for him, Coach Chuck Quinlan ran into some more hard luck with his varsity grapplers. Two of his first string men, Mayne Albright and Marion Cowper, have been forced out of work for an indefinite length of time.

Soon after the team returned from the Navy meet Cowper went down with influenza and has not been able to workout at all this week. Cowper's absence will be felt keenly for the veteran 175 pounder has looked good in both his matches this winter and is being depended on for his share of the points against the strong Southern Conference teams who will be met during the remainder of the season.

Albright, another dependable veteran, suffered an injury to his back Thursday and his been unable to do more than take light exercises since. The injury is being treated daily and it is hoped that he will be in shape again for the V. P. I. meet.

Coach Quinlan hopes to have both boys ready to throw against the Gobblers, but may find it necessary to use two untried men in his line up. In the 135 pound class, C. H. Allison will probably replace Albright, although there is a possibility that Coach Quinlan will make some other shift. Allison is a holdover from last year's squad and has been showing up well this winter.

Should Cowper fail to regain his old form in time for the Gobbler meet, Fred Ferguson, veteran, will probably be brought down to Cowper's class with Ken Hampton going into the unlimited division. Ferguson has not been weighing much above the 175 pound limit and should have very little trouble getting down to weight. Hampton, Ferguson's alternate in the unlimited class has been showing up well, but lacks experience.

The rest of the squad has shown improved form during the past week and are in good condition. Percy Idol has recovered from his cold, while Captain Stallings, Harry Tsumas, Pete Usher, and Don Conklin continue to look good.

Purdue lost Murphy, Boots and Harmeson from the championship basketball team of last year but still has Johnny Wooden, all-American floor guard.

Cornell, for the first time in its football history, was victorious over both Pennsylvania and Princeton, has only awarded 16 letters to its record-breaking squad. Of this number only four went to backs, an unusual situation under the present rules.

Sub-Assistant Managers

All freshmen wishing to compete for sub-assistant managerships of football will meet at the field house in Kenan Stadium Monday at three o'clock.

Carolina Club

Professor S. H. Hobbs, Jr., of the rural social economics department, will speak before the North Carolina Club tomorrow night at seven-thirty o'clock on "North Carolina as an Agricultural State." This meeting is open to the public.

Concert Postponed

The concert announced last Sunday to be given by Professor and Mrs. T. Smith McCorkle in Music Hall for this afternoon has been postponed one week due to illness in the McCorkle family.

Wrestling Managerships

All freshmen and sophomores who wish to try for managerships in wrestling report to Wallace Case at the Tin Can Monday afternoon at four o'clock.

Law Classes

Classes in the law school for the next semester will begin on February 3 instead of February 2, as was previously reported.

NEW PUBLICATION FOR NEGRO RACE

The colored race now has a publication of, by, and for themselves. Abbott's Monthly is the name of the periodical, the first number of which was issued last fall. It has ninety-six pages of reading matter, catering to people in all walks of life and, as claimed, marks an epoch not only in negro publications but in the whole publication field. Nothing like it was ever published before. The cover is done in colors and the magazine itself rates with the best published today.

Six weeks before its advent, The Chicago Defender, a negro journal, carried some inside facts regarding the magazine. One issue of The Defender published notices pertaining to the various stories that appeared in the initial number.

Well known writers, artists, and cartoonists of the negro race are employed with the epoch-making publication. Among them are The Chicago Defender's cartoonists and artists, Ray St. John and Daniel Day. It is illustrated with full page pictures on timely topics. It is published by the Robert S. Abbott Publishing Co., Chicago.

The leading article in the October issue is "Why I Won't Marry," a bachelor's confession, by Nathan B. Hopkins who answers this question in an interesting and clever way. "The Green Pastures," a prize-winning drama, is another feature. A discussion on two former negro actresses is also interesting. "Uncle Sam's Inequity Policy in the Virgin Islands," coming from a representative of the colored race, is a very frank narrative of conditions in that locality.

WESTINGHOUSE SENDS APPLICATION BLANKS

The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Corporation has sent a number of interview blanks to Professor J. E. Lear, of the electrical engineering department, for distribution to his senior students. Westinghouse has in the past generally dispatched a representative here to follow up the information gathered from the blanks by personal interviews.

The Eastern Intercollegiate wrestling tournament will be staged at Yale, March 13 and 14.

BILL FOR RELIEF WORK IS TABLED BY LOWER HOUSE

Red Cross Chairman Says Organization Needs Replenished Funds for Emergencies.

The House of Representatives has postponed indefinitely action on the Senate's $25,000,000 appropriation for Red Cross relief work, and the measure will be referred to the appropriations committee for investigation. It is thought that when the proposal is ready for action, the result of the $10,000,000 campaign will be known.

John Barton Payne, chairman of the central committee, says that the need for the $10,000,000 relief fund is very great. In a recent statement concerning Red Cross finances, Judge Payne asserted that unless the national organization maintained large reserves it would be unable to cope with sudden emergencies, and for that reason the reserve fund must be kept replenished.

The annual report, which was made November 30, 1930, explained the financial condition of the Red Cross. It has an endowment fund and reserve permanently invested of $11,253,000, the income of which is for current use. There is a disaster fund of $5,000,000 which has been appropriated for this drought relief and of which over a million dollars has already been expended.

The Red Cross holds $1,734,000 with which to meet obligations to disabled ex-service men and women of the World War; a fund of $850,000 supplemented by an appropriation from Congress to replace the war-time frame office building; restricted funds of $158,000; a remaining $4,658,000 to safeguard other obligations such as public health, first aid and life saving, and the work for the men now serving in regular Army and Navy. Judge Payne stated that the reserves of the Red Cross had been greatly depleted during the last few years and that it cannot continue forever and still be prepared for emergencies.

Among the others cooperating in the work for the campaign, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has issued an appeal to the Protestant Churches to join in the campaign through local chapters.

The Right Reverend Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, has recently urged the Catholic press to make a special appeal to aid in the campaign.

PART SENSE AND PART NON-SENSE

Harvard Downs Yale

Harvard University defeated Yale University in a new sport at the Metropolitan theatre in Boston Thursday night by a very close score. The decision has been protested.

During the performance of Rudy Vallee, crooning orchestra leader who is loved by every woman and hissed by every man, members of the audience arose in their seats and hurled overripe hen-fruit at the curly-haired favorite while he was singing. The names of the students could not be learned, but it is understood that they were from Harvard. Yale is the alma mater of Vallee.

Since none of the fruit actually hit Vallee, Yale claims that the game was not lost. Harvard claims a victory however, on the grounds that the drummer was smeared with the "overripe hen-fruit." It is not known whether or not a return engagement will be held to settle the dispute.

STUDENT HEALTH IS GUARDED AT YALE UNIVERSITY

In a report made to President James Rowland Angell, of Yale University, by Dr. James C. Greenway, director of the department of university health of that institution, the latter explains how Yale University guards the health of its students. This department has general supervision of student health and a medical examination by its staff is required of each student at least once every year.

The medical service not only takes care of communicable diseases and various other illnesses such as appendicitis and muscle strains but also extends its supervision to mental hygiene, nutrition of underweight and overweight students, orthopedic corrections and the use of physical therapy.

Much attention is being given to the mental health of students. An effort has been made during the year to amplify and improve the mental hygiene technique used in the routine health survey of new students. More adequate methods of recording the interviews of the students by the psychiatrist have been put into operation, and more systematic methods of follow-up are being developed.

Students who are ten per cent underweight or ten per cent overweight are given individual instruction in nutrition. The basal metabolic rates of students in the nutrition groups are determined and studied carefully. In regard to appendicitis Dr. Greenway says, "There is evidence of an increased appreciation on the part of the students of the possible significance of even a slight abdominal pain and greater promptness on their part in securing surgical advice."

"The educational value of these contacts with students and their familiarity with mental and physical hygiene will have a tremendous indirect influence as these students leave the University and assume positions of leadership," states Dr. Greenway.

MEN OF SCIENCE PRAISE LATEST EINSTEIN THEORY

Distinguished Physicists Hear Famous German's United Field Belief.

A key to the innermost secrets of nature was presented to a class of distinguished physicists and mathematicians at Pasedena, California, Wednesday by Albert Einstein in the latest and greatest creation of his world-famed brain, the unified field theory.

Theoretical physicists proclaimed it the most simple theory that will explain all the secrets of space and of the universe. Mathematicians find it the most gigantic problem ever presented them.

The thirty listeners in the little class room where the scientist lectured included Richard Chace Tolman, physicist mathematician; Dr. Paul S. Epstein, theoretical physicist; and Dr. E. T. Bell, mathematician.

Talking in German one hour and half, Einstein demonstrated on the blackboard in the international shorthand language of higher mathematical symbols, string after string of equations that finally evolved one little group which brought forth gasps of astonishment.

The equation for the theory of relativity contained ten unknown quantities, four of which had to be assumed. This greater puzzle contains sixteen unknown quantities with four assumed.

Einstein explained that the fundamental equation is presented for mathematicians to proceed and work out equations for experimental work. Experimental proof of his unified filed theory is already at hand, he revealed, in its application to laboratory results with weak electro-magnetic and gravitational fields. More work remains to be done experimentally with stronger fields in those lines.

TEACHERS MEET TO OFFER CHANGES IN COLLEGE SYSTEMS

A group of prominent educators who met at Winter Park, Florida, last week to plan reforms in college courses expressed divergent views about how much a student should have to say about the course of study offered him.

Dr. Joseph K. Hart of Vanderbilt University said that students of today are victims of many words and their opinions are not real, but conditioned by former educational processes.

Dr. James Harvey Robinson of New York City said young people of twenty-two are twice as mature today as they were in his youth at a similar age, and their opinions should be considered.

Fifteen teachers considered a paper of "fourteen points" proposed by Dr. Goodman Watson, Columbia University, and which he asserts should be made the basis for a new course of study.

Among the "fourteen points" to be discussed are: economic organization of the world, home, love, sex, national and international relations, race relationships, mental and physical health, public opinion and propaganda, law, government, recreation, aesthetic values of life, religion, and the integration of all these into a working plan.

If this nation is not full of class-conscious young men, the sophomores have not been doing their duty by the freshmen.—Arkansas Gazette.

importance in North Carolina. Many ships came to grief on her shores. Too much emphasis has been laid on the difficulties of trading here, and not enough stress has been put on the advancement that was made in spite of this. Not until later, when larger ships were used was this hardship so keenly felt.

"Even in that day and time passenger service was offered on the boats. The accommodations were usually very poor and the traveler labored under great difficulties. Despite the fact that the speed of water travel depended largely upon weather, type and age of boat, weight of cargo, and skill of the captain and crew; it was still much faster than any of the ways of land travel. The trip from New York to New Bern was regularly accomplished in from four to five days."

Seventeen Teams Are Undefeated In Cage Championship Race

Graham, and Rollins, of the Independents, are tied for second place with twenty-eight points each. In the fraternity league the A. T. O.'s, in three games, have scored a total of ninety-five points, closely followed by the K. A.'s with eighty-two points accumulated in two games. Individual scoring honors go to Oliver, K. A. center, with twenty-nine points, closely followed by Wells, of the same team, with twenty-two points, and Smith, of the A. T. O.'s with twenty-four points.

New Records Set

Two new high scoring records were set this week, both coming in the Independent vs. Ranson House game last Wednesday. The Independents set a new team scoring record defeating the Ranson House by a 75-18 score. The previous high score was made by the A. T. O.'s with fifty-nine points. In the same game Cromartie set a new individual scoring record for this season with twenty-one points, beating Allen Smith, of the A. T. O.'s by one point.

Unique Occurrence

Unique in the annals of intramural basketball was the game between the Sigma Zeta's and Theta Chi's Friday afternoon, which was finally won by the Sigma Zeta's by a score of 11-5 At the half the score stood at 4-3 in favor of the Sigma Zeta's, with the third quarter ending at 5-3, Feit dropping in a free toss for the only score.

New Dorms suffered a severe setback when "Bo" Sheppard ruled that Dunlap, star forward, was ineligible, ruling that the Best House came under the same regulations as any dormitory and that Dunlap could play only for them.

Another ruling, this time by Mac Gray, forfeited the game between the Phi Kap's and the Sigma Phi Sigma's to the Sigma Phi Sigma's ruling that Markham, of the Phi Kap's, was not eligible due to the fact that he had participated in a varsity game.

CAROLINA NEEDS FEWER FARMERS SAYS DR. HOBBS

Larger Farms Also Needed Says Rural Economics Professor Before N. C. Club.

Professor S. H. Hobbs, Jr., of the University department of rural social economics, spoke before the North Carolina Club in its meeting last night in the library room of the department, on the subject "North Carolina as an Agricultural State."

"North Carolina is recognized as an important industrial state," said Professor Hobbs, "yet she remains one of the most rural and agricultural of all the states." According to the 1930 census North Carolina has 279,723 farms and only two other states have more than this. More than half of the state's population live on farms, while the rural ratio-farm and small towns under 2,500 is 74.5 per cent, and only five states have larger ratios.

Dr. Hobbs was of the opinion that there is enormous room for agricultural expansion in North Carolina for although North Carolina ranks twenty-eighth in size and third in farms, only one fifth of the state is actually devoted to crop production. North Carolina is a state of small farms with the cultivated acres per farm averaging twenty—the smallest in the United States—and they are getting smaller.

Professor Hobbs further stated that nearly one third of our farms are operated by negro farmers, North Carolina having the largest increase in the number of negro farmers of any state in the Union since 1915.

"North Carolina is primarily a non-food cash crop state," continued Professor Hobbs. "Crops are relatively more important in our system of agriculture than in any other state. Before the Civil War, North Carolina was self-feeding. Since the Civil War the state has imported much of her food and has concentrated on cash crops, mainly cotton and tobacco. We usually rank around sixth or seventh in the production of crops and about eighteenth in production of livestock. Since the North Carolina farms are small, the production per farm is small; hand methods instead of machinery are used."

In discussing North Carolina as a livestock state, Dr. Hobbs stated that she ranks at or near the bottom. Although the state it well suited to livestock farming, the chance of making ready cash from cotton and tobacco farming have put livestock farming in a low position.

The speaker gave as the reasons for small farms in North Carolina, the low farm income and the small wealth per farm these things: farm tenancy, cash crop farming, large ratio of negro farmers, hand methods of farming, enormous expenditures for fertilizer and the low level of intelligence for a large per cent of our farm population.

Concluding, he stated the need of North Carolina in an agricultural way thus: "We need larger farms and probably fewer farmers, more livestock and live-at-home farming generally, better marketing methods, more cooperation between town and country people, and above all a larger ratio of home and farm ownership."

THREE BILLS ON SENATE CALENDAR

The following bills are on the calendar of the Dialectic Senate to be discussed at the meeting tonight at 7 o'clock.

1. Resolved: That, the Di Senate go on record as favoring the public ownership of all basic industries, such as public utilities, iron and steel manufacturing, coal mining, textile and tobacco manufacturing.

2. Resolved: That, the Di Senate go on record as favoring the sending of a unit of the National guard to protect the strikers' jobs at the Danville mills.

3. Resolved: the student body has too little part in the management of student affairs and in the control of extra-curricula activities.

OLD HITCH-HIKER GIVES VIEWS ON THIS GENERATION

Seventy-Nine Year Old Patriarch Believes This a Most Irreligious Age.

(By C. C. E.)

I was interested to see Sunday afternoon, a very quaint character in the line of students who were, as per usual, bumming their way to Durham. He was dressed in the uniform that was used in that never to be forgotten war that was fought by our grandfathers sixty-five years or more ago. He wore spectacles, and a long white beard flowing in the wind gave him a patriarchal appearance.

I approached out of curiosity, and asked in the conventional way how bumming was. I found him to be a very fluent conversationalist, and highly interesting. His home, he said, was in Durham, and he was waiting for someone that he knew to come along and give him a ride.

Turning around, he ran his finger along the name of Jefferson Davis that marks the highway and remarked that he had a piece of money that Jeff Davis made. I expressed a curiosity to see it, and he very obligingly showed it to me, not only a two dollar bill of old Confederate money which was good only in North Carolina, but also a ten-cent bill. Both of which he was very proud of. He said that he was close enough to hear the guns fire, but was too young for active fighting, being in the junior camp "when they hollered quit." He didn't receive any pension, but thought he should have.

By this time he had a pretty large audience, so when I asked him for his opinion of the younger generation, he was ready and anxious to expound on the subject, using the Bible as a guide. Giving exact chapters and verse, he substantiated each of his statements." They are more wicked; more dissipated than they were in the days of Sodom and Gomarrh." Religion, he said was woefully lacking in his home town. "Why," he said, "If you could rake together all the religion in Durham, you could put it in the bill of a humming bird, and if the humming bird were to blow it into the eye of a flea, the flea wouldn't even hop." Cuffs on pants, he said were useless, and were an expense while the dress of the modern flapper was shameless and had caused to be established a silk stocking, bobbed hair reli-

RED CROSS ASKS TEN MILLION FOR DROUGHT RELIEF

Chapel Hill Chapter Has $600 Quota to Contribute to National Fund.

Contributions to the Red Cross relief fund by the Chapel Hill chapter now total over $150. The quota for this chapter is $600. J. Hyde Pratt, chairman of the chapter, stated that they hoped to get everybody to contribute something if the amount is small. It is his opinion that if the people could realize the extent of the drought disaster they would be willing to contribute. Contributions may be left at the "M" System store, Eubanks Drug store, the Bank, with Mr. Hill at the consolidated service plant, and with Mr. Hyde Pratt.

John Barton Payne, national chairman of the American Red Cross, has described the drought disaster as the greatest peace time emergency with which the Red Cross has had to cope. The drought has reduced the finest American families to want. Drought, being beyond human prevention, caught good farmers as well as poor farmers. Streams went dry, stock died, fields dried up and at last families entered upon the long, slow process of starvation.

Great organizations which are supporting the Red Cross in the relief work are: the Federal Council of Churches, the Knights of Columbus, the National Catholic Women of America, the National Catholic Welfare Council, the Jewish Welfare Bodies, D. A. R., and the American Legion Women's Auxiliary. The radio broadcasting systems are forwarding the campaign through their programs: National broadcasting systems, Columbia broadcasting system, and the United broadcasting system.

Lending aid, also, are the National Council of Social Work, the Association of Community Chests and Councils, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and the American Federation of Labor. The Veterans of Foreign Wars, also through their commander in chief, Paul C. Wolman, pledged aid to the relief campaign.

At present contributions to the national relief fund of $10,000,000 total $2,135,000 and relief work has to go on in

McIntosh Gives Views On Proposed Cuts

In an interview with a Daily Tar Heel reporter, C. E. McIntosh, of the school of education, stated his solution to the foremost problem confronting employees of the state.

"The Governor says a 10% cut in the salaries of state and county employees will save approximately $4,000,000. If these figures are correct, the present salaries of these employees will aggregate about $40,000,000.

"The Reynolds Tobacco Co. says it cleared last year more than $34,000,000. How would it do to ask the Reynolds Company to forego dividends for a period of one year, and donate this sum to pay the employees of the state on the basis of their present salaries?

"The taxes of the state could thus be lowered, and a year hence business would again be on a boom."

NEW BOOK CLUB FOR ALUMNI HAS GROWN RAPIDLY

Number of Subscribers Has Doubled in the Last Two Weeks.

The alumni book club, initiated in October by University faculty, alumni office, University library and the extension library service, reports that within the last two weeks its subscribers have more than doubled. This would indicate that the club has merged from an experimental state to take its place among the few satisfactory methods of book circulation for post-diploma education.

In the two months of its existence many leading educational authorities have been attracted by its unique methods. Several publications have contained articles praising the growth this club has made. The conductors of the alumni book club have received letters from almost all of their subscribers, in which the books and the manner in which the books were circulated were highly praised.

The public library of Washington, D. C., has written J. Maryon Saunders, one of the originators and conductors of the club, offering to cooperate with the club and lend books to the alumni in Washington. This library has made it a policy to aid in every possible way to carry on education among the older groups after they have left college.

The club makes available what its conductors think the best and most recent literature, philosophy, economics, sociology, history and the sciences. Every month it circulates a list of books for that month among University alumni, their families and friends.

Each book is mailed out to the borrower, and along with it a commentary by some member of the University faculty. The commentary is not a book review. It is written by one especially interested in the subject, and is designed to evaluate the book to the reader and to furnish information about the author.

The list of subscribers extends from Florida to New Jersey. From all these places the members of the club send let-

Shreve Discusses Student Activities

Clyde E. Shreve, University varsity debater, spoke over WBIG, Greensboro broadcasting station, Friday night, January 23, from seven-thirty to seven-forty-five. His speech took the form of student activities and organizations. Student organizations were divided into four main groups: publications, athletics, debating and social activities.

Pointing out the value of extra curricular activities, the speaker was of the opinion that participation in the various branches of campus life is indispensable towards becoming a well-rounded graduate. In stating this, Shreve called attention to some of the prominent men of the state and nation who were student leaders during their college life. The varsity debater concluded his address by giving an outline of the mechanical features of debating, athletics, publications, dramatics, and social functions.

PHI INVESTIGATING N. C. BUS SERVICE

The following bills will be discussed by the Phi Assembly tonight:

1. Resolved: That the Phi Assembly is of the opinion that public highway bus service in North Carolina and commercial freight hauling by motor vehicles in the state should be thoroughly and impartially investigated, all the facts found to be submitted to each member of the 1933 General Assembly at least sixty days before that body convenes.

2. Resolved: That the Phi Assembly go on record as favoring a full, impartial investigation and study by some legally authorized body of the production, distribution and costs of electrical power in North Carolina.

COLLEGES URGED TO MAKE APPEAL TO LEGISLATORS

State Student Federation Trying to Make Legislature Give Institutions Proper Aid.

In view of the fact that the appropriation committee of the legislature is this week considering appropriations for state institutions the North Carolina Student Federation has determined upon a definite policy of cooperation with the administrations of the state supported institutions in an effort to induce the legislature to be more liberal in their appropriations to the state institutions.

John Lang, president of the North Carolina Student Federation, has sent letters to the student president of every state supported institution in North Carolina calling upon them to use their efforts in arousing a student movement to induce the legislature to continue a progressive program of education in the state.

An open forum letter, stating the present financial distress of state institutions and calling upon students to cooperate with their respective college administrations in an effort to get relief from the present situation has been mailed by Lang to the student publications of every state institution. In this letter a request was made of those students who had friends in the legislature to write or visit them and inform them of the financial needs of our public institutions.

A letter has been dispatched from the executive staff of the North Carolina Student Federation to the chairman of the legislature appropriation committee asking his committee's cooperation in helping the state institutions obtain the proper financial assistance with which to continue their normal growth and progress.

Extension Division Offers New Course

The first class in beginner's French, conducted by the Extension Division, meets in Room 314 Murphey, at 4:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. This class is for town people and those of the University who desire a reading knowledge of French. No examination nor credit is given for work in this course.

The class will meet once a week for eighteen weeks, at a time to be decided upon by the class.

LELAND STANFORD HAS ALWAYS HAD CLASS PRIVILEGES

Kentucky University and Dartmouth Also Believe in Optional Attendance.

Stanford University, the University of Kentucky, as well as Dartmouth College have been added to the rapidly growing list of institutions of higher learning in the United States which offer voluntary attendance to student members.

In a long letter Dean P. P. Boyd, dean of the college of liberal arts and sciences at the University of Kentucky, informs the special student committee here commissioned by the Central Administrative Council to conduct a nation-wide survey on the subject that "Juniors and seniors who have made a high standing the previous semester, are exempt from penalties for absences. Good students in the upper division are eligible for Independent Work courses, in which students report to the instructor once a week. Seniors in their last semester are exempt from examinations if their standings are high.

"In the Independent Work there is no doubt that the arrangement is good. As to the amount of initiative permitted to students in class work and in connection with university control, I may say that we are trying to promote greater freedom and initiative among juniors and seniors both in type of course and in methods of instruction."

Karl M. Cowdery, registrar at Leland Stanford University, has written that, "Optional attendance has been more or less in effect through the history of Stanford University. The Administration has had the policy that, if a student is able to carry the work and complete satisfactorily the necessary preparation for final examination and for required papers, they are not concerned with whether or not the student has attended class.

Stanford University goes farther in student independence than any other institution which has replied to the optional attendance letters. Cowdery says, "As indicated in our information Bulletin, a copy of which is being sent you separately, we have a plan of independent study available to superior students who wish to work out an individual program in which they work independently, either with or without class attendance, and with a minimum of detailed supervision."

From the December issue of the Dartmouth College Bulletin has come detailed information in regard to how that institution handles the class attendance question. "Men in the honors group," the Bulletin says, "shall not be held to the ordinary rules of attendance. All students who, at the end of their sophomore year have attained a general average of 2.6, and such others as have attained a high average in the department in which their major is selected and who have received the recommendation of their department and the Committee on Educational Policy, may if they so elect, constitute an honors group for special treatment. Such men, so far as the facilities of the department and the best interests of the students under its charge allow, shall be treated as befits their individual needs and as their

Shifting The Burden

Over in Raleigh last night the House discussed, debated and probably passed the McLean resolution which is designed to shift the burden of maintaining the public school system from the counties to the State. Little opposition to the measure was expected in the House. More opposition, however, is expected when the measure is passed on to the Senate. The senators are anxious to discover the whereabouts of the necessary revenue.

While favoring the plan of shifting the maintenance of the schools from the counties to the State, we fail to understand how this measure will solve the problem. Before the State can assume the huge burden of maintaining the public schools of North Carolina, enough revenue must be found to meet its present operating expenses taking an $18,000,000 expense account from the counties and putting it on the State will present a problem which the best tax experts in this state will puzzle over. The problem of control of this school system must also be solved. The McLean measure offers no solution of these two questions. It merely shifts the burden from the counties to the State without telling the State how it is to maintain these schools or who is to control them.

Apparently the measure is designed to relieve the counties of a tax problem. But does it solve a problem demanding immediate attention—that of providing the State with enough revenue to meet its operating expenses? If the legislators are anxious to solve this tax problem let them first discover enough revenue to operate the State and to operate the school system. Then, if they wish to shift the expense, they may do so. The present bill is inadequate. It does the transferring without providing the shoulders on which it may be placed.

Still The Burning Question!

Those who paint the younger generation as being so much superior to the one whose span is passing, like so many zealots overlook the fact, aside from our becoming a little more humanitarian, that we—either the young or the old—are still divided into conservatives as opposed to liberals, into the phlegmatic and the coleric, and into the tolerant and the intolerant. The provinces of the mind have changed their boundaries and subjects but little in the past two thousand years. We can point with pride to our mechanical development, but excepting our accumulated culture, we have made little progress mentally.

It is with regret that we read an editorial by one of our contemporaries—one of the most able writers the Tar Heel has ever had—the tone of which was the epitome of exactly what the writer decried. His brief was for optional attendance and he demanded that the faculty act immediately. The whole student case with the faculty, as we see it, rests on the fact that under compulsion and force there exists no spirit of co-operation. When the students of the University presume to demand something it strikes us that there is no co-operation—no friendly feeling. We believe that when the student body demands something of the faculty, that in order to save their very faces that small group among the faculty which generally wants the entire faculty to "show those young scamps where they belong" can do no other thing but oppose the student move or desire. After all, they are perfectly and intellectually honest in taking such a stand, as we do not believe that there is a single student in the University who delights in having the faculty demand that they attend class for instance. The whole idea of modern education rests on a foundation of mutual co-operation.

Students and faculties everywhere have been much concerned with curricula, methods, and educational ideas for the past several years as attested to by the Harvard House Plan, the Dartmouth Plan, the Antioch Plan, the Hutchins Plan, the Rollins College Plan, the Miekeljohn College Plan, and the Mills Project.

For one thing, educators are beginning to admit the fact that students are maturer than they have ever been in this country. Dr. James Harvey Robinson says, "Young people of twenty-two are twice as mature and twice as capable of making up their own minds as they were when I went to school, and, further, I believe that their opinions bear enough weight to be considered." The staff of the Daily Tar Heel, and the students of the University through a straw vote, are one in the opinion that students today are more mature and that this condition will not change. In other words we believe that when we ask for voluntary class attendance for juniors and seniors we are not only asking for ourselves but for all those who will follow us, who it is reasonable to assume will be more sophisticated and mature than we who have started the movement.

During a faculty life-time they are witnesses to an endless succession of student protests, each student generation having different viewpoints. Any faculty man who believes that he is justified in ignoring most student storms can do just that, since student generations are so short-lived. But the wisest take cognizance of those student moves, sincerely initiated and soundly based. The move on the part of the student body for voluntary class attendance is such a movement. The student body today is asking for what each succeeding student generation will expect and desire. This is still "the burning question."

Side-line Athletes

Few of the boys on the campus could have gone to see the boxing meet Saturday night and not have come away with some very definite ambitions as to his own physical condition. Besides being shown some very excellent boxing by Coach Rowe's men, the students were treated to one of the prettiest examples of conditioning in one of the varsity fights that we have ever seen. Ambitions for strength and condition used to come to the high school boy after the local movie performance with the result of punching bags and black-eyes distributed around the neighborhood for a while. Ambition for at least partial physical condition should come to all normal Carolina boys who witnessed this last boxing match.

A short time ago athletics in Southern schools were a privilege for the few and the many sat in the stands and cheered between quaffs. Fine sport indeed. Under the leadership of the Pacific Coast athletic directors this former conception of athletics has been almost entirely done away with. With an excellent system of intramural athletics resulting here at Carolina, every man in school who is not absolutely physically disabled should take part in some form of sport to keep himself the man he should be. As yet, intramural athletics here at the University have not reached the men who need it most.

One of the city editors of a paper in a southern university town came out not so long ago with the statement that the present schools of higher learning of the country were "blessed with entirely too many 'nice' young men who are interested in the crease in their pants, the next week-end, and the next 'hot' date to the exclusion of everything else." This statement seems to us to be entirely relevant if it does not exactly state the truth of the matter. The fact is that the proper balance of emphasis between our activities on the Hill is usually decidedly lacking on one or two sides—and usually lacking distinctly on the physical side. At present we "are getting excellent training to be barbers in our old age," or boxing match booers, or some other form of side-line sportsmen.—O. W. D.

OPEN FORUM

Fellow students of the University of North Carolina:

In view of the distressing financial situation into which our state educational institutions are about to be subjected by the present state administration of North Carolina, it is indeed a most opportune time now for the students of these institutions to join their efforts with those of the far-sighted people of this state in helping to prevent our commonwealth from making a grave error at this time.

It seems that in the temporary economic unrest of today many of our state leaders have lost sight of that noble vision of Charles B. Aycock, which has made North Carolina one of the greatest states in the Union, and they, in their unnecessary dilemma, are feverishly trying to cut off a large part of the income of the state institutions which our fore-fathers have labored night and day to build up to their present high standing. Such a move as the one now

The Worker Be Damned?

The city of Danville, Va., and its labor situation furnish an excellent study of the obstacles which workers must overcome in order to raise themselves above the level of serfs; and give a pointed answer to those persons who too frequently maintain that "if the workers' conditions are bad they must blame themselves for accepting them and not expect the capitalists or the legislators to come to their special assistance."

Danville has a population of 22,000, the largest number of whom are employed in the textile mills. For years the company operating the mills had been paying 10 per cent on its common stock, in 1922 it paid 20 per cent, and in 1929 the president reported having had the "most satisfactory year since the World war." When competition started creeping into Danville, however, the company began to "squeeze" all the work it could get out of its employees; Louis Stanley writes in the Nation that it engaged a firm of engineers to speed up the system, increased the amount of work which each employee had to do, and lowered the wages.

In January, 1930, the company declared a further cut of 10 per cent in wages, and it entirely ignored the opposition of the company-sponsored union. When the workers organized and became affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, the company began discharging the leaders in order to intimidate their followers, but they stuck together (surprisingly, for the South) and in September, 1930, they had to call a strike in order to preserve the life of their union.

It would seem that a company in position to pay dividends of 10 and 20 per cent would seek to economize in some other way than in reducing the already low wages of its workers; it seems, too, that the leaders in the community—the clergy and the editors—would stand by the workers since the company's financial condition demonstrates that it did not absolutely need to attack the workers' wages in order to survive. But no, the company insists on reducing wages, the clergy dodges the issue, and the two papers remain opposed to the workers' plea for a living wage. The roster of the company reveals quite illuminatingly that the publishers of the papers are also large stockholders in the company, and it is a safe guess that the mill-owners are contributors to the churches.

With this editor-clergy line-up, with the police using tear-gas bombs, and the company procuring injunctions against this or that activity of the strikers, it is not surprising to see why the company can remain adamantine, or why workers alone, without outside aid, are almost defeated from the start. It is very necessary, however, that the workers win in this struggle, because the Danville mills are the oldest and the strongest in the South, having been established more than 50 years ago, and the workers there are more experienced than are any other group of factory workers below the Mason and Dixon line. If the strikers in Danville fail, Southern labor will continue to go through the

State-Carolina Battle Tonight Features Clash Between Star Centers

Game Will Be Criterion of Big Five Championship; Tom Alexander Back in Shape.

The Carolina-State game here tonight, counting importantly in both the Big Five and Southern Conference standings, promises to have as one of its most interesting features a nifty battle between two big rival centers—Morgan of State and Dameron of Carolina. The Tar Heels and Wolfpack varsities clash in the Tin Can at 8:30 o'clock following a Carolina-State Frosh game at 7 o'clock.

Both of the tall, rangy huskies have been leading their respective teams in scoring in almost every game. Dameron continued to hold the pace in Carolina's last game, leading the scorers against V. P. I. with twelve points. Morgan more than proved his all-round worth as State beat Duke 24-19 last Saturday. The big sharpshooter not only played great floor ball and led the scorers with nine points but he scored all five of the last points for the Wolfpack victory.

Tom Alexander, scrappy guard of the Tar Heels, has recovered from a light attack of influenza and was out for yesterday's workout, so that it looks like both teams will be able to call on their full powers.

State has played all the other Big Five teams except Carolina, and has beaten Wake Forest decisively, beaten Duke by 24-19, and lost only to Davidson, 26-19. Carolina beat Wake Forest 30-13 ,and lost to Davidson 18-17. It looks as if this Carolina-State game will tell who will have the chance of breaking Davidson's championship march.

Carolina will probably start Sandy Dameron, center; Tom Alexander and Captain Artie Marpet, guards; and Wilmer Hines and either Tom Edwards or Jimmy Moore, forwards. State will probably start with Gammon and Atkinson, forwards; Morgan, center; and Rose and Clark, guards.

NEGRO HOUSE DESTROYED BY FIRE EARLY SUNDAY

There have been but two fires in Chapel Hill in the last few days. One occurred Sunday morning about nine o'clock, and one happened yesterday a few minutes after noon. The Sunday fire was at a negro house in Carrboro. The house burned completely down before the fire trucks could reach it. The fire yesterday was caused by a small blaze in a brush pile near Dr. Otto Stuhlman's house on Tenney Circle. The blaze was extinguished before any damage was done.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

A. T. O.'s' Win Four in Row

The A. T. O.'s won their fourth straight victory in the intramural basketball league by defeating the Phi Sigma Kappa's yesterday afternoon by a 46-18 score, thus maintaining their perfect record. Peetz, of the Phi Sig's, and Jenkins and Menge, of the A. T. O.'s, staged a close race for individual scoring honors with Peetz finally winning out by the narrow margin of one point, scoring a total of twelve points. Smith, intramural football star of the A. T. O.'s, played a nice game at guard getting eight points to figure in the scoring.

A. T. O.'s (46)	Phi Sig's (18)
Jenkins (11)	Whittendon
Menge (11)	Peetz (12)
McLaughlin (6)	Teachey (1)
Smith (8)	Fitzgerald (3)
Pollard (3)	Merritt (2)

Scoring Substitutes: A. T. O.'s, Wilson (7).

Sigma Epsilon Wins

The Sigma Ep's defeated the Phi Alpha's yesterday afternoon by a score of 32-18. Blackwood, Sigma Epsilon forward, led the individual scoring with twenty points, while Whitten was best for the losers with a total of eight points.

Phi Alpha (13)	Sigma Ep. (32)

HEEL PRINTS

CAMPUS-WIDE PHYSICAL DEVELOPMENT IS AIM

The following statement is in keeping with the series of letters from head coaches which are appearing in the Daily Tar Heel from time to time to create more general interest in athletics:

"Primary to the winning of athletic contests, the University of North Carolina Athletic Association has as its foremost goal and principle the developing of the physical and manly powers of every student in this University," says Director of Athletics R. A. Fetzer. "If there is campus-wide participation in varsity and freshman sports extending to every able bodied student, the winning of athletic events will follow as a natural result."

Many of the leading universities have separate departments of physical education to give courses in calisthenics and gymnastics, and such a policy was formulated for Carolina by a committee of the trustees some five years ago, but at the time it was not possible to inaugurate such a plan because of financial reasons.

For such reasons as these, the University Athletic Association embarked upon a program of mass athletics in the form of large varsity and freshman squads together with an intramural department to give athletic opportunities to every student in the University.

Recently several of the officials of the department of athletics have declared that they are not satisfied with the small percentage of students participating in athletics, and are calling for more men to come out. It is estimated that only fifty percent of the students are actively engaged in competitive games.

With this small percentage, he athletic department is powerless to execute its praiseworthy program of "developing the physical and manly powers" of every student. Coach Fetzer has called for more men to come out for track. The other coaches will make similar calls in the near future. With expert coaching in football, basketball, track, cross country, boxing, wrestling, tennis, golf, and other sports being added from time to time, there is ample opportunity for individual ability to be developed.

CHANGES IN THE BASKETBALL FRONT

The Big Five basketball front has undergone a major change in the last week. Now that the State College Wolfpack has given the Duke Blue Devils their first Big Five licking since the 1929 season, the complexion for this year is somewhat muddled. Davidson claims the top position with two wins and no losses, while State, Carolina and Duke all are in the second division with one loss and two wins each.

The 1931 fate of the Tar Heel quintet will be almost definitely decided this week, since the State five comes here tonight and the Devils are to be met at Durham Saturday. Two victories for the Tar Heels would put them out in front, but a loss might demote them definitely into the second division. These two games should be thrillers, and with Coach Ashmore having put the team through stiff workouts since its loss to V. P. I., it is likely that decisions favorable to Tar Heel rooters will be turned in both times.

MATMEN RESUME WORK FOR V. P. I. MEET SATURDAY

Coach Quinlan Grants Day of Leisure to Gather Reserve Strength for Squad.

Coach Quinlan put his varsity wrestlers back to work yesterday following one day of leisure with the hope of gathering reserve strength for Saturday's meet with V. P. I.

Marion Cowper, 175 pounder who has been out with influenza since the Navy meet, was sent home over the week end to recuperate. It is doubtful that Cowper will be in good enough condition by the end of the week to enter the ring, so Coach Quinlan is planning to give a great deal of his time to the reserves in the 175 and unlimited classes.

If Cowper does not fill his usual position, Fred Ferguson, unlimited star, will probably be brought down to the 175 pound limit, with Ken Hampton or Houghton replacing Ferguson in the unlimited.

Mayne Albright, another injured veteran, is expected to fill his regular position Saturday. Albright received an injury to his back in practice last week.

Charley Lawson is still giving the veteran Pete Usher a stiff battle for the 118 pound berth, and may get the call against the Gobblers. However, Usher showed a great deal of improvement against Navy and, with his superior experience, will probably draw the assignment again this Saturday.

Fred Ferguson and Harry Tsumas, 155 pound stars continue to look good. Both are in good shape and have been working hard.

Captain Fred Stallings and Percy Idol are back in shape again and have been showing good form during the past week.

Don Conklin, the undefeated sophomore, continues to flash the form that earned him brilliant victories against Princeton and Navy, and will be making his first home appearance when he goes against the Gobblers Saturday.

SANDY DAMERON LEADS TAR HEEL SHARPSHOOTERS

Rangy Center Has Aggregated Sixty-Eight Points This Season; Marpet Next.

Sandy Dameron and Captain Artie Marpet are still leading the Carolina cage scorers as the Tar Heels enter their fourth week of play, which will carry them against N. C. State here tonight and Duke in Durham Saturday night.

The rangy center Dameron added twelve more points to his larder in the V. P. I. game Friday night to run his total for nine games to sixty-eight. Captain Marpet, all-state guard, bagged ten to make his total fifty-seven. Other leaders are Wilmer Hines, forward, thirty-four; Tom Alexander, guard, twenty-nine; Jimmy Moore, forward, eighteen.

The Tar Heels suffered a relapse last week and played raggedly as their offense bogged in a 31-28 loss to V. P. I. That was Carolina's second loss of the season, and their first loss to a Southern Conference foe.

Captain Marpet and his mates will be fighting their hardest to make a comeback as they resume their Big Five activities against the Wolfpack here tonight.

Page Choate will probably have his guard post again, with Captain Marpet at the other guard; Sandy Dameron at center; Wilmer Hines at one forward, and either Moore, Edwards or Cleland at the other forward.

The varsity game will start at eight-thirty o'clock and will follow a seven o'clock contest that will feature the N. C. State frosh against the fast Tar Baby quintet, which has produced a star outstanding in Vergil Weathers, forward, who scored twenty-two points against Oak Ridge last week.

TAR BABIES FACE IMPS, WOLFLETS

Coaches Working With Frosh Charges on Foul-Shooting; State Yearlings Strong.

After their inspiring 40-12 victory over the Oak Ridge Cadets, the Tar Baby quint is ready for the State Wolflets tonight at 7:30 in the Tin Can. This is the most important week on the frosh schedule. They meet State tonight and then travel to Durham to tackle the Duke frosh Saturday. Both State and Duke have exceptionally strong teams and to win both these games would be a notable accomplishment.

The Tar Baby attack ran a little smoother Friday night and it needs only a little polishing to be serious menace to both State and Duke.

State, which meets the Tar Babies tonight, has a fast offensive which operates smoothly. The Tar Babies will need every bit of the speed and cleverness they have to stop the boys from Raleigh who have made an impressive record this year.

One department that the freshmen are very weak in is of foul shooting. Out of thirty tries so far the team as a whole has been able to convert only sixteen. In the Oak Ridge game they were only able to garner two out of a possible ten. Practice in this division and in smoothing out the remaining rough spots will be the program for this week. Coach Shephard worked his men on Saturday afternoon and then again last night.

In the four games so far this season Virgil Weathers is far ahead in the scoring race. He has accounted for sixty of the team's one hundred and forty-five points with twenty-seven field goals and six free throws. Weathers' nearest competitor is Fanny Fisher, his running mate, who has scored nineteen points on eight field goals and three free throws. Next comes Don Jones, guard with sixteen points and McGlenn and McCachren with fourteen and ten points, respectively. The other scores are divided between Poe, Harris, Minor, De Rose, Grossman, and Gaddy.

The starting lineup tonight for the Tar Babies will probably include: McCachren and Jones, guards; Fisher and Weathers, forwards; with Minor or McGlenn at the pivot position.

Raleigh Leads East In Class A Contest

There are four teams in the Class A high school basketball conference who have yet to taste defeat. Raleigh has the only clean slate in the east, while in the west Charlotte, Salisbury, and Winston-Salem have spotless records. Charlotte and Salisbury have won two each, and Raleigh and Winston-Salem, one each.

Elizabethtown leads the second division of the fourth Eastern District Conference with four wins and one loss, followed closely by Lumberton, which has one less victory.

Early in March the Class A and Class B finals will be played here in the Tin Can.

V. M. I.'S SHOWING ATTRIBUTED ONLY TO BAD BREAKS

Three Captains Box on Cadet Team; Fair Sex Approves Fistic Sport.

By Jack Besson

V. M. I.'s poor showing last Saturday against the Tar Heel mitmen was not altogether their own fault—they just had the hard luck to stack their "sure point" winners against Levinson, Goodridge, and Wilson. . . Three captains were represented on the Cadets' team—Dunn, light heavy, was V. M. I.'s leader on the grid-iron last fall; Gill, heavy, is captain-elect of football, while Buck, featherweight, leads the mitmen.

The Athletic Association brought down a big league referee in Mr. Short of Baltimore. Short in his eleven years of refereeing, has officiated over eight thousand bouts, including the Olympic try-outs and intercollegiate championship bouts. . Many fans were doubtful as to whether Mr. Short was right in awarding Wilson a technical knock-out in the second stanza over Dunn, but anyone who noticed the V. M. I. boy's glazed eyes and blank expression realized that he was in no shape to continue.

Billy Arthur did a good job at the "mike" keeping the crowd in a good humor, and in general, enlivening the whole meet.

It was left to the freshmen to supply the spectators with the season's first knock-out—Raymer, frosh feather, finished off Allport with a right hook to the chin in the second round. Billy Brown followed this technical K. O. with one of his own in the third round of the light heavy battle—Brown doubled up Spalding with a left to the solar plexus and finished the fight with a right to the jaw, and that was that . . . George Biggs was unable to break into the win column but gave Duane a good argument before the V. M. I. bantam took home the bacon . . . Marty Levinson continued his smashing tactics and won hands down from Captain Buck in the featherweight tussle. Buck was groggy from the second round but had too much stamina to be put away for the count . . . Goodridge seems to be apathetic about knocking out his opponents. He carried Doyle, the Cadet lightweight, through the final session, when any kind of a wallop would have floored him. True Southern hospitality, I calls it . . . Dale Holderness, welter, making his varsity debut, used that devastating right to good advantage, hurting Epps badly in the opening round and then putting him away in the second . . . Obie Davis met his "meat" in Mason; the V. M. I. battler came rushing in, both arms swinging, and Obie's left just cut him to pieces. Mason's seconds wisely threw in the towel in the second to save him from further punishment.

John Warren, veteran heavy of three year's experience, displayed his wares for the first time this season, giving Gill a thorough trouncing over the three rounds route.

Referee Short made a short talk to the spectators between the varsity and frosh fights, telling the fans that inter-collegiate boxing is on the highest plane of that sport and that it is free from all the vices present in the professional sport.

The fairer sex has given the sport of "legalized murder" the official O. K., for there were about one hundred women present at the bouts, and they seemed to enjoy them immensely.

Six hundred men played intramural football at Penn State College this fall.

M'CARTHY WRITES PAPER ON ORIGIN OF COASTAL SAND

Article by University Geology Professor Is Printed in "Science."

Dr. G. R. McCarthy of the geology department has just completed a paper for Science in which he discusses the origin of the sands found on the Atlantic coast between Long Island and South Carolina. Dr. McCarthy began the research last fall. He depended on the Coast Guard for most of his samples, but on the North Carolina coast he gathered many of them himself.

The theory that the sands found on these coasts came from New England has long been held by many people, however, Dr. McCarthy found that these sands do not move for any great length down the coast. Most of them probably were deposited by rivers or washed up by the waves. The general motion of the sand is from north to south; however, it can't cross any large break in the coast-line such as Chesapeake Bay and Delaware Bay.

Dr. McCarthy has not studied the sands from part of the coast beyond Long Island or below the South Carolina coast.

Vocational Essay Contest Near Close

The vocational essay contest, which was first announced by Dr. Daniel A. Ploing, speaker and leader of the national youth radio conference, on December 28th, over a hook-up of more than thirty radio stations of the National Broadcasting Company, will be brought to a close at midnight, February 16.

The purpose of this contest is to find out how much students and young men know concerning the vocation which they intend to follow, and is an attempt to establish thought on that line.

One of the points on which manuscripts will be judged is the evidence showing that the contestant is aware of the important factors which must be considered in making an intelligent choice of a vocation.

Prizes ranging from $25 to $100 will be awarded for the best essays submitted. Further information concerning this contest may be obtained from Henry Johnston, Jr., of the Bureau of Vocational Information at 204 South building.

Deke's Lose Second in 2 Years

The Phi Delt's defeated the Deke's by a score of 48-7 to register their second win of the season against no defeats. It was the second defeat in a row for the Deke's, also their second defeat in two years of league play. The Phi Delt's staged a close race among themselves for scoring honors with J. Peacock finally winning out with sixteen points, closely followed by Moore, with twelve, and T. Peacock and Eubank with ten each. Webb was best for the Deke's with five points.

being contemplated in Raleigh would be disastrous not only to our state institutions but to the whole state as well, for it would cost the taxpayers of North Carolina millions of dollars in the future to restore our schools and colleges to their present standards.

Considering the grave situation of educational matters in North Carolina today, we, as head of the North Carolina Federation of Students, now summon the students of every state institution in this commonwealth to join hands with the faculty members, college administrations, and civic organizations of this state in bringing pressure to bear on the present legislature to prevent this body from impoverishing our state institutions and reducing them to disreputable positions.

We furthermore request every student in the state institutions of North Carolina to write or visit their friends in the legislature, the Governor, and the other leaders of the state and inform these persons of the grave situation into which they are about to subject the institutions of this commonwealth.

We sincerely hope that the students of North Carolina will heed this call to service and that they will use their best efforts in helping this state to continue unwaveringly in her course of progress and development forever.

Sincerely yours,

A UNIVERSITY HONOR

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

In your recent article (Jan. 24) on the inauguration of President H. W. Chase, the statement is made that "through the influence of Chase it (the University) became a member of the Association of American Universities." This statement is so incorrect and misleading that it should not be allowed to go uncontradicted. If universities were elected into membership in this Association through the influence of their presidents or other representatives, neither we nor the public would think of such membership as much of an honor. Nevertheless we do think of it as an honor and know that it is so regarded by all who are familiar with our higher schools. And we feel grateful to our fellow members for having stated in this public way that we are an institution whom they look on as worthy of the name university. A public honor of this sort may not increase an institution's intrinsic excellence but it does increase self-confidence, self reliance, and it may frequently serve convenience in a high degree since it stands like a bank note for a certain amount of real coin on deposit.

We are invited to join this Association because of the excellent work we are doing. In considering an institution for membership the Association makes inquiries, from those who know, as to its standing in particular fields of knowledge. A summation of such opinions constitutes a university's reputation. It rests on the record of the institution in the advancement and diffusion of knowledge (to borrow the Smithsonian phrase) or, as we say, on its research and teaching. The value of the former is evidenced sooner or later by its incorporation in treatises on the subject in question. Its stimulating value and the value of the institution's teaching in general are evidenced by the quality of the students as they come gradually to show it during later life.

When we speak of the University's growth, why use the style of the 'feature' article, always stressing the dramatic? We should instead, see the steady progress, unbroken until now, of an institution standing during many years like other pioneer American colleges for the diffusion of knowledge, standing none the less for that today but standing also, always more and more conspicuously since the re-organization after the civil War, for the advancement of knowledge.

Every now and then someone talks of our University as if it had undergone during the past decade a sudden, what the entomologists call a complete metamorphosis, as when a caterpillar changes to a butterfly. To them I suggest the study of the University Record for November 1910, in which a brief survey is made of "Scientific Investigations at the University 1795-1910." Other data could be drawn in abundance from the records of faculty members in the 'humanities' and from the records of our alumni, which would show us, like the survey just mentioned, that university work in teaching and research is nothing new here.

The Wickersham Report

Janus, two faced god of the Romans, had nothing on the Wickersham commission's prohibition report. Has anyone decided just what it means, giving the impression, as it does, of falling into the arms of both wets and drys at one and the same time?

After months of study and investigation, Wickersham and his colleagues have presented a report which diversity and dissension has rendered almost ridiculous.

Meanwhile, both wet and dry factions have pounced on the verdict with loud cries of victory. The text of the report takes a stand against either modification or repeal, and on this basis the drys base their claims. But tacked to the document as it was presented were the individual opinions of the commission members, in which a majority supported either modification or repeal. This leaves the real significance of the report clouded.

Although this discrepancy between the collective and individual opinions is confusing and apparently lacking in cause, a number of conclusions may be drawn, namely:

The report was evidently a compromise.

It was entirely satisfactory to neither side.

The drys had everything to lose, and have lost most of it; the wets have everything to gain, and gained not quite enough to suit them.

The most imminent result to be expected is a renewal of efforts to obtain adequate enforcement, with increased appropriations and possible drastic changes in personnel and tactics. President Herbert Hoover at least placed his cards face upwards on the table, and it is in this direction that he is facing.

If the Wickersham report does nothing else, it at least places the liquor law on probation. From now on results in enforcement must be obtained, or the public will find an increasing number of its leaders lining up for revision or repeal.—The Daily Iowan

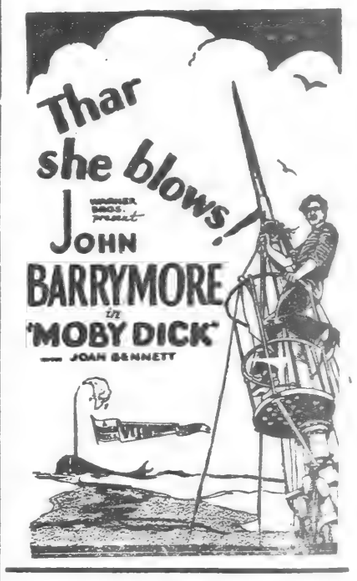
Still reports of the distressing need pour into headquarters, stories of communities of starving people, dying animals huge losses, and unpaid debts from last year. Arkansas, Kentucky, Mississippi, and Alabama seem to be suffering most.

In addition to helping these drought victims, the Red Cross wired from national headquarters, a relief fund of $2,500 to the chapter in Samoa to aid victims of the severe storm which swept the islands two weeks ago, destroying hundreds of homes, cocoanuts, bread fruit and banana trees.



The Red Cross also cabled $5,000 to the Mexican Red Cross as aid to the victims of a severe earthquake in that country.

COMMITTEE WILL ATTEMPT RELIEF FOR ILLITERACY

Members of Commission Appointed by Governor Gardner To Convene Here Tuesday

The state commission on adult illiteracy, which was recently appointed by Governor O. Max Gardner, meets at the Carolina Inn, Tuesday night, February 3, for the purpose of formulating plans for carrying on a campaign to relieve the present adult illiteracy situation in this state.

A committee similiar to this existed last year, but due to several resignations of its members, the group was broken up. The newly-appointed committee is to continue the work which was begun by the old one last year.

It is the plan of the group to encourage the several city civic organizations in this state to hold classes which will be open to the adult illiterates in the different communities. In this way, stated Mr. Luther Hodges, of Spray, acting chairman of the group, a large number of the ignorant elders in this state will be reached. The University extension division will help in this work.

According to the statistics which have been recently published by the national government, North Carolina ranks among the first ten states having the largest number of illiterates in proportion to population.

Those who have been appointed on the committee from this community include Dr. Howard W. Odum, I. C. Griffin, and R. M. Grumman. There are several other members on this committee from different parts of the state.

Since the appointment of the committee, Mr. Hodges has been the acting chairman of the group. At the meeting on February 3 an official chairman will be selected.

RUSHING TO END AT TWELVE NOON

Period of Silence Lasts Until Today, When Bids Will Be Distributed.

Fraternity rushing for the winter quarter will end today at twelve o'clock. Officers of the interfraternity council state that rules governing this period of silence must be strictly observed, just as they are during the regular rushing season in the fall.

All bids are to be turned in to John Cooper, secretary-treasurer of the council, at the Sigma Nu house before three o'clock today. Rushees will report to him between the hours of three and six today.

According to the rushing rules as changed by the interfraternity council this quarter, rushing began two weeks ago, January 14, at twelve o'clock. In the spring quarter rushing will begin five days after classes begin and will last fourteen days. The period of silence will begin at twelve o'clock on the fourteenth day and will end at six o'clock on the fifteenth day.

In the fall quarter 301 freshmen were pledged by the several fraternities. The number will be smaller this quarter, no doubt.

COMPOSER WILL PRESENT CONCERT FRIDAY EVENING

Beginning promptly at eight-thirty o'clock, Friday evening, January 30, a chamber music concert will be presented at the Playmakers Theatre by Lamar Stringfield, assisted by Mrs. Fred B. McCall, pianist, Dr. D. A. McPherson, violinist, and the Faculty Chamber Orchestra.

The first consideration in planning the concert has been to give an hour's program of numbers selected for an enjoyable evening of musical entertainment. This is to be Stringfield's first public appearance as soloist in his native state during the past four years.

Very rarely does one hear of a composer who is also an artist on a musical instrument as well as an artist conductor. Stringfield will appear in those three roles at the concert Friday evening.

He has also been active in demonstrating the soundness of his theory that individual American music comes from subjects and inspirations surrounding the unsophisticated folk lives of the American people.

RED CROSS AID WIDELY SOUGHT

Appeals for Food Pour in From Drought Area Where People Are Starving.

Reports from the American Red Cross news service indicate that applications for relief are still pouring into Red Cross headquarters from the drought area, especially from Arkansas, Missouri, Oklahoma Texas and Mississippi.

A report from Earl, Arkansas tells of the loss of 376 mules in one week through starvation, and asserts that even landowners will be unable to replace livestock now being permitted to die.

"One man with a family without food for several days, until his milk cow could be sold to buy groceries, asserted his family had no winter clothing, nothing to eat, no feed for his stock, no work, and all his stock had been turned out to forage for themselves."

A letter from someone in the Ozark hills seeking to trade black walnuts for second hand clothing is representative of the attitude of most of the sufferers who do not want to ask for aid as long as they have anything left.

The Red Cross secretary writes of the distress in a normally prosperous community in Ohio: at 9:30 one night a call for relief for twenty-one persons living in a barn and at 7:30 the next morning a call for help from a family of seven with no

SCIENCE NOTABLE TO LECTURE HERE DURING WEEK-END

W. D. Bancroft, Chemist of National Reputation, Will Speak Friday Evening.

Professor Wilder D. Bancroft, of Cornell University, and his wife will be entertained in Chapel Hill the last few days of the month. Bancroft will lecture at eight p. m. Friday, January 30, in the auditorium of Venable hall, on "Colloid Chemistry and Medicine" to the North Carolina chapter of the Sigma Xi and the North Carolina section of the American Chemical Society. Preceding the lecture there will be a dinner for the members of the two organizations.

Dr. Bancroft has been lecturing at Rollins College, Winter Park, Florida, and is stopping here on his way north. He is of a distinguished family. His grandfather, George Bancroft, the famous historian, was one time secretary of the navy and during his administration the Naval Academy was founded. Later he was minister to England and Sweden. His father, the late John Bancroft was a member of the famous group of young Harvard men, who were concerned in the rise of the Calumet and Hecla copper mine. Bancroft himself was distinguished at Harvard as a football player and oarsman, as well as by excellent scholarship.

Although he was offered an attractive opening in Harvard on graduation, his interest in the then newly developing science of physical chemistry took him to Amsterdam to study with the great Dutch Master Van't Hoff. Taking his doctor's degree in 1892, Bancroft returned to Harvard for a year as an instructor, and then joined Trevor at Cornell to organize the research laboratory which has been one of the most productive in the world, and to found the Journal of Physical

Alumni To Sponsor Glee Club Trip To Roanoke, Virginia

In response to the intense enthusiasm shown by Carolina alumni at Roanoke, Virginia, the university glee club will present a concert at Hollins college, seven miles from Roanoke. The concert will be on the night of February 7.

Among those alumni who have shown such interest in the glee club are: Dr. J. T. McKinney, Reverend Dr. A. R. Berkeley, and Colonel William S. Battle Jr. These alumni have taken it upon themselves to provide entertainment for the glee club during its stay in Roanoke. Approximately thirty members of the club will go on the trip. The program is under the auspices of the Hollins music association. The club will be served dinner in the college dining room prior to the concert.

Joseph A. Turner, general manager of Hollins College, wrote to the glee club the following message:

"I report with pleasure considerable enthusiasm on the part of students and faculty. This concert deserves from every standpoint a large patronage."

On the Monday following the glee club concert at Hollins, the entire Maennerchoer will give a concert in the music building here at eight-fifteen o'clock.

FINDS POSSIBLE USE FOR COTTON FIBRE IN RAYON

Professor Frank K. Cameron Explains Discovery at Delta Sigma Pi Smoker.

Professor Frank Cameron of the University chemistry department spoke last night at the first smoker of the new year given by Delta Sigma Pi, professional commerce fraternity, upon the topic of "Prospective Commercial Use of Cotton fibre in the Manufacture of Rayon." A large audience was highly entertained by the brilliant talk made by the speaker, in which he was assisted by N. W. Dockery, a university undergraduate who presented some statistical data about the experiments which he, aided by Professor Cameron, has been carrying on. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the speech.

Professor Cameron was introduced by Professor Heer of the commerce faculty, who called attention to the fact that the speaker has been receiving nation-wide attention recently since he announced that he and his associate are on the threshold of commercial production of cotton for use in rayon.

Professor Heer further pointed out that many seek to explain the current depression in terms of the outstripping of effective consumer demand by a rising tide of production, due largely to the marked technological advances which have recently been taking place in industry, and that in Professor Cameron the audience would find one of the technologists himself, who would have an opportunity to express his views upon this very pressing problem.

"Scientists have long been aware," stated Professor Cameron, "that of all the commonly-known aboriginal and cultivated plants, cotton contains the highest cellulose content. Further, that this is true despite the fact

CHEMIST MUST BE ALERT BOST TELLS STUDENT SOCIETY

Dr. R. W. Bost, professor of organic chemistry, addressed the American Institute of Chemical Engineers Monday evening. Dr. Bost made his talk on the desirable qualities of a successful chemist and a successful chemical engineer. He pointed out how essential it was that a chemical engineer should correctly meet the problems that his employer set before him.

Dr. Bost said, "There is nothing more pathetic than a slipshod chemist. The chemist must be alert, keep up with the modern ideas as much as possible, make helpful professional acquaintances, have the patience of Job, and be a leader and not one of those being led. The secret of success is do a little more than is required by one's employer."

George Holroyd, a graduate student in chemistry, gave a brief talk on how it is possible, on paper, to obtain products by using chemical reactions which are known to be true in some cases, but which, when put together, give an impossible product. He succeeded in making a molecule of chlorine containing twenty-four atoms, from manganese acetate, by using several substitution reactions.

Refreshments were served.

STUDENT BARBERS WILL NOT BE HIT BY PROPOSED LAW

Rumors that the student barber shops may be forced out of business through the enforcement of a statute amendment recently proposed to the General Assembly are unfounded. The suggested change in the law would give authority to the State Board of Barber Examiners "to make reasonable rules and regulations for the sanitary management of barber shops."

It is also untrue that the Chapel Hill barbers, through the barbers union, will attempt legislation against student barbers. There is already a special section in the barber regulations that rules against a person offering barber services in the room in which he sleeps. Students in colleges and universities are the only persons exempted from the observance of this ruling and, according to the barbers here, no effort will be made to have their status changed.

PROUTY EXPLAINS CRASH AT NIAGARA

Geology Professor Calls Gradual Erosion of Falls a "Geological Time Piece."

Dr. W. F. Prouty of the geology department recently explained the phenomena which took place at Niagara Falls several days ago. Great masses of rock precipitated into the pools below the falls causing the edge of the falls to retreat several feet. The erosion of the falls has been going on since the melting of the Continental Ice Sheet from the northern United States and has served as a geological time piece. The retreat of the falls has been regular; averaging about one foot a year on the American Falls and about five feet a year on the Horseshoe Falls.

According to Dr Prouty the length of Niagara Gorge is approximately seven miles. "The rate of erosion of Niagara Falls in the past has been sometimes slower and sometimes faster than now. The pendulum has been lengthened from time to time by a diminished water supply and shortened by an increased water supply. Where the pendulum was long we now have shallow water and rapids, and where it was short we have great depths and quiet reaches. An estimate based on the above facts indicates that the geological pendulum has been swinging away for about 35,000 years."

A gradual erosion of the softer shale under the more massive ledge of the crest caused an unstable condition of the rock which upon being subjected to occasional earth tremors caused the recent collapse.

At the present rate of erosion in about seven hundred years Horseshoe Falls will have retreated to the upper end of Goat Island, and the American Falls, after an average retreat of seventy-five feet from its present position, will have lost all its water to the Canadian Falls.

TRUSTEES DELAY CONFERENCE ON APPROPRIATIONS

Discussion of Important Matters Is Postponed Because of Graham's Illness.

The University trustees meeting scheduled yesterday was postponed because President Frank Graham is still indisposed after a severe case of influenza. No definite date has yet been made, but the trustees will not meet before the hearing in Raleigh Thursday, January 29.

President Graham was confined to his home January 5th and since that time has not been able to perform his duties. His condition, although it has improved much in the last week, is of such a nature that his physician deems it best to remain in his home for a while longer. Since his health has made it possible for him to leave his bed, Graham has been preparing the budget report which he must present at the trustees meeting.

This will be the most important meeting in several years in the opinion of many. The problems that have been so warmly debated for the past month will be taken up. The decisions reached by the trustees when they meet will decide to a great extent the course of the University in the near future. There will be the question of salary cuts to be debated, the state appropriation to be discussed, and the question of consolidating this institution with State College and North Carolina College for Women will receive consideration.

Among the smaller questions for discussion will be the awarding of several honorary degrees to outstanding men of the University. The awards committee has already selected a few on whom such degrees may be bestowed.

NEW SERIES OF TALKS STARTED

Freshmen Hear Professor Koch, First of Faculty Speakers, on "Objectivity in Life."

Henry Johnston, assistant dean of students, announced in freshman chapel Tuesday morning the plan of presenting a series of addresses to the freshmen to be delivered by the various prominent men who direct the different activities on the University campus. These talks are intended to help the freshmen learn more about the campus activities and to direct their efforts along the most promising lines.

The first of these speakers, was Professor Frederick Koch, the director of the Carolina Playmakers. "Form an objective for your life and then stick to it," was the advice he gave to the freshmen. Prof. Koch gave his own case as an example as he told how his dramatic work has been such that it has furnished a wholly engrossing interest for his entire life.

To be engaged in a life work that does not actually afford pleasure and interest makes one's life a tragedy. Therefore, Professor Koch advised young men to find the work that is most interesting to them and fits them better in order to make their lives successful. The time to form one's objective in life is during college days, he says.

The McLean resolution which s occupied the center of the legislative stage recently is designed to give promised relief to landowners of the state. To us it holds out the promise of phantom relief only. We fail to see any definite provisions for relief in the measure as it now stands.

The entire question is one of taxation. If land is to be relieved of the school burden, who then will bear it? We admit that the present taxation system is inequitable, but we see little relief in the various proposals advanced to date. These measures merely relieve land without providing new sources.

To us the orderly process would be for the legislators to consider first the needs of the state and to seek to discover additional sources of revenue for the state without adding to the drain already imposed. Various measures have been introduced which would yield revenue to meet the existing obligations of the state. But these have not been acted upon. Consideration of new sources of revenue is the prime duty of this legislature. Reduction of expenses and shifting the tax burdens are incidental to this first duty.

If the counties are to have relief, if the tax reduction leagues or associations are to be answered, the legislators must first discover the revenue to meet existing expenses. Then they should consider other proposals. Let us have real relief if we are to have relief at all. The McLean measure is a phantom which does not solve the tax problem.

Dormitory Service

The effort on the part of certain local merchants to have the legislature pass a bill abolishing the system of Dormitory Rooms now in use is unfair and unjustified.

The Dormitory Service Rooms were established last year and in this short time have become a necessity to the occupants of dormitories. The phase of the Service Rooms which the merchants are attacking, the sale of candy, drinks, cigarettes, etc., is only one of several services which the Service Room supplies to the dormitory. Handling laundry, pressing and shoe repairing, answering the telephone, and serving as an information bureau are others. The amount of business which the Rooms take away from downtown merchants is negligible, since only a limited list of articles can be sold, and many of these are bought in Chapel Hill.

Since the establishment of this system, the stealing which was so prevalent has greatly diminished, due to the fact that outsiders are kept from going through the dormitories without permission. Laundry, pressing, and shoe repairing are handled safely and efficiently. The students are no longer disturbed by the canvassers who were so annoying under the old system.

The students have voiced their appreciation of the Dormitory Service Rooms, and by means of petitions, have shown that they are solidly behind them. They resent the attitude some of the merchants have shown. If the legislature abolishes the stores, it will certainly mean inconvenience and annoyance to dormitory residents. —H. B.

No Sense Of Values

The American Library Association has just issued a report on the situation that exists in this country with regard to the unavailability of good books. The report gives us some astonishing facts. Eighty-three per cent of the rural population and forty-four per cent of the entire population of our country have no access to public libraries. Eighty-nine per cent of the Southern negro population is without public-library service. Over one third of the counties in the country have no libraries within their boundaries.

It is exceedingly strange that the most "civilized" and "advanced" country on this globe should be so backward in fostering a desire for reading upon its people. How can a love for good books be acquired by our people when almost half of them have no access to libraries? How can we attain a higher culture when twenty-two times as much money is spent for cheap moving pictures than for public libraries? How can we develop a higher intellectual race when twenty-eight times as much money is spent for candy than for public libraries?

We have no sense of proportion. Our distortion of values is a burlesque. We spend most of our money preparing for the next war to end war—this time really to end it, of course. We spend millions keeping good liquor away from Americans and making them drink poison. And as for public libraries—well, we have no time for that at present. We'll attend to that all right—in the near future.—P. L.

Oh, well, after this maybe Sinclair Lewis would better publish his books over in Europe instead of here, and see how much the Europeans appreciate are and literature.—Albany News.

With Contemporaries

Meaningless Facts

The federal government ought to be satisfied now but we don't see how it can be. In 1927 it made a congressional appropriation to finance a survey of all phases of college life in 52 institutions of higher education which receive annual subsidies from the federal government and which include approximately 164,000 resident students.

The survey's results, just issued, show among other things only a slightly qualified approval to the fraternities and sororities as they exist today, a marked decrease in faculty-banned activities and a noticeable increase in democracy among college students.

But the investigation's significant feature is that the institutions of higher learning aren't so bad as some cranks think and that college and universities are improving and meaning more to the welfare of the nation as the years pass.

Although the survey reveals many interesting facts, we hardly believe the project was entirely worth the time and money except that it shows the futility of trying to compare institutions with the ultimate idea of fixing workable standards regarding the social activities of students.

Each student body is different and is a problem in itself. Social conditions are different on every campus. Financial situations are far from the same. In fact, only a few generalities can be drawn from the survey.

The American public, supporter of the institutions investigated, is entitled to such information, but it cannot accomplish the impossible feat of drawing any accurate all-inclusive conclusions as to the value of colleges as shown by the department of education's study.—Oregon State Barometer.

Too Much Pampering

Additional evidence of the pampering of University of Iowa students came with recent announcement that beginning with last Monday evening students living at Currier hall could not have parlor dates except for study purposes until after semester examinations.

Iowa students are usually warned when examinations are to be given. They are sent delinquents when their grades fall to a D. They are often given an idea of what their final grades may be. In few cases are they thrown on their own initiative in their work.

The high value students mistakenly attach to mere grades is not original with them. They have it drilled in their being from the time they enter until the time they leave school—with a few notable and commendable exceptions.

What type of student does an institution expect to turn out if students, old enough in their parents' estimation to live away from home, have so much decided for them without effort on their parts? After all, what college is primarily for is to train persons for better citizenship, and pampering is not the most effective means toward that end.—Daily Iowan.

Clara Wow

"Remember who is the defendant in this case," the judge told Miss De Voe, Clara Bow's erstwhile secretary just recently tried for appropriating $30,000 of Clara's income for herself and her "boy friends."

The public would do well to remember who is the defendant in the case too, a public which has bestowed hundreds of thousands of dollars on persons of Clara's type.

Here is a case made to order for the caustic pen of our erstwhile critic, Mr. Mencken. A silly, immature young woman, still flapperish in her behavior although long past the flapper age, one who orders expensive drinks at her front door and thinks she is in love with four men at once, is featured in all our newspapers, overwhelmed with fan letters, and generally made into a national idol. She has neither brains nor good sense, neither refinement nor education, and yet the public adores her.

It would do well to ask itself, on just what basis does it form its judgments of individuals, on reason or on ridiculous hysteria. —The Daily Kansan.

The Plight Of The College Editors

It's almost gotten to the place where we are really sorry for college editors. First, a Stanford editor finds himself prepared for the seething cauldron because he dared criticise the political views of the faculty. A second Stanford editor is soundly squelched by President Hoover because he inquired as to how long his university was to be without a president.

Every second one of our professional columnists has gone out of his way to take a dirty crack at the Harvard editor who criticised the drunken brawl of the American Legion in the streets of Boston. The authority of professional journalism over collegiate writing is a strange thing.—California Daily Bruin.

that cotton has not been grown primarily with attention being paid to the cellulose content, but rather with attention being paid to the length of the fiber."

This is important in that the primary material used in the manufacture of rayon is cellulose, which at present comes from spruce and other trees, which, although convertable into pulp at very low cost do not contain nearly as high a cellulose content as does cotton. In view of these facts, Dockery began practical experiments in the vicinity of Rockingham to determine the price at which cotton-cellulose could be put on the market, and also to determine the comparitive quality of this form of cellulose compared with that produced from timber.

Although at least another crop season will be necessary before it will be possible to state with finality the exact commercial status of this process, sufficient results have been attained to warrant the prediction that cellulose produced from cotton will be able to compete on terms of practical equality with that produced from timber, and that due to the superior qualities possessed by cotton-grown cellulose it will be in a somewhat strategic market position.

If this then be reasonable the economic significance of such a development may well be far-reaching. It is predicted with a considerable degree of accuracy that the future of cotton growing in the South Atlantic States is doomed within a short period of time, and that the dominence in this respect will pass to the states of the Southwest. However, if the growing of cotton for its cellulose content were instigated in this area, it would probably find more favorable conditions than elsewhere in the United States.

This is due, first, to the nearness to producing units, and, second, to the fact that the values of cotton-growing land in this section of the country are considerably lower than in Texas and Arkansas and that territory. The importance of the first point is strengthened by the fact that virtually no change would be necessary in the pulp-producing machinery to take care of cotton used to produce cellulose.

The talk was very well received due to the keen interest which has been aroused at the University about Professor Cameron's discoveries.

Most wireless lecturers are said to be extremely nervous just before the broadcast begins. There is really no reason why they should be; their audience are powerless to do anything about it.—The Humorist.

CAROLINA-V. P. I. WRESTLERS WILL MEET SATURDAY

"You Will Surely Get Your Eyes Full Saturday Night," Says Coach Quinlan.

Now that the State-Carolina basketball game is a thing of the past, campus sports attention turns to the wrestling bouts between Carolina and V. P. I. in the Tin Can Saturday night at eight o'clock. This is the only home event scheduled for Tar Heel athletic teams, for the remainder of the week though the varsity and freshman cagers go over to Duke to meet the Blue Devils Saturday night, and the boxers journey to meet V. P. I. at Blacksburg.

"For those interested in wrestling you will surely get your eyes full Saturday night," says Coach Quinlan about the V. P. I.-Carolina bouts. His men have made an excellent start so far this season, defeating Princeton and holding the strong Navy team to a 19-12 score. Their opposition Saturday will be the team which finished second in the Southern Conference meet last year, and according to the Tar Heel mentor, the Gobblers have practically their entire 1930 team intact.

Graves, who won the 115-pound conference title for V. P. I. last year, is fighting in the 125-pound division this season and will be pitted against Captain Frank Stallings of the Tar Heels. About this fight Coach Quinlan says, "Neither boy knows what it is to lose, so you can see what you have coming Saturday night."

The other match of great interest will be the 145-pound bout when Captain Bailey of V. P. I. meets Conklin, Carolina sophomore. Conklin went undefeated his freshman year and has won two matches this year against Princeton and Navy.

"There sure will be plenty of action in the 145-pound class," Quinlan was heard to say yesterday.

HIGH CAGE TEAM DEFEATS MEBANE

The Chapel Hill high school basketball quint edged a spirited Mebane team out by the close score of 17-15 last night.

Following up shots seemed to be the only difficulty the Chapel Hill boys encountered during the fray, for they excelled their opponents in every other department of the game.

Chapel Hill had a two-point lead at the half which was tied again and again by the visitors immediately after the beginning of the second period. The score was 11-11 as the whistle blew announcing the end of the third period, which clearly shows the equality of the scoring prowess of the two aggregations. But when the curtain was rung down by the shrill blast of the referee's whistle, the count was found to be 17-15 with the hometown basketeers leading.

Pennington played brilliant ball for Chapel Hill, while Tom Farrell upheld Mebane's share of the glory with some excellent maneuvering.

This victory for the Hillians makes the count in games won, and games lost even. Chapel Hill high has won two games and lost two thus far in the season.

Tar Heel Mat Captain Tied Navy's Best Star

Captain Frank Stallings, one of the outstanding stars on the Carolina wrestling team, proved his abilities again recently when he wrestled Theobald, undefeated star of the Navy, to a draw in a match that went two extra periods.

College Sports

Northwestern University's "Hard Luck Hank" Bruder, the "Greatest All-American that ever warmed a bench," has nothing on Wisconsin's Walter Karsten, erstwhile 165 pound wrestler. After a week of strenuous workouts in preparation for the Wisconsin-Iowa mat matches, Karsten, Wisconsin's only certain chance of winning, fell down the steps of the university library, suffering a badly wrenched shoulder that will keep him off the mat for several months.

A similiar hard luck blow of this nature was dealt Tennessee prior to the Alabama game. Paul Hug, all-southern end and one of the foremost wingmen in the game broke his ankle from a fall while leaving a theatre.

In the lineup of a D. K. E.-Sigma Chi intramural hockey game at the University of Michigan, the name of Fielding Yost, Jr., appeared recently. Yost attended Carolina two years ago and transferred to the school at which his father won everlasting grid coaching fame.

Football was the only sport to make a profit at Princeton University during the past fall, the financial statement of the Princeton athletic committee revealed recently. A revenue of $259,574.61 was realized while minor sports showed a loss of $37,529.11 and basketball an expense exceeding profits of $9,835.24. Despite these deficits, a surplus of $20,097.40 was shown.

At McGill University, Montreal, Canada, intramural chess is a rising sport. Campus organizations have entered a large number of men in a tournament which is now under way.

A gigantic winter carnival to be held February 4 will signify the beginning of the University of Wisconsin winter sports program.

The University of Arizona lost $2,726 last fall during the football season, according to a financial statement of athletic officials recently.

John (Spinner) Campbell, one of the University of Alabama's outstanding halfbacks, was named backfield coach for the University of Kentucky football team Monday. Coach Campbell, in making the announcement, said Campbell had returned to Alabama and would take up his new duties after graduation this spring.

At the University of Washington, pin ball has been substituted for volley ball as an intramural sport. During the last three years, pin ball has risen to a high position as a popular campus sport.

FRESHMEN LOSE 29 TO 28

Fail to Knot Count Missing Three Final Chances To Score.

State College played better basketball in the second half of last night's game with the Tar Heels in the Tin Can scoring ten points to Carolina's nine, but failed to overtake the lead set up by the Tar Heels in the opening period and lost, 22-16.

Paul Edwards was the star of the game, making three baskets for Carolina in the final period when the Red Terrors were rapidly diminishing the Tar Heel's lead. He was high scorer with eight points. Tom Alexander's floor game was very good.

Morgan, center, and Johnson, forward, were best for State.

First Half

Despite the fact that the Tar Heels missed many attempts at the basket they held a noticeable superiority over the Red Terrors during the first half. Carolina's guarding was good as usual and State had few chances at scoring. The score board at this point gave Carolina 13 points to six for State.

Sandy Dameron led in scoring at the rest period making one field goal and four of six foul tries for a total of six points.

Carolina made six foul goals out of eleven chances. State got two out of eight.

The starting lineup last night were, for Carolina: Edwards and Moore, forwards; Dameron, center; Alexander and Captain Marpet, guards; for State:

GOLFERS WORKING AT HOPE VALLEY

Begin Preparations to Be in Shape for Approaching Season.

With the advent of the golf season near at hand, the members of the golf squad have begun their practice games at the Hope Valley Country Club. When the weather does not permit, the indoor driving net at the Tin Can is brought into use.

Meade Willis has been elected captain of the 1931 golf team which will look to Ben Goodson, Aubrey Brooks, Doc Ballenger, and Begerley Mason for support. The promising sophomores who played on last year's freshman team are: Joe Adams, Billy, O'Brien, Raymond Chatham, and Fred Laxton. Paul Carter, a transfer last year may be eligible to compete this season.

Coach Kenfield is optimistic about prospects and looks for a team that will be the equal of, or superior to, the team of last year, which won fifth place in the Southern Conference.

Several meets have already been planned for the spring, although definite dates have not yet been set. The North Carolina intercollegiate Tourney will be played at the Sedgefield Country Club at Greensboro the week-end of April 25. The Southern Conference tournament has been awarded to the University of Georgia, and will be played on Thursday, April 30, and Friday and Saturday, May 1 and 2, at Athens.

It is possible that a match with Vanderbilt will be scheduled for the Wednesday before the tournament in Athens. Home golf matches will be played with the various colleges in the state. Georgia Tech will meet Carolina this year on Saturday, April 18, at Hope Valley.

A schedule is being made up for the freshman team also.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

New Dorms Wins Over Grimes

New Dorms defeated Grimes yesterday afternoon by a score of 38-17. Hampton, New Dorms center, led the individual scoring with thirteen points. Watson, for the losers, gathered a total of eight to lead his team. New Dorms jumped away to an early lead and were never headed.

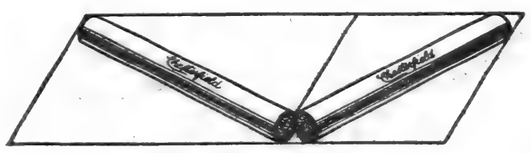
FUNDAMENTALS KEEP GRID TEAM BUSILY ENGAGED

Squad Will Be Divided Into Teams as Soon as All Men Are Out.

Running new plays with the recently adopted shift, blocking, tackling, and sundry other maneuvers of initial heavy work has kept the Tar Heels well occupied during the last two days.

In Monday's practice the prospective backfield men were divided into combinations to play and block the ends.



Linemen grouped in their respective positions, blocked, tackled, and ran through general primary line drill.

It was understood yesterday that the opening of the winter schedule with four teams in action might be delayed pending the appearance of a number of new candidates. Head Coach Chuck Collins stated yesterday that he hoped to have at least fifty new men report for the winter drills. When the size of the squad becomes known, the winter schedule will be assumed. Coaches hope to use as many men and teams as possible.

The call was issued to candidates yesterday. Collins states that on the entire squad to date only one man has reported who has not had previous experience, but that candidates of this calibre are extremely desirable.

U. N. C. Coach Makes And Loses Forwards in Hurry

The mortality rate for forwards seems to be high with Coach Jim Ashmore. Hackney, Price, Satterfield and Cathey graduated together and crippled the Tar Heels for last year. Coach Ashmore patiently trained a new set, and this year, Neiman, Green, and Hutchinson, all lettermen and all eligible, failed to return to college. So Coach Ashmore had to train a new set.

GRAVES EXPLAINS AMOUNT OF DEBT

Local Editor Points Out That Self-Supporting State Bonds Are Investments.

North Carolina is not nearly as bad off as one might be led to believe by the unqualified statement that the state's bonded debt is 170 million dollars, Louis Graves, editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly, points out in an article in the current issue.

Editor Graves directs attention to the fact that 115 million dollars of the State debt is made up of self-supporting higyway bonds, and that North Carolina and other states have a law exempting self-supporting bonds from the calculation as to the amount of bonds that may be issued in proportion to assessed valuations.

The Graves article shows that the same line of reasoning applies to the bonds issued by the counties and municipalities; that is, a large percentage of their bonds are self-supporting, meaning that the things for which they were issued constitute an investment rather than a burden upon the taxpayers.

"Out of the total state debt of 170 million dollars the self-supporting highway bonds account for 115 million," Editor Graves goes on to say. "The state highway system is an investment which, as all agree, has been exteremely profitable. The highway bonds are not a burden on the taxpayers. The debt of our state and local governments, in the sense of being a burden upon the taxpayers—which is the sense in which the Governor spoke of it—is far less than the total figures he gave. To arrive at an accurate statement of the debt as a burden upon the taxpayers, subtract 115 million from the 170 million dollars state debt, and subtract from the 375 million dollars local government debt the amount in self-supporting bonds. (This latter figure is not available because the sinking fund commission does not list self-supporting bond separately.)

Editor Graves quotes Governor Gardner's statement in favor of the principle of taxation "in proportion to their ability to pay." In an article last week he suggested a higher tax on incomes and a tax on luxuries as two means of obtaining more revenue.

"What I believe every observant person knows to be true," he says, "is that there are ample sources available for tapping by the legislature, and that they can be tapped without the imposition of an unreasonable burden upon any individual or business concern."

Frosh Fail to Tie Score

Losing three chances to tie the score on foul throws, the Tar Heel freshman basketball team dropped last night's game to the State College yearling by a close 29-28 score.

The State team ran up thirteen points before Carolina scored, but the margin was cut to a 17-11 lead before the half ended.

New York's New Waldorf Hotel Gets Giant System of Electric Communication

The Waldorf-Astoria as it will look when completed will be a giant among hotels and (at top) the loud-speakers in its communication system will also be giants as indicated by the Western Electric engineer standing next to this one.

Three triangular strands of wire one-sixteenth of an inch in diameter—practically invisible from the street 660 feet below—will serve as the antenna system for the complicated radio hook-up in the new Waldorf-Astoria Hotel now under construction in New York City. Colossal in every respect, this new hostelry will have probably the largest Western Electric hotel installation in the world.

In each of its 2,000 private rooms there will be a radio loud speaker with a program selector so that every guest may tune in on any one of six radio broadcasts at any time. In addition, the same apparatus will pick up public events in progress in the hotel itself.

From a technical point of view this is particularly interesting because of the fact that the outside radio programs are all picked up on a single strand antenna. It is possible for the hotel's radio receivers to pick up as many as six outside broadcasts simultaneously, which are piped into the 2,000 private rooms and the 15 public rooms. In all, six receivers will operate from this single strand antenna.

Can Get Any Station

This system, moreover, has two additional strands which will serve the private receivers in about 140 tower suites. In these apartments it will be necessary only to plug in an ordinary broadcast receiver and all facilities for picking up radio broadcasts are automatically provided.

In this connection it is interesting to note that a unilateral arrangement has been introduced into the antenna circuit which makes it possible for a large number of receivers to operate simultaneously from the same antenna, picking up a variety of different programs without causing interference between other radios in the hotel tower suites or the private rooms.

Talking Pictures

In arranging for the elaborate communication system for the new Waldorf, Lucius M. Boomer, president of the Waldorf-Astoria Corp., has provided many novel features for the hotel. There will be one permanent Western Electric sound picture installation and several portable equipments for use where needed. The permanent system will be arranged for projecting and reproducing talking picture programs in the hotel's huge ball room.

The switchboard which will provide the telephone service for the guests will be the largest hotel private exchange in the world. It is big enough to serve a town of fifteen or twenty thousand inhabitants.

Has Message System

In addition, two telephone-typewriter systems will be installed. These will be put to many uses. One is particularly arranged for reporting arrivals and departures of guests, the other for paging guests and transmitting messages and orders throughout the various apartments of the hotel.

In discussing the radio installation Mr. Boomer pointed out that the speakers in the guest rooms are not of the wall type but will be located on tables or desks and are so tuned that the volume cannot be made loud enough to interfere in any way with guests in adjacent rooms.

Campus Calendar

Moving Pictures

Two free moving pictures will be shown tonight at seven-thirty in Venable hall. The subjects are: "From Pigs to Paint" and "Power."

A. I. C. E. Notice

A picture of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers will be taken this morning at chapel period in front of Venable hall. All members are asked to be present.

Woman's Association Reception

The Woman's Association will be at home to the members of the faculty and their wives Thursday evening from eight-thirty until eleven o'clock in Spencer hall.

Law School Registration

Registration for the second semester in the University law school will take place February 2. Classes will begin February 3.

Freshman Chapel

The deans of the various schools wish to meet their freshmen at chapel period today as follows: Dean Carroll, commerce freshmen, 103 Bingham; Dean Hobbs, A.B. freshmen, Gerrard hall; Dean Bell, applied science freshmen, 206 Venable; and Mr. McIntosh, education freshmen, 201 Peabody. There will be no regular chapel.

Morse Improves

Dr. W. C. Morse of the geology department became ill Monday with an attack of tonsilitis. He is still in bed, but his physician reports that his condition is improving.

Sigma Nu Official Visits University

Charles Edward Thomas, assistant general secretary of the Sigma Nu fraternity and editor of The Delta, the national magazine of the fraternity, arrived in Chapel Hill yesterday as a visitor to the local chapter.

His work is that of making a complete survey of all the chapters of the Sigma Nu fraternity on the Atlantic seaboard. Mr. Thomas, who graduated from Sewanee, University of the South, in 1927 with the degree of bachelor of arts, came here from the New England states, and will continue his trip to State College today.

STATUS OF FACULTY IN GOVERNMENT DISCUSSED

The local branch of the Association of University Professors met last Monday night, January 26, at seven-thirty o'clock. The meeting was mainly a continuation of the report of the committee on the place of the faculty in university government. A talk on the status of the University faculty in this regard was made by Professor Thorndike Saville. The rest of the meeting was taken up with problems of interest only to the members of the association.

Steele Publishes Latest Story

Wilbur Daniel Steele, resident of this community and a noted short story writer has published in February's Ladies' Home Journal his latest story, "Renegade."

Mr. Steele has long been prominent in the field of short story writing.

PHARMACY CLASS OFFICERS CHOSEN

At meetings of the three classes of the Pharmacy school last week, officers for the new year were elected. Those of the third year class are T. W. Gordon, president; R. P. Craig, vice-president; Miss Marie Rogers, secretary; and C. L. Clodfellow, treasurer.

The officers of the second year class are G. C. Hartis, president; M. T. Upchurch, vice-president; J. C. Coble, secretary; and F. Ray, treasurer. Those of the first year class are H. G. Brown, president; M. M. Brame, vice-president; H. N. Cooke, secretary; and H. F. McArver, treasurer.

RIGGS TO READ PLAY

"Green Grow the Lilacs," a play of Oklahoma home life, was presented Monday night by the theatre guild in New York for the first time. The author, Lynn Riggs, is visiting Paul Green here and at the time of the play's production heard by telephone of its success.

Riggs will give a reading of the play Sunday night at eight-thirty in the Playmakers Theatre. The reading is open to the public.

Take Bar Examination

Four of the students in the University law school took the bar examination Monday. They are: Ed Scheidt, Wex Malone, T. C. Smith, and Martin Kellog.

Law Professors Ill

Professors F. B. McCall and R. H. Wettach of the law school are ill, suffering from influenza.

Y Discusses Blue Ridge Conference

The meetings of the three cabinets of the "Y" Monday night were visited by representatives of State College Y. M. C. A., and by discussions of the Blue Ridge Conference to be in session June 15-25, 1931 were held.

Professor D. F. Folger, professor of the Y. M. C. A. Graduate School at Nashville, Tennessee, spoke to the freshman friendship council for the purpose of explaining the value of the Blue Ridge Conference, urging the freshmen to become interested in it and send a good representation.

Following Professor Folger's address Edwin Lanier, speaking in behalf of the council, pledged to arrange for a number of council members to attend.

The sophomore and junior-senior cabinets met jointly to hear Norman Lyon of the psychology department give a review of the address of J. Stitt Wilson, who spoke in the Methodist Church here a few Sundays ago. After this the cabinets conducted a forum discussion on the subject.

Leroy Clark, president of the "Y" at State college, and H. F. Comer of the local "Y" have just returned from the Regional Council meeting in Atlanta.

REGULARS RETURN FOR MAT DRILLS

Marion Cowper and Mayne Albright, the two veterans who have been on the casualty list for the past week, were again in uniform at the Tin Can yesterday preparing for the V. P. I. meet, and were able to take light workouts. Neither was able to do more than take exercises, but both men are expected to get into the regular practices shortly.

Whether or not these two stars will be able to face the Gobblers Saturday has not yet been definitely decided, although both are expected to be in fairly good condition.

Percy Idol was working in spite of a sprained ankle Monday, but the injury is not serious and is not expected to give him any further trouble.

The rest of the squad is in the best condition of the year, and the boys are looking forward to Saturday's opening of their Southern Conference campaign.

The V. P. I. meet will be the first home appearance of the Tar Heels this year. In their early season matches with intersectional rivals they have broken even, and are now ready to issue their challenge for the Southern championship, now held by V. M. I.

RED CROSS AID WIDELY SOUGHT

food and several members sick with a fever. A school teacher who had 135 students in four rooms asked a way to keep the children from starving. "In twenty-five lunch boxes she examined, she found only a cold boiled potato, or boiled cabbage, or hard biscuit with a slice of fried potato tucked in to make a sandwich." To relieve this situation the Wholsum Bread Company gave bread twice a week other food was bought by the chapter, and milk was bought by the teachers.

Lee county, Arkansas, reported: "Lee county has been scraping the bottom of the flour barrel so long it cannot realize it is absolutely clean. There is nothing left. The cupboard is bare. About forty per cent of the population was facing actual starvation when the Red Cross started furnishing them with food."

The workers find that their task is made greater by the necessity of hunting out those who are too proud to ask for aid. A Red Cross worker in Oklahoma reported finding a family of father and five children, barefooted in the snow, but too proud to appeal for help. The mother was dead.

Another Oklahoma county reports people on the verge of starvation and suffering from lack of sufficient clothing. If a blizzard such as they had in January of last year should come, many would freeze to death.

IDOL DISCUSSES MUSICAL GROUPS IN RADIO SPEECH

Member of Glee Club Gives Account of Advantages of University Music Department.

John Idol, senior at the University, delivered a short talk over radio station WPTF, Raleigh, in connection with the series of student activity talks being given by Carolina students. Idol is a member of the University glee club. He was introduced by Red Greene, president of the student union.

Idol gave a brief account of the increasing importance of music in society, made so especially by the vast number of radios in the homes of all social classes. He said that musical appreciation should be fostered and that music teachers and professional musicians should be trained. He then gave a brief account of the music courses offered by the University and of the degree given by the music department. He emphasized the point that a student in the school of music is required to take academic courses as well as those in music.

Idol discussed the South's need of musical training and pointed out the facilities at the University for supplying this need. The University glee club, winner of many trophies in intercollegiate competition, has been known all over the southern states as a concert organization whose programs have established the highest standard in the field of male voice performance. Actual vocal training is given without cost; over one hundred men receive this training in glee club singing every year at Carolina.

Together with the glee club, the band and the orchestra provide training which is open to all students of musical ability on the campus.

Last November saw the dedication of a new magnificent organ, gift of an unknown donor, and the formal opening of the music hall. This hall is in the Carnegie building, formerly the library, which has been completely renovated and rebuilt to meet the needs of the music department.

HAYWOOD NAMED SPEAKER OF PHI

The selection of a speaker for the spring quarter and the passage of one resolution was the order of business of the Phi assembly at its regular session on Tuesday night.

Representative Egbert L. Haywood of Durham was elected over Thomas R. Baldwin for the speakership.

The Representatives, after much discussion, passed a motion opposing any plan of buying seats for the new auditorium at the expense of the students at the University. The motion, as submitted by Representative Lanier, read: resolved: That the Phi assembly indicate its opposition as a body to any proposal for the University student body, now or hereafter, to buy seats for the new auditorium. The motion was passed by a large majority.

Representatives Sisk, Carmichael, Wilkinson, Uzzell, and Haywood spoke in favor of the motion while Representatives Albright and Harris opposed it. Representative Douglas favored a plan to ask the Alumni for aid in securing seats.

Dates For Academic Contests Set By Extension Division

The University extension division has announced that the academic contests for North Carolina high schools will be conducted on the following days: seventh annual Latin contest, February 27; sixth annual French contest, March 13; sixth annual Spanish contest, March 27; and sixth annual mathematics contest, April 24.

All accredited North Carolina public high schools have been invited to enter the contests. Regulations governing the contests have been sent to school officials.

The object of these contests is to increase the interest of high school students in the field of scholarship, especially in the study of Latin, French, Spanish, and mathematics. Last year Greensboro High School won the French and mathematics contests, with Durham taking the Latin, and Albemarle winning the Spanish, prizes. Trophy cups for each contest are given to the high school whose student submits the best paper, with honorable mention for those schools whose students submit the next best papers.

PLANS MADE FOR RED CROSS DRIVE

Committee Headed by Pratt To Ask for Student Cooperation.

Contributions to the Chapel Hill quota of $600 for the drought relief fund have reached $167 according to information given yesterday by Joseph H. Pratt chairman of the chapter. The local committee met last night at the home of Colonel Pratt to discuss possibilities and means of filling the quota within a week. Arrangements are under way whereby the University students may make organized and definite contributions.

The national relief fund totals at present a little over two and one half million dollars. The Red Cross is feeding 750,000 persons in the drought area. Contributions for relief have been made in food and service as well as in money.

From granaries and storage houses in Nebraska, Iowa, Colorado, Idaho, and the Rio Grande Valley, Texas, thirty car loads of flour, corn, potatoes, and other vegetables have been shipped to the drought stricken area. The railroads cancelled all freight charges on them.

Home demonstration agents are helping Ozark farmers to conserve what food they have by butchering the cattle and canning the meat. Since the animals are too poor to sell, and there is no food for them or their owners, the farmers are learning to can meat. Turnips also form a great part of the diet of many of the people in that section.

Aptitude Test Required Of Pre-Medical Students

The Association of American Medical Colleges at their last meeting adopted a ruling which requires prospective students of medical schools within the association to take an aptitude test on February 13, for the year 1931-32.

All applicants to medical schools in the association will be given these tests by the pre-medical school to which they now go.

PROBATION RULES GIVEN BY HOBBS

Dean of College of Liberal Arts Stresses Importance of Study.

Freshmen were warned in chapel yesterday by Dean A. W. Hobbs, of the liberal arts school, that everyone on probation must check two courses at mid-term and must attend all classes unless excused. Also, in order to be eligible to participate in athletic events a student must pass on to a higher class; that is, he must pass at least two courses in two consecutive quarters. He also warned the freshmen that all required freshman subjects, such as history, mathematics, English, and foreign languages, must be passed before the junior year. In order to graduate half of the courses should be passed with a C or better. The same regulations are in force as were during the fall quarter.

Dean Hobbs urged the students not to go through college with a half-hearted and lackadaisical attitude but to exert their intellects in an effort to grasp the real meaning of life. "The trouble is," said Hobbs, "that we have too many college men and not enough educated men." He showed that an educated man has not merely taken enough courses to get a diploma but has probed beneath the surface of things. He advised freshmen to forego so many week-end trips and to substitute some conscientious application to the problems of college life.

Quoting President Lowell of Harvard University, Dean Hobbs said, "You do not acquire an education unless you educate yourself. The rate of faculty to students should not be one to ten but one to one; that is, a man is responsible only to himself."

In closing, Dean Hobbs added that if students realized that college is actually real life, instead of preparation for it, they would realize its seriousness and get more benefit from it.

Dialectic Senate Defeats Two Bills

After a heated discussion in the regular weekly meeting of the Di senate two bills were defeated by the members of the society. The first question, dealing with the plan of letting the government take over the basic industries in this country such as steel and iron manufactures, coal mining, textile and tobacco manufactures as a means of helping the present unemployment situation, was killed by only one vote. Fourteen senators were opposed to the plan while thirteen favored the idea.

Senator Gentry was the only one to uphold the bill while senators Olive, Whitaker, and Dungan opposed the question.

The next question, concerning the sending of a unit of the National guard to protect the striker's jobs at the Danville mills was overwhelmingly defeated by a vote of twenty four to three. Senator Gentry was again the only one to favor the bill, while many of his fellow senators opposed him.

The next bill on the calendar was tabled until the next meeting because of lack of time. This bill dealt with the plan of giving the students more management of student affairs on the campus and more control of extra-curricular activities.

SILENCE PERIOD WILL END TODAY

Rushees to Receive Fraternity Pledge Pins at Six O'clock This Afternoon.

All rushees are requested to go to the fraternity of their choice at any time after six o'clock this afternoon and receive their pledge buttons, stated Jack Ward yesterday. An article in yesterday's Tar Heel made the announcement that the pledging was to take place yesterday afternoon. This mistake was due to some misunderstanding on the part of the members of the executive committee of the inter-fraternity council.

All of the bids were supposed to have been turned in to John Cooper, secretary-treasurer of the council, at the Sigma Nu house before three o'clock yesterday afternoon. All bids coming in after that time were not accepted.

Rushing for this quarter began two weeks ago, January 14, and ended yesterday at noon. The rushing season for the coming spring quarter is scheduled to begin five days after classes begin, and is to last for fourteen days. At twelve o'clock on the fourteenth day the spring quarter rushing season ends, and the silence period begins and continues until six o'clock on the fifteenth day.

The final results of the fall quarter's rushing totaled 301 men pledged by the several fraternities on the campus.

Blue Ridge Summer Group Will Meet Thursday Morning

The Continuation Committee, which has charge of the vocational guidance courses at the Blue Ridge Conference each summer, will meet Thursday morning, February 5, in the office of President Graham to discuss plans for the coming summer's work.

For the past several summers this course in vocational guidance has been given to the delegates at the Y conference. Men from all of the leading universities and colleges in the South have spoken on these vocational classes and have led classes themselves. For two years during his stay here Dr. H. W. Chase was one of the chief speakers.

Dean F. F. Bradshaw, who has charge of securing the speakers and heading the work of this vocational course, has made a name for himself among the Southern institutions of higher learning for being an authority along this line. He made several trips last year and a few last quarter lecturing on the vocational guidance question.

The purpose of this course is to instruct the students how to best choose their life work. By first finding the branch of work for which the student is best fitted the teacher can instruct him concerning the course he should take to find his most suitable vocation.

The members of the committee which meets here on the 5th of February are Dean F. F. Bradshaw, Henry Johnson, Jr., President Graham, R. B. House, English Bagby, and H. F. Comer, of the University; E. L. Cloyd, dean of students at State College, and Professor R. M. Wilson of Duke University.

Almost Well

President Frank Porter Graham, after having been confined to his bed for the past three weeks, yesterday was permitted to take a short walk in his yard. It was reported that he would be able to resume his duties as president within the next few days.

HOBBS ATTENDS COLLEGE MEETING

Lowell Addresses Conference of Presidents and Deans of Universities.

Dean A. W. Hobbs, of the school of liberal arts, has returned from a meeting of the American Association of Colleges at Indianapolis, Indiana. Presidents from Universities, and deans from schools of liberal arts, of the entire country, attended the convention.

Subjects of importance to colleges of liberal arts were discussed, and reports on educational surveys were made. Mr. Reis, of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, spoke on "The College Man's Place in Business."

According to Dean Hobbs, President Lowell of Harvard made the most interesting speech. He was commenting on the reports of the committees which were attempting to decide the proper ratio of professors to students. He said that the proper ratio was one to one, that it took one man to educate one man, and that man was the man himself.

Dean Hibbard, formerly a dean of this University, was present as a representative of Northwestern University.

Dean Eisenhart, president of Princeton, Lorado Taft, a prominent sculptor, and John Erskine, a musician of repute, addressed the delegates. Erskine favored the granting of college credit to students for their ability to play instruments. He said that credit was given for theoretical musical training, as classes in harmony; but that actual ability in playing any instrument was in reality discouraged.

Nearly six hundred delegates attended the meetings. Dean Hobbs was the only representative who went from the University.

McCorkle To Appear In Vesper Program

Professor T. Smith McCorkle of the music department will present a violin concert Sunday afternoon at four-forty-five. He will be assisted at the piano by Mrs. McCorkle. The program is the following: Sonata, Op. 45, Grieg; Concerto, D minor, Vieuxtemps; La Gitana, Kreisler; Humoresque, Tor Aulin; and Le Coucou, Daguin-Press.

SPANISH DANCER TO APPEAR HERE ON FEBRUARY 6

Carola Goya Dance Recital Will Be Initial Performance in New Memorial Hall.

Carola Goya, performer on the first number offered by the entertainment series, comes here February sixth to bring a variety of Spanish dances as the opening production in the new Memorial Hall. La Libertad of Madrid describes the work of Miss Goya in the followng manner; "Carola Goya's dances are of extraordinary beauty, color, and rhythm, and in the finest spirit of the traditional Spanish dance, which, all too unfortunately, is dying out even in Spain. She has caused a genuine sensation." Manuel del Castillo Otero of Seville, the greatest living authority on the Spanish dance, says "Carola Goya gives the true essence of the Spanish dance. All of her dances are absolutely authentic in form and expression. She is taking to other countries the Spanish dance as it really is."

Miss Goya made her first appearance in London before the King and Queen of Afghanistan. She has won universal acclaim in Europe, where she was a sensation.

Miss Goya not only made appearances at the Coliseum and Alhambra theatres in London, but she was chosen to dance at a charity fun under the patronage of Her Royal Highness, the Duchess of York, in the great Hall of the ancient middle Temple, the only dancer to perform in this hall since the days of Queen Elizabeth. She also represented Spain at the International Garden party given by the League of Nations Union under the sponsorship of Viscount Cecil at Hampstead Heath and was hailed in the London press the next day as "Spain's beautiful propagandist of Peace."

Besides her European triumphs Miss Goya has received warm comments from the New York press. Last year she gave eighteen recitals, alone and with assisting artists in New York City. Her last program was presented in Carnegie Hall.

In addition to the authentic Spanish dances Miss Goya offers several numbers of her own creation to music by modern Spanish composers—"Cordoba" and "Mariposa" by Albeniz, "La Vida Breve" and "Ritual Fire Dance" by De Falla, and "Rondolla Aragonesa" and "Andalouse" by Granados, the steps and figures for these, however, being drawn from the inexhaustible store of traditional Spanish dances.

Relations Institute To Participate In Phelps Stokes Fund

Due to the considerable amount of illness among faculty members, the Human Relations Institute scheduled committee meeting failed to meet yesterday and was postponed until next Wednesday, February 4.

Specific business of next week's meeting will be to agree on the first invitations that have gone out to four speakers. A grant of $500 was made from the Phelps Stokes Association to the expenses of the institute. Similar requests to this have been sent to two other foundations.

Unnecessary Profanity

Men and sometimes women are occasionally moved to express themselves with the aid of profanity. They do so without effort and with little forethought. Profanity to them is merely a collection of adjectives which they call upon to emphasize their ideas.

Now there are others who do not use profanity for the sake of emphasis but who employ it for the sake of profanity. Unfortunately the University is afflicted with such a group. Residing in certain of the dormitories in the two quadrangles are a number of persons who have dug deep into the sewers to extract mouthfuls of vulgarity.

No effort is made by them to limit their language to ordinary profanity but they insist upon using words nauseating in their suggestion. And they do so without restraint.

If they were content to display their knowledge of the sewers and gutters before their intimate friends only, we doubt if there would be occasion to complain. But hanging from the windows of their dormitories they fill the air with filthy expressions. They make themselves disgusting to everyone except their own group of cronies who hang around anxious to acquire additional filth for their vocabulary.

An appeal to them would be useless. Their intellect is such that an appeal couched in ordinary language and uncolored by the dirt of the sewers would fail to impress. However, perhaps some of them are not so far gone in their efforts to make not only their language but also themselves repulsive to the average person that an appeal would waken their dying sense of decency. If they must use vulgarity we ask them to do so only in the presence of those who have the proper appreciation of it; at least spare the occupants of neighboring dormitories.

England Faces A Problem

A few days ago Mahatma Gandhi was released from prison. However the freeing of Gandhi in no way lessens England's Indian problem, for upon his release Gandhi said that he expected to be in prison again within a few weeks. The Indian leader said that there was no joy in freedom for him as long as thousands of his countrymen remained imprisoned. When a man of such thought and foresight takes that stand there can be no doubt as to the seriousness of the problem. England must realize that the present situation in India is far from ordinary; the demands of the Indians for freedom are not the usual slight disturbances that may be quickly settled. England is at the crossroads. Will she continue to hold India in suppression or will she become convinced that it is the right of a people to determine their own status?

This problem is not a new one for the British Empire. It has faced similar problems many times in its history. Sometimes the English government has adopted a forward looking policy and by granting a large measure of freedom to the dissatisfied province has successfully solved the problem. On some occasions, however, England has failed to see the wisdom of liberality. Let us hope that England will devote her best statesmanship to a solution of the Indian problem and follow a policy that will bring peace and satisfaction to India and the respect of the civilized world—J. C. S.

With Contemporaries

Grades

The scientific mind has a passion for classification. Whatever else they did or did not do, the earliest workers in most fields of scientific investigation classified their subject matter. In fact, science in its beginnings consisted chiefly of classification.

Perhaps this accounts for the efforts of modern educators, themselves desirous of having education considered a science, to classify each and every one of their undergraduate charges definitely, finally and unquestionably.

In our times, when a pupil enters the kindergarten he is classified according to age, sex, nationality, race, social status, intelligence—in fact, according to every trait which the ingenious and tireless classifiers can conceive.

Their classifications are very precise and scientific. Intelligence is computed to two decimal places, age to the day, social status to the dollar. After being completely classified, the neophyte enters the great classifying machine, commonly known as education. After eight, twelve, sixteen or more years of classification he is given a certificate or diploma which certifies that he has reached a certain stage in the machine.

In a university we have an excellent example of the mechanism which continually and automatically classifies material; the only external aid being the feeding of the raw material. Students are classified into two main groups: junior and senior college. Each of these two divisions is further divided into two classes. Within each class the individuals are classified according to honor points, credits, and almost anything else.

The adoption of the comprehensive examination, now under consideration, would remove much of the classified compartments into which so many students have been flung. Several other large universities have adopted more satisfactory systems of grading and examining.

With the exception of a few outstanding students, Johns Hopkins grades all pupils either "pass" or "fail." Such a system ought to be accepted more generally than it is at present. Certainly the University of Minnesota needs such a change.

Aelurophobia

Aelurophobia is the term which applies to an unreasoning fear of cats, the cats which we keep around the house to frighten off any stray mice or rats. The word itself was first used in this sense by the New York Bookman, back in 1905. Dr. S. Weir Mitchell has done much work along this line, and it is from his reports that we state various examples.

Some great men in history were afflicted by aelurophobia. Napoleon was one. It is said that after his victory at Wagram, while sojourning in the palace of the conquered Emperor of Austria, the famous general called out loudly for assistance. An equerry entered, and found his master half dressed, agitated, perspiring, frantically striking at some unseen object. A cat had hidden behind the bed curtain, and Napoleon, almost as afraid as the cat herself, was making desperate lunges at her through the hangings.

Another of these men was General Roberdean, who left a room because he felt that a cat was in it; he grew pale, faint, and could scarcely breathe. A kitten was then found behind a bookcase. Dr. Mitchell had a hysterical patient, a lady, who on various occasions declared that there was a cat in the room. He mentions thirty others who could tell when a cat was near though it was neither seen nor heard. He reports that it is possible that certain odors are apparent to these people, but in many cases their odors were felt only in their results on nervous systems unusually and abnormally susceptible. Dr. Mitchell learned that cats cause asthma in some people, and others suffer lockjaw in the presence of the feline. Temporary blindness, hysterical convulsions and seasickness may also be ascribed to the same cause. A curious thing about one famous big game hunter is that he is undisturbed by tigers or lions, but is terrified by the tame cat.

Various theories have been advanced by several authorities, but nothing definite has been decided which could definitely solve the actions and fears of these aelurophobes.—Detroit Collegian.

Y WILL BE HOST OF SERVICE COMMITTEE

The local Y. M. C. A. will be host of the student foreign service committee from February 27 to March 1. This occasion will bring student representatives from all over the state under the auspices of the student volunteer movement. The Methodist church has been offered for use as headquarters for the convention. Sam Gorham, vice-president of the local Y, is chairman of the entertainment committee.

REBELLIOUS MEN SEIZE UNIVERSITY

Rebellious students took possession of San Marcos University again recently, determined to hold out against a siege by police and soldiers "until the problem of university reform is solved by the government in accordance with student desires."

The student seizure resulted in the summoning of police and troops who cut off communications between students inside the buildings and those outside. The besieged students cannot receive food and have no blankets.

A strike last October won a partial victory, forcing the government to study reforms, but handling of the reforms by the government again aroused resentment of the students. Police cut off light and water connections with buildings in which the students were barricaded.

University Given $100,000 For New Plan Development

Stanford university has been awarded $100,000 by the General Education board for the purpose of developing a program of independent study, according to a statement made by Dr. Robert E. Swain, acting president of the university. The money is to be used through a period of five years.

Stanford, due to its highly selective student body, offers advantages for this new movement in higher education, according to President Swain. "Stanford has developed, in citizenship and other work in the freshman year and in the independent study plan, a means by which during the past five years a beginning has been made in education for the individual student."

Dr. Swain also stated that this grant will make possible during this five-year period a marked development in the preparation of individual students, particularly in the first two years of their college work.

Plans for the new work under consideration will go into effect during the coming year.

PRAYER SAID FOR SALESMAN'S SOUL

Noble Youth Finds Impious Tradesman Efficient To Last Degree.

Notwithstanding the rumors and accusations that have long been current among critics, there are students on the University campus who have a pious attachment to things religious, and to morals and precepts obtained from the Bible. And it was into the room of one of this small minority that a dapper, smiling salesman stepped the other night.

He had in his hand the usual brief case, soiled by long use, and bulging with books. From the case, he extracted one of the books, and offered it for sale to the Christian student. The volume was a "privately printed" edition of Aphrodite, with the usual pornographic pictures and sketches unduly emphasized. This offer was met by a long harangue from the student to the salesman anent the inevitable end of persons who went about the country selling such books of the devil. The salesman, once convinced of the sincerity of the noble student, apologized for having offended the boy. Nevertheless, that this salesman was worthy of promotion is attested to by the fact that the apologies once over, he drew forth from the hidden recesses of his coat, two subscription blanks — one for the Christian Advocate and one for the Biblical Courier.

There was an extra prayer said that night for the salesman's soul.

CARMICHAEL MADE PARTNER IN FIRM

William D. Carmichael, Jr., recently elected vice-president of the Alumni Association of the University, has been made a full partner in the firm of Baker, Weeks and Harden, brokers, of New York.

This firm succeeded Campbell, Starring and Company, with whom Carmichael had been connected for some time. He is one of the best known of the younger brokers of New York.

Carmichael was formally from Durham. He is a University graduate, and during his student days he excelled in scholarship and athletics. He and his brother, Cartwright, were important cogs in Carolina's great basketball teams of several years ago.

PROSPECTIVE MINISTERS MEET AT PARISH HOUSE

At a meeting of a group of men interested in ministerial work Monday afternoon at the Episcopal parish house, Peter Brown Ruffin and Aubrey Parsley made short talks in regard to the conference of prospective ministers which convened recently at Alexandria, Virginia.

Parsley spoke on the different personalities present at the conference. Ruffin discussed the ideas and subject matter brought out by the various speakers.

Noah Goodridge, assistant minister of the Episcopal church, discussed briefly the work now being done by the church among the students here at the University.

By Don Shoemaker

This column notes with interest the recent campaign conducted by a middle-western college paper to provide the school's gridiron warriors with white jerseys. Among the strongest arguments for the cause was the point that the spectators could more easily observe the passage of quarters in the game by the color of the jerseys. When the jerseys became a light tan hue, the first quarter would be over; when they changed to a dark brown, the half ended; when they became black, the third quarter was in its last stages; and when the stands were unable to discern where player began and jersey ended, the game was over.

At this point it might be appropriate to comment on such a proposal. Maybe it might not be appropriate, but that's none of your business. You read it, I write it, see?

In the first place, using white jerseys would do away with troublesome stop watches. Factories which produce these timepieces could release their men and let them spend their time reading this column. This would increase the death rate and the country would not be troubled on over-population issues.

Secondly, a great deal of breath could be saved by timekeepers who blow the whistle at the end of each quarter. At a great deal of trouble (no sacrifice is too great for our dear public) we figured that exactly seventeen billion, one hundred and twelve million pounds of air could have been saved by timekeepers in the history of football if the white jersey system had been used. We draw our figures from the information that football has been played by 601 colleges and universities in the United States since 1700. (name, address, age and picture of informant sent on receipt of ten cents in stamps). Presuming that each team plays ten games a year, and has done so for 230 years, that makes a total of 1,382,300 games since 1700. The normal amount of lung power will produce three pounds of air to every blow of the whistle. The timekeeper blows his whistle three times during the game at a total expenditure of nine pounds of air per game. Multiply this by the number of games since 1700 and you won't get the figure I got at first. Never mind, I never could pass math one.

Now let us say that all the time keepers in the history of football were brought together and hitched their mouths to the end of a rubber tube leading to the gas bag of the Los Angeles. In one hour, seventeen minutes, and thirty-seven seconds, the giant zep would be inflated and ready for action, thus saving Uncle Sam the expense of gas which would run into millions of dollars. . .M'm, the lad is a business man.

We envy that tip-shot made by Paul Edwards, rangy Tar Heel guard in the tussle with State in the Tin Can the other night. While jumping against a Red Terror opponent under the basket, Edwards tipped the ball into the hoop just as neatly as you please.

Many long hours have we, as center on our Sunday school team, dreamed of doing such a thing. That we believe is the dream of every center, but having accomplished such a feat, we would retire from the game, if for nothing more to prove that it was skill and not luck.

There is nothing so hard as the life of a referee, unless, of course, it is the life of a sports columnist. It seems that the poor basketball refs around here are treated to the Bronx cheer at no little length.

We are told that in the big leagues pop bottles are provided the spectators to throw at the offensive referees or umpires.

Though we have no pop bottles here it might be good idea, by way of keeping up with the Jones, if each pop corn bag was weighted in the bottom with a half-pound of lead foil. We understand that weighted pop corn bags make good missiles.

The bottom of the depression has been reached; upon unfolding a new shirt yesterday, L. O. T. discovered there was only one pin in it.—Detroit News.

FROSH MATMEN MEET GOBBLETS IN SECOND BOUT

Tar Babies Fight in Preliminary To Varsity Match; Yearlings Have Lost But One Meet.

Coach Peyton Abbott's Tar Baby grapplers, defeated in their first match of the season, are scheduled to make their second appearance Saturday. The Tar Babies will meet the V. P. I. freshmen in the curtain raiser of a double bill that will see the varsity wrestlers grapple the V. P. I. varsity in the main event.

The freshmen were decisively trounced in their opening meet two weeks ago by the strong Barium Springs team. The Orphans presented a veteran machine which is undefeated this season, and found little trouble in winning over the green Carolina squad by a score of 25-3.

Thad Hussey, who garnered all the Carolina points in the opening meet, will probably hold down the 118 pound class again, although Jack Tillery, Tom Bennett, and Clarke Mathewson have been showing up well and may get a chance to show their wares.

Ausley Cope got the call in the 126 pound class against Barium Springs and stands a good chance to repeat, although Howard Beebe may be Coach Abbott's selection. Beebe was out due to sickness when the Orphans were met, but he has been hard at work since and is in good condition. He has been showing up well in practice lately, and Coach Abbott may decide to use him this week. Joe Jones has also been working in the 126 pound division.

Mark Best and Mort Hiller have been the leading candidates for the 135 pound berth, and both boys have shown improvement since the last meet. Coach Abbott used Best against the Orphans, but is undecided as to who will get the assignment against the Gobbler freshmen.

Carroll Cahoon has the edge over Jones in the 145 pound division, while Sam Efland will probably work in the 165 pound class.

In the 155 pound department the race is between Marshall Thompson, who worked in that weight against Barium Springs and Frank Blythe who has been brought down from the 165 pound class.

Bob Wells, 175 pounds, with Sam Walens will be in the unlimited. Walens is lacking in experience, but tips the scales at 220 pounds and is considered a good prospect. Neither Wells nor Walens got a chance to work against Barium Springs, and will be making their first appearance before Carolina wrestling fans.

College Sports

(By Don Shoemaker)

An Eastern college is considering an accident policy for its football players. We suggest the following compensation scale:

Running wrong way with the ball—One grand

Fumbling punt—Five "C's".

Player off side—One "C"

Tackling Own Man—One Grand

Broken Leg—Five bucks

Cleats in face—Four bits

Stopping Brass knucks—Ten bucks

And then it won't be long before you will hear something like this:

"See that guy? He's insured for fifty grand!"

"Gosh! He must be an All-American."—Mel Price in the University of Washington Daily.

It pays to advertise, take it from Dr. Walter Meanwell, University of Wisconsin basketball coach.

Dismayed at the lack of tall men on his current cage team, Meanwell inserted the following want-ad in a regular Madison, Wisconsin, paper:

"Wanted—Eligible university man, six feet or taller, for the Wisconsin basketball team. Experience unnecessary. Apply Dr. Walter Meanwell, field house."

To reporters Wednesday, Coach Meanwell announced that Stanley Holmquist, sophomore from Marinette, Wisconsin, six feet two inches tall, without experience, had answered the ad. According to the Wisconsin mentor his new man is a real "find."

Intramural water polo at Washington and Jefferson University, Washington, D. C. has risen rapidly in the role of athletics there. Fraternities and dormitories contest hotly for honors in the water sport which have a vital influence on intramural standings.

Officials of Carnegie Institute of Technology athletic department announced recently that spring football has been abandoned permanently at that institution. It was understood that the movement to do away with spring grid activities was the result of frequent criticism in the recent discussions of over-emphasis of football.

At Gonzaga University, Spokane, Washington, Shoenecker and Le Veaux, forwards, have been playing on that institution's basketball team for four years. The other members of the team have all had three years experience as varsity basketeers.

The University of Michigan believes in tackling lion-sized athletic schedules. On one night this week, four intercollegiate sports will be engaged in; hockey with Marquette University, fencing, with Ohio State, gymnastics, Ohio State, basketball, General Motors Tech.

Basketball for faculty women, wives of faculty men and office employees is being offered by athletic officials of Oregon State College.

TAR BABY QUINT LOSES TO STATE FROSH BY 28-29

Carolina Youngsters Unable To Ring Free Throws To Conquer Wolflets.

The N. C. State frosh quint, led by Browne, forward, edged a 29-28 decision over the Tar Babies Tuesday night in the Tin Can. The Techlets led throughout and at the half held a commanding lead of 17-11. The Tar Babies rallied in the final half and had three chances to tie the score with fouls but missed.

The lads from Raleigh brought a fast, smooth-working team over and jumped off to a flying start. Every try at the basket seemed to put a couple of tallies to their score. The Carolina goal seemed jinxed; shot after shot rimmed the basket only to bobble out again. For a while it appeared as though State would win an overwhelming victory, but just before the period ended the Tar Babies rallied and served a warning to State for the coming half.

The second half was packed with thrills. The Tar Babies got their eyes on the basket and led by Fanny Fisher's long range shooting, crept up to within a point of the State total. Three times the Carolina yearlings had foul shots that would have tied the score, and three times they missed. The game ended just after Harris, Carolina guard, missed a free throw. In the final stanza, the Tar Babies held a 17-12 advantage over the Wolfcubs. It was only their over-anxiousness on those free throws that cost them an extra period.

For State, Browne, flashy forward from Salisbury, who scored twelve points, was the star. Beaghen, lanky forward, also turned in a fine game, ringing up nine points. For Carolina Fisher was the outstanding offensive star, while McCachern and Harris shared defensive honors. Harris also found time to score seven of his team's points.

State won from the Duke frosh by the same margin. The Tar Babies play the Blue Imps on Saturday in Durham in what should be another close and exciting game. The rest of the week will find Coach Shephard stressing foul shooting, for it is in this department that his charges show a decided weakness.

Fencers Scheduled For Three Meets

Jim Lynch manager of the fencing team announced yesterday that bouts with the College of Charleston, William and Mary, and the University of Virginia have been arranged. Letters have been written to several other leading schools in the South which have fencing teams, and other bouts will be scheduled within the next week.

Fencing as a varsity sport was first introduced last year. Several bouts were held during the season, the University winning practically every engagement. The members of last year's team are attempting to stimulate more interest in the sport, and as a step in this direction it was introduced on this campus as one of the intramural sports. Last year consitlerable interest was taken in the game and

Electric Voices Cry, "Stop, Thief!" Before Burglar Has Had Time to Move in His Tracks

By WILLIAM ENGLE
New York Telegram Staff Writer

A bank had a half billion dollars. A jeweler had the Taj Mahal emerald. A lady had a Rembrandt. A gentleman had 750 white mice. Each wanted a battalion of soldiers with an arsenal in reserve to guard his treasure. So each called in a robot and felt safe.

For to the robot sentinels of today—burglar alarmists who protect the financial institutions of New York, thousands of business places and thousands of homes—a concrete steel cavern filled with bank notes is as a little mouse cage. With equal aplomb they keep each secure from marauders.

Over all New York stretches a tenuous, unseen electrical network; the city's menace to the light fingered; its challenge to the ingenuity of arch-pilferers.

Current's Devious Ways

The current flows through tiny wires in what seems decorative wood panelling; it streams through brittle tinfoil that has the look of bright, herbaceous tracery around a window; it follows its course through tinfoil strips so thin they may be plastered around the walls and ceiling of a room and hidden by two coats of paint; it pulses in hairline filament that snarls invisibly in places least of all suspected as traps for the criminal.

A break in the wire, a crack in the tinfoil, and a burglar alarm sounds in a central office of the Holmes Electric Protective Co. When an alarm comes in the guards go out.

Three species of robot sentinel are now used by the company. The equipment, largely, is made by the Western Electric Co.

The newest is the oddest. It spots a burglar with an invisible ray of infra-red light and if he steps into the ray's path the robot turns in an alarm.

Bulb Throws Beam

A small electric bulb, similar to the kind used in an automobile headlight, throws a beam into a room, say, that contains scattered art treasures. At its starting point 95 per cent of the visible light is filtered out and only an infra-red shaft of light, below the range of human vision, streaks into the room.

Typical central office of the electric protective system where the automatic alarms are instantly registered and guards dispatched. Oval: Even a puff of cigarette smoke eclipses the invisible beam protecting a safe and sets off the alarm. Top: The massive steel of this New York bank vault would resist dynamite but a gentle punch on it is picked up by the vibration detector in the tiny box above the door.

Around the room are concealed mirrors. The beam is deflected from mirror to mirror, zigzagging, and finally into the tiny box that houses the sentinel.

The sentinel is a photo-electric tube similar to that used in the Western Electric sound system in talking pictures. It is connected to the central protective office. If a marauder enters the room he can take no more than a few steps before moving into the path of the beam.

Then Cell Shudders

Then his bulk cuts off the beam's journey to its destination, the photo-electric cell inside the tube. The cell, super-sensitive to the amount of light it gets, responds with a shudder. The electric current flowing through it picks up the distress signal and relays shoot it to the central office as a full-panoplied, up-to-date distress signal.

But that is no more spectacular than the performance of another specie of sentinel, a gnome no bigger than a fist, yet able alone to guard the great vault of a bank as infallibly as it protects an aloof Ming vase in a drawing room.

It is a detector of vibrations—a detective so alert that it can feel the infinitesimal movement of a bank vault if a burglar so much as taps with his chisel or twiddles a lock. It is a development of the Western Electric device that was used by ships during the World War to detect the approach of submarines by recording the vibrations which submarine propellers made.

It Ignores Sound

It pays no attention to sound, so one may shout at it and get no response. But it is so sensitive to electro-magnetic waves such as may be produced by surges of electric current in building wires, and to oscillating currents of radio broadcasting that filters have to be used to keep these disturbances away from it.

It is tuned to a vibration frequency similar to that produced when metal is tapped against concrete or steel. But it picks up other vibrations pretty easily, too. And when it detects vibrations its electrical shiver carries the alarm message back over the wires to the central office.

So if a policeman, in trying a door at night, rattles it, he may set up vibrations sufficient to ring an alarm. An authentic case of "Officer, call a cop."

Commonest Sentinel

The type of sentinel in commonest employ is a simple meshwork octopus, who winds tentacles by the thousand around a vault or room. Copper cable may be wound around anything from a whole building to nearly a doorway. Connected with the central office, its distress cry sounds the second it is broken.

Central offices, in various parts of the city, look much like telephone exchanges. The alarms come through to switchboards attended as operators attend a telephone switchboard.

When an alarm is shot in four illuminated buttons, a buzzer and a needle on a dial tell the operator the address of distress, the floor of the building, the nature of the business, whether it is closed Saturday or Sunday or both, its usual time for closing at night and opening in the morning, the secret code number known only to the central office and someone in authority in the business, and the guard station nearest to source of the alarm.

It Happens Quickly

It all happens in the time it takes a burglar to move a step. Maybe he realizes it. Maybe he doesn't. If it is the infra-red ray that has caught him in its path he can't possibly.

In the space of a jimmy-tap, too, the operator connects her line with the guard station and over a private wire telephones the alarm. It is 5-1/5th minutes, average, between the instant of the receipt of the call in the central office and the crisis when a guard calls: "Stick 'em up!"

The robots have to play roles sometimes a little out of character. In one case they had to protect a place not against thieves but against too generous visitors.

Kept Mice On Diet

The Food Research Laboratories, Inc., had 750 white mice and was keeping them on a rigid diet. Calories was the word. But visitors didn't understand. They liked the mice and fed them—playing havoc with the experiment.

So the Holmes Company threw a burglar alarm system around them in the interest of experimental science.

Protection of the banks, insurance companies and stock exchange houses is the most important work of the automatic policemen, but the jewelry stores sometimes weigh them with a fair load of responsibility. Their most notable jewelry job this year was on an importation of $200,000 worth of Indian jewelry and a $500,000 collection of Oriental pearls.

In the lot was the Taj Mahal emerald, fifty-five carats of green fire behind a carved tracery of the daisy and iris, decorative motifs in the Indian palace.

Protected by Circuits

Electric circuits enveloping the cabinets which covered and disguised the safes containing the gems in the Fifth Avenue store gave them their protection.

The bulk of the business is with concerns or individuals regarded as permanent clients. An electric code system connects them and a central office, and every time they open their quarters in the morning and close at night the proper messages must be flashed to the operator. If they are not she dispatches guards full tilt to find out what's wrong or who's acting funny.

The system never has fallen down. It never has been beaten. There is on record no case of a burglar breaking through the electric sentinels without simultaneously turning in an alarm.

If E. W. Hornung were back the book of the month might be "Ex-Raffles."

PURDY CHILDREN GET SCHOLARSHIPS

The children of William T. Purdy, composer of "On, Wisconsin," will enjoy the benefits of legislative scholarships of $300 each for four years, beginning in September, 1931, if a recommendation made by Dean Scott H. Goodnight is approved by the board of regents of the University of Wisconsin at its next meeting, March 4.

Purdy, not an alumnus of that university, originally wrote the tune, which John Philip Sousa has called the "most stirring college melody," for a Minnesota song contest. However upon the advice of Carl Beck, '12, who wrote the lyrics for the present song, he gave it to Wisconsin, where it was introduced in 1909.

Late in 1918, when he was found suffering from an illness which had taken up all of his private funds, a fund was started on the Wisconsin campus to aid him and in the course of a week it had reached $1,150, but Purdy died before the aid could reach him.

Henderson On Lecture Tour

Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the mathematics department of the University, is making an extended lecture tour of New York City and vicinity. His original intention was to make a trip of only a few days duration, but he has seen fit to extend this period. He is expected back within the next day or so.

SIMPLICITY WILL BE KEYNOTE OF NEW YEAR BOOK

"Yackety Yack" Will Contain Ten Etchings by William Steene.

The Yackety Yack staff is at present busy with the details of this year's annual. Most of the material is in, but the dead lines are being stressed for that material for the book which has not yet been received.

The book this year will have no specific theme, and will be unique in this respect, as this publication in the past has tried to single out some phase of University life to build the book around. The idea will be to give an impression of the University as a whole, and simplicity in design will be the keynote.

The cover will be in the class colors of red and white. The sides are to consist of rough red buckram and the backbone will be white. There will be no design on the front of the book, other than the seal of Carolina in gold, in the lower right hand corner. On the backbone at the top will appear the title, 1931 Yackety Yack, Volume 41 in red and gold letters. At the bottom of the back, will be the seal of the Publications Union Board, done in gold.

The inside of the book will carry out the same idea of simplicity as was evidenced on the cover. The pages are to have no borders and the paper and ink will be of an unusually dull finish. The ink will be blacker than that used in the previous issues of the book.

Ten etchings done by William Steene will serve as division pages. These scenes of the University include the six that he recently put on sale at a hundred dollars for the folio. These scenes have also been donated to the library.

As an addition to the book, there will be a section devoted to the pictures of prominent alumni of this University. Then too this edition will contain a section of the pictures of all the past presidents of the University.

The J. P. Bell firm of printers is doing all the printing work on the publication, and the engraving is being done by the Lynchburg Engraving Company. Both these concerns are in Lynchburg, Virginia.

DYER GUEST OF GUILFORD CHOIR

Dr. Harold Dyer, of the music department, had occasion to visit the colleges of Guilford and Greensboro last Wednesday. He is making a study of music courses in all colleges of the state, in the capacity of a member of the North Carolina Music Association.

Dr. Dyer had the pleasure of hearing a special rehearsal of the Guilford College choral organization while he was in Guilford.

Max Noah, director of the Guilford College choir and glee club, talked with Dr. Dyer about the proposal of a reciprocal concert of the two glee clubs, but nothing definite was decided.

Simmons in Duke Hospital

Senator F. M. Simmons has been ill at his home in New Bern for the past several days and was taken Wednesday to the Duke hospital for treatment of a condition which has been troubling him lately.

PRESS RELEASES TWO NEW BOOKS

The University of North Carolina Press yesterday announced the release of "The State Highway System of North Carolina," by Cecil K. Brown, and "The General Strike," by W. H. Crook. The latter is a comprehensive history of the theory and practice of the general strike, with an intensive study of the more dramatic and typical examples of its practice in Belgium, Sweden, Holland, Russia, France, Germany, Great Britain, the United States, South America, and the Orient.

The first part of this book covers the period from Chartism to the World War, and the second with the period following.

Wilfrid H. Cook, who was born in Lancashire, England, holds advanced degrees from Oxford and Harvard, and is now a naturalized citizen of the United States and a professor at Bowdoin.

GEOLOGY ORDER INSTALLED HERE

Sigma Gamma Epsilon, Honorary Geological Fraternity, Takes in Local Organization.

Sigma Gamma Sigma, local geological organization, has been elected to the Sigma Gamma Epsilon, national honorary geology, mining, and metallurgy society, whose membership is composed of juniors, seniors, and graduate students.

Dr. E. P. Henderson of the Smithsonian Institute will install this chapter early in April. It is the second chapter in the South to be elected to Sigma Gamma Epsilon, and the twenty-fifth in the United States.

The charter members are H. M. Gilbert, president; W. T. Holland, vice-president; E. R. Scott, secretary; W. H. Hadley, treasurer; C. S. Maurice, P. W. Mattocks, A. R. Monroe, I. L. Martin, and W. A. White.

McCorkle To Play On Club Program

Next Wednesday at eight-fifteen p. m., the music section of the Chapel Hill Community Club will present a program in the music building. The theme of the recital will be "Living American Composers and Their Works."

Professor McCorkle will play four violin selections; "Romance," a piano composition, will be played by Brookes Fryer; "March," an organ presentation by Mr. B. F. James; "Cantilena," by Professor Kennedy; and a number of songs from popular American composers, to be sung by Miss Helen Eubanks.

Graham To Address Greensboro P. T. A.

The Parent-Teachers Association of Greensboro, has invited President Frank Graham to speak in Greensboro next Tuesday night at 8 o'clock. The arrangements for the speech were made by Mrs. Julius Cone, president of the association. The meeting will be held in the high school auditorium and will be open to the general public.

Morse in Duke Hospital

Dr. W. C. Morse, who went to bed last Monday with an attack of tonsilitis, went to Duke hospital in Durham Wednesday. His condition is not considered serious, however.

DEAN M'CORMICK DISCUSSES LEGAL CAREER IN TALK

Advises Three Years in A.B. School and Three Years Of Law.

The second of the speakers in the recently inaugurated series of addresses to freshmen by prominent men in the University was Dean C. T. McCormick, head of the law school. This talk was designed to be of material aid to freshmen contemplating the study of law as well as to those who are still undecided as to their future careers.

In freshmen chapel yesterday, Dean McCormick opened his talk by discussing the question of indecision on the part of a freshman as to his life's work He suggested that before entering the study of law, one should first make an accurate estimate of himself to determine his exact abilities and qualifications. Unless a magnetic and influential personality is possessed, together with the power of persuasiveness, he advised against the pursuit of law. "A prospective barrister," he said, "must be filled with the joy of attacking any difficult intellectual problem that is presented."

Before one should make a permanent decision Dean McCormick urged that the field be thoroughly examined as to its fertility. He pointed out the excellent position North Carolina offered as a starting place for young lawyers. He claimed that North Carolina showed a better than average field in that the legal profession was not nearly so crowded as in many states. "Whereas the opportunities for getting rich quick are found in the great cities," he said, "a lawyer is sure of a steady income in a rural state such as this." To a well-trained man, therefore, North Carolina presents an excellent opportunity for the practice of law.

As to the rank of the University law school, Dean McCormick stated that it was one of the twenty schools in the country accredited and approved by the American Bar Association. Moreover, a student at the University is eligible to become a member of The Order of the Court, which is an honorary society corresponding to Phi

Dr. Curtis Speaks At Duke Tonight

Dr. W. C. Curtis, chairman of the section of biology and agriculture of the national research council and president of the affiliated American biological societies, spoke tonight at Duke University on "The Effect of X-Rays on Regenerations." Dr. Curtis is brought to the Durham campus under the auspicies of the Sigma Xi chapter there.

His lecture, which is to be in the biology buildings on the west campus, is open to the public.

PI KAPPA PHI CHIEF HERE

Reginald Price, of Charlotte, district chief of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity, was a visitor to the local chapter, Kappa, yesterday. Price is making an inspection tour of the chapters of the fraternity in North Carolina, and after his visit with Kappa chapter he will proceed to State College.

PERSHING TALKS ON AIR TONIGHT FOR RED CROSS

Colonel Pratt Reports $171 in Contributions Thus Far from Local Sources.

Twenty-one members of the local Red Cross committee met Wednesday night at the home of Col. and Mrs. Joseph Hyde Pratt to discuss means of raising the Chapel Hill quota of $600 of the $10,000,000 for the Red Cross famine relief fund.

After a buffet supper, the group heard a report from Colonel Pratt, chairman of the chapter. He reported that up to this time $171 has been contributed by twenty-three persons, the subscriptions ranging from one dollar to twenty-seven dollars. Colonel Pratt stated that it was the desire of the committee that as many people as possible have part in making up the quota, and that while contributions of $5 to $25 will be necessary, contributions of five to fifty cents will be just as necessary and acceptable as the larger ones.

The committee decided to give on Sunday, February 8, from 1:30 to 5:30 o'clock and from 8:30 to 9:30 o'clock three benefit pictures at the Carolina Theatre. These will include a feature picture and two reels illustrating the work of the Red Cross during the Mississippi flood in 1927 and the West Indies Huricane in 1928.

Mrs. M. S. Breckenridge was appointed to head the committee for the distribution of tickets. The committee will conduct a canvass of the town and all who contribute fifty cents or more will receive a ticket to the pictures. Tickets can also be obtained at the Carolina on Sunday. Other contributions are also desired and these can be given to any of the committee or left at Eubanks drug store, the bank, the "M" store, or with Mr. Hill at the University Consolidated Service Plants.

Members of the local committee to whom contributions may be given are: Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Breckenridge, Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Bullitt, Maurice Hill, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Hobbs, Mrs. John Lear, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Leavitt, Mr. and Mrs. R. McClamroch, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Prouty, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Whee-

Golf Tournament Will Start Soon

If the weather continues to be pleasant, the major tournament of the local golf club for this year will be held in a few days. It is for the club championship and the winner will be awarded the trophy offered by the club president. This meet is open to all members and will be a non-handicap tournament of sixteen holes. The ninth hole is ready to be opened, but due to uncertain weather it probably won't be opened until later in the season.

MAENNERCHOR CONCERT

Work on the Maennerchor Concert, which is to be given February 7 in the music auditorium, is being carried on with a great deal of fervor and enthusiasm by the participants. Over fifteen new men have pledged their services to the roster of the Maennerchor. This makes a total of nearly one hundred men.

WINTER PLEDGING SEASON IS MILD

Fraternities pledged four men yesterday: Alber Park of Raleigh to Sigma Nu; William Cromartie of Elizabethtown to Kappa Alpha; Stephen White of Mebane to Alpha Tau Omega; and Jack Trotter of Greensboro, to Pi Kappa Alpha.

The two weeks rushing for the winter quarter which began January 14 ended Wednesday at twelve o'clock. The period of silence lasted only one day, ending at six o'clock yesterday afternoon. Rushees were pledged yesterday between the hours of three and six.

Rushing season for the winter quarter was mild compared to the fall season. Pledge day in October followed three weeks of intensive rushing and a two day period of silence, and the fraternities pledged 301 men.

LYNN RIGGS WILL READ OWN PLAY

"Green Grow the Lilacs," New York Success, on Sunday Night Playmaker Program.

Students and townspeople will be guests Sunday night at 8:30 to a play reading of Green Grow the Lilacs by Lynn Riggs, an Oklahoma playwright who is visiting Paul Green of the philosophy department. The play made its first appearance, Monday night, January 26, under the sponsorship of the Theatre Guild of New York City. Since its presentation several reviews have been published paying tribute to the drama. The following are some which might be of interest.

From J. Brooks Atkinson in last Tuesday's issue of The New York Times says: "Lynn Riggs' Green Grow The Lilacs, which the Theatre Guild produced in high fettle last evening is a hale and hearty narrative of loves, jamborees and neighborly skirmishes out in Indian Territory in 1900. . . . It is not merely a refreshing contribution to the lore of an American Theatre but stimulating entertainment, full of sunshine and the tingle of the open air."

Another review appeared in the New York World the same day taken from Cowboy Love by Robert Littell: "Green Grove The Lilacs is one of the most thoroughly satisfying evenings that the Guild has given us in a long time—full of rich, free humor, salty poetry, and the reckless tenderness that was America's before she was tammed and civilized by fences and mortages and chain grocery stores. . . .It is a glorious breath of fresh air, making us who live beside subways long—for 'way down inside us we are still Americans—for something lost out of our lives, something long ago and far away.

". . . .There is real poetry in it too, besides the excitement and the homely, lyric story, the

GROVES OFF ON SPEAKING TOUR

Professor Ernest Groves, of the Institute for Research in Social Science, has gone to Chattanooga to address two women's organizations on the subject of "Wholsesome Childhood" and "The Ordeal of Modern Youth."

Dr. Groves will also speak before a group in Cincinnati under the auspices of the Junior New Thought Temple on the topic of "Why Men Marry."

GRAHAM OPPOSES FURTHER CUT IN UNIVERSITY FUND

Declares Future of University Is At Stake if Other Finance Curtailments Are Made.

Arising from a sick bed to which he had been confined for more than three weeks with an attack of influenza, President Frank P. Graham went to Raleigh yesterday to plead the cause of education for North Carolina's youths.

Appearing before a joint session of the appropriation committees of the House and Senate yesterday afternoon at a public hearing, President Graham, still pale from the effects of his illness, declared that the figures in the budget recommended by the budget bureau for the University for the next two years "constitute a work of destruction without a relative parallel in the sixty years since the carpetbaggers closed the institution's doors."

"My considered opinion," President Graham declared with emphasis, "is that the budget reductions of the last two years and the proposed 10 per cent salary and wage cut are unwise in principle, unfair in their application, and destructive in their consequences to the public service, public schools, state colleges, and public welfare.

"The teachers have not been on a joy ride and it is hardly fair to ask them to pay for those who have," the head of the University's system of higher education asserted. "It is clearly unwise to cut down the efficiency of those engaged in the most productive business in the state. Depressions are temporary but youth is eternally resurgent with the resources of recovery and advance."

President Graham asked the appropriation committee to restore the $875,000 budget set up in legislative appropriations for the biennium of 1929-31, the amount also recommended by the budget commission at the time. This $875,000 appropriated two years ago was just enough "to meet our bare and vital needs, and yet that was later cut 20 percent, or from $875,000 to $700,000. Now this $700,000 has been cut in the proposed budget to $573,600, making a tremendous cut of 34.4 percent for the brief period of two years.

"What the 34 percent cut will do to the University can best be judged from what the 20 per-

CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERT TONIGHT

The chamber music concert this evening at 8:30 in the Playmakers Theatre will offer several features in personalities as well as novelties in music. Not only will it be Lamar Stringfield's first public appearance as soloist in his native state in four years, but it will also introduce in this section Harold S. Dyer, director of the music department as solist. He will be heard in the solo horn parts of the Mountain Song and Cripple Creek. Still further expression of the selectiveness of musicians to assist in this program is the presence of four student musicians who were in the National High School Orchestra at Interlochen, Michigan, when the Victor phonograph record of Cripple Creek was made.

Licensing North Carolina's Drivers

With the rapid increase in the number of automobiles used in North Carolina during the past few years, the need of some sort of regulation for drivers has become more and more apparent. The number of motor collisions and fatalities is a disgrace to the state. Daily we read the death list and shudder to think of the possibilities of highway travel.

The state has provided good roads. It has enacted laws designed to protect drivers and regulating driving on the highways. And finally it has provided the skeleton organization of a highway patrol to enforce these laws. Yet the state has failed to put teeth into its measures. If a driver is forbidden to drive an automobile in one county of the state the highway patrol has little chance to check violations of this prohibition.

To give proper force to the highway laws in this state a driver's license should be required. Whether an examination is necessary or not does not matter. A driver's license law will give the patrolmen and law enforcement officials some means of driving from the highways careless and incompetent drivers.

Such a law should require a fee large enough to cover the costs of issuance and to provide some funds for the enforcement of the measure.

In addition to a driver's license law the state would be wise to require all drivers or owners of automobiles to carry liability insurance. The highways are becoming collection ground for a number of incompetent drivers who following a collision go into court and sue as paupers. This "pauper suing" is an out and out attempt in many cases to extort money from those of wealth who are so unfortunate as to drive on the same highway with careless and incompetent drivers.

A driver's license and insurance act would add to the cost of operating automobiles in North Carolina, but it would serve to decrease the number of accidents and fatalities which daily fill the newspapers and congest the courts of North Carolina.

We have a fine highway system. A limited highway patrol has been provided which has done extremely good work considering its size. And we have highway laws which seem to serve at the present time only to establish negligence in the courts but not to protect automobile drivers. Until we have a driver's license measure the highway system will only increase our mortality rate and the laws will remain merely more unenforceable statutes.

The Brookings Report

There is being quite a little said here and there about the adoption of the recommendations made by the Brookings Report. There has been almost as much confusion prevalent due to the misunderstanding of the contents of the Report. The recommendations set forth by this research committee are merely "The unification of the administrative departments of U. N. C., N. C. State, and N. C. C. W." As popular belief has it, the committee recommended the complete unification of the plants, equipment and faculty of the two schools.

The advantages which are claimed by the men making the investigations are these:

1. That economies of operation will take place from executive department consolidation due to the doing away with some of the executive members.

2. That a unified educational program would be possible and much more practicable.

3. That much better educational results would take place with the doing away with so much duplication as is now taking place.

We are entirely clear as to the first point that is made, but the last two seem a bit hazy and not very forceful.

As to the advocacy of the adoption of the recommendations, however, we are inclined to the opinion that it would be a wise step to carry out the suggestions made in the Report. The University would inevitably lose prestige for a temporary period because of its greater age and renown than the other two institutions. However, if the consolidation were to be effected as a temporary move to the subsequent consolidation of the plants of the three schools, the University would gain a great deal in the long run. There is now a considerable amount of duplication in the separate plants, and with an intelligent building and planning program, the transfer could be made within a decade or so without prohibitive expense and with great gain to the State, the taxpayers, and the University in the offing.

With Contemporaries

Be Modern, Girls!

The women of the Hill say they are modern. They wear fashionable clothes, they smoke, they swear, and a few drink, but they still believe that it is up to the men to entertain them and that they should have to take no part in the expenses of a date.

They evidently believe that the man is receiving a big favor when they give him the asked for date, and consequently he should have to pay high for it. Just an ordinary date to the movie will make some sort of a hole in a man's pocket, when it includes transportation, the price of admission, and drinks afterwards.

When a girl has only an occasional date with a fellow, perhaps she should be excused from the "Dutch treat," but when she is with him practically all of the time and shared none of the expenses, she is nothing more than a little "gold digger."

Don't be afraid to offer your men won't mind!—Daily Kansan.

"Canadian" Universities

McGill, and a number of other Canadian universities, with all their large buildings, fat prospectuses, and imposing looking lists of professors, are suffering from an inferiority complex. This statement is best substantiated by quoting from the writing of an outstanding graduate. He refers to McGill as a university with "English staff, Scottish traditions, American methods, and general stodginess"—A serious mixup indeed. Most Canadian universities, in other words, are afraid to assert themselves. They are afraid to rely on their own powers of organization and teaching.

The French universities may be considered exceptions. Progress, with them, may have been slower, but more substantial and sure. The mixup of the other universities, however, is owned up to without a blush. Our system of athletics is copied from the American. Our unimaginative lecture system, with frequent examinations, much notetaking and cramming, is also American and is much like a grownup high school system. We recognize their limitations but are afraid to introduce a new system of our own making.

Professors who have been educated in Canada are every day seeking jobs in the United States. Why? Because opportunities in Canadian universities are few and far between. There is too much importing of learned gentlemen from the British Isles who are appointed because of an imposing list of degrees and nothing else. In pioneer days, this was desirable. Now Canadian universities are trying to grow up, and are afraid to give up their rompers.

But this inferiority complex is not confined to the governing authorities of the Canadian universities. It is evident among the students as well. A new American system of organization is eagerly watched for at all times. When the Scarlet Key Society was copied from a society at Dartmuoth half a dozen years ago, the method received a little opposition. We are clamoring for international sport. We are not interested in playing games with universities west of London, Ontaria. As a student remarked at the time of the founding of the Key society, "We are still seeking salvation from without instead of from within."

"As I see it, the students of McGill were told that opposition to American ideas was useless beceause we were already organized on American lines. And yet we still talk about the Scottish tradition, and vote our Lord Rectorship. Ye Gods!"

Yes, we at McGill, and other Canadian Universities are afraid of ourselves. "Self-reliance" holds no meaning to us. We are satisfied to take new methods as they are introduced by other people, without taking the trouble to make up a few of our own.—McGill Daily.

MOORE BRYSON

When Block left word with the editor that he would be unable to contribute his column this week, the editor decided that in order to let the Law School Faculty know how seriously Block is taking his examinations a pinch hitter would be appointed. The pinch hitter accepted on the understanding that his name remain unknown.

This uderstanding was necessary, for since commencing his column Block has assumed a hunted animal expression. He daily receives threats against his life and only recently he was threatened with a law suit. Being thoroughly insolvent Block didn't mind the law suit, but he does hate to walk home on dark nights, and he informs pinch hitter that he is taboo among certain co-eds.

Quite frankly Block shouldn't fear his life. Most of his cracks go unnoticed as half the people they're directed against are too dumb to understand them and take them as compliments.

Not being a frequenter of the Co-Ed shack pinch hitter can't tell you any bright ones on the courting couples (?) down there, but dropping into Jimmie's the other morning he noticed that one senior student who has been a Pi Phi social outcast ever since he fell in and then out of love with one of them was surrounded by eight recently initiated Pi Phi's.

And he has been responsible for one of them missing her journalism class on a number of occasions of late.

John Idol, attender of a number of sororities' conventions, suggested that if the current business depression continued he would be forced to begin a "back to nature" movement. He has the endorsement of pinch hitter unless cold weather intervenes.

The advent of warm weather has evidently stirred the political blood of one campus official. Although he worried himself and his friends into a state of collapse last year when he was candidate for a campus office he is reported as exerting his oratorical powers to secure another. Those on the "in" know who he is and pinch hitter after noticing his unusual activity asked him the trouble. In his usual forensic style he responded that some students felt that his candidacy would improve the general morale of the campus. And he is supposed to be literary! The resultant of his oratorical endeavor is precipitated upon the campus bi-monthly.

There was discovered the other night at the Co-Ed shack the "goo-goo-eyes" couple to whom Block referred last week catching another of their "just friendly dates." They claimed that "it is all over" but some seem to think otherwise. Maybe Block will tell us more next week.

A certain student was bemoaning his fate the other day. It seems that he was invited to attend Sweet Briar Dances, but planning to study for comprehensive examinations and being anxious to attend the Basketball tournament in Atlanta he declined. Now he has discovered that the comprehensives and the tournament will be held the same week-end and he has already refused both invitations. If he is a good diplomat he'll be found at Sweet Briar February 6th.

There were a number of disappointed co-ed daters last night when they discovered that the reception held by the Woman's Association was open to members of the faculty and their wives only.

This pinch hitting isn't supposed to be wise cracking but perfectly serious writing. That is unless someone objects and then it will have been written in fun.

And by way of a postcript the editor of the Daily Tar Heel has been in a terrible humor ever since he assigned this. He thinks someone will guess whom some of the comments refer to. And he says then it will be either his life or mine.

DEAN M'CORMICK DISCUSSES LEGAL CAREER IN TALK

Beta Kappa. To illustrate the esteem in which editorships of the North Carolina Law Review are held it might be mentioned that the editorials of this publication are often cited by the North Carolina Supreme Court.

There are three methods of entering the law school according to McCormick. The first is the two-year course, which is composed of a rather difficult group of pre-legal studies. The second is the method of presenting an A. B. diploma for four years work for admission. The most ideal one, however is the three-year course in the A. B. school in prepartion for entering the law school the four year. The regular A. B. diploma is awarded the fourth year as if no change of schools had been made. Anyone contemplating law should become a member of either the Di or the Phi Society to gain invaluable experience for future work, advised Dean McCormick.

STATE COLLEGE RECEIVES FOUR TRACTS OF LAND

State College was given four tracts of land this week totaling 840.82 acres. The property lies in the northern section of Durham. It is to be used by the forestry school of the institution, and according to the officials of that department, the gift was one of the most important ever made to the forestry division.

BOXING GAINS IN POPULARITY

With the passing of each intercollegiate boxing match here, the fistic sport seems to grow more and more popular. Crowds increase each year, and general interest in the sport is rising at all times. Many are of the opinion that the boxing soon will be second only to football, pushing aside both baseball and basketball. Some give it the top position. Here is what Bill Cox says in the Greensboro Daily News:

"Let me urge you to attend a college boxing meet. I guarantee you will be given more thrills than you ever saw in any professional ring, that is excepting outstanding cases like Dempsey and Firpo. And if you think those boys are in there merely slugging away until one or the other of them drops, you are in for another surprise. . . . I think college boxing — everything considered—the best sport they offer, not excepting the highly publicized game of football."

The outstanding teams that Carolina and Duke have been putting out during the past few years, together with State College entering the ring this year, point to a promising future for the fistic sport. If Tar Heel boxing teams continue to turn out such stars as Ad Warren, Ed Butler, Archie Allen, Noah Goodridge, and John Warren within a period of four years, they will have no trouble in continuing a monarch in the sport as it rises to a peak in popularity.

BASKETBALL TITLE IS UP IN THE AIR

Now that Duke, Davidson and Wake Forest have finished their examinations, many things are likely to happen during the next eight or ten days. The Big Five situation is quite muddled at present, Davidson being the only team undefeated. The standings to date are as follows:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Davidson	2	0	1.000
Carolina	2	1	.667
N. C. State	2	2	.500
Duke	1	1	.500
Wake Forest	0	3	.000

With Carolina meeting Duke tomorrow night and State college next Tuesday for the second time within one week, the complexity of the problem should be changed considerably. The Tar Heels won't get a chance to even the count with Davidson until February 12, but in the meantime Davidson will hook up with other North Carolina teams to have their leadership placed in jeopardy.

Coach Ashmore has been putting the squad through stiff scrimmages during the past few days, and has given them several new plays which should give Joe Croson and his cohorts much trouble Saturday night.

By the end of next week something should develop within the ranks of the Big Five, and we believe that the Tar Heel quint will have much to do with these changes if Paul Edwards' eye continues good, and the other forwards develop accordingly.

SOUTHERN CONFERENCE

The basketball sport in the conference is being controlled by Georgia and Alabama at present, and they seem to be the ones struggling for the title. Many teams have lost only one game however, and they may not be quite as strong as early season indications would tend to show.

The Tar Heels go on their trip through Virginia and Maryland at the end of next week, and during this trip will meet five conference foes. The Phantoms have been the dark horse in the cage sport before. There is no reason why they should not be a potential threat at Atlanta in the tournament.

"YOU WILL GET EYES FULL . . ."

"You surely will get your eyes full Saturday night," said Coach Chuck Quinlan to a Tar Heel reporter several days ago when talking about the wrestling bouts with the V. P. I. Gobblers tomorrow night.

And judging from what we have been able to learn about the Gobblers, especially Graves and Captain Bailey, the spectators will get more than an eye full. With these two best bets being pitted against Captain Frank Stallings and Conklin, there should be two close bouts.

Carolina boasts other capable wrestlers in Ferguson, Tsumas, Cowper, and Albright, who should turn in good bouts also. It will be the first chance that local fans have had to see the wrestling team in action this season, and since the opponents are predicted to be unusually strong, the whole card should be filled with good bouts.

MITMEN EXPECT STIFF OPPOSITION FROM TECH PUGS

Gobblers Boast Four "Sure Point" Winners in Towler, Mehaffey, Jones and Stark.

TAR HEELS IN TOP FORM

Levinson, However, Has "Charleyhorse" Which May Prove Handicap.

Approximately twenty persons will compose the Tar Heel delegation to Blacksburg today, when the varsity and freshmen mitmen meet the V. P. I. squads Saturday night.

The teams will leave Chapel Hill at eight o'clock this morning and will have a work-out this afternoon at Roanoke, Va.

The varsity maulers who will make the trip are: Captain Goodridge, Martin Levinson, George Biggs, Dale Holderness, Cecil Jackson, Obie Davis, Hugh Wilson, and John Warren.

Members of the freshmen team who will make the trip are: Cliff Glover, Furches Raymer, Billy Brown, Jim Pace, Vernon Guthrie or James Wadsworth, Ben Langdon, and Paul Hudson.

Although in general the Tar Heels are in tip-top shape for their battle with the Gobblers, they will be somewhat handicapped by the injury to Levinson, flashy feather. Marty sustained a severe "charleyhorse" while sparring, and while it won't prevent him from fighting tomorrow, it will handicap him in his great asset—speed. And considering that Levinson's opponent is Towler, who last year was the finalist in the Southern Conference featherweight class, the outlook appears somewhat blue.

Gobblers Boast Four Winners

The Gobblers boast of four "sure point" winners within their ranks, Towler, Capt. Mehaffey, welter, Jones, lightweight, and Stark, heavy. It'll be a battle royal when Levinson, Holderness, Captain Goodridge, and Warren mix with this quartet.

Things are beginning to look brighter for Coach Rowe, Platt Landis has removed the cast from his hand, and should be ready for duty in two weeks. His return will greatly bolster the light heavy class, since Hugh Wilson, is the only light-heavy fighter.

"Artful Dodger"

Captain Noah Goodridge has been styled "the artful dodger" because of his ability to hit his opponent a staggering blow and get out of the way before the other man in the ring has time to return the punch.

Many are predicting that the Tar Heel leader will push aside the other lightweights in the conference with his skill and finesse. He has been well in the front for two years, but has not yet succeeded in copping the conference title.

FIRST FOOTBALL GAME SATURDAY

Collins Announces That Series Of Bi-Weekly Contests Will Start Tomorrow.

Coach Chuck Collins yesterday afternoon announced that the schedule of bi-weekly winter football games will get underway tomorrow afternoon in Kenan stadium at two-thirty o'clock.

The lineups for the two opposing teams was not made public yesterday, but several teams have been running signals and holding brief dummy scrimmages for the past few days, so two strong combinations should take the field tomorrow.

Among the backfield candidates that have shown up well this week are: Stuart Chandler, Haines Lassiter, John Peacock, George Houston and John Daniel. All of these, except Peacock, were dependable reserves on the varsity last fall and are expected to be ready to start into the series of games tomorrow afternoon.

Red Gilbreath probably will be one of the pivot men in the game. Veterans Ellis Fysal, Bob Blackwood, and Herb Newcombe, having been among those running signals recently, should be others to get the call tomorrow afternoon.

The complete schedule of games for the six weeks will be announced early next week. The coaches have been waiting for the size of the squad to be determined before making definite team assignments and the final schedule.

Seniors on last fall's team, such as Captain Nash, Maus, Magner, Erickson, Lipscomb, and others, probably will act as coaches for the bi-weekly games with Coaches Collins, Cerney, Enright and Sapp serving as the officials. Magner and Erickson, already have been assisting the coaches in coaching.

This coaching arrangement has been followed for the past two winters.

WRESTLING TEAM WILL TAKE FINAL WORKOUT TODAY

To Be Up Against Strong and Well Balanced Team in V. P. I. Gobblers.

TAR HEELS WON LAST YEAR

Freshman Fights Will Precede Varsity Bouts Saturday Night At Seven.

Coach Chuck Quinlan will put his varsity mat artists through their final workout this afternoon in preparation for the first home meet of the year with the V. P. I. Gobblers here tomorrow night. In addition to being the first home appearance of the Tar Heels, the meet will give Coach Quinlan's boys their initial look-in on Southern Conference competition.

The Gobblers, led by Graves and Jones will present a strong, well balanced team with ample experience. Carolina eked out a close 17-13 victory at Blacksburg last year, and the Virginia Technicians are out for revenge.

The Carolina lineup is still in doubt. However, Pete Usher, veteran 118 pounder will be in his regular position again. He got a time advantage over Charley Lawson, his nearest rival Wednesday afternoon after a hard scrap, and settled the argument for the present. Lawson has been pushing Usher hard for his position all year, but has never quite managed to master the little veteran.

Stallings at Regular Berth

Captain Fred Stallings will hold down his 126 pound class berth as usual while Mayne Albright, in spite of a slightly lame back, will be seen in the 135 pound division. Stallings is undefeated this year, while Albright has a fall over Fisher of Princeton to his credit.

Don Conklin, the spectacular and dependable sophomore 145 pounder, will be in his usual place, as will be Percy Idol in he 165 pound division. Both boys are sophomores and have been showing good form this winter. Idol is now in shape for the first time this year and is expected to start turning in his share of points. He went great as a freshman, but has been held back by sickness this season.

Tsumas Pushed by Spell

Harry Tsumas, the veteran 155 pounder will probably be in his usual berth, but Jimmy Spell, a reserve from last year has done some great work during the past week and may get the call over the veteran. Spell won the intramural tournament in the 165 pound class last winter.

It is still doubtful as to whether Marion Cowper will be in condition to work in the 175 pound class this week. Cowper was down with influenza for some time and is yet to regain his full strength. If Coach Quinlan decides not to use him, Fred Ferguson will likely drop down from the unlimited class to fill the position with Ken Hampton going into Ferguson's regular weight. Cowper is a veteran of two years experience while Hampton is a newcomer. Hampton won the intramural unlimited title last winter.

Freshman Bouts at Seven

Preceding the varsity matches, which are scheduled to begin about half-past eight o'clock, the Tar Babies will meet the V. P. I. freshman grapplers in a preliminary set-to. Coach Peyton Abbott has not definitely decided upon his lineup, but will probably use Thad Hussey in the 118 pound class. Hussey was the

QUINT POLISHING ATTACK FOR USE IN DURHAM GAME

Carolina Has Edge Over Duke on Paper, But Ashmore Knows Going Will Be Rough.

WORKING ON NEW PLAYS

Duke Authorities Planning to Handle Record Crowd in New Gymnasium.

The Tar Heel basketball team is exerting every effort to be in tip-top form for the game with the Duke Blue Devils at Durham Saturday night. Despite the fact that on paper Carolina has an edge over the neighbors since State beat Duke and Carolina beat State, Coach Ashmore knows that the going will be hard against Duke.

During the last two afternoons the quintet has tried new plays and polished up the old ones, so as to have a smooth working combination on the floor. Jimmy Moore was finding the basket rather consistently Wednesday afternoon as was Paul Edwards, who saved the team from probable defeat by sinking three field goals in the final minutes of the State game last Tuesday night.

Carolina has not defeated Duke in basketball since the 1928 season, and every man on the squad is anxious to turn the tables this year. Duke, however, is smarting under defeat also since losing to State College last Saturday.

Duke authorities are planning to handle a record crowd in the new gymnasium, and it is likely that a large delegation from here will go over to Durham to see the game.

THE TAR HEEL CLUB ANNOUNCES ITS FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

SPECIAL SUNDAY DINNER

GRAHAM OPPOSES FURTHER CUT IN UNIVERSITY FUND

Declares Future of University Is At Stake if Other Finance Curtailments Are Made.

cent cut already has done and is doing every day of the current year."

President Graham then directed attention to the fact that the morale of the faculty, in the face of an increasing student body and decreasing appropriations, already had been severely shaken, with the consequent loss of many men who had left to accept salaries two or three times what they were receiving here; and that other men with tempting offers who had stayed probably would leave if the proposed cut is adopted.

Some extracts from President Graham's statement follow:

"Let us all, charged with a responsibility of far-reaching consequences in the policy making of a great state, as far as humanly possible, strip our minds of any prejudgment and consider the meaning of the figures in this budget in our capacity as makers of budgets and builders of the state. We believe in budget making as a basis of state making. The keeping of books is necessary to the keeping of the commonwealth. The University adopted the budget system before the state did and has tried to use the budget, not as a straight-jacket, but as an instrument of economy and efficient life.

"The 20 per cent which went into effect July 1, 1930, was a terriffic blow which the University, shaken to the very center of her being, has taken standing up in a good sportsmanship along with her sister institutions, but with a destructive strain on the inner resources and quality of her life and their lives. At the end of the last University year our losses in men of the first rank constitute a list of president, dean, scholars, scientists, and great teachers eminent in America for their productive and inspirational values.

"For the most part they have not been replaced. The English department lost in the year four full professors and one associate professor. These have been replaced by only one full professor and two associate professors. The gap is being filled by men in the lower grades of instructors and teaching fellows. The French department has sustained the loss in the year of one associate professor and two instructors with replacements only by teaching fellows on part time. The chemistry department lost a remarkably able industrial chemist who was at work upon a chemical problem of potential use to the southern cotton farmer but Iowa called him to turn his teaching and his experimental mind to the use of the grain growers of that great agricultural state. He preferred to stay here, but the misgivings about our future and his family budget tipped the scales to Iowa with a certain loss to our students in investigation along his own frontier and a great possible loss in economic power to our people.

"Thus we might go on in illustrating the damage already done in the teaching life by frustrations and fears caused by the cut. Thus a most serious destruction is going on in the quality of the life of the University.

"This destruction of quality, these losses in men and appropriation, shook the morale of our faculty last spring. Entirely too much time of the faculty was misdirected from the main business of study and teaching to the perplexities of cruel adjustments. Necessities of a lowered existence crowded out opportunities for the productive life. There has hardly been a day this year that the staff at Chapel Hill has not had to wrestle with some problem of the cut, compensation in revenues, and makeshifts of adjustment to hold the body and soul of the University together. Without the cooperation of all the men and women, teachers and office force, who have not spared themselves to see the University through these critical months, the plant already impaired in value, would simply have broken down under the double strain of an increasing student body and decreasing appropriations.

The Governor's Views

"These consequences of the 20 percent cut constitute the back-ground necessary for the understanding of the 34 percent cut which we face together in the figures of the proposed budget. What those figures mean to the University of North Carolina and the other institutions and agencies of the state moved the Governor to write into the budget these significant words which I now call to your attention at his suggestion: 'The director of the budget and the commission frankly feel grave concern over the situation. The question of enforcing upon the next biennium the effects of the reduction in appropriations and at the same time bear total operating expenses—this question the director and the commission feel should be thoroughly studied and determined in the light of the present situation and of possible alternative methods of meeting it, and they feel impelled to call the attention to the General Assembly to the imperative importance of facing the question and the budget in its entirety.' Let us all join the Governor in this grave concern and study thoroughly, as he suggests, the effects of the reductions in appropriations.

Unfair in Application

"I know something of the terrible economic situation in the state and country. I know something of the almost heroic collection of large sums of back taxes from powerful financial interests by the present administration in helping to tide the state over these critical months. I am not insensible to some of the patriotic impulses of those who champion the radical budget proposals as the way to meet a desperate situation. Yet I wish to say that it is my considered opinion that the budget reductions and the ten percent salary and wage cut is unwise in principle, unfair in its application, and destructive in its consequences to the public service, public schools, state colleges, and the public welfare.

"Let us take, for example, the salaries of teachers. It is clearly unwise to cut down the efficiency of those engaged in the most productive business in the state. Salaries are part of the basis of the productive power of the teachers. Up to a certain point, certainly not yet reached in North Carolina, the salary of the teacher is a guarantee of the security of spirit and well-being necessary for the most creative work.

"The salary of the teacher is comparatively modest, even in a time of depression, for persons of like ability, training, and life investments. Those in business and the other professions whose incomes in a depression come down as a minimum toward the maximum salaries of teachers consider such reductions as intolerable.

"Despite the deep satisfactions intrinsic in the teaching life, the failure to provide a decent salary scale tends to keep out and drive out superior persons and impairs the value of those who remain. If teachers volunteered to give up a part of their salaries, as many would do in the public interest, a people who know what they owe their children, would refuse in the interests of the public. Salaries of teachers and public servants do not go up correspondingly in times of prosperity and should not be singled out to come down in a time of depression by what in effect is an extra 10 percent income tax on one group.

No Joy Ride for Teachers

"The teachers have not been on the joy ride and it is hardly fair to ask them to pay for those who have.

"If the ten percent cut has for its purpose a relief for business it should be remembered that the efficiency and productive value of public education is the chief business of the commonwealth. If this ten percent cut is only an emergency measure it is yet such a radical and dramatic precedent that it will qualify the contract and tenure of teachers for a generation. If the ten percent cut is a measure to pay off the debt, we should remember that the schools and colleges are the chief resources in the long run by which the debt will be paid. Me must pay dollar for dollar and interest, too. To tear down is a wasteful way to pay up.

"Depressions are temporary but youth is eternally resurgent with the resources of recovery and advance. Let us pay up the long running debt by the long-run building up of the capacities and powers of the people. We must build on the solid ground of public health, public welfare, and public education as the foundations of an intellectually effective, economically productive, and a spiritually beautiful civilization. Close to the heart of it all are the teachers in the schools and colleges whose salaries constitute a part of their working equipment for the day's job.

"These considerations are intensified in the case of the state colleges and the university. It is my responsibility and my joy to speak without apology for the university of the people of North Carolina. Her life is interwoven with almost a century and half of the history of our state. The University is the soul of the soul of North Carolina. Tear her down and you tear across the heart strings as a people. Rising from the ruins of reconstruction she has these fifty years been gradually and wholesomely building in the strength of faculty, in the quality of her work, and in the spirit of her student body, into one of the great universities of America. Deposited out of a great past for my detached recognition and your information as we fight for her life in this her darkest hour in fifty years, is a faculty of productive scholars and teachers recognized all over the nation as a great scientific and economic asset to North Carolina and one of the strongest intellectual and spiritual agencies at work in America. These men work quietly but their names are respected in two hemispheres. They are subject to the constant pressure of call from the greatest universities in America.

"Among the professors we have lost within a year, four more than doubled their salaries and three received increases from 33 1-3 percent to 75 percent. In most of these cases the men had declined these and other previous offers of larger salaries. Yet the misgivings last spring about the policy of cuts and its effects on the opportunities of their work made them fit subjects for the new raid on our faculty forces.

"On the other hand, four members of our present faculty have refused offers of salaries more than double their salaries here. One here at $5,000 refused an offer of $10,000. Six days ago he was asked whether he would go for $12,000. His going would be a loss to the whole South. For our purposes he is irresplaceable at any salary.

"The more salary cannot take him away. But suppose we continue to cripple his work and take away his opportunities and satisfaction in his work and reward his refusal of an increase of 140 percent by cutting his salary 10 percent! There are men in this faculty who have gone into debt to invest seven and ten years in university and advanced training to equip themselves to come back to teach faithfully in the university of their native state and then reject larger offers elsewhere to remain here. They have served greatly. This threat of destruction to the University and their work has baffled them and hurt them. They wonder about the meaning of it all.

"The proposed budget confiscates large proportions of student laboratory fees in all departments of the University, for the rest of this year and all of next year. We can but believe that a mistake has been made without knowledge of its unfairness to the students in a direct confiscation of their money for other purposes than for which it is expressly paid. Such a practice is indefiensible on the part of a self-respecting state.

"Also indefensible is the taking over in the budget of ten percent of the Kenan fund, the Lodoux and other fellowships into the general fund for the state budgetory allocation. This shows a reckless and wasteful disregard of the effects of such a budgeting on the possibility of future endowments."

poetry of plain language kicking its heels with delight in the open spaces like a colt."

Born at Claremore, Oklahoma, in 1899, Lynn Riggs at an early age shook the dust of Claremore from his feet and made his way to Chicago, where he worked for the Adams express company. Not long after he was in the far west, working on practically nothing a week for the motion pictures. There ensued a short period of college education at the University of Oklahoma, during which he wrote a good deal of verse and incidentally his first play, which was called Cuckoo. It was in the author's words "pretty dreadful," but it played unroariously.

Early in 1925, while he was at Santa Fe, New Mexico, he made his first "honest" attempt to write an Oklahoma play, a one act production entitled Knives From Syria. This was produced under the direction of Ida Raugh. A satirical comedy of Santa Fe life characterized his next play, called The Primitives. His first serious long play was Sump'n Like Wings, contracted for by the Actor's Theatre in New York, and subsequently dropped. Big Lake was written in 1925 and produced in April 1927. Shortly his arrival in New York in 1926, Riggs wrote a realistic American tragedy called A Lantern to See By, not yet produced. With the exception of The High Mountain, the manuscript of which he later destroyed, this completes the list of Mr. Riggs' finished plays. He is now working on two others.

The fact that Lynn Riggs has farmed, punched cattle, been night clerk in a small Oklahoma hotel, ridden a freight to Chicago, read proofs for various newspapers, reported, sung all over the Middle West, published poems, worked on a ranch, and clerked at Ma Macy's would be included in a more complete biographical sketch of this playwright.

CORNELL CHEMIST LECTURES HERE

Dr. Wilder D. Bancroft Talks Before Sigma Xi Group and Chemical Society.

Dr. Wilder D. Bancroft, famous chemist of Cornell University, delivered a lecture on "Colloidal Chemistry, and Its Bearing on Medicine" last night in Venable hall before the Sigma Xi and the North Carolina chapter of the American Chemical Society.

Dr. Bancroft's field is chemical investigation, and he has done research work in the subjects of light, alloys, irreversible reactions, electrochemistry, and the chemistry of colloids. He has won many laurels in the field of chemistry, the most outstanding being an honorary degree from Cambridge University. He also holds several honorary degrees from American universities. A member of the many notable scientific societies, including the National Academy, Philosophical Society, Societie Chimique de France, and the Electrochemical Society, Dr. Bancroft aided in founding the famous research laboratory at Cornell.

The North Carolina chapter of the American Chemical Society was guest of the Sigma Xi fraternity at dinner last night at which Dr. Otto Stuhlman, Jr., president of the local scientific group, delivered an address of welcome. Dr. J. M. Bell also made a short talk. Following the dinner the group assembled in Venable hall to hear Dr. Bancroft's lecture.

While at the University the famous chemist is the guest of Dr. F. K. Cameron, professor of chemistry.

GEOLOGISTS ARE ON LEAVE WITH RESEARCH WORK

Professors MacCarthy, Schwartz And Prouty Working on New Geological Principals.

Several professors of the geology department are engaged in important research work at the present time. Many of them have published papers in scientific magazines, and others have had papers accepted which have not yet been published.

Dr. McCarthy is trying to discover the source of the sands along the Atlantic coast. His latest report was published in the Daily Tar Heel a few days ago.

Dr. Schwartz is away on leave this year with the United States geo-physics laboratory in Kentucky and is testing methods of prospecting with certain geophysical instruments. He is particularly interested in those instruments that use the conductivity of electrical waves in determining the location of strata beneath the earth's surface. He is trying to prove that these instruments will be successful in locating oil fields and may be able even to determine the exact position of the oil by the conductivity of the oil. He will probably be gone until next year.

Dr. Prouty was away on leave last quarter and was engaged in work on the structure of triassic basins, especially those basins found in Connecticut and Massachusetts. The triassic basins are found between here and Durham and between here and Ra-

Red Cross To Offer Special Program

Instead of the regular Guild Sunday afternoon program on Sunday, February 8, there will be a continuous program of another feature from one-thirty to five and from eight-fifteen to eleven o'clock. The Guild is stepping aside this date in support of the Red Cross, and to assist the organization in its drive for additional funds. Members of the Guild hoped to contribute their funds from the picture of that date, but as yet the membership is not strong enough, and the latter plan was adopted as best.

The weekly Sunday feature program of the Movie Guild will be resumed on the following week, Sunday, February 15.

KOCH TALKS TO SOPHOMORES AT CHAPEL MEETING

Says Theatre Is Excellent Means of Self-Expression and Outlet for Natural Talent.

Professor Frederick H. Koch in sophomore chapel yesterday emphasized the value of dramatic training to young college men. He observed that the opportunity for self-expression and for practice in amateur theatricals offered by the University of North Carolina in the form of the famous Carolina Playmakers was one of the best in the country. He traced the development of this group and the steady improvement in the quality of Playmaker productions during the past ten years. Originally the try-outs, together with the actual productions, were held on the small stage in Gerrard Hall. Koch related how a curtain was hung across the balconies to serve as the front part of the stage and, because there were no rear entrances or dressing-rooms, the players were obliged to don their costumes in the Y building and make their way onto the stage by climbing through a window. Since that time remarkable improvements have taken place, as evidenced by the Playmakers' building and by the improved character of their productions.

"The theatre," said Koch, "is not only an excellent medium of expressing one's feelings and thoughts but is an outlet for natural talent." He defended the modern talking picture as being the best opportunity for the average person to find recreation and relaxation outside of the legitimate stage itself. "By the stage one learns to know himself by seeing how others live and act," he said.

Many former university students who have gained success and renown were mentioned by Koch. He told of one of these, Paul Green, winner of the Pulitzer prize for the year's most outstanding play several years ago. Green received much of his early training by work on the Playmakers when a student here. He told of several other outstanding young playwriters who were formerly with the Playmakers.

A special course in drama has been arranged for the spring quarter, Koch announced. This is in addition to the courses in English drama, playwriting, production, and make-up now given. These courses offer special inducements to students either contemplating the stage as a profession or to those interested merely in the cultural aspect.

GRADES IMPROVE IN WINTER TERM STATISTICS SHOW

From the annual report of the registrar's office on the grades of the several fraternities on this campus for the year 1929-30, the Pi Beta Phi sorority takes first place in the list with an average for the entire year of 2.74. The Zeta Psi fraternity runs the girls a close second with a year's average of 2.75, while the Sigma Deltas come in third with 2.82.

The total fraternity average for the fall quarter '29 was listed at 3.32, while the winter and spring averages showed up better with each having 3.24. The average for the entire year was 3.27 for all of the fraternities.

The academic averages for the entire campus ran somewhat higher than that of the fraternities with a yearly average of 3.34. It was apparent that better marks are made in the last two quarters in the year than in the first. The campus average for the fall quarter '29 was 3.48, while the winter quarter's average dropped to 3.33, and the spring average down to 3.25. Thus showing a steady increase in good grades as the year progresses.

Eighteen of the fraternities came out for the entire year with an average above that of the total of all the fraternities, while nineteen of the orders dropped below the fraternity average.

Of the total thirty-seven fraternities listed in the report, twelve of this number fell even below the average of the entire campus. Both of the girls' fraternities came out at the top among the first four, with the Pi Beta Phi's coming out in the lead and the Chi Omega's taking fourth place.

The following is the final list of the fraternities for last year. The grades of the professional students are taken into consideration in the final tally. The list is: Pi Beta Phi, 2.74; Zeta Psi, 2.75; Sigma Delta, 2.82; Chi Omega, 2.86; Acacia, 2.96; Beta Theta Pi, 2.97; Pi Kappa Phi, 3.02; T. E. P., 3.05; Kappa Sigma, 3.09; Phi Kappa Sigma, 3.11; Phi Kappa Delta, 3.12; Delta Sigma Phi, 3.15; S. A. E., 3.16; Chi Psi, 3.16; Chi Phi, 3.19; Sigma Nu, 3.20; Z. B. T., 3.21; Phi Gamma Delta, 3.22; fraternity average, 3.27; Phi Sigma Kappa, 3.28; Sigma Phi Epsilon, 3.31; D. K. E., 3.32; Delta Tau Delta 3.32; A. T. O., 3.34; Pi Kappa Alpha, 3.34; academic average, 3.34; Theta Kappa Nu, 3.35; Alpha Lambda Tau, 3.38; Theta Phi, 3.41; Sigma Epsilon, 3.42; Kappa Alpha, 3.43; Lambda Chi Alpha, 3.47; Sigma Chi, 3.48; Phi Delta Theta, 3.48; Delta Psi, 3.49; Sigma Zeta, 3.54; Sigma Phi Sigma, 3.55; Theta Chi, 3.61; and the Phi Alpha, 3.67.

Infirmary List

The infirmary now has the traditional thirteen men sick. They are Jesse B. Mass, S. C. Cubbage, Richard Hunshaker, Clarence Lamb, Aaron Barr, Charlie Loftin, Newbern Piland, J. T. Peauk, Kathleen Fennell, Fremont Shephard, C. E. Wilder, P. C. Willard, and W. W. Lucas.

GRADUATE SCHOOL OFFERS POSITIONS IN TEACHING LINE

Twenty-Six Fellowships Are Available for Part Time Instruction Students.

The deans of the graduate schools of the two North Carolina universities, Duke and Carolina have issued bulletins concerning the various fellowships, scholarships, and assistantships in their schools. Duke offers twenty-eight definite fellowships and twenty scholarships as well as a number of appointments as teaching assistants and readers. The University of North Carolina offers twenty-nine definite fellowships, fifteen scholarships, from eight to twelve research assistantships, and a number of places as teaching assistant.

The twenty-six teaching fellowships at the University are open only to men, each fellow being expected to give a part of his time to instruction. These fellowships carry with them free tuition and a stipend of $500.

A limited number of appointments are made as teaching assistants, the holders to give half their time to teaching. These give free tuition and a stipend of $500 to $800.

The fifteen University scholarships are open to men and women and give free tuition.

The Ledoux fellowship in Chemistry, which is open also to men and women, has a stipend of $300 in addition to free tuition. There are two Graham Kenan fellowships in Philosophy paying $700 and free tuition.

From eight to twelve appointments are available in the Institute for Research in Social Science for which one year of approved graduate work is prerequisite and the holders of which have to give their full time to investigation of problems in social research. The annual stipend for these will not exceed $1500.

Duke University offers the Angier Duke Memorial Fellowship of $1000, two University fellowships of $800, seven of $750, and eighteen of $650 each. These fellows will be required to give assistance in reading papers, in laboratories, or in other duties. Fellowships are sometimes divided between two applicants.

Twenty scholarships paying $350 each are also open to graduate students, the scholars to give a limited amount of assistance in departmental work.

In addition to these fellowships and scholarships, a number of appointments as teaching assistants and readers will be available, carrying a compensation ranging from $350 to $800. Those receiving $500 or more will not be able to carry a full program of graduate studies.

All holders of these fellowships and scholarships at Duke and all graduate assistants carrying a full program of work will be expected to pay the same tuition, matriculation, and minor fees as other graduate students. The tuition fee of graduate assistants not carrying the full program of work will be adjusted with regard to the studies followed.

Staff Notice

There will be an important meeting of the editorial board of the Tar Heel Sunday afternoon at five-thirty in the offices.

Physics Colloquium Convenes At Duke

Graduate students and professors of Physics of the University, State, and Duke met Thursday afternoon at five o'clock in the new physics laboratory of Duke University, for the regular monthly meeting of the Physics Colloquium.

The principle paper of the evening was delivered by Dr. Otto Stuhlman, Jr., of the University physics department, the subject being "Electrodeless Discharges in Helium." Dr. Stuhlman discussed the work done by Henry H. zurBurg, teaching fellow in the department of physics.

The Colloquium is composed of graduate students and faculty members of the institutions mentioned.

M'CORKLES WILL RENDER MUSICAL RECITAL SUNDAY

Violin and Piano Compositions By Famous Composers To Be Played.

Mr. and Mrs. T. S. McCorkle will give a violin and piano recital Sunday afternoon at 4:45 in the new music hall. They will play a Sonata by Grieg, a Concerto by Vieuxtemps, and three smaller pieces; "La Gitana," by Kreisler; "Humoreske," by Tor Aulin, and "Le Coucou," by Daquin.

Grieg was a Norwegian composer, and is one of the moderns. He died in 1907, and seems to have established a permanent place for himself in musical literature. The product of a broad education, Grieg became imbued with the idea of propogating the idiom of Norwegian folk music as a basis for formal composition. Accordingly he devoted his life to this, and in the opinion of many critics he limited the scope of what he might have accomplished by so doing. Be this as it may, by the very fact of its folk-like themes Grieg's music becomes attractive to layman and musician alike. This Sonata, Op. 45, on the Sunday program, shows unmistakeably this chief characteristic.

Vieuxtemps was a violinist of outstanding ability in the middle 19th century. As a composer for that instrument he has come to be regarded as an authority. His works are very sympathetic to the style and possibilities of the violin, at the same time being quite exacting in their requirements. This Concerto, the D minor, is one of the popular numbers of this type on violin concert programs.

Kreisler is too well known as a violinist and composer to need explanation. He too turns largely to folk themes for his material. La Gitana is based upon a Spanish-Gypsy folk tune of the seventeenth century. Tor Aulin is a Swedish composer, not so well known but apparently very capable. The Humoreske included on this program is only a small piece, but extremely clever. Almost every one knows "Le Coucou" by Daquin. It is a bit of modernism in that it is realistic. But in form it is old, being built as a Rondo, one of the earliest instrumental forms. Michael Press has made the violin transcription that is used on this program.

Mr. and Mrs. McCorkle have done a great deal of concert work for the past ten years, especially in the middle West and

GRAHAM'S SPEECH RECEIVES PRAISE

University President Silences Harriers as He Appeals for Needs of Institution.

President Frank Graham, who for the past three weeks has been confined to his bed with a severe attack of influenza, "made the greatest impression of any man who has appeared before any appropriations committee in this generation," stated the state papers yesterday.

The articles in the several papers said that a large number of the members of the committee who had been in favor of the proposed cut had boasted before the meeting how they were planning to harrass the little president when he got up to make his appeal. Yet after President Graham had completed his talk, in which he pictured the decline which the University has been going through and what a still larger retrogression the reduction in appropriations would cause, not one of the boasters opened his mouth when the chairman of the committee asked for questions. Instead, as the University head took his seat, the committee burst into applause, and many of the schemers came upand expressed their feelings in regard to the speech. Representative Garabaldi, of Charlotte, who had planned to be one of the chief harriers, came up to the president after the talk and said, "Mr. Graham, I want to tell you that you have done us a great deal of good."

When referring to the recommendations of the budget commission, the University president stated that the figures constituted a program of destruction without parallel in the 60

NEXT PLAYMAKER PRODUCTION SET FOR WEDNESDAY

"East Lynn," by Lynn Riggs, Is Satire on Modern Psychological Play.

The next production by the Carolina Playmakers is to be East Lynn, a play by Lynn Riggs. Wednesday night, February 4, is the date for the performance.

The play will be given as a satire on the modern psychological play. The entire action will take place in front of a cage with masks representing forces of fate influencing the characters. With the death of Lady Isabel, the tragic problem is finally finished. The lights fade out and the two mask faces are last things seen. The entire cast follows:

Sir Francis Levinson, Everett M. Jess; Archibald Carlyle, Mr. Blissell; Lord Mt. Severn, Horace G. Ward; Justice Hare, E. R. Oettinger, Jr., Richard Hare, E. V. Deans, Jr.; Mr. Dill, John O. Zimmerman; Officer, Robert L. Rigley; Little Willie, Mr. D. D. Carroll; Isabel, Bess Jones Winburn; Barbara Hare, Jo Norwood; Miss Carlyle, Alice E. Walker; Joyce, Hazel Bowers; and Wilson, Miss Reed.

Knight's Address

The address of E. W. Knight, who is on leave from the School of Education, and Mrs. Knight, for the next few months, will be 23 Blackstone Apartments, Rue Lafayette, Shanghai, China.

President Graham Speaks

President Graham in his forceful and timely address—it might be more properly termed a plea—to the joint session of the appropriations committees of both House and Senate of the Assembly epitomized the feeling not only of those communities which have as nuclei state institutions, but also of all far-sighted citizens. The reduction of twenty percent and the proposed additional reduction which will entail a total reduction of over thirty-four percent within a two-year period have caused proponents of education in the state to view with alarm the prospect of a budget which would appear absurdly inadequate for the maintenance of a high standard. There is also the additional prospect of a salary reduction for faculty members and other employees. Such a situation has just called forth indignation from every quarter.

What we admire about the Graham speech is its outspokenness. It was stated in terms which are notable for clarity that with a reduction in salaries many of the University's best men will leave, and that in the face of the approaching dilemma many of our best men have already gone to other fields for reasons not altogether selfish. The University as President Graham said, was willing to suffer a retrenchment and did not protest when the budget was cut in order that the state's finances might be relieved during the depression. But now that a reduction is proposed which is entirely out of proportion we feel that all friends of public education should protest against a program which would tend—temporarily at least—to kill the progressive spirit of education.

President Graham has made no bones about the state of affairs: he has painted a true picture of conditions and of consequences which must inevitably flow from the proposed reduction in material resources. If in the light of the facts presented our legislators can enact a bill which would curtail thirty-four percent of an insurance policy in this time when protection for the future is most necessary, then we indeed cannot say much for their business ability.—B. M.

Obvious And Workable

So far as we have been able to discover, nothing has been done or even seems about to be done about the question of new seats for Memorial Hall. There was a rumor in the air that students might vote a three year tax on themselves, such tax to be added to the individual student's quarterly bill. Some students have used our lack of new seats as additional anti-R. J. Reynolds propaganda. In their ranting they have almost gloated over that lack.

If the state cannot or will not appropriate funds for seats, and apparently it cannot or will not, then the answer is obvious. It is so very apparent that we hesitate to imply a reflection on student intelligence by bothering to give the answer. Of course that answer is the alumni. It could not be anything else.

The University, when it asks its alumni for money, is in no sense of the word begging. The role of solicitor is entirely consistent with its dignity. Each alumnus who is able should pay back to the University the money the state spent on his education. It's the only decent thing to do. There's no earthly way of compelling any alumnus to be square, of course. Some alumni can pay nothing. In that case there is no possible obligation. But we know there are more than enough alumni able to pay back at least a part of the state's money.

The plan of asking the alumni has this in its favor—it will work.—V. A. D.

Grades And A College Education

Grades in any kind of an educational institution are seemingly as inevitable as football, Classes, examinations and week-ends, but like these kindred topics of collegiate discussion grades, as an established system, need revising—if not abolishing. The evil of grading as it is, and has been for some time, practiced throughout the schools—anywhere in fact where the golden emblem of Phi Beta Kappa rules the vests—seems confused, illogical, antiquated and hopelessly unfair.

Grades are as whimsical, as uncertain as individuals; they are necessarily so because those individuals portioning them out are only human beings after all, not cold, impartial machines. No professor can unhesitatingly decide on a just computation of the work done under him by each student. What is one man's high grade is another man's flunk—and vice versa. Some there are who parcel out A's as if they were freshly minted golden eagles; others squander them recklessly in a manner highly gratifying to the rejoicing undergraduate. For no matter how much of a don't-give-a-damn attitude the student may assume toward the subject of high grades, no one has yet been known to protest at receiving an A. And no one will as long as the pater familias scans the report card.

In some courses the manner of grading is as fair and logical as any method that could be devised—barring accidents. Courses in mathematics furnish an example, subject in which quizzes can be definitely tabulated for their worth; certain science courses are another example. But in other subjects the student is utterly at the mercy of an instructor or, worse, of a quiz master who has not even had personal contact with the student. This individual grades, say, a history paper, for just what he thinks it is worth, then passes on to the next. It has been boiled down to a matter of routine in which his judgment stands, whether the grade be exceptional, satisfactory, or poor. Yet if another man, as fully acquainted with the subject as the first, had passed on the paper (or other exhibition of a student's work), there might have been a difference of from five to twenty-five points in the grade; an F might have been even a C, a C an A or B, etc. Then of course an A might have been a C or D—the rule naturally works both ways.

But consider how slipshod the whole business is! And this characteristic is seen in many other evidences of the whole involved question of how a student is to receive just reward for his scholastic standing. A man might study his Latin or German every day in the quarter, he might take a deep, serious interest in the subject; yet if he misses a few days, and as a result does not prepare the assignments for those days, he goes to the final with a big risk. Every passage given on the examination may be from the very part the student has missed during absence; the chance element has given him a C or D, perhaps even an F, on a course for which he deserved A or B. And similarly a member of the same class might have loathed the subject, read from a "pony" when called on in class, and then before the exam memorized a few likely looking passages as preparation. Having by chance been a lucky gambler this man receives a high grade, by all the laws of logic totally undeserved.

Two men of equal mentality and erudition and in a literature course together, and eleven novels are assigned for the quarter's work. One man laboriously reads them all: he gets a C. The other "bulls" his way along without reading a book and gets an A. Is this fair? Not in accord with the nature of the course which was to give the class an idea of the content of the novels; not to afford them practice in the excellent fine art of slipping through college without working.

The whole matter appears to call for study, for a revision of some sort. Perhaps the undergraduate schools might employ to advantage the grading system of the graduate courses: H—high, for exceptional work; P—pass, for fair or average work; F—failure. This would allow less latitude for the professor, with all best intentions no doubt, to equivocate and poise betwen A or B, C or D,—a process indirectly setting a false value on the whole matter of grades which, after all, give no indication to the value obtained from a subject. But evidently there must be some method of giving credit, of separating the sheep from the goats, and of delighting the heart of that species known as the "grade hunter" (whose goal is not merely Phi Beta Kappa but 36 A's—and who will go to extreme and even ridiculous lengths to keep such a record unsullied). So the present awkward system continues year after year and nothing is ever done about it. —R. H.

Where Are Our Leaders

It this time of stress when it seems that the appropriations for the University will be so low as to make the maintenance of its present standards almost impossible, where are our leaders? Do they not realize that a backward step in education will be disastrous to the future of the state? That the University cannot stand still, but must either go forward or backward? Will they stand by and allow a backward move? Are they afraid to fight for progress because the unknowing multitude clamors for economy? Are there no Wileys, no Pages, no Aycocks in our midst? Can they be oblivious of the fact that a state without leaders is doomed to follow an irrational path? That the end of a leaderless state is disaster? That the end of an uneducated people is intellectual stagnation? Will no one fight for the future? Can it be possible that they do not realize that the hope of the state lies in the University?

Surely they know that the University is no longer statewide or even sectional in its scope, but is a national institution. We cannot limit its expansion and progress by comparing it with other southern universites, but must compare it with the best in the nation; and we cannot allow it to suffer in the comparison. Just as North Carolina is taking its place among the leaders so must its university move higher up the ladder of progress. This cannot be accomplished with reduced appropriations but can be brought about only through increased appropriations.

Where are the men who will fight against the will of the majority? Where are the loyal North Carolinians who will let nothing stand in the way of progress? Where are our leaders?—J. C. S.

Keys And Civilization

A key carries little meaning for most of us. It is just a thin slab of metal, notched at one end, with which we open a certain door. It lies, for the most part, within the dark cavity of our pocket or hand-bag; forgotten until momentarily released from its dungeon to open a door. And the hand that holds it rarely realizes the full import of the piece of toothed metal it inserts into the lock.

The key stands for far more than the narrow meaning of the word itself. It is the symbol that represents the very essence of our present civilization. We must have power and gold. We look with suspicion upon every man for he may be an obstacle in our path, and therefore he is our potential enemy. We must be careful. We must lock up our possessions, our knowledge, our secrets, for he may steal them.

We have lost our faith in mankind. We look at our neighbor with distrust, and we lock the doors of our house against him when we are not at home. Every man is a thief, and we must lock up our gold where no greedy fingers can touch it. We lock our place of business; we lock our car; we put our thoughts into a diary and lock that in some secret recess. There is hardly a thing we own that we do not lock away somewhere.

We have not learned to unlock things. We cannot get along without locks and keys. We are far too civilized for that. Only the uncivilized races of history have never used locks and keys. Yet, perhaps this would be a better world to live in if we became uncivilized enough to throw all our keys into a vast furnace and reduce them to molten uselessness.—P. L.

With Contemporaries

Free Speech In Cuba

The decision of the supreme court of Cuba declaring the action of President Machado in suspending the publication of several opposition newspapers unconstitutional presents an interesting situation in a country practically run by a dictator. Will the president permit the newspapers to resume publication in pursuance of the decision, or will he in true dictatorial fashion keep them suppressed?

Newspaper censorship is one of the problems more acute in a 'one-man' country. Foreign dispatches, notably in Russia, Italy and Rumania, have been shortened, parts left out, or suppressed altogether. Cuba is, of course, because of its intimate relation with the United States, unable to carry out any of the above functions of censorship. Yet recently President Machado ordered confiscated and suspended indefinitely certain Spanish language newspapers, ostensibly for treasonable reasons, but actually because their editorials and stories were extremely embarrassing to the administration.

Freedom of the press is one of the constitutional guarantees to United States citizens. Two editors in Indiana were recently released from prison by a superior court where they had been placed by a judge whose decision in a certain case they had criticised. If newspapers may not criticise administrative, judicial or executive actions, there is an end to the type of government we choose to call democracy. Yet in Wisconsin, if memory serves us correctly, a bill was passed by LaFollette interests providing for confiscation of newspapers which were guilty of attacking what amounted to administrative policies. This bill was aimed at two or three particular organs which were becoming embarrassingly aggressive in their editorials.

In Cuba, it is understood that the President sees an outlet through an act to be passed governing the publication of newspapers and periodicals, and locating the responsibility of "objectionable matter" upon the publisher and his employees. This bill will, if passed, make a joke of freedom of the press, since the decision of what constitutes "objectionable matter" will undoubtedly be left to the administrative officials, thus giving them leave to suppress papers which may, at an inopportune moment, have revealed or discovered a lucrative graft in connection with some branch of the government, or otherwise become a thorn in the side of whatever government reigns. A policy of permitting newspapers to editorialize as they see fit will or ought to lead to better government. All parties have their official organs and someone will always rise to defend an attack on one side or the other.—Michigan Daily.

"Winning" Degrees

Yale university is making drastic changes in its curriculum intended to make passing grades more difficult and to weed out inferior students.

These changes are based on the theory that college degrees, at least those from Yale, should be "won" rather than "earned." There is a subtle distinction between the two terms. To win a degree connotes superior achievement. Earn implies a specific amount of time and money spent and the meeting of standards meant for the average in an A-B-C-D fashion.

It is certain that under the prevalent system most degrees are at best earned rather than won. Any normal person who will go to a modern university, spend four years of his time, a certain amount of money, and a fair amount of earnest effort and concentration can have his B. A. or B. S., let alone advanced degrees.

Probably a combination of the two theories is the solution. It would seem that an "A" student should have more recognition of his sheepskin and that some of the "D" students should be weeded out. But no one will begrudge the awarding of a degree to a person who has expended an honest amount of energy and met certain specific requirements even though his accomplishments cannot be labeled superior.

On the other hand, advanced degrees must be reserved for those of superior achievement, they must be "won" rather than earned—or their meaning will dwindle to that of a particular educational factory's trademark. —Daily Kansan.

Lightning Weak Compared To Man-Made Power

It was recently found out that the most powerful stroke of wild lightning ever measured by man would not be able to run the City of New York's power lines more than a half of a second. This discovery was made several days ago when a stroke of 5,000,000 volts was caught on an electric line in Arkansas and its measurements in watts and amperes was reported to the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

These figures strengthen the statement made by the late Charles P. Steinmetz that lightning is weak compared to the silent flow of power from man-made dynamos.

Tar Heel Cagers Clash With Duke Tonight

BIG FIVE TITLE RATING AT STAKE AS QUINTS CLASH

Carolina's Defenses Due For Real Test at Hands of Blue Devil Aggregation.

Carolina's basketball defenses are slated to get a real test when the Tar Heels meet Duke in Durham tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

Joe Croson, elongated Blue Devil center, has been one of the deadliest sharpshooters in the Big Five for three years. George Rogers, forward and co-captain with Croson, is rangy and an especially fine shot from the side of the court.

Capelli, forward; and Colley, Robertshaw, Shaw and the other youngster-guards are all fast-movers who bear constant watching.

Except for the V. P. I. game, when Carolina yielded thirty-one points, Carolina's defenses have been well nigh impregnable, no other team having scored more than eighteen points on the Tar Heels.

If the defenses cracked once, however, history may repeat itself, and Carolina supporters are trusting that Captain Artie Marpet, Tom Alexander and Page Choate, letter guards, will be at their top game for the Blue Devils.

Alexander and Paul Edwards returned to the lineup to feature Carolina's 22-16 victory over N. C. State Tuesday night, Edwards leading the scorers; Carolina expects to have full strength for Duke.

That may or may not be enough, for besides meeting a feast, tough quint, Carolina will be playing on a foreign court, and most coaches agree that such a taxation means ten points.

Carolina's second place standing in the Big Five will be at stake, and the Tar Heels will be fighting their hardest with a probable starting lineup of Edwards and Moore, forwards; Dameron, center; and Alexander and Captain Marpet, guards.

Duke is expected to start with Rogers and Capelli, forwards; Croson, captain-center; and Robertshaw and Shaw, guards.

Students Invited To Use Golf Course

The golf committee of the Country Club wishes to extend an invitation to students to play on the course as often as possible. The Committee is of the opinion that student players improve the course not only as a source of revenue but for other reasons.

The expenses are less than on any other course in the state, and tickets may be secured at the Book Exchange or at the Student Supply Store.

Each student must play according to the rules of the club which are: Each student must provide his own clubs and bag. No one is allowed on the course except those playing. Because of the short distances, each player must be especially careful about driving into players ahead of them.

Tie Up Towser

Police headquarters has issued a warning to all citizens who own dogs to keep them at home or make sure that they are properly accompanied and guarded when on the streets. Local policemen have received orders to dispose of all stray dogs.

BATTLE BETWEEN STAR CENTERS IS FEATURE OF TILT

Both Dameron and Croson Lead Respective Teams in Scoring.

Durham, January 30.—Two blonde-haired centers, Sandy Dameron for the Tar Heels and Joe Croson for the Blue Devils, will stage an individual battle as a sidelight to the Duke-Carolina cage contest at the Duke gym here to-morrow night.

The personal affair between the two centers is attracting as much attention as the hot game which is expected between the two teams. Both Croson and Dameron are leading their respective teams in scoring and both are the cogs around which their teams' offense is worked.

The star Duke pivot man, who measures six feet four inches in height, has the edge on Dameron in that respect, but the Carolina jumper is faster than the Duke co-captain.

As for the game between the two teams, it will be a fight for second place in North Carolina's Big Five, and a win means a great deal to either team. The Devils have not played Davidson as yet and are anxious to be in a position to take first place from the Cats when they meet next Tuesday. To accomplish their aim they will first have to beat the Heels.

Carolina has the comparative score dope in its favor by a large margin. They whipped State by six points after the Terrors had downed Duke by a five-point margin. However, the game will be on the Devils' home floor which should about even affairs.

Carolina will probably use Moore and Edwards at forwards; Dameron at center and Captain Marpet and Alexander at guards. Duke will place co-captain Rogers and Carter on the floor at forwards; co-captain Croson at center; and Shaw and Robertshaw at guards.

The freshman teams will stage a preliminary to the varsity event starting at seven o'clock, with the main affair scheduled to get under way at eight-twenty.

Duke and Carolina freshman teams both lost to the State frosh by the same score, 29-28. Duke's loss came after an extra period.

DIXIE FENCERS HERE IN MARCH FOR TOURNAMENT

The Southern Fencing Conference meet will take place here in the Tin Can March 27th and 28th. Carolina has been twice victorious in the meet, defeating Georgia Tech in 1930 and South Carolina in 1929 in the finals for the championship. This year the following southern colleges expect to have entrants: Georgia, Georgia Tech, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, William and Mary, and possibly several other schools will announce their entrance later.

Intramural fencing will begin with mass instruction at the Tin Can Monday and Tuesday by last year's coach. All persons wishing to enter the intramural contests will be provided with full equipment. Each fraternity is allowed two teams, no limit being placed on the number of dormitory teams.

One of the lesser movie officials insist that the ten-cent motion picture will soon be with us again. The trouble is, however, that they'll continue to charge $1 for it.—New York Evening Post.

TAR BABY QUINT MEETS BLUE IMP CAGERS TONIGHT

Carolina's freshman quintet travels to Durham tonight to battle Duke's Blue Imps in the preliminary to the Carolina-Duke varsity game. The freshman game is scheduled to get underway at seven o'clock in the new gymnasium with the varsity encounter to take place immediately afterward.

The freshman game promises to be a repetition of the State frosh game here in the Tin Can last Tuesday. The Techlets nosed out the Imps by a lone tally in an extra period. The Dukemen boast a victory over the Baby Deacons, beating them one more point than the Tar Babies did. Therefore on paper the two teams are very evenly matched and the tussle will be a fitting introduction to the varsity clash.

On Thursday night the Tar Babies won a very listless game from the Reidsville high school by the score of 23-11. The game, which was to be a walkaway, and scheduled merely as a chance for Coach Shephard to give the whole squad opportunity to play, served only as a chance for the Tar Baby forwards to get all the bad shots out of their system. To expect a win over the Imps, the Tar Babies will have to snap out of their erratic playing.

The team that will probably take the floor tonight will include: Fisher and Weathers, forwards; Minor or McGlinn, center; and McCachern and Jones, guards.

SPORT SHOTS

By Jack Bessen

The nearer the Carolina-Duke game approaches, the more one realizes that the winner tonight will be the state champions.

A victory over the Blue Devils will just about convince our boys that they are the class of the state, while a victory for the Blue Devils will go a long way toward keeping the state title at the Durham school. At the present, the Tar Heels have a slight advantage over the Blue Devils, having won two games and lost one, while the Devils have won one and lost one. The only team leading the Tar Heels is Davidson, which has won two games for a clean slate. The Wildcats are the dark horses of the Big Five race, but it is doubtful whether they can take the measure of the Tar Heels again or whether they can beat Duke.

The Tar Heel mitmen left yesterday morning for a twin bill with the V. P. I. Gobblers tonight at Blacksburg. This was to have been "a breather" on Carolina's suicide schedule, but it has turned out to be one of the hardest meets of the year.

The Gobblers lost a close fight to Virginia, 4-3, and any team holding the Cavaliers to such a close score is not to be played with. The Gobblers have four excellent battlers in Towler, runner up in the Southern Conference featherweight division, Captain Herb Mehaffey, welter, Jones, lightweight, and Stark, unlimited. All of these men are experienced boxers and can mix with the best of them.

GOBBLERS OPEN CONFERENCE MAT SEASON TONIGHT

V. P. I. Grapplers Wrestle Frosh And Varsity in Tin Can At Seven O'clock.

V. P. I. and Carolina open their Southern Conference wrestling season here tonight. The varsity teams clash at eight-thirty, the freshmen at seven o'clock.

The Gobblers placed second in the Conference tourney last year and have a veteran team this year. Carolina has already beaten Princeton and held Navy, unbeaten since 1926, to 19½-12½.

Every match is expected to be tough, but the special feature will be between Captain Frank Stallings and Colby Graves, V. P. I. 125-pounder.

Stallings is the real star of the Carolina team, and in the Navy meet he wrestled Theobald, Navy's undefeated star, to a draw that went two extra periods.

Graves, 115-pound Southern champion last year, is likewise the Gobbler star extraordinary, and what is more, Graves, in fourteen matches under V. P. I. colors, has won thirteen falls and one time decision.

Marion Cowper, Carolina's senior 175-pound star, has recovered from a light attack of flu and may be ready to give the Tar Heels full strength against the tough Gobbler team.

The V. P. I. lineup will probably entail Harvey Price, 115 pounds; Colby Graves, 125; Bob Mitchell, 135; Ed Mundy, 145; Captain Joe Bailey, 155; Dutch Leonard, 165; Henry Cecil, 175; and Bob Gibbs, unlimited.

Carolina will probably use Pete Usher, 115; Captain Stallings, 125; Mayne Albright, 135; Don Conklin, 145; Harry Tsumas, 155; Percy Idol, 165; Fred Ferguson or Marion Cowper, 175; and Ferguson or Hampton, unlimited.

Best House Beats Independents

The Best House, led by French with fourteen points, defeated the strong Independents yesterday afternoon 30-20. Crouch, star guard who set a new season record by scoring twenty-eight points against Everett last Tuesday afternoon, played a good defensive game for the victors, getting seven points to figure in the scoring. For the losers Roberts was best with eight points.

CAVALIERS FACE DOZEN CONTESTS DURING SIX DAYS

Virginia's busiest week of the indoor athletic season is just ahead. Cavalier varsity and first year teams in four sports have twelve different contests during the next six playing days.

Five basketball games are scheduled, all at home. The varsity quint plays Maryland on Monday night, Duke on Thursday and North Carolina on Saturday. The first year five has contests with William and Mary on Friday and the Central high school of Washington on Saturday.

Florida's boxers, champions of the Southern Conference come to the Memorial Gymnasium next Tuesday evening for a match that is expected to attract well over 3,000 spectators. Next Saturday the Cavalier varsity and first year ring teams go to oppose North Carolina in Chapel Hill.

The track season will open next Saturday when Virginia sends two teams for a double-header meet with the Washington and Lee varisty and freshmen in the Doremus Gymnasium. At the same time two Duke swimming teams will oppose Virginia natators in the Memorial Gymnasium pool.

Whether the Cavaliers have fighting strength enough to regain the Conference boxing title held in 1928 will probably be shown by the bouts with Florida and North Carolina. The Gators and the Tar Heels have been turning out great ring teams every year. The will give the Virginia leatherpushers their most strenuous tests of the season prior to the Southern Conference tournament which opens here February twenty- seventh.

WINTER PRACTICE GAMES TO START AT KENAN TODAY

Game Between Monograms and Rookies at End of Season A Certainty.

The first practice game of the winter football league will get under way this afternoon at three-thirty o'clock in Kenan Stadium. No teams have been picked yet, and today's game will see most of the squad in action.

Coach Collins is undecided as to the advisibility of having four teams picked with a regular schedule, or dividing the squad and having games every Wednesday and Saturday.

Yesterday the coaches sent their charges through an extensive dummy drill in preparation for today's game.

This week has been devoted mainly to blocking, which was a great weakness of last year's team. If the squad is able to block before the fall practice begins, then the winter football practice may be considered successful.

There will again be a "Rookie-Monogram" game this year at the conclusion of practice. There has been no definite day set for this event but it will be conducted near the end of February or the beginning of March. Last year the lettermen, led by Ray Farris, all-southern guard, swamped the rookies by over forty points, the game being witnessed by about 2000 persons, including many of the alumni. The success of last year's contest has made certain that this event will be an annual affair at the University.

It's a curious fact that down in Washington they want $50,000,000 to make the country dry, and $60,000,000 for the drought sufferers.—Ohio State Journal.

CHORUS TO PLAN REORGANIZATION

Local Musical Group to Consider Proposals at Meeting Monday Night.

The Chapel Hill community chorus, at its meeting Monday night in Gerrard hall, will consider a tentative plan for the permanent organization of the group and will vote on matters pertaining to such projects.

At the last meeting of the chorus, the executive committee of the group was instructed to draw up tentative plans to effect a complete and permanent organization. At the same time the chorus decided to vote at the following meeting on proposed names for the chorus to be submitted by the executive committee.

The plan of organization, as announced recently by W. L. Hunt, acting chairman and member of the executive committee, includes an executive committee composed of five members which will have charge of the affairs of the chorus with the exception of financial matters, which are to be submitted to the chorus at large.

The plan to be considered at the meeting Monday night in full is as follows:

"It is suggested that the affairs of the chorus be delegated to an executive committee of five members, to be elected annually by the membership at large.

"The executive committee, upon election, will meet to elect from among the committee members a chairman, who will serve as executive head of the chorus. A vice-chairman, to act in the absence of the chairman, and a secretary-treasurer, shall also be elected from the committee members by the committee.

"The executive committee shall be empowered to consider all matters pertaining to the chorus, and to take such action as may be deemed desirable.

"'In matters relating to the raising of funds, the expenditure of money other than necessary routine, and to public performances, action of the committee must be ratified by the membership at large.

"The executive committee shall be empowered to appoint a musical director who may not be a member of the committee, but shall serve as advisor thereto. An assistant musical director shall also be appointed either from the membership of the committee or from the chorus at large.

"It is suggested that the executive committee use its best efforts to promote the growth of the chorus by personally inviting citizens and students to join, and by stimulating public interest through advertising and publicity. It is suggested also that the committee endeavor to raise funds, with the consent of the chorus, for the purchase of music in order that a library of choral music be built up."

SAYS STUPIDEST ENTER BUSINESS

London, January 12 (By Mail)—Although big business in England is trying to find recruits in the universities, Prof. H. J. Paton, of Glasgow University, has come forward with the chilling suggestion that what might be described as the boneheads or the dumb-bells, as he puts it, "the stupidest and often the most charming" in the universities go into business or into the army.

"If we depended in the army and in business on university men we could never have attained the military or the business position which we have in the world."

Describing how the various products of the universities are disposed of he says:

"So far as my experience of university men goes, the clever and ambitious ones go to the bar and into politics.

"The clever and cautious ones go into the civil service or into university teaching.

"The clever and queer ones go into museums or else write poetry."—Baltimore Sun.

Within the space of five days, the record-smashing Rutgers swimming team broke five national and world's records, besides breaking a record for breaking so many records in one week!

Most of the record smashing was accomplished by George Kojac, captain, who broke the national 220 yard standard and within a few days accomplished the same feat with the intercollegiate record. The Rutgers star then proceeded to clip a good bit of time from his own backstroke record, in which department he is world's champion.

"Americans have been criticized for over emphasis of football and other collegiate sports, but when it comes to school spirit and national spirit, the Americans are pikers compared to the Japanese," stated Henry Quigley, University of Kansas student, after his return from an Oriental barnstorming trip of American professional baseball players.

"While the best Japanese baseball teams represent colleges and universities, or at most some semi-pro organization, everyone in the country follows their fortunes," said Quigley. "We arrived in Tokyo in time to see a series of games for the collegiate championship of the nation. This series was played between Keio and Meiji universities. About 125,000 howling fans witnessed the opener.

"The ball park at Tokyo was laid out in 1908 from a Spalding New York City polo grounds. But it was built on a bigger scale than the New York Giants' ball yard. Ty Cobb, the famous 'Georgia Peach' who was one of the luminaries of the visiting American aggregation, spent a whole week trying to hit a fly ball into the center field bleachers at Tokyo, but he never succeeded. Cobb hit the barrier several times, but neither he nor any other man has ever driven a fly ball over the wall.

"All Japan crowds into the big arena for the games. And their spirit is something to marvel at. I saw one Meiji University cheerleader leading 50,000 students in yelling and singing. Grade schools and high schools are connected with the university system, and all grades turn out to cheer their Alma Mater on. They say that American football crowds go crazy, but they are like cigar store Indians compared to the Japanese."

Printshop Janitor Is Only Colored Fireman In White Company In State

John Johnson, local colored man, who has recently entered the employ of the Orange Printshop as janitor, is the only negro member of a white fire company in the state.

Johnson's membership in the local department has an unusual history. It seems that about ten years ago the Chapel Hill negro school house caught fire and the blaze was so far advanced by the time the firemen arrived that the only thing they could do was to prevent the fire from spreading to nearby structures. When the fire was out, Johnson was the only spectator who remained to help the firemen gather up the 1,600 feet of hose used in fighting the fire. Fire Chief Foister offered to pay Johnson for his help, but the public-spirited negro refused anything, on the grounds that it was a school that they were trying to save and he did not wish to charge for his aid.

After that incident John became one of Chapel Hill's most enthusiastic and faithful fire-fighters. Johnson, a bricklayer, would loiter around the fire house in between jobs and act as general utility man for the fire company.

Johnson frequently endangered his life while helping at fires, and as he was not a regular member of the company he would receive no compensation from the state in case of injury. This fact was explained to John, but he continued to attend all the fires and take as many chances as any regular on the roster.

In order to protect the interests of the faithful negro, Chief Foister suggested to his men that Johnson be made a regular member of the fire department. As there was no stipulation in the constitution of the association as to the race of its members, Johnson duly became a regular member in good standing of the Chapel Hill Fire Department.

Johnson is a brick layer by trade, but since there is a lack of building activity in the town at present, he has been doing odd jobs until his recent appointment as janitor of the Orange Printshop. He is the son of Reverend Andrew Johnson of the University medical school janitorial staff.

Rioting Students Close Universities

Riots by Republican students in Spain on Thursday added uneasiness to a political situation, already upset by the refusal of all parties except the extreme monarchists to participate in the parliamentary elections, March 1.

A general student strike, previously arranged, closed every university in the country. Several striking students in Huelva were arrested for general disorder and for demanding the release of previously arrested republicans.

Other students were jailed when police reserves were rushed to the university at Santiago de Compostella, to restore order after a republican demonstration had caused a number of injuries.

In Madrid 50 unemployed men attempted a demonstration on one of the principal boulevards, but the crowd dispersed without fighting the police.

Meantime all strong parties except the extreme monarchists had withdrawn from the race, but Premier Berenguer insists that the voting will come off as scheduled. This will likely result in a re-election of a monarchial parliament, and should this be the case, the oppositionists could challenge the legality of the election.

The experts were inclined to treat Simpson's reverses lightly, pointing out he had not had time in which to become acclimated and was below his best form.

Music Club Will Sponsor Program

The Music Club is sponsoring a program to be presented in the auditorium of the Music Hall Wednesday, February fourth at eight-fifteen p. m. Professor Harold S. Dyer will open the program with a talk on "Contemporary American Music and Composers," and his talk will be followed by a violin recital by Professor T. Smith McCorkle. Professor McCorkle will play selections by Cecil Burleigh and Clarence Cameron. A composition by Frank La Forge will be rendered by Brookes Fryer. B. F. James and Professor Kennedy will play numbers by James H. Rogers and Carl McKinley, respectively. In the last item on the Music Club's program, Miss Helen Eubanks will sing one song each of the following composers: Richard Hageman, Mary Turner Salter, Mrs. H. A. Beach, Harvey B. Gaul, and Winter Watts.

However, the multiplicity of Mr. McCorkle's duties as conductor of the University orchestra and band and teacher of several courses as well as applied music, has done much to interfere with this work. This appearance marks his first on the local campus in more than a year, and only the second concert these people have played this season. The other was played at Southern Pines during the Christmas holidays, where Mr. and Mrs. McCorkle have appeared eight times in the past five years. Violin, however, is one of the primary interests of Mr. McCorkle in the field of music, and he hopes soon to be able to again turn more attention to concert work.

Community Club Meet

The literature department of the Community Club has announced that an open meeting will be held in the Episcopal parish house on Tuesday evening, February 3, at eight o'clock. Mrs. Karl H. Fussler will review "Green Pastures" by Marc Connelly. The play is based on stories of "Ol' Man Adam and His Chillun" by Roark Bradford. Dr. Guy B. Johnson has arranged for the singing of negro spirituals by a male quartet, and Mrs. Raymond Adams will read in dialect selections from the stories that are particularly connected with the play.

Play Discussion

The literature department of the Community Club announces that on Tuesday, February 17, in the Episcopal parish house, Mrs. George Howe will conduct a round table discussion on "What Makes a Good Play." Ralph Westerman will speak on "The Chief Differences Between Old and Modern Drama." Two minute opinions on the essentials of good drama will be given by Paul Green, Wilbur Daniel Steele, George Coffin Taylor, Lamar Stringfield, English Bagby, W. D. Moss, Samuel Selden, Frederick H. Koch, Mrs. Paul Green, Mrs. P. C. Farrar, Mrs. Oscar Coffin, Mrs. J. O. Bailey, Mrs. Nolen, Mrs. Karl H. Fussler, Mrs. Mary Graves Rees, Mrs. George Howe, and Miss Josephine Sharkey. After these opinions an open discussion will be held. Professors of the English department at the University are especially invited to attend.

Freshman Pictures

All freshmen are requested to be on the steps of the law building Tuesday during the chapel period to get their pictures taken for the Yackety Yack.

Dyer Will Speak

On Wednesday evening at eight-fifteen in the new music auditorium Harold S. Dyer will talk to the music department of the Community Club on "Contemporary American Composers." The talk will be illustrated by four violin numbers by T. Smith McCorkle, a piano number by Brooke Fryer, an organ number by Nelson O. Kennedy, and five songs by Miss Helen Eubanks.

NEARBY FARMER COMMITS SUICIDE

LeRoy Craig, Seventy-Five, Had Been in Mental Stupor For Days.

LeRoy Craig, seventy-five year old farmer, residing between Chapel Hill and Hillsboro was found dead Thursday morning as a result of an apparently self-inflicted bullet wound. After a coroner's inquest by Dr. S. A. Nathan, the jury pronounced it suicide.

For many days past Craig had been in a mental stupor, and had wandered about his home and farm lands as though he had lost all control of his mind.

According to his daughter, Craig was seen on Wednesday to take his loaded shot gun up to his room and remain many hours. Later his daughter at work on the floor below, heard two shots fired in her father's room. Thinking her father had gone mad she fled to the home of her sister a half mile away. There she remained until late in the afternoon.

Just before dark she and her sister ventured back to Craig's home where they found him seated on a bench by the well in the yard. In his hands he still carried the gun. Upon spying them approaching, he made as if to load the gun. When the two women saw the crazed man open the gun, they fled in terror to pass the night at the sister's home.

Miss Craig feared lest her father should kill someone, so Thursday morning she resolved to go for the sheriff. As she passed her home on the way to town, she saw her father prone beside the well, where the afternoon before he had stood, waving his gun madly. Upon approaching the man, she found a ghastly hole through his chest where the whole load of a shot gun shell had entered.

PERFORMANCE OF CAROLA GOYA IS HIGHLY PRAISED

Spanish Dancer to Appear in Chapel Hill Next Friday Evening.

Carola Goya, the Spanish dancer, who will appear in the new auditorium this Friday evening as the first presentation of the entertainment committee this quarter, brings to this country Spanish dances in all their native beauty. Each of her numbers, except certain ones of her own creation to the modern Spanish composers is a classical, flamenca, or folk dance whose steps and rhythm have been familiar in Spain for generations. None of them have been "jazzed" or otherwise sensationalized in an attempt to cheap and thoughtless acclaim.

In costume, in form, and in mood Miss Goya's dances reflect the life, the traditions, and the art of the Iberian pennisula. La Libertad of Medrid expressed this fact most aptly when it said: "Carola Goya's dances are of extraordinary beauty, color, and rhythm, and in the finest spirit of the traditional Spanish dance, which all too unfortunately, is dying out even in Spain. She has caused a genuine sensation."

This probably explains the remarkable success of this beautiful young artist in London, New York and other cities. Last year she gave eighteen recitals, alone and with assisting artists in New York City an unprecedented record, her audience increasing in size with each performance. Her season's farewell found the vast auditorium of Carnegie Hall filled to overflowing with an enthusiastic multitude. The occasion unquestionably was the high light of the dance season in the metropolis.

Each Spanish province has dances entirely its own, and those on Miss Goya's programs are peculiarly characteristic of the sections to which they are native—the wild jota of Aragon, the whirling and playful Asturiana of Asturia, the stately Fandanguillo of Malaga, the courtly Espania Mia of Castile, and various fiery and languorous dances of Andalusia such as the Bulerias-Del Rocia, the Alegrias-Solea, the Tango Trianera, and the Andalucia Gitana.

The Andalusian dances are strictly of the Gypsy and Flamanca types—dances which may be said to have sprung from the hot, romantic soil and radiant moon-light of Southern Spain.

In addition to these authentic dances Miss Goya offers several numbers of her own creation to musie by modern composers. The steps and figures of all these creations are, however, drawn from the inexhaustible store of traditional Spanish dances.

Plans Being Made For Volunteer Meet

Harry F. Comer and Sam Gorman went yesterday to Durham where they conferred with Waham Huckabee, state executive in charge of the Student Volunteer movement in North Carolina, to complete arrangements for entertaining the State Student Volunteer conference which is to convene here February 27 to March 1.

This conference will doubtless bring between 200 and 300 college men and women from the institutions of North Carolina.

ENTERTAINMENT TICKETS WILL BE ON SALE AT Y

Entertainment tickets have been placed on sale in the book exchange and at the Y office for all students not in the liberal arts school, faculty members and townspeople. There are still a few left, Dean Hobbs stated yesterday, and all planning to secure any should do so immediately.

Students in the A. B. school who have not received their passbooks for the performances may get them from the business office this week.

SURVEY REVEALS WET PAPERS LEAD IN CIRCULATION

Anti - Prohibition Publications Are Most Prominent in Northeastern States.

Acording to a recent survey, the Methodist board of temperance announced Wednesday that the circulation of the antiprohibition newspapers of the nation as a whole is almost double that of the publications favoring the dry law.

Of a total of 1,346 daily papers, having an aggregate circulation of 32,994,609, the board classified only 520 of these as definitely "wet." Their combined circulation, however, was estimated at more than 21,000,000 or sixty-four per cent of the total. 809 daily papers were considered "dry." Their circulation totals 10,488,553 or thirty-two per cent. The board described 115, mostly small in circulation, as "neutral."

The figures of another survey, covering 1,438 newspapers, were also revealed by the temperance board. Thirty-seven per cent of this group of papers were said not to give prohibition an "even break," while thirty-five per cent were described as being "biased" in handling prohibition news. Officials of the board announced that not all of the latter "by any means," were "wet."

Author Of Recent Stage Success To Read Play Tonight

University students and townspeople will be guests this evening at eight-thirty in the Playmakers theatre to the reading of a new drama "Green Grow the Lilacs" by the author himself, Lynn Riggs of Oklahoma.

At its first production last Monday night by the Theatre Guild of New York, the play "went over big." Among the many reviews that have been written concerning this drama is the following by John Anderson which was published in the New York Evening Journal. "Some of us who found beauty and guston in Lynn Riggs' short-lived 'Roadside' may be pardoned a slight extra exultation in the Theatre Guild's production last night at its chief feature of "Green Grow the Lilacs,' a play whose fine rich flavor and fresh strength fulfill completely the promises of Mr. Rigg's earlier work. Its background of the West at the turn of the century is drawn with relish and great humor; its characters are touched with happy understanding, and as it all is acted out admirably in the genial accents of folk playing, it makes a notable addition to the season, and beyond all such solemn statements, it makes hearty entertainment of rare quality."

WOODS AROUND UNIVERSITY ABOUND IN CHARM, ROMANCE, AND TRADITION

Forest Glades in Vicinity of Chapel Hill Possess Unsurpassed Beauty as They Continue to Grow More Solitary and Tangled.

(By Joe Jones)

Since the finding of Morgan P. Moorer's skeleton near Chapel Hill persons throughout the country have expressed surprise that a human body should have lain for almost a year within two miles of the town and the University without its being discovered. And that, too, during this time numerous searching parties had been sent out in all directions from the village. The fact is that Chapel Hill is set in the midst of a timbered wilderness as secluded and uncharted as any in the central part of the state.

Many writers have spoken of the unusual beauty of the forest glades which reach up to the very doors of the University; of the ancient silver-columned beeches, of the lovely streams, the wood-paths, and of the magnificent pines and oaks and tulip trees. It is true that the woods round about the doorsteps of Chapel Hill possess a sylvan charm that is seldom surpassed anywhere; but beyond these nearer woodlands lies a wilder and more sinister beauty. In leaving the trodden paths and the grey, initialed beeches, and crossing over into the silent, wooded hills which rise from the farther bank of Morgan's Creek, one enters a solitude that is uncanny. It seems strange that such an air of remoteness should abide in a place so close to the gay, bustling university town.

It is no wonder that searching party after searching party failed to come upon the boy's body as it lay in a tangled thicket within the threshold of this wilderness. The wonder is that some of the searchers themselves weren't lost; as no doubt they would have been but for the fact that they were led by such experienced woodsmen as Moody Lloyd. This is more than idle speculation, for within the past few years several persons have been temporarily lost in the woods within a mile or two of Chapel Hill.

Once it was the entire boxing squad, off for a late jog down a woods trail. Their leader missed his way, the group got into unfamiliar territory, and it was only after some aimless wandering that they struck a wagon road which led them back to headquarters before the coming of complete darkness. Another time three co-eds, off for a Sunday afternoon's walk, lost their sense of direction, wandered about till nightfall, and then, weary and frightened, pushed through the underbrush towards the lights of Chapel Hill. It was fortunate for them that the town is set on a lofty knoll.

Plenty of Coons and Turkeys

Entire classes in botany, zoology, or geology may often be seen dashing about through the Chapel Hill woodlands; but it is

RED CROSS DRIVE ALMOST REACHES $4,000,000 MARK

Wealthy and Unwealthy Alike Contribute to National Campaign for Relief.

Fgures reported to Red Cross national headquarters in Washington, January 27, indicated that about one third of the $10,000,000 drought relief fund has been subscribed. The largest single gift of $250,000 was from John D. Rockefeller, Jr. The International Harvester Company presented $100,000, representing gifts of its Chicago headquarters and branches in other cities.

Children have also sent gifts from their savings banks. Rosemary Ernisse of Webster, New York, Lenore M. Gardner and her sister Helen of Boston each wrote the president and sent gfts which were transmitted to the Red Cross.

The Veterans Wireless Operators Association has planned to broadcast at its banquet in New York, February 11, an appeal by a member of the American Red Cross, the broadcast to go to ship and shore stations throughout the world.

From three points where the Red Cross had carried relief work in the past, foodstuffs and feed were sent to the drought area; a carload of vegetables from the Lake Okeechobee, Florida, chapter was donated by the farmers in that district to the chapter at Yazoo City, Mississippi; a carload of hay from T. N. Fountain of Reynolds, Georgia, was sent to the Red Cross

McCORKLE'S RECITAL WILL BE GIVEN TODAY

The violin and piano recital of Professor and Mrs. T. Smith McCorkle, which is becoming an annual event to music devotees in Chapel Hill, will be given today at four-forty-five p. m. in the new music auditorium.

On the program are Sonata (Grieg), Concerto (Vieuxtemps), La Gitana (Kreisler), Humoresque (Aulin), and Le Coucou (Daquin-Press).

PHARMACY DEAN IS CRITICALLY ILL WITH PNEUMONIA

Crisis of Dr. Howell's Illness Has Not Been Reached, Physicians Believe.

Dr. Edward Vernon Howell, dean of the school of pharmacy at the University since 1897, is critically ill with pneumonia at his home here. It is not believed the crisis has been reached.

Dr. Howell was stricken last Monday. He is in his fifty-eighth year.

He is being attended by Dr. William DeB. MacNider, a close friend and faculty associate, and Dr. Leonard Fields, a Chapel Hill physician.

Dr. MacNider said last night Dr. Howell had held his own satisfactorily during the last twenty-four hours.

Stray Cat Attends Chemistry Classes

The newest addition to the chemistry department is a feline of the male species, otherwise known as an ordinary white housecat. Many of the students on the campus are well acquainted with this feline.

His former home is much in doubt, although a boy at one of the fraternity houses claimed him. He put in his appearance about a month ago, and was either driven from home on account of the present depression or tranferred from some other college.

The cat is very fond of causing disturbances all over Venable hall. He walks in and out of lectures and visits whom he pleases whenever he wishes to. He walked in one lecture not long ago and seated himself in front of the lecturer. The latter remarked, "Well, at least there is one student here who won't talk." It was noticed, however, that when this instructor put a quiz on the board, the student got up and walked out of the room.

This creature is no respector of persons, for Friday night he walked into the auditorium durin Dr. Bancroft's address. He picked out a particularly nice overcoat, made himself a bed on it and drifted away to slumber. In a few minutes when there was applause, the sleeping cat awoke and left at top speed.

While he attends his classes regularly, he is very lazy and he is too inquisitive for his own good. The major portion of his diet is made up of sardines which have been purchased by kind hearted chemistry students.

Co-ed Dance

The first co-ed dance of the quarter is scheduled to be given by the Woman's Association on Friday night, February 6, from nine o'clock until one, in Spencer hall. Jack Wardlaw and his orchestra have been engaged to furnish the music.

NINETEEN MEETS ARE PLANNED BY DEBATING SQUAD

Trips to East and Southwest Scheduled During Spring Holidays.

The tentative program for the debate squad for the remainder of the winter and spring quarter is composed of nineteen meets, nine of them being held here. The size of the schools range from Northwestern University in Evanstown, Illinois, to Appalachian Training School in Boone, N. C. The two most distant universities to be visited are Boston University and the University of Texas.

During the spring holidays two trips will be made, one in the East and the other in the Southwest. The schools to be debated on the eastern trip are the University of Pennsylvania, New York University, and Boston University; those in the Southwest are Georgia Tech, the University of Texas, and the University of Tennessee.

Between April 10 and 18 the debate spuad will take a western tour including Asbury College, the University of Cincinnati (radio debate), Northwestern University, and Western Reserve University.

During March and April the debate teams of the University of Georgia, Emory University, New York University, Western Reserve University, Asbury College, the University of West Virginia, Applachian Training School, North Carolina College for Women (probable), and the University of Tennessee come here to meet the local debating team.

Each Thursday night, under the direction of Professor George McKie, the debate squad of the University hold a discussion meet on the two topics to be debated upon in the coming meets, "Free Trade" and "Unemployment Insurance."

Y Meetings

The freshmen friendship council, contrary to its usual custom will not meet in the Y parlor, but in the dining room of the Methodist church where light refreshments will be served following the program.

Rev. C. E. Rozzelle of the Methodist church is scheduled to address the sophomore cabinet at its meeting place in the upper parlor of the "Y".

Nothing definite as to the program of the junior-senior cabinet is yet known.

Chase Makes Radio Talk

Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, former president of the University, and now president of the University of Illinois, spoke over WGN, the Chicago Tribue station, Friday night at eight-thirty. His talk dealt with the present changing educational system, and the purposes of modern universities and scholars as compared with those of the past.

Tar Heel Meeting

All the city editors, editorial board, and sports editors will meet this afternoon at five-thirty in the office of the Daily Tar Heel. This is the first time that the editors have met in a special session, and it is necessary that all be present unless excused beforehand by the editor or managing editor.

The Daily Tar Heel

Published daily during the college year except Mondays and except Thanksgiving, Christmas and Spring Holidays.

The official newspaper of the Publications Union of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N. C. Subscription price, $4.00 for the college year.

With Contemporaries

The College Of The Future

Twenty years from now, says Dr. Joseph K. Hart, of Vanderbilt University, the college curriculum will consist of "the interested activities of students as they try to understand the world in which they live." This program will supplant the current system, which, it must be noted, contains, altogether too much of "the interested activities of students," but of a frivolous variety which has not more to do with an attempt to understand the world in which they live than it has to do with the intellectual life.

Twenty years from now "students will be personally responsible for their education, which will begin with their interests and come to a preliminary conclusion when they have reached such a degree of intellectual understanding as will make it possible for them to go the rest of the way alone." This means that the keynote of higher education will be borrowed from adult education, which stresses the interests of students as a point of beginning rather than hard-and-fast assumptions for formulists super-imposing on learners what ought to be good for them.

Dr. Hart is one of this country's leaders in the field of adult education. His study of what has been done on this score in Denmark has thrown a revealing light on possibilities in the United States. Furthermore, as an educator who has been greatly concerned with the social implications of his work, he is interested in bringing education and life together, in removing the arbitrary bariers which have kept them apart, in humanizing the machinery of scholarship for the benefit of those who refuse to vegetate mentally and spiritually, who wish to build more and more stately mansions of knowledge and creativeness for their souls.

It is because he realizes that all of us are not thus avid for wider horizons that Dr. Hart goes on to speak of the highly necessary differentiation which must prevail in our educational scheme. "There will be different kinds of education for different people, according to what they want," he declares. "The liberal arts college will have a smaller student body and will admit only those who have native endowment and are prepared to give time and energy to the effort to become, in an intellectual sense, citizens of the whole human story."

Here is another voice sounding the doctrine which was not an appeal for "classic fundamentalism," as some listeners have concluded, but for the realization, first, that it is folly to insist that all persons should be given the same training, and secondly, that it is folly to regard our life, so far as its finest values are concerned, as essentially distinct from earlier and noble chapters in the human story. Incidentally, the experimental college at Wisconsin, under Alexander Meiklejohn's direction, by giving freshmen a consciousness of the similarities of the Greek experience and the American experience, is clearly a step toward the goal envisaged by Dr. Hart.—The Plainsman.

A Student-Faculty Club

In suggesting closer liasion between professors and students, the Chancellor, speaking at the Reunion, recalled a proposal put forward some time ago to the effect that some sort of Student-Faculty club should be formed. At present there is no such organization, and nothing can be said to stand in stead of it. An occasional golf game and an occasional chess match mark the limits of intercourse between professors and their charges; the rest comprises short interviews on academic work or sketchy discussions at departmental clubs.

If every limit marks also a beginning, the chess and golf games can be added to indefinitely. In time perhaps the meeting place between instructors and undergraduates may take on the aspect of a traditional institution.

Some, of course, will object that any attempt in this direction would only be an addition to the already numerous activities which clutter up the campus. Others will remember that familiarity breeds contempt and frown on the idea altogether. But with wise supervision and a slow beginning there is no reason why the Student-Faculty Club should not become a realized fact.—McGill Daily.

Declaratory Judgment Act Is Claimed To Be Needed Reform

Editorial Note: The Declaratory Judgments Act is one of forty-eight proposed uniform laws drafted by a conference of commissioners from all states of the union, which sits annually to consider proposals for statutory improvement. North Carolina has four commissioners on the national conference. They are Professor M. S. Breckenridge, of Chapel Hill, the author of this article; W. M. Hendren, of Winston-Salem; Judge J. Crawford Biggs, of Raleigh; and Henry M. London, of Raleigh.

By Prof. M. S. Breckenridge

It would often save much time, money, and bitterness if people's legal rights could be determined in advance of a dispute.

Greene County, for instance, wants to sell some refunding bonds. (See Hicks v. Greene County, 200 N. C. 73, decided 19th Dec. 1930). It is questioned whether a popular vote was required to make them valid. No bond broker wants to buy a possibly illegal issue.

If the county could present the question to the judiciary and get from the Supreme Court a binding decision on their validity, the matter would be put at rest. If the decision were favorable the obstacle to sale would be removed and the price paid the county would be the higher for the official assurance to the buyer. That would be good sense and good business.

But the law is not so. The courts have no authority to consider such an application for there is no controversy. No one is being sued for breach of contract or for anything else. The law as it now stands gives the Supreme Court no authority to give advisory opinions to private parties, and even if, out of a desire to aid in such a case, the judges did give an opinion it would bind no one.

Or take a private case. Ames has a construction contract with Bates. Bates thinks that under the terms of the agreement a payment should be made at a certain stage of the work. Ames thinks otherwise. Both are honest in their views. Ames refuses to make the payment and insists that the work proceed toward completion. Bates quits construction, throws his men out of work and sues Ames for breach of contract. The courts now have in hand something which under the law they are authorized to deal with. Eventually some one's view of the contract will be sustained and the mistaken party will have to pay damages. But all the disruption of plans and work, not only for the litigating parties but for their employees as well, could have been avoided if the question could have been settled in court before, and not after the breach.

The uniform declaratory judgments act, already adopted in fifteen states, is designed to meet this need. It permits any person interested in a contract to have a judicial declaration of his rights thereunder and anyone whose rights are affected by a statute to have it judicially construed.

The declaratory judgements act is one of forty-eight proposed uniform laws drafted by a conference of commissioners from all states of the union which sits annually to consider proposals for statutory improvement. North Carolina has four commissioners on the national conference. They are W. M. Hendren of Winston-Salem, J. Crawford Biggs of Raleigh, Henry M. London of Raleigh, and M. S. Breckenridge of Chapel Hill.

Cooperating with these four commissioners are James H. Pou, of Raleigh, and S. G. Bernard, of Asheville, members of the American Bar Association Committee on State Legislation.

Senate To Debate School Situations

The Di Senate will meet Tuesday night to discuss as one of its bills the question of state control over the school system. The regular meeting opens at seven, but President Little has called a special meeting of the officers of the society at six-forty-five.

The two other bills up for discussion are:

Resolved: That the University should own and equip a modern laboratory school for the betterment of school conditions in the state.

Resolved: That the Di Senate is whole-heartedly in favor of anything that President Graham does or says in regard to the present educational situation in North Carolina.

TWELVE TEAMS UNDEFEATED IN INTRAMURAL TILT

Seven Teams Remain with Clean Records in Fraternity Division of Basketball Race.

Results of the third week's play show that out of forty-four teams entered in the intramural basketball league twelve remain undefeated. Four teams suffered their first defeat of the season last week. The Phi Sig's ruined their record by dropping two games in last week's play, while the three remaining teams, the Sigma Chi's, the T. E. P.'s, Zeta Psi's, and Ruffin lost, only one. The Sigma Chi's lost their first of the season to the Phi Gam's by a score of 26-10, furthering the Phi Gam's string of victories to five. The undefeated K. A.'s defeated the Zeta Psi's 30-19 for the second defeat in two years for the latter. The S. A. E.'s won their first this season by defeating the previously undefeated T. E. P.'s 19-11. Ruffin, intramural football champions, lost their first of the season to Lewis by a 28-16 score.

In the fraternity league seven teams have yet to suffer a defeat. The Phi Gam's lead the way to the rest of the field with five victories and no defeats. The A. T. O.'s follow closely with four victories for a perfect record. Three teams, the K. A.'s, Sigma Zeta's, and Beta's hold third place with three wins each. The Phi Delt's and Sigma Ep's finish out the undefeated teams with two victories each. The T. E. P.'s and Chi Phi's have a record of four wins and one loss and three wins and one loss respectively, while the Sigma Chi's, Pi Kap's, Lambda Chi Alpha's and Zeta Psi's have won two and lost one.

In the dormitory league five teams remain undefeated, Graham leading the way with five wins and no losses, closely followed by New Dorm's and Aycock, last year's campus champions, with four wins. The Question Marks and the Best House finish out the undefeated teams with three victories and no losses. Ruffin lost its first of the season last week to Lewis for a record of four wins and one loss. Mangum finishes out the teams with better than a .500 average with three wins and two losses for a percentage of .600.

In high scoring the Independents lead the way with 173 points in six games, while New Dorms, in four games, has scored 148 points for second place. The Question Marks have an average of 44 1-3 in three games for a total of 133 points for third place.

The individual scorers are led by Barnwell, elongated center of the Question Marks, with fifty-six points in three games. Dewey, Phi Gam forward, takes second place with fifty-four points in four games.

The first five individual scorers are as follows:

Name	Team	Games	Pts.
Barnwell,	Question M'ks	3	56
Dewey,	Phi Gam's	4	54
Dixon,	Pi Kap's	3	43
Cromartie,	Independents	3	42
Smith,	Ruffin	4	40

Old East has been declared ineligible to compete in intramural basketball for the rest of the season due to the fact that they have forfeited twice in succession.

A feature of intramural play last week was the 54-28 defeat of Everett by the Best House in which a total of twenty-eight

DOPING 'EM OUT

By BOB BETTS

MAT SPORT IN HEYDEY

Althougn there have been only a few wrestling meets so far this season, it appears that the mat sport will enjoy its best year since wrestling was introduced in the state a few years ago. Duke, Davidson, North Carolina State, and Carolina are all represented with wrestling squads, and interest seems to be growing in this sport. Wrestling, long a popular sport in the Eastern colleges, is comparatively new in the South, and thus it has been slow in gaining very much recognition. However, Washington and Lee made it a major sport a few years ago, and Virginia Military Institute has just followed in the steps of her neighboring school. It will only be a question of time before Carolina will give wrestling a bigger place in its athletic propram. The crowds have been steadily increasing from year to year, and it is safe to predict that they will continue to do so.

The University has one of the best mat teams it has ever had this season, and there have been some mighty good ones here in the past few years. Pete Usher, in the 118 pound division, is a clever wrestler. Last year, his sophomore year, he lost some close matches, and, with a year's experience, he should have a very successful season. Charlie Lawson is the other contestant for this post and should get into some meets before the season closes. In the 126 pound weight, the Tar Heels are represented by one of the most experienced and polished wrestlers to be found in the South, for Captain Fred Stallings is the man. Stallings did not lose a single dual match last year. He lost, however, to Willis of V. P. I. on a time decision at the Southern Conference meet for his third loss in his entire career. Mayne Albright, Raleigh boy, holds down the 135 pound division. Starting his last year he threw his opponent in the Princeton meet, and appears to be on his way to his best season. He is very adept at pinning his opponent in quick fashion. Don Conklin, one of the two sophomores to win a regular berth, has won in his first two varsity matches. He went through his freshman year undefeated. He should improve even more with experience. Harry Tsumas, 155 pound division, made a fine record in his first year on the team. One of the most powerful and skillful wrestlers on the squad, he rarely loses a match. Jim Spell is a candidate for the same position; this boy is a hard worker and may get into some meets. "Perc" Idol, the Furniture City product, is the second sophomore to make the varsity. Idol will improve with experience, as he is a hard working young husky. The veteran Marion Cowper holds forth in the 175 pound division. Cowper has been a fine wrestler for the past two years and should end his career with his best season. The unlimited division is taken care of by another veteran, Fred Ferguson. Last year Ferguson won a large number of strong matches including wins from both Princeton and the Navy. Fred usually won by falls and has already scored a fall against the Navy this season. Ferguson is championship timber. Allison, Leverstein, Hampton, and Auman are candidates for regular berths on the team.

TAR HEELS DEPART ON NORTHERN TRIP AFTER STATE GAME TUESDAY

Carolina Basketeers Pitted Against Five Southern Conference Foes in Six Days; Ringmen Engage Virginia Here Saturday; No Matches Carded for Grapplers.

The Carolina basketball team meets State in Raleigh Tuesday night, then leaves on a northern tour that will pit the Tar Heels against five strong Southern Conference foes in six days. The Tar Heels boxers meet Virginia here Saturday night. The wrestlers have no contests scheduled.

The Carolina-State game will start the Tar Heels on their second round of Big Five championship games. State will have the advantage of the home floor this time, and will have excellent chances to revenge the 22-16 drubbing administered by Carolina last Tuesday. A Carolina-State freshman game, will precede the main varsity attraction. The frosh teams fought to a 29-28 result at their last meeting, with the Wolfcubs coming out on top.

Carolina's northern trip will send the Tar Heel quint against V. P. I. at Blacksburg Thursday, V. M. I. at Lexington Friday, Virginia at Charlottesville Saturday, Washington and Lee at Lexington the following Monday, and Maryland at College Park the following Tuesday.

Virginia, traditionally strong in boxing, has another outstanding Conference contender this year, and the Cavaliers are expected to prove one of Carolina's toughest foes when they come to Chapel Hill Saturday night. The Tar Heels have been steaming along pretty well themselves, winning meets by as much as 6-1 with three knockouts, and an unusually good exhibition is expected.

Coach "Chuck" Quinlan has a strong team assembled, and, barring accidents, they will be all right up there with the leaders when the curtain is rung down.

Over at Duke, Tex Tilson is coaching his last wrestling team at that school. Tex has turned out one or two state championship wrestling teams during his stay there, and some fine matmen, including Hank Culp, Ralph Sternes, and others. The Blue Devils have another good mat team this year. In the 155 pound division they have Cole. Cole is one of the best men in the state in this division. Emery Adkins, 175 pound division, made a good showing last year. He is only a junior and should be a better wrestler this year. Hughes is in the unlimited division and is one of the best matmen the Dukemen have at present. There are also several promising sophomores on the squad who should develop as the season goes on.

Coach Hicks has a good team at North Carolina State this year. Although State lost to Washington and Lee, it must be remembered that the Generals have one of the most powerful mat teams in the South. Southwick, in the 145 pound class, broke his shoulder in winning over Osterman of W. and L. It was the first defeat of Osterman's career. Southwick should be all right in a week or two. Meanwhile Jones has taken his place in the Tech lineup. Captain Easton is in the 118 division Four years ago Eason defeated "Shorty" Stallings in a freshman meet. Incidentally both boys are now captains of their respective teams. The Tech captain is one of the classiest wrestlers in the state. In addition to these men Coach Hicks has Evans in the 126 pound class; Oakley, 135 pound division; Hargrave, 155 pound pound division; Sutton, 165 division; Laney, 175 division; and Clevland in the unlimited. State's stock will rise with the return of Southwick, and they should have a successful season.

Very little is known about Davidson's wrestling team, as they had their first meet last night with N. C. State. Last year Davidson had a fair team, and, bolstered up with some good sophomore talent, they occupy the position of "dark horse" in the State wrestling race. The 145 pound division is well taken care of by Conway. This fellow is a fast, clever wrestler. Christanbery, in the 175, is another one of the Wildcats' best bets on the mat. They have some more good men there and will probably pull a surprise or two before the season is over.

Right now it looks like the "Grunt, Growl, and Grumble" teams will finish the state race in the following order: North Carolina, Duke, N. C. State, and Davidson.

Red Terror Flash

GAMMON - FORWARD

John Gammon, Griffin, Georgia, speedy State College forward, gave the Tar Heels no end of trouble in their win over the Red Terrors here last week, and will again be out to outshoot the Carolina marksmen. Gammon, with C. V. Morgan, Albemarle, center, leads the Tech scorers.

Last Minute Reports

VARSITY BASKETBALL

Duke defeated Carolina last night by a score of 30-18. Duke jumped into an 11-3 lead at the half and was never headed.

FRESHMAN BASKETBALL

Duke freshmen defeated the Tar Babies 43-24 in Durham last night. Fisher and Jones led Carolina's scoring with six points each while Alpert was Duke's outstanding player, scoring eleven points.

WRESTLING

Carolina defeated V. P. I. in wrestling last night. The score was not known at the time the Daily Tar Heel went to press.

RIP MILLER WILL REPLACE INGRAM AS NAVY COACH

Annapolis, Maryland, January 31.—Edgar E. (Rip) Miller, All-American guard at Notre Dame in 1924 and line coach at the Naval Academy for the last five years, will succeed Navy Bill Ingram as head football coach, it was learned at the Academy yesterday.

Miller has been a member of the coaching staff at the academy since 1926 when Ingram first took over the grid reins and turned out an undefeated team. He came to the academy fresh from the Notre Dame outfit which made history in the football world, being one of the line "mules" who made possible the record of the four horsemen of that year.

Naval Academy athletic officials would neither confirm nor deny that Miller had been selected for the vacancy created when Ingram signed a contract to become head coach at the University of California.

MARYLAND ONLY DIXIE SCHOOL TO DROP GRID PRACTICE FOR SPRING

Only one Southern Conference institution—University of Maryland—has gone on record as abandoning spring football practice, a recent survey indicated. In this move, the Maryland schools fall in line with Carnegie Institute of Technology and several other prominent schools which had deemed advisable the suspension or temporary abandonment of the spring activity.

Colleges in North Carolina have shown no indication of following in the footsteps of Maryland, though Duke and N. C. State have not begun spring grid workouts.

FORTY-FIVE GRID CANDIDATES SEE ACTION IN GAME

"Blues" Defeat "Oranges" 7-0 in Initial Winter Football Game; Croom Scores Touchdown.

Carolina's winter gridders staged their first practice game yesterday afternoon with the "Blues" licking the "Oranges" 7-0.

Running of Rip Slusser, veteran halfback, and Bill Croom, his reserve partner, featured the victory. The speedy Slusser was off for neat gains of forty-five and thirty-five yards and for many shorter runs. Croom sprinted fifteen yards around end for the touchdown in the second quarter, and also had fair success with his passes. The "Oranges" were off-side on try for point.

The winners led in first downs by eight to six. With Norman Hackney driving the tackles and passing to John Peacock, and Kay Thompson rushing the lines, the "Oranges" in the third quarter made four straight first downs and got as far as the seven-yard line for their one big threat.

The "Blues" threatened at least twice in the second half, once as the result of a long run by Slusser, and again after a pass intercepted by Red Gilbreath, letter center, but their attack lacked precision in blocking and drive.

Forty-five men saw action. Play of Gilbreath, Fysal and Blackwood, all veterans, was outstanding for the "Blue" line. Frank Smith, tackle, and George Barclay, guard, both newcomers, stood out in the "Orange"

Impressive Record Of 210 Victories, 61 Defeats Hung Up By Wisconsin Basketeers

College Humor Sports Writer Discusses Cage Game as It Is Played in Several Sections of The Country.

"Dr. Walter E. Meanwell, dean of Middle Western college basketball," writes Les Gage in the March issue of College Humor, "has expounded his theories of the intricate short pass and pivot offense at the University of Wisconsin for nineteen years, excepting an intervening period of two seasons when he coached at the University of Missouri. Meanwell's Wisconsin quintets have led the Big Ten eight times during his regime. Only twice has the Cardinal fallen into the second division. The record books show two hundred and ten victories and sixty-one defeats, not including the two seasons when his Missouri fives outclassed all other teams in the Valley conference by winning thirty-four contests and losing

MAGNER AND SAPP FORM LAW FIRM

Former Athletic Stars Open Office in Chapel Hill.

Odell Sapp and Jim Magner are team-mates once more. This time it is in a law partnership and not on the football fiield. The new firm is, Magner and Sapp, the former having won the toss for preference. They have opened up an office here in Chapel Hill and are ready to settle any and all legal difficulties.

Both the new members are former Carolina athletic stars. They were team-mates in 1928, Sapp being a senior end and Magner a sophomore halfback. That year Sapp was all-state. He made letters in football, boxing, and baseball. In August of 1929 he scored on the givers of the bar examination by passing and being admitted to the practice.

Magner, who has made three football letters, has been prominently mentioned for all-southern for two years, and he scored the only touchdown made in the all-star North-South charity game in December of this year. He passed the bar in August, 1930.

Sapp's home is in Winston-Salem, and he is following in the footsteps of his father, who was also a lawyer. Magner came to the University from Philadelphia. The former has for two years been one of the freshman coaches here and will practice law as a sideline. Magner, one of the greatest passers in the state this past year, is one of Chuck Collins' coaching assistants in winter football practice.

at Greenville, Mississippi; and a carload of oranges went from Lake Wales, Florida to the chapter at Cleveland, Mississippi.

A program for extensive relief was completed in a meeting at Vicksburg, Louisiana, of Red Cross workers in Mississippi, Louisiana, Kentucky and Tennessee. They are planning a spring garden program among the rural families in those states. The distribution of garden seed will begin first in the southern area and extend north. The order for the seed will be placed immediately and will consist of green vegetables suitable for the section.

Also at this meeting arrangements were perfected for continued feeding of drought sufferers in the states during February, 103,000 persons in Louisiana and 75,000 in Mississippi. Similar arrangements will be made at a meeting of relief workers in Kentucky and Tennessee.

All the workers were instructed regarding the proper ration for the people to maintain normal standards, particular stress being laid upon corrective foods such as tomatoes and cabbage. Provision was made to supply milk and cereals to families with small children. Workers were asked to report areas where it was advisable to dispense school lunches in addition to the regular rationing.

"Indebtedness in State"

The recent report of the tax commission shows that ten cities in this state have a total indebtedness of $81,094,212. Asheville is leading the list with $18,926,700; while the others in order are Winston - Salem, Greensboro, Durham, High Point, Charlotte, Raleigh, Hendersonville, Wilmington, and Gastonia.

Campus Calendar

Phi Mu Alpha

The local chapter of Phi Mu Alpha, musical fraternity, will meet tonight at nine in the music building.

"Green Grow the Lilacs"

Lynn Riggs will read his "Green Grow the Lilacs," recent New York stage hit, tonight at eight-fifteen in the Playmakers Theatre.

Freshman Pictures

All freshmen are requested to be on the steps of the law building Tuesday during the chapel period to get their pictures taken for the Yackety Yack.

Community Chorus

The Community Chorus will meet in the new building tomorrow night for the purpose of voting on a tentative plan for a permanent organization. This meeting will be at seven-fifteen.

Sunday School Class

The upperclassmen's Sunday School class of the Presbyterian church meets this morning at ten o'clock at which time Professor E. L. Mackie of the mathematics department, teacher of the class, will begin a series of lessons on the Old Testament prophets. The lesson this morning will take up the beginning of the works of the prophet Elijah.

"Paul D. Hinkle, Butler's coach, is a young man. "Tony," as he has always been known because of his swarthy complexion and Latin characteristics, enjoyed a sparkling athletic career at the University of Chicago. Butler basketball teams have won sixty-seven games and lost fifteen under Hinkle. The Bulldogs have a just claim to the mythical national honors in 1929, for they upset many of the country's most impressive quintets.

"The University of Arkansas has predominated the Southwest Conference in basketball for the past five years. Charles Bassett's first responsibility when he became head coach of the varsity there last season was to impress the institution with the fact that Francis Schmidt's move to Texas Christian would not break the string of Arkansas cage titles. Working with a squad of rangy men, he developed his own peculiar style of defense, based on the retreating man-to-man principle. The season closed with another first place plaque on the walls of the Razorback's trophy room.

"The University of Virginia basketball team is now playing its first schedule under a new coach, Gus Tebell, a protege of "Doc" Meanwell. Tebell was a three sportman at Wisconsin, engaging in football, baseball and basketball. He was an All-Western end for two years and in 1922 was given an All-American berth. Last winter Tebell's North Carolina State team won the Southern Conference tournament at Atlanta, and his clever floor guard, Morris Johnson, was named on College Humor's All-American five.

"Although medicine is his vocation and basketball his avocation, Dr. H. C. Carlson has brought to the University of Pittsburgh a reputation in the cage game which will live for many decades. In his eight years of coaching Dr. Carlson has won a hundred and seven games and lost forty-one. His Panthers were undefeated in 1927-28 and lost only two engagements last season. The Pitt coach is a scientific fellow. He believes there is a sixth sense, namely, muscle projection. Not only does Carlson teach his boys to exercise this theory, but has proved its value by the blind-test. Pitt cagers can actually control the distance of their shots without sighting the goal.

Local Contributions To Red Cross Relief Drive Total $236.00

Acording to a statement made by Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, chairman of the local chapter of the Red Cross, $236 of the $600 quota for Chapel Hill in the National relief drive has been raised. Those who have subscribed to the fund are: Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Bullitt; Professer and Mrs. Collier Cobb; Grover Beard; Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Eubanks; V. A. Hoyle; Mrs. C. W. Bain; Mrs. A. P. Hudson; Professor and Mrs. Oscar Coffin; Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Woollen; Professor and Mrs. M. S. Breckenridge; Mrs. Joseph Archer; Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Coker; Rev, and Mrs. A. S. Lawrence; J. O. Harmon; Dr. H. V. Wilson; Prof. and Mrs. W. D. Toy; Joseph Hyde Pratt, Jr.; John W. McCauley; Mrs. P. H. Winston; Miss Margaret Lewis; Col. and Mrs. Joseph Hyde Pratt; Professor and Mrs. E. W. Zimmerman; Professor George McKie; Miss Mabel Mallett; Mr. and Mrs. R. B. House; W. B. Neal; Professor and Mrs. E. C. Branson; Professor and Mrs. A. S. Wheeler; and Dr. Hammond.

North Carolina is one of the twenty-one states receiving aid from the National Red Cross. This relief work is going on in Stokes county where a field representative from the Washington office is directing the work.

New Dorms won one of the best games seen this season by scoring five points while Ranson House scored four in the extra five minutes. The final score was 31-30.

Intramural Fencing Will Begin Monday

Fencing will begin its second year as an intramural sport Monday in the Tin Can, when Hinky Hendland will conduct a group istruction class. Everyone interested in fencing is invited to participate of this coaching which will also take place Tuesday at the same hour.

At The Carolina

The Carolina Theatre will present this week a program that begins and ends with acclaimed attractions besides scattering them through the middle of the week.

Clara Bow will be seen Monday in her latest talkie, "No Limit," in which the red-haired actress plays the role of an usherette who falls heir to a Rolls-Royce and a Park Avenue apartment. Later she discovers that the apartment is a notorious gambling den, and this fact forms the base of a plot which brings a series of suspense-filled sequences. Comedy is plentiful, being furnished not only by the main star but by a different kind of star as well, the well-known and very dumb Stuart Erwin.

On Tuesday comes the picture of the year, at least it has been adjudged so by any number of critics. George Arliss, celebrated stage star whose screen roles in "Disraeli" and "The Green Goddess" have sustained his reputation, comes out with his third characterization in "Old English," taken from the play of John Galsworthy's by the same name. The picture casts Arliss in the role of a retrospective old sinner who in the hectic last three days of his life lives again in memory the past years of his not too virtuous career.

The star of "All Quiet on the Western Front" appears again at the theatre with his latest release, "The Doorway To Hell," in which Lew Ayres is seen as a youthful racketeer in a big city's gangland. Such a theme has been a populer one, especially recently, with motion picture scenario writers, and with a cast headed by Ayres and containing as supporting figures Dorothy Matthews, Robert Eliot and others the feature seems assured of a successful production.

"The Life of the Party" is the attraction Thursday, bringing again to the screen Winnie Lightner, whose work in last year's screen success, "Gold Diggers of Broadway" guaranteed her a long term contract. Irene Delroy is also in the cast, which includes the stage comedian Charles Butterworth.

The feature Friday is "Illicit" with Barbara Stanwyck in the leading role, supported by Ricardo Cortez.

The Cohens and Kellys, who have had adventures on the screen a number of times before, come again in their latest, "The Cohens and Kellys in Africa." Charles Murray and George Sidney furnish most of the comedy. The scenes have been shot with an eye to realism, and the settings, as well as the course of the action, demonstrate how well the producers have succeeded. The director even went so far as to import eight huge African elephants as an added feature to boost along the story. Kate Price and Vera Gordon take the leading feminine roles.

The next foreign language picture, "The Sea God"—in Spanish with an all Spanish cast, will be shown on Wednesday night at 11:00 instead of Saturday night.

French Class Meets Tuesday

The initial meeting of the extension class in beginners' French will take place in 314 Murphey at 4:45 Tuesday afternoon. This class, in charge of Dr. J. Ward Fenley, is for townspeople and students taking special language examinations.

Woods Around Chapel Hill Abound in Charm

seldom that one of the students is lost, because their leader, a professor or assistant, usually keeps near town where there is a network of paths. It is amusing to see the members of one of these strung-out groups go struggling by in a valiant attempt to keep in sight of the flying heels of their leader, who is bent on covering all the ground possible during the specified class period.

Farther out from the village one may walk for hours without seeing another person, except in autumn or winter when he may run into a hunter. For besides an abundance of quail and squirrels and rabbits, these woods are the haunts of the king of all game birds, the wild turkey. T. Gilbert Pearson, president of the National Association of Audubon Societies, writes that when he was a Carolina student some thirty years ago he saw these wary birds on the very campus of the University; and numbers of them are still here, though hardly right on the campus. Neither is it an uncommon thing to hear hounds baying in the Chapel Hill woods at night, for coons are yet fairly abunant hereabouts. Not so long ago a colored janitor was seen carrying home one of these black-masked fellows that his dogs had caught.

Deep Air of Loneliness

Rather than becoming less wild, as would naturally be expected, the Chapel Hill woods have probably grown more solitary during the last few years. One reason is that with the coming of movies, radios, automobiles, and good roads, fewer students will accept a walk in the woods as a diversion. Thus, many of the old paths are dim. Then, too, many of the farm cabins hereabouts have been abandoned. These forsaken homesteads lend the woods which surround them a deeper air of loneliness and decay.

Not far from the spot where the remains of Moorer were found is one of these empty cabins, half-hidden in the midst of what was once a clearing. Its little field is shaggy with briars and weeds and tall grass; but there is still a tumbledown arbor of scuppernong vines, and a scraggly peach tree, as well as an ever-spreading thicket of wild plum. All traces of tobacco, cotton, or any field crop are quite gone. The place has about it a wistful fascination that draws the exploring hiker across the doorsill, makes him go through each empty room, to peer into every closet, and at last to pause and wonder about the people who once dwelt there; why they went away, and what has become of them.

Ghosts and Romance Linger

Perhaps no other woodlands in North Carolina are as rich in story and tradition as those which surround Chapel Hill. At Piney Prospect, within a half-mile of the town, romance still hovers over the great rock which marks the once-secret tomb of Peter Dromgoole, the impetuous young student who was killed there in a duel fought by moonlight so long ago.

Among the trees below is the lovely spring where he and his sweetheart held tryst. Not far away is the cluster of massive rocks, "Black Tom's Lair," within whose shelter Tom Morgan, the runaway slave, lay hidden for months. Emerging at night to subsist by robbery, he caused such terror that a force of armed men was finally sent out from Chapel Hill to scour the woods for him.

In this part of the woods may also be seen traces of the rifle pits dug by Wheeler's retreating cavalry. The other way out from the village are two larger pits; one the shaft of an abandoned iron mine, the other the crater of an extinct volcano.

Kemp Battle, Woodsman

But for those of us who still love the Chapel Hill woods their most treasured associations are neither of murdered Dromgoole nor runaway slave, but of Kemp Plummer Battle, Reconstruction president of the University, who as the bronze tablet at Piney Prospect says, "knew and loved these woods as no one else." Even those of us who have never seen him may still find traces of his woodland handiwork, for it was he who made the rustic seats and little bridges which one may yet see in the more beautiful parts of the woods. Becoming wearied at times with his grave duties as president of the University, it was his wont to seek peace in the forest.

The wooden seats he made are falling to decay, many of the paths he cleared with his hatchet are dim, but some of the glens and dells still bear the names he gave them: Trysting Poplar, Woodthrush Home, Vale of Ione, Anemone Spring, Flirtation Knoll, Glen Lee, Dogwood Dingle. For many of us the memory of Kemp Plummer Battle is as much a part of these hills as the oaks and pines, but it is well that the Gimghouls have graven his name in bronze at the summit of Piney Prospect. Somehow, in a few simple words, they have ensnared in the dull metal some of that poignant charm which broods forever over the woods which surround the old university town of Chapel Hill.

GLEE CLUB WILL SING AT HOLLINS SATURDAY NIGHT

Three Other Trips, Within the State, Remain on This Season's Schedule.

The University glee club, under the direction of Dr. Harold S. Dyer, will go to Hollins College, Hollins, Virginia, where the members will give a concert Saturday night. They will be entertained by residents of Hollins and Roanoke Saturday night and Sunday morning, when they will depart for Chapel Hill.

The student body, as well as the faculty of Hollins, have extended friendly invitations to the glee club, and regard Carolina, according to their letters, in an amiable light. The sponsors of the concert guarantee a packed house.

It has been the policy of that college to have the University glee club appear there on alternate years. Since the last performance was given in 1929, the club goes again this year. Thirty men have been selected to make the trip, and these will be transported in cars belonging to the members of the club. They leave the campus early Saturday morning, from the music building.

H. L. Knox will accompany the group as piano soloist and accompanist. The managerial duties are under the supervision of C. B. Overman, who schedules the performances.

The program for the Saturday evening entertainment consists of several types of vocal music. It will include folk songs of Russia and also France. In addition to these there will be one group of chorales and another group of American songs.

Special rehearsals have been found necessary since the regular hours all this week have been occupied by the Maenner-

CO-ED AND GRAIL DANCES PLANNED

Woman's Association To Entertain Friday Before Grail Dance Saturday.

Two dances are scheduled for this week-end, the winter co-ed dance Friday night, February 6, and a Grail dance, Saturday, February 7.

The dance to be given Friday night by the Woman's Association will be the second of the academic year. The dance will be in Spencer hall between the hours of nine and one o'clock. Jack Wardlaw and his Carolina Tar Heels have been engaged to play for the dance.

Reeme Moore, president of the Woman's Association, has the bids now and she would like for the girls who live out in town to get them from her within the next two days.

The Grail dance Saturday night will be the second sponsored by the order during the winter quarter. It will be in Bynum gymnasium from nine o'clock until twelve. Music will be furnished by Ty Sawyer and his Carolina Buccaneers.

Tickets for the dance will be on sale Friday and Saturday at the Book Exchange and at Pritchard Lloyd's drug store.

The third dance of the quarter will be given Saturday, February 28, the night following the law school dance.

DI WILL DISCUSS CORPORATION TAX

A bill regarding the recent report of the Wickersham Commission is to be discussed tonight when the members of the Di Senate meet in their regular weekly session. Fifteen minutes prior to the opening of the meeting, President Little requests that all of the officers of the society be present for a special conference. The regular meeting convenes at seven o'clock.

The bills are:

1. Resolved: That the results of the Wickersham Commission's investigation do not justify its expense to the United States government.

2. Resolved: That the tax on foreign corporations should be increased to help raise the state's revenue for 1931.

Resolved: That the University should own and equip a modern laboratory school for the betterment of school conditions in the state.

PLAYMAKERS GIVE NEW PRODUCTION

"East Lynn" Will Be Presented Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

The next production by the Carolina Playmakers, according to Professor Koch, director, is to be "East Lynn," scheduled for Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week in the Playmakers theatre.

"East Lynn" is dramatized from the novel by Mrs. Henry Wood, and is a classic favorite of the old stock companies. It is highly successful with Tent and Hall Repertory companies. The drama will be done in ultra-modern dress.

Professor Samuel Selden, technical director, has designed some interesting and original scenery for the production. He is attempting as an experiment to bring out fresh values for the modern audience by presenting the play against a background of psychological scenery.

The action of the tragedy is represented as taking place in the cage of Fate. Over the scene of struggle throughout the play hang two abstract masks which symbolize the duel forces acting upon and determining the destiny of the tragic heroine, Lady Isabel.

The entire cast follows: Sir Francis Levinson, Everett Jess; Archibald Carlyle, Whitner Bissell; Lord Mount Severn, Horace Ward; Justice Hare, Elmer Oettinger; Richard Hare, Ernest Deans; Mr. Dill, John Zimmerman; Officer, Pendleton Harrison; Little Willie, D. D. Carroll, Jr.; Lady Isabel, Madame Vine, Bess Jones Winburn; Barbara Hare, Jo Norwood; Miss Carlyle, Alice Walker; Joyce, Hazel Bowers; Wilson, Adelaide Reed.

The Faculty Chamber orchestra will play between the acts under the direction of Lamar Stringfield, Thursday, February 5, Friday, February 6, and Saturday, February 7. The Thor Johnson Septet will play Saturday night.

This is a production of the Playmakers regular season program. Reserved seats may be secured at the Student Supply Store. Season tickets may be exchanged for reserved seats.

MINNESOTA FACULTY MOVES TO ABOLISH 'SPOON-FED' SYSTEM

Six Proposals Deal With Improvements Recommended for Course Of Study in Liberal Arts School.

By J. B. Johnston
Dean of Arts and Sciences

The colleges are busy making over the system of higher education. The University of Chicago has spread its announcements and now Yale comes forward with "the most important step that has been taken by the college in the last 30 years, certainly so far as the curriculum is concerned." Minnesota makes its reforms one step at a time, but is always moving.

The faculty of the College of Science, Literature and the Arts Monday evening took action which indicates an intention to move along certain lines. The proposals have to do with fitting the work of the college to the needs and interests of individual students and with making the offerings of the college contribute more definitely and effectively to the development and strengthening of whatever powers the student possesses.

Improve Exam System

First is to be carried forward the differentiation of studies in relation to the abilities of the students to grasp and use. This is already in progress and involves "the use of all legitimate means of increasing the number of entering freshmen and of transfer students who give high promise and of reducing the number of those who do not show aptitude for college work."

Second is the improvement of the system of examinations. Although no decisions, regarding details have been reached, the proposals under discussion include both changes in course examinations and the addition of comprehensive examinations, such as to introduce certain principles not now operative: the principle of deferred examinations which will require the students to hold to the end the products of a prolonged period of study, since this favors assimilation as distinguished from mere memorizing; the principle coordination of the results of study from two or more points of view or by several methods; the principle of adaptation of types of examination to students differing in traits and skills; the principle that intellectual ability shall be combined with mastery of the subject. Perhaps other aims are to be sought also. For the development of the new system the faculty has provided an Examining Board.

Third, it is hoped to do away with spoon-feeding by the faculty and hand-to-mouth living by the student which are the consequences of the present system of courses and examinations. The present objective of too many students is to pass the courses, count the credits and forget both the content and the sad experience. This should be replaced by consciously directed efforts of the student to cultivate his native powers ,to educate himself, not merely to get a diploma.

Discover Student's Capacity

Fourth come renewed and expanded efforts to discover the capacities and needs of the individual student and to assist him to find among the facilities of the college the medium for his self-expression. While printed regulations may still be adequate for the mass, for those students who have both ability and individuality the faculty pro-

Murchison Gives Clear Analysis Of Cotton Industry In New Book

There has recently come from the University of North Carolina Press a book containing what is generally regarded as a remarkably clear and unbiased analysis of the causes of the present depression in the cotton industry. The author also proposes a method of correction, featuring a plan of vertical combinations, which he says has proven successful in practice.

Dr. C. T. Murchison, director of research in the University's School of Commerce, is the author of the volume, which bears the significant title "King Cotton Is Sick." Already the book has attracted attention far and wide, and most of the reviews have been highly favorable.

have been highly favorable.

The Manchester Guardian, one of the best known English journals, recently carried a two-column piece that concluded that Dr. Murchison's line of approach is "novel" and "is reached by a piece of analysis which is fresh in its point of view, intensely realistic, and vividly portrayed."

The Manufacturers Record calls the book an "important contribution to the subject of cotton manufacturing."

The New York Herald Tribune refers to Dr. Murchison's analysis as a "lucid and sure diagnosis."

The Athens (Ga.) Banner Herald called it "an able and exhaustive discussion of the textile industry."

Prominent textile men have been practically unanimous in acclaiming the volume. H. R. Fitzgerald, president of the Riverside and Dan River Mills of Danville, Va., says it will "prove to be a constructive influence in the whole textile situation."

Spencer Love, of the Burlington Mills, says "no broader, better-informed or more unbiased resume ever came from any source."

Writing in the Virginia Quarterly Review, Gerald W. Johnson says "no man, in the South or out of it, ought to presume to discuss the problem of the cotton mills until he has read this book. That is my considered opinion of its importance."

Bernard Cone, head of the Proximity Manufacturing Company of Greensboro, says, "This little masterpiece contains not only an illuminating picture of the situation confronting the textile industry at the present time, but with an analysis almost uncanny, diagnoses the major causes of present conditions and proceeds to offer some very constructive suggestions for bettering these conditions. I think every cotton manufacturer will find it of value, and that part of the general public which is interested in the problems of the cotton textile industry will certainly find in this book a clear and graphic description of those conditions."

POSTPONED BILLS ON PHI CALENDAR

Due to the fact that considerable time was consumed in selecting a new speaker for the Phi at the last meeting, discussion of the bills was postponed until tonight's meeting.

The bills to be discussed are:

1. Resolved: That the Phi Assembly is of the opinion that the public highway bus service in North Carolina and commercial freight hauling by motor vehicles in the state should be thoroughly and impartially investigated, all the facts found to be submitted to each member of the 1933 General Assembly at least sixty days before that body convenes.

2. Resolved: That the Phi Assembly go on record as favoring a full, impartial investigation and study by some legally authorized body of the production, distribution and costs of electrical power in North Carolina.

EDUCATION GROUP ORGANIZES TODAY

Commission on Adult Illiteracy Meets at Carolina Inn To Begin Work.

The state commission on adult illiteracy, appointed recently by Governor Gardner, meets at the Carolina Inn today for the purpose of perfecting the organization and setting up a state-wide program. This committee will continue the work started last year by a similar committee which broke up due to resignations of several of its members.

Adult illiterates of the state will be educated by several civic organizations, which will hold classes for this purpose. Assistance will also be rendered by the University Extension division. As North Carolina ranks among the first ten states having the largest number of illiterates in proportion to population, a commission of this sort was needed badly, according to Governor Gardner.

An official chairman will be selected at the meeting. Mr. Luther Hodges, of Spray, is acting chairman of the commission, which includes from this community Dr. Howard W. Odum, I. C. Griffin, and R. M. Grumman.

REGISTRATION AT STATE IS 1,695

W. L. Mayer, registrar of North Carolina State College, announced Friday that forty-nine students were not allowed to register in the institution for the winter term because of failure to pass the required amount of work during the fall.

Although nearly fifty students failed to return this term, the enrollment of the institution is larger by sixty-five than the winter term enrollment last year. The total enrollment is 1,695, of which number eighty-four are co-eds.

Mr. Mayer states that women students will increase each year and cites the great increase in the last five years to substantiate his opinion. Last year there were seventy-five girls at State and nine were graduated.

According to a copy of the Red and White of September 30, 1903, co-eds were attending the college twenty-seven years ago. An article from that paper said, in part: "We are glad to say that this year we have two lady students with us. It speaks well for the college, and we hope they will continue to come."

SPANISH DANCER HIGHLY PRAISED WHEN IN LONDON

Carola Goya Appeared Before Numerous Social Leaders in Dance Recitals.

Carola Goya, who is to appear here as the first performer on the school of Liberal Arts winter quarter entertainment program, was a wonderful success in her London engagements last year.

Not only did she make extended appearances at the Coliseum and Alhambra Theatres, but she was chosen to dance at a charity function under patronage of Her Royal Highness, the Duchess of York, in the great hall of the ancient Middle Temple, being the only dancer to perform in this hall since the days of Queen Elizabeth. Also Miss Goya represented Spain at the International Garden Party given by the League of Nations under sponsorship of Viscount Cecil at Hampstead Heath, and was hailed in the London press next day as "Spain's beautiful propagandist of peace." Other notable appearances in London were a recital at Steiner hall and an invitation performance at Runnymeade house and at the Royal Academy of Music, each under distinguished patronage.

The London Daily Chronical says, "Carola Goya, renowned in many countries as being the finest Spanish dancer of the time, made her first London appearance on this auspicious occasion (before the King and Queen of Afghanistan). She made an unforgetable riot of color and whirl of movement as she danced in the national way of Spaintangos, fandangod, jotas, garrotins, and bulerias."

RED CROSS QUOTA HALF COMPLETED

Intensive Drive Organized To Raise Remainder of Village's Contribution.

Contributions to the Chapel Hill quota of the Red Cross relief fund have reached a total of $297, and the local committee expects the full $600 to be raised this week. A short talk with reference to the campaign is made each night between performances at the Carolina Theatre. The town is now being canvassed by a special committee, and contributions may still be left at Eubanks Drug Store, the "M" store, the bank, and with Mr. Hill at the University Consolidated Service Plant. A chart has been placed in Eubanks' and is kept each day, showing the number of subscribers and the increase in the total amount.

Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, chairman of the Chapel Hill chapter, wishes the people to understand that the smaller contributions of twenty-five and fifty cents are just as acceptable as the large subscriptions. So far the gifts range from one dollar to twenty-seven.

Subscriptions to the national fund are coming in faster and the total is over $4,000,000.

Dr. William DeKleine, director of the medical and health service of the Red Cross, who has recently returned from a two weeks inspection trip in the drought area, observed that diversified farming to replace the traditional one-crop practice will be introduced in the drought areas of the lower Mississippi valley and the Midwest when

Profits of The Spirit

Someone remarked that the real value of an education became apparent during times of depressions for it enables people to converse on a high cultural plane while standing in a bread line. Consideration of that statement in a serious light we are likely to discover that there is more truth than poetry in it.

Conditions have become acute. The legislative branches of both Federal and State governments are seriously concerned with the welfare of the people. A survey of the newspapers and Red Cross reports causes us to realize the full force of the economic depression which has enveloped practically every section of the United States. Serious consideration is being given the proposal to establish what amounts to a dole system in certain parts of the country.

Now we may consider just what an education means to one, for both the educated and uneducated alike are affected. Conversing on high cultural planes while standing in bread lines may not be literally true, but education is preventing the depression from undermining our institutions and making possible conditions which usually follow periods of stress in countries where the masses are largely uneducated. We still retain faith in our institutions, and we are yet to seek to alleviate suffering by turning to anarchism.

Those in authority are able to plan relief after consideration instead of being forced to act under threat of revolt. And whether standing in bread lines of scraping the bottom of the flour barrel we discover that conditions do not warrant desperate action.

About The Red Cross

The country is in rather a strange position at present as to its inhabitants and its economic position. Grain elevators all over the middle west are filled to capacity and all around them farmers are wanting food for their children. Cotton is very much "overproduced," and yet people in a number of these states of ours are very much in need of clothing. The House recently appropriated $45,000,000 for farm relief so that "the farmers can buy fodder for their stock, but cannot buy food for their families."

Even after Congress passed the bill for the farm relief, they are halting in their efforts to put through a bill to help the Red Cross in their work to save lives all over the nation. An appropriation of $25,000,000 is being halted over and thought about more than entrance into a war. Meanwhile letters are being sent out to the more wealthy citizens of the nation for contributions to bridge the gap that Congress refuses to fill.

The Red Cross in some measure of desperation has had to start a nation-wide campaign for contributions. Every bit of help which we are able to offer should be forthcoming willingly. Every student should give something or at least make one of his weekly show attendances be on this coming Sunday, the benefit from which performance goes to the Red Cross.

Since the Red Cross is being put off by our legislative body, we, as citizens, should give willingly to make possible the existence of thousands of fellow citizens who are suffering to an unbelievable extent in our United States.—O. W. D.

God's Own Gentleman

He isn't on the football team; he can't box or wrestle or run. Clean living has made him healthy enough, but the body God gave him is mediocre, helplessly and hopelessly mediocre.

On class he is a C man, consistently a C man. He studies hard enough, but the mind God gave him, like the body God gave him, is mediocre; helplessly and hopelessly mediocre.

But the spirit God gave him makes up for it all. It's decent and fine and generous. Of course he's human, and it's human to love the limelights, the applause of the multitude, the feeling of being able to excel in at least something. And so, since he is human, there are times when utter weariness and helplessness and hopelessness come over his soul. But only he ever knows of it. He laughs aloud, but like a well-bred animal he suffers in silence. And he goes on his colorless way in patience, if not in joy.

He admires and likes, and all without a touch of envy, those who can do what he can't do. He takes such part in the scholastic and campus activities as his capacity permits. He asks no applause, expects none—and gets none. But he's the stabilizing influence of it all. He's the background of the picture, but without the background the picture would lose half its beauty.

There are a good many of him; the pity of it is that there aren't more.

Mentally and physically he's mediocre, helplessly and hopelessly mediocre. But in spirit he's one of God's own gentlemen.—V. A. D.

Graham To Address P. T. A.

President Frank Graham is to speak before the Parent-Teachers' Association of Greensboro tonight. This speech will be the last for some time as President Graham intends to rest after his recent illness.

With Contemporaries

The Senate Opposes

Although the senate opposition forces have been defeated on several occasions, they have again seized upon an item that is almost trivial and with much talk about "humanity" in general, they have determined to create appropriations for federal relief work in several midwest states, particularly since the refusal of the Red Cross to accept the administration of a $25,000,000 fund.

But behind all this talk of "human suffering," there is a still very distinct threat of filibustering and holding up the appropriations bills until such relief agencies shall have been formulated.

There may be some grounds for such speeches as that of Senator Joseph T. Robinson who asked "that senators with a spark of humanity repudiate this policy, that no action whatever shall be taken in this time of national distress," but it sounds more like the minister who, when he could not think of anything to say, just shouted.

Senator Robinson's argument is merely that the $10,000,000 fund which is being raised by public donation is not nearly sufficient for the tremendous amount of work which must be done along relief lines.

These arguments would seem rather foolish when one considers that, probably more than any other organization in the country today, the Red Cross is in first hand contact with local conditions. Who, other than such an organization, is able properly to judge the expenditures which must be made for relief? Certainly not a United States senator ,even though he may come from one of the states critically endangered by the drought and business crisis.

The people of the United States have responded generously to the appeal of the Red Cross and this organization, in close contact with conditions in the drought areas, has estimated that $10,000,000 will be sufficient. It would be more expedient to let the Red Cross handle its own job, confident that it has enough funds to complete the task, and for the Senate to settle down instead to getting out of the way some of the multitude of legislation that is really needed before the adjournment of the Congress on March 4.—Michigan Daily.

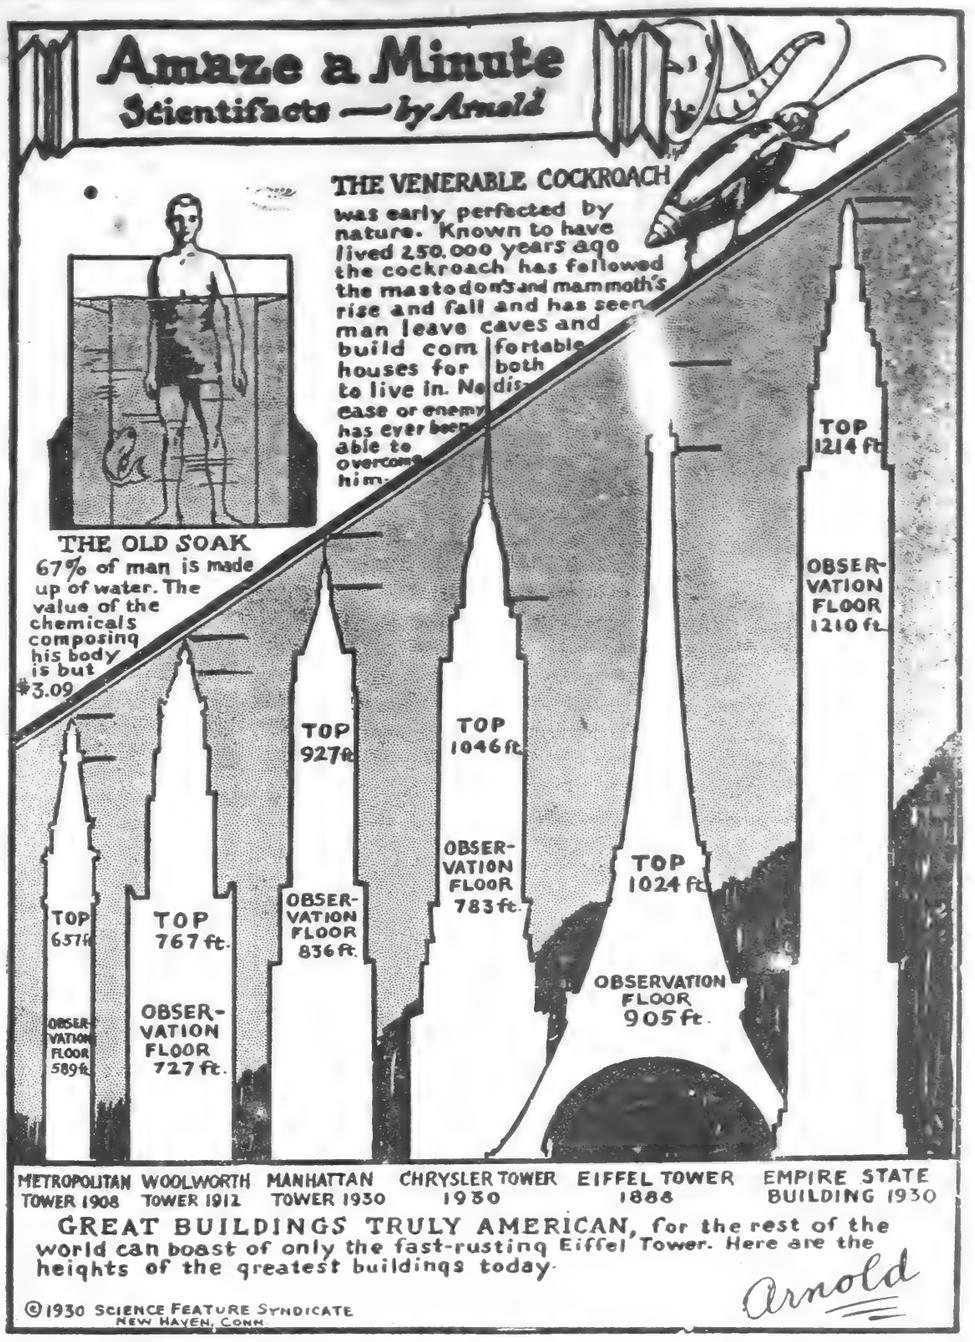
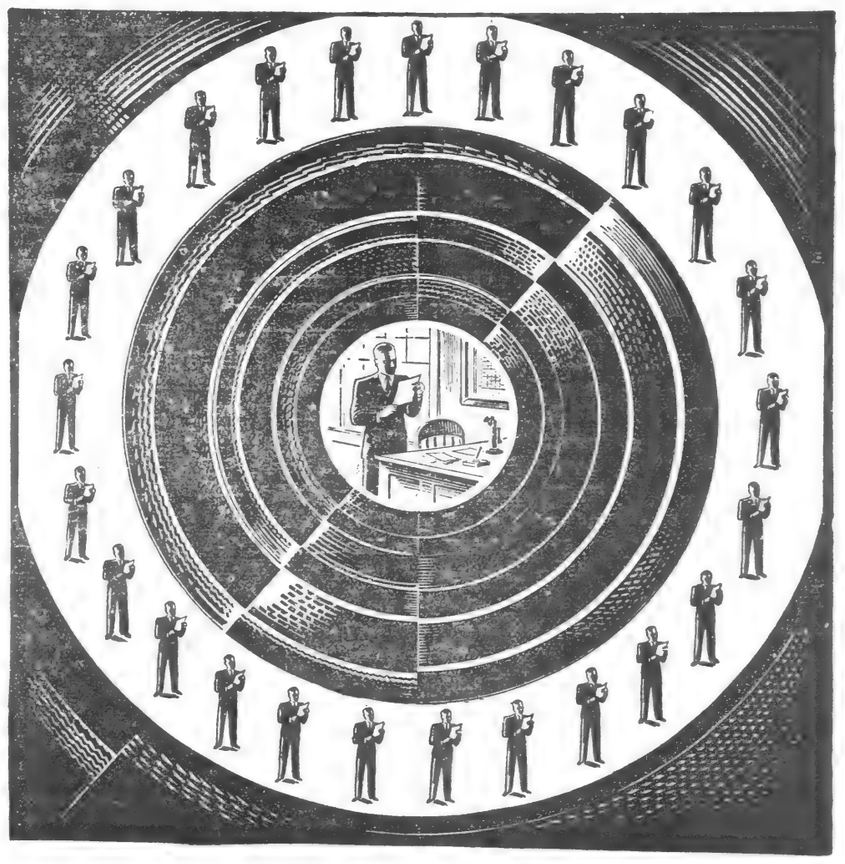
hoer Chorus, which presents a concert here the ninth of February.



The entertainment of the club, while in Virginia will be handled by the Hollins music association, which sponsored the concert, and the Carolina alumni of Roanoke. A supper will be given Saturday evening by the music association at the college. The alumni in Roanoke have expressed the desire to entertain the members Saturday night. Three of these men have been outstanding in extending this hospitality: W. S. Battle, Jr., Rev. A. R. Birkley, and Dr. J. T. McKinney.

In addition to this concert, the club will make three trips to other places in the state. The first of these will be to Spring Hope, where the senior class of the high school has agreed to sponsor the program. This trip will be made February 20.



At the evening services of the Church of Wide Fellowship, in Southern Pines, the group will give a special musical feature March 1. This appearance was contracted with Elmer W. Serl, minister of the church. He holds a platform hour every Sunday evening, at which time the congregation is entertained with music and messages.

The last of the concerts for the quarter will be given at the Moravian Church at Salem College, Winston-Salem, under the auspices of the church. The date of this program is March 3.

Tar Heel Cagers Engage State Tonight

State Out To Revenge Drubbing At Hands Of Tar Heels Last Week

Big Five Basketball Activities Will Come To Test As Two Quintets Tangle.

Big Five basketball activities, in somewhat of a muddle now, will come in for some more testing tonight when State College plays Carolina in the Frank Thompson gymnasium. The game is also a Southern Conference tilt.

The varsity game will follow a meeting of the freshman quints at seven o'clock.

Revenge acts will be in order when the Red Terrors and Tar Heels clash. In their previous meetings Carolina beat the State varsity 22-16, while State's frosh licked the Carolina yearlings 29-28. This time the Red Terrors will have the advantage of the home court, so that it looks like the Big Five will see another classic fight.

Carolina toppled State from second place in the loop standing Tuesday night, January 27 when the Red Terrors found playing conditions in the Tin Can unfavorable. Carolina has defeated Wake Forest and has lost to Davidson and Duke in other Big Five tilts.

State is supporting third place in the loop with a 500 percentage, having defeated Wake Forest and Duke, losing to Davidson and Carolina.

State exhibited wonderful form in defeating Duke at Raleigh, but failed to get going against Carolina.

When the Terrors meet Carolina tonight, State's undefeated home record will be at stake. State has played four home games this season and all have been won.

Coach Ray Sermon has been working the men over time the last few days and announced today that the men were in good condition.

State's line-up will be Gammon and Atkinson, forwards; Morgan, center; and Rose and Clark, guards.

Bob Warren, coach of the freshman team will have as a starting line-up, Brown and Jay, forwards; Beaghen, center; and McQuage and Kinkin, guards.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

Phi Delts Win 42-14

Led by J. Peacock, with sixteen points, and T. Peacock, with seventeen points, the Phi Delts downed the Phi Alpha's by a score of 42-14. Witten led the Phi Alpha's with seven points. The Phi Delt's jumped away to a big lead at the half and were never in danger.

TAKES SECOND BOUT

Obie Davis, Carolina middleweight scrapper, took his second fight of the season against V. P. I. Saturday night at Blacksburg, winning handily over Hoffman, veteran Gobbler ringman. Last week against V. M. I. Davis scored a technical knockout over Mason in the third round, jabbing the Cadet with powerful rights and lefts until his seconds were forced to throw in the towel.

'GATOR RINGMEN OPPOSE VIRGINIA

Cavalier Boxers Engage Floridians In Fourth Dual Meet Since 1927.

University, Virginia, February 2.—Florida's boxers, 1930 champions of the Southern Conference, will oppose Virginia in the ring here tomorrow night. The match will begin at seven-thirty o'clock.

This is the fourth dual meet between Cavaliers and 'Gators since they first met in the ring in 1927. Virginia won that year, five to two. They did not get together in 1928, but in 1929 the Florida team won four to three, and they took a victory by the same score last season.

Florida has never failed to make an impressive showing in Conference tourney. The 'Gators placed third in 1927, when the Cavaliers won the title. They were in the same position a year later, in 1929 they moved into second position, and in 1930 they took the title for the first time, with V. M. I. second and Tulane third.

Johnny LaRowe, coach of the Cavalier ringmen, won't decide which of his men will go in against Florida until just before time to weigh in.

Jack Fishburne is the most likely choice as bantamweight and Bobby Goldstein will probably go in as featherweight. The lightweight position is uncertain. Captain Bob Rainey is almost sure to be the welterweight entry, for Gene Stevens, who fractured a small bone in his hand against Virginia Tech, cannot be used.

If Lewis Reiss is moved up into the light-heavy division to give the veteran Fenton Gentry a rest, the middleweight class will be left open for either Dan Williams of St. Julian Oppenheimer. Either Herbert Bryant or Hunter Motley will be the heavyweight.

Virginia's boxers have also to look ahead, for they must be ready for their third match in eight days next Saturday night against North Carolina in Chapel Hill.

CAROLINA BOXERS CONQUER SECOND CONFERENCE FOE

Varsity Ringmen Overwhelm V. P. I. 6-1; Frosh Defeat Gobbler Rats 5-2.

Coach Crayton Rowe's hard hitting Tar Heels advanced another step towards their goal of another Southern Conference championship, and ran their total of victories for the season up to three by winning a one-sided victory over V. P. I. at Blacksburg Saturday night. The score was six to one and two technical knockouts were included among the victories.

After "carrying" two opponents through the last round, Captain Noah Goodridge cut loose against Jones and gave him a terrific lacing. Jones, a southpaw, gave the Tar Heel captain a little trouble at first, but Goodridge started landing with his right, and from then on it was merely a question of how much punishment the V. P. I. boy could stand. The Gobbler seconds threw in the towel in the third round after a series of hard rights had Jones reeling around the ring.

Hugh Wilson, slugging light-heavy, contributed the other knockout for the varsity when Eisen's seconds threw in the towel to prevent their man from taking further punishment. Wilson had his man in serious condition in the second round, but the bell sounded before he could add the finishing touch. Eisen came back in the third round and put up a game scrap to force the bout into an extra round. This third round rally, however, took whatever strength Eisen had left and he was an easy mark for Wilson who went out for the fourth round in great shape.

Marty Levinson continued to win over the best the South has to offer in his weight by taking a hard fought decision over Towler, star V. P. I. featherweight. Towler went to the finals in the Southern Conference tournament last winter and is considered one of the toughest men in the Conference. The fight was hard fought from beginning to end, but Levinson's blows to the body took too much out of the Tech battler and had him weak in the final round.

Dail Holderness, Tar Heel welter, turned in his second win of the season by taking a fast four round decision from Captain "Irish" Mehaffey. Mehaffey put up a great scrap against the hard hitting redhead, but Holderness won handily in the extra round.

George Biggs, Blue and White bantam, lost a close decision to Jack Perrine of Tech, but put up a beautiful fight before bowing to Perrine's superior experience. Both boys went to work in a hurry and put up a first class exhibition.

Obie Davis turned in his third victory of the season by defeating Hoffman in three rounds. Davis used both left and right to good advantage and won easily, keeping Hoffman's powerful right hand helpless.

John Warren kept his 1931 record clean by mastering Stark in a three round bout. Stark, one of V. P. I.'s strongest men, could neither land his own blows, nor get away from Warren's damaging body attack, and John had little trouble in annexing his second win of the year.

The freshmen, under the direction of Odell Sapp who substituted for Coach Archie Allen this week, continued their murderous policies inaugurated last week. In winning five to two

BOXING TEAM KEEPS PERFECT RECORD

The V. P. I. Gobblers were just another boxing team when the Tar Heel mitmen met them Saturday night, and judging from the three dual victories it looks as though the Carolina outfit will march on toward another Southern Conference crown. It is a bit premature to make predictions as to the outcome of the Charlottesville tournament since Carolina has not met either Virginia or Florida, two of the outstanding conference teams.

However, the impressive 6-1 victory over V .M. I., last year's runners-up, and the fact that V. P. I. held the Cavaliers to a 4-3 decision indicate that the Tar Heel pugs are going right along toward the top conference position. The Tar Heels must determine the camparative strength of the Florida 'Gators. And this can be known after Saturday night, since the Virginia Cavaliers will be hosts to Florida tonight at Charlottesville, and Carolina will receive Virginia Saturday at the Tin Can.

Three dual meets stand between the Tar Heels and their preparations for the conference bouts. They are the Virginia fights this week, Duke at Durham next Friday and the Penn State encounter February 21, at State College, Pennsylvania. The real test of the season will come when the team meets the Penn State outfit. Chapel Hillians will remember the strong team which they brought down here last winter, and they are reported to have another team equally as powerful this season.

Uppermost in the minds of the Tar Heel team this week, however, is the fights with the University of Virginia Saturday night at the Tin Can. The comparative scores with V. P. I. give Carolina an edge. But then Carolina had an edge on paper over the Duke basketball team last Saturday night. No attention is being paid to this dope, the boxers are now preparing for their stiffest home meet. A decisive victory over the Cavaliers would put the Tar Heels decidedly in front of the other conference teams, and to such a goal the leather pushers are striving.

The principal reasons why this will be difficult, however, is that Virginia boasts Captain Rainey, who took the Southern Conference title from Archie Allen last year, Jack Fishburne and Bobby Goldstein.

CAPTAIN NAMED "ARTFUL DODGER"

Noah Goodridge has rightly been named the "artful dodger," for in his three fights this year he has punched his opponents almost at will and has succeeded in "artfully dodging" them when they try to find him. Twice he has out of the kindness of his heart refused to knock his opponent out. Up there at Blacksburg, he had his man so completely subdued that both seconds flung in the towels.

John Warren is packing more and more murder in his punch and is certainly a likely candidate for the heavy or light heavy title. Dale Holderness looks good, having succeeded in taking the match away from the captain of the Gobbler team last Saturday, after winning a technical knockout from the V. M. I. welter in his first varsity fight.

Hugh Wilson, styled by all Carolina supporters as "K. O." or "Kayo," becomes a bigger threat each week. Two technical knockouts in two weeks is an excellent record, and especially so when he is up against the best men on the team. Martin Levinson should make them take notice at Charlottesville. He packs one of the hardest punches that we have ever seen a featherweight deliver. And Obie Davis is looking like a surer winner in each fight.

A little more confidence and George Biggs will start taking decisions. It looks like a good conference lineup to us.

V. P. I. GRAPPLERS DROP DOUBLE BILL TO CAROLINIANS

Frosh Held to 14-14 Tie While Varsity Matmen Overcome Gobblers By 19-13.

In the double feature attraction Saturday night Carolina's frosh held the V. P. I. freshman wrestling team to a 14-14 tie. The varsity team, performing on home territory for the first time this season, wiped up the mat with the highly touted V. P. I. team to the tune of 19-13.

V. P. I. went into the lead in the varsity division when Price threw Pete Usher of Carolina with a body hold, after five minutes and fifteen seconds of wrestling. In the second bout, Graves of V. P. I., Southern Conference champion in the 115-pound class last year, took an overtime decision from Captain Stallings by a time advantage of nineteen seconds.

Mayne Albright is not in the least bit fazed by wearing number "13" on his robe, for he went out and won the first match for Carolina by a fall. Albright had the edge on Mitchell all the way and after one minute and thirty seven seconds of fighting in the first overtime period he pinned his man with a double arm bar hold.

Following his teammates' example Don Conklin, in the 145 pound division, won by a fall over Mundie in five minutes and fifteen seconds using a similar hold.

Harry Tsumas defeated V. P. I.'s captain in the 155 pound class by a time advantage of four minutes and fifteen seconds.

Percy Idol had everything his own way in his bout with Leonard, winning by a time advantage of seven minutes and fifty-five seconds. Fred Ferguson had almost as easy a time of it as did Idol, taking the match by a time advantage of seven minutes.

Gibbs of V. P. I. took the last

TAR BABIES SEEKING WIN OVER WOLFLETS

The Tar Baby basketeers will seek to break the one-point jinx which State College frosh hold over both the Carolina and Duke Yearlings when the Blue and White Youngsters and the Wolflets meet in Raleigh tonight in a preliminary to the varsity game. State's freshmen defeated both Carolina and Duke by scores of 29-28, earlier in the season.

In a fast preliminary to the varsity tilt last Saturday night Duke's Blue Imps downed the Carolina frosh, 43-24.

Roy Alpert, Imp center, led both teams in shooting and in general floor play, looping five field goals and one free toss for eleven points.

Jim Conroy, Duke forward was the star of the first half, but was removed from the game on personal fouls early in the second half. Conroy opened up the scoring with a long shot from the side lines one minute and ten seconds after play started.

Dave McCachern and Buck Harris, Tar Baby guards, performed brilliantly for Carolina. McCachern dropping in three out of four foul shots for three points, while Harris got two action tosses for four points.

The lineup and summary of the Duke game is as follows:

LAW PROFESSOR MADE EDITOR OF NEW PUBLICATION

Albert Coates Edits "Popular Government," a Quarterly Issued Legal Journal.

The first issue of "Popular Government" a quarterly issued by the law school of the University, has just come off the press. Professor Albert Coates is editor of the publication.

There is only one article in this issue, a lengthy treatise entitled "The Convict's Question," which is a review of current penal policies, law-enforcing machinery, governmental structure, governmental reorganization, and democratic hopes.

Professor Coates tries to answer the convict's question as to the injustices of varying punishments, meted out with discrimination by different judges. Tracing changes in types of government, the writer calls attention to the shifting purpose of punishment.

Although admittedly unsolved, the problem of punishment for crime is portrayed in a hopeful light: "If out of astrology astronomy could come, if out of alchemy chemistry could come, is it too much to hope that out of psychiatry with its many blind and futile gropings may come the beginnings of a science of human behavior?"

A. I. C. E. To Meet

The American Institute of Chemical Engineers will meet tonight at seven o'clock in room 201 Venable hall. Dr. Schwenning, of the school of commerce, will speak on "The Present Industrial Depression and the Engineer." Members should note that the meeting has been moved up to seven o'clock. The public is cordially invited to attend this meeting.

Patterson to Speak

"Pat" Patterson, president of the senior class and business manager of the Daily Tar Heel, speaks tomorrow afternoon over WPTF from five to five-fifteen o'clock on "Class Activities."

Chapel Notices

There will be no chapel today since the freshman class picture is to be taken on the steps of the law building at ten-thirty.

On Wednesday and Friday Dean C. T. McCormick of the law school will speak on "The Profession of Law and the North Carolina Law School."

The deans of the various schools will meet with the freshmen of their departments at chapel period Thursday. Dean Carroll will meet the freshmen of the school of commerce in 103 Bingham.

Entertainment Tickets

There has been quite a bit of misunderstanding about the student entertainment tickets for this quarter, especially by people in the schools of Education and Liberal Arts.

To avoid confusion, and the music department more annoyance, let it be understood that the students in the above-mentioned schools may get their tickets at their respective deans' offices, and not at the office of Professor Dyer in the Music building.

Tickets are on sale at the Y. M. C. A. for two dollars and a half. There are five events on the winter quarter schedule, with the first event, the Carola Goya Danceuse, occurring Friday night.

Freshman Pictures

All freshmen are requested to be on the steps of the law building Tuesday during the chapel period to get their pictures taken for the Yackety Yack.

The Musical University

By Wex Malone

Professor T. Smith McCorkle played to a large audience in violin recital Sunday afternoon. He was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Lilita W. McCorkle. The recital was the fourth of the Vesper Series sponsored by the Music Department of the University.

Grieg's Sonata opus 54 was the opening number. Standing without counterpart in the musical world, the music of Grieg is a strange tonal structure, embodying in the classical Sonata form all the cold mysticism of the composer's native land. The melodies which constitute the Sonata, all adapted from native folk songs, find vent in one instrument to be echoed by the other. The result is a delightful interchange of passages, with new themes bubbling forth when least expected. The tempo of the Sonata increases with astounding rapidity, until the music, tired by its own exertion, sinks back into the same mysterious source from which it came. The appeal of the music of Grieg is not limited to the erudite, but finds its way to the fancy of the most uninitiated of every audience. McCorkle's rendition of the Sonata, while not ineffective, failed to catch the spirit of Grieg. The attack was at all times too robust, and the artist, too intent on giving a flawless technical execution, completely overlooked the finesse of tone quality which is the most important feature of a successful rendition of Grieg. Few artists realize that the music of Grieg should carry itself by its own impetuosity, and is spoiled by obvious forcing. There is a very apparent tendency among musicians to sacrifice their own effectiveness in order that they might arrange a program that will begin with sufficient pomposity. Judging from the improvement in the execution of the latter part of the program, the violinist would have given an immensely improved version of the Sonata had he postponed it until later.

The Concerto in D Minor by Vieuxtemps, the second selection, consists of two movements. The andante moderato, extremely vigorous, is contrasted with the second movement, adagio religioso. The two movements are tied together with a thread, a single sustained note on the violin. The first movement, initiated by a dialectic section, grows in rapidity until the violin, weary of its less agile friend, shakes off the piano accompaniment, and enters alone into a spirited movement executed for the greater part on two strings. The second movement, decidedly of a more subdued quality, comes as a quiet repause from the tension of the first movement. This number clicked decidedly.

It was in La Gitana by Kreisler that McCorkle really hit his stride. He played with color and feeling. Under his bow the music of Kreisler became something sensuous, alive. A mention of this number would be incomplete without a reference to the excellent accompaniment afforded by Mrs. McCorkle. Her execution of the difficult tempo of Kreisler's number was everything that could be desired.

Humoreske and Le CouCou, the concluding number were both played sensitively. Humoreske is a scintilating brilliant composition. It was played in the manner in which it was conceived, frivolously. Of Le CouCou little need be said here. It was effective as usual, and made an excellent concluding number.

It is extremely difficult to play without response. No artist can play to best advantage to an audience that is prevented from giving some vent to its appreciation. The Vesper Recitals will continue to be incomparably better during the latter part so long as the so called tradition of prohibiting applause prevails. The player is forced to warm under his own momentum while the present situation exists. Why should this assumed dignity impair the success of the recitals? Of course we will all acquiesce as long as the program demands acquiescence. The reviewer suggests that enjoyment, not meditation, should be the keynote of the series.

It is to be hoped that Professor and Mrs. McCorkle will decide to make their recitals come oftener than once each year, as I understand, has been the custom heretofore.

MORE BEANS AND MILK WANTED BY SWAIN BOARDERS

In answer to a questionnaire distributed by the management of Swain hall sometime before Christmas, a few of the 105 criticisms turned in asked for more beans, green vegetables, spaghetti, mashed potatoes with brown gravy, muffins, milk, and cocoa. A large majority of the replies made no comment on the service given in the hall, but thirty-nine of the number described the waiter service as being "excellent."

Some of the other suggestions included a request for chicken three times per week, together with oysters an equal number of times. One of the critics wanted onions served with hot dogs, while quite a few of the boarders expressed themselves as desiring less soup.

As a result of the expressed sentiment in regard to the food, the management has decided to make the following changes: change the hour for breakfast during the week and Sunday; serve milk every day; serve more cocoa, muffins, etc.; cut down on so many cooked tomatoes; and give real creamery butter.

Mr. C. E. McIntosh, of the school of education, who has been ill for the past week at his home on McAuley street, is again back at his office.

spring planting begins. Farmers who have devoted themselves exclusively to cotton are now planning to grow vegetables and fodder. The doctor believes that better food habits are sure to result and that this will help eradicate pellagra.

According to Dr. DeKleine, one of the results of the food shortage has been an awakened interest in food values and the value of a varied diet. The applicants are allowed to order their own food from the groceries and are being advised to order more vegetables.

It is the doctor's opinion that the food shortage has not adversely affected the health of the people to a great extent because of the prompt relief. He thinks also that because of the mild weather, the lack of clothing has not harmed very much, but it has kept numbers of children from school. A possible epidemic of influenza will make the need of warm clothing more important in order to prevent pneumonia.

Dr. W. C. Morse has recovered from his illness and is back at work now. He met his classes yesterday for the first time since he became ill last Tuesday.

CAROLINA BOXERS CONQUER SECOND CONFERENCE FOE

over the V. P. I. freshmen, the Tar Babies scored one clean knockout and three technical knockouts in addition to a three round decision.

Cliff Glover, bantamweight, lost a hard fought decision to Etheridge, and Bruce Langdon lost the lightweight bout to Hortenstein. Langdon rallied in the third round, but could not overcome the lead piled up by the Tech battler in the first and second.

Furches Raymer added his second knockout when Referee Short stopped his fight in the third round. Raymer had a big lead in points when a right hand punch cut his opponents' mouth so badly that the referee stopped the fight.

John Nicholson, substituting for Paul Hudson who is out with a broken hand, scored a technical knockout over Whitman in the second round of the welterweight battle.

Vernon Guthrie, middleweight, won over Yorke by a wide margin in three rounds and showed up well. He used a left hook to the body and head with telling effect.

Peyton Brown went up against Porterfield, undefeated South Atlantic prep school champion, in the lightheavy. Brown won by another technical knockout in the second round when the referee stopped the fight after Brown had knocked his opponent down three times.

It was up to Lacey Pace, heavyweight, however, to furnish the major thrill of the freshman fights. Pace landed a terrific right to the jaw in the second round to score a clean knockout over Simmons.

HOUR FOR SHOWING RED CROSS PICTURE CHANGED

The time of the night showing of the special motion picture next Sunday, to be given for the benefit of the Red Cross aside from the regular Guild program, is nine-fifteen instead of eight-fifteen o'clock as was first announced. This does not bring the theatre feature in conflict with the evening church hour.

Minnesota Faculty Moves To Abolish 'Spoon-Fed' System

poses to substantiate personal direction. As an immediate experimental approach to this problem individuals whose cases are unusual may be assigned to faculty advisers who will assume direct supervision of their work. A curriculum built by one student with the help of a faculty adviser is likely to serve for his education more adequately than would a curriculum which has been prepared by the whole faculty to be applied to all students.

Fifth, the faculty declared in favor of a reduction of the number of courses offered, especially intensive courses at the junior-senior-graduate level, and an expansion of the opportunities for independent work such as is now done in the honors courses under the direction of tutors. The purpose of this is, on the one hand, to increase the conscious interest of the student in educating himself through his own efforts, and on the other hand, to conserve the time and energies of the faculty to be devoted to advising, intellectual stimulation and examination. It is held of the greatest importance that the tutorial type of direction of students' work should be made available for students in the Graduate school as well as for undergraduates.

Sixth, the principle that the time required for securing a degree should depend on the quality of the individual student's work, which is the most prominent feature in the recent announcement from the University of Chicago, was embodied in the quality credit rule which has been in operation here since 1922-23.

Balance Subjects

Our experience with this rule has been on the whole satisfactory. It appears, however, that in observing course requirements and the necessary bookkeeping of credits and honor points the student in some cases finds it difficult to secure a well-balanced combination of major and allied studies and general culture. Therefore the faculty authorizes the Advisory Committee with the help of the Examining Board and other agencies to seek satisfactory methods whereby the student may be offered adequate opportunity to demonstrate his maturity, cultivation and power of performance regardless of the element of time.

It is by no means sure that the effect of basing promotion and graduation chiefly or wholly on comprehensive examinations will be to lead the student to seek a further shortening of the time devoted to his education. It is quite possible that the enriched opportunities offered him by the other changes above cited will lead the student to spend a bit more time in order to attain a mastery of his chosen field, the interest and allurements of which will be greatly enhanced under the new conditions.

Cooperation Needed

These and other changes implied in recent faculty actions are to be regarded not as inaugurating a new era but rather as bringing to consummation plans which have been in the making for a number of years. Other possibilities involved in the working out of these changes need not be discussed now. It will not be amiss to point out that the success of the plans will depend on the cooperation of both students and faculty.

In proportion as the students evince an interest in carrying on their education for themselves the faculty will be encouraged to withdraw from the detailed treatment of many subjects now ready prepared in intensive courses. If the students are willing perhaps the faculty will be content to furnish the recipes and taste the product, while the students stir the ingredients, cook, season and serve their own food.

HIBBARD EDITOR NEW COLLECTION SOUTHERN TALES

Howard Mumford Jones Is Also Presenting Book on New South.

The University of North Carolina Press and W. W. Norton & company, Inc., announce that they will act as co-publishers of certain books selected by mutual agreement from the list of University Press publications.

Under this arrangement two books will be published in the spring. The first, Stories of the South, Old and New, edited by Addison Hibbard, is to be released in March. This book brings together the old south and the new to show a unified picture through a hundred years of short story writing.

Here are stories from before the Civil War, by Richard Malcolm Johnston, Augustus Baldwin Longstreet, William Gilmore Simms; stories from the Reconstruction generation, by Joel Chandler Harris, Thomas Nelson Page, George W. Cable; stories from the established writers of the present century, O. Henry, Wilbur Daniel Steele, Barry Benefield; and stories from the new literary generation, by DuBose Heyward, Julia Peterkin, Elizabeth Madox Roberts, and Paul Green.

Altogether it is a large volume of twenty-seven famous tales of plantation life and of the new negro; of the slowly changing hill-billy and the poor white of the lowlands; of traditional Charleston, colorful New Orleans, progressive Birmingham. Here in short is a varied but subtly unified people, a land which even its realists make romantic, a history and a body of legend.

The second of these books, Culture Below the Potomac, edited by Howard Mumford Jones, will appear in April. This book was originated with the idea of presenting a view of the contemporary south, setting forth its cultural state in learning, social life, literature and the arts. However, it included chapters on industry, politics, race relations, and all other important elements of contemporary life in the south.

LAW FRATERNITIES PLAN TEA DANCES

The three law fraternities, Phi Delta Phi, Delta Theta, Phi, and Phi Alpha Delta, will be hosts at a tea dance which will take place between six and seven-thirty o'clock Saturday February twenty-eighth.

The committee in charge of the affair has arranged to have Jelly Leftwich and his Blue Devil orchestra play at the dance. The members of the committee are: J. A. Williams, Phi Delta Phi; Beatty Rector, Delta, Theta Phi; and Bill Uzzell, Phi Alpha Delta.

This dance is one of the three scheduled for the week-end beginning February twenty-seven. The Law School Association dance is to open the social program for the week-end with its dance on Friday night. Then comes the law fraternities' dance on Saturday, and finally the Grail dance Saturday evening.

Moving Pictures

Free moving pictures will be shown in Venable hall at seven-thirty this evening on the subject of "The Story of Iron."

FRESHMAN GROUP HEAR LYON TALK ON PERSONALITY

All three cabinets of the "Y" met in their usual places Monday night, except the freshman friendship council which convened in the dining room of the Methodist Church.

For the freshman cabinet a new program committee was elected. All members of the council doing work in any capacity on The Daily Tar Heel were asked to assume the responsibility of issuing the winter quarter number of Ex-Hi Y News. Approximately eight members of the council are entering enthusiastically upon that undertaking.

Following this new business, Norman W. Lyon of the department of psychology spoke to the group on the three types of personality, the dependent, the independent, and the interdependent, explaining that the interdependent was the only constructive person; the dependent thrived on charity, and the independent was a separate character. "The interdependent brings the happy medium, the individual which needs the group and the individual needed by the group," he said. These same three types in the religious and economic world were discussed.

FRESHMEN HEAR COMMERCE DEAN IN CHAPEL TALK

Dean Carroll Tells of History And Purposes of Commerce School.

Dean Dudley D. Carroll, of the school of commerce, spoke to the freshmen Monday in the latest of the series of chapel talks. This series has been devised as a means of giving information about the different schools and the various phases of college activity on which the average student is not well informed. As there are four hundred student organizations on the campus, there is much need for definite information about each of them.

Dean Carroll told of the organization of the school of commerce at the University. The president of the University in 1919, Edward K. Graham, saw the need for courses designed to fit young men who need preparation for life in the business world. Such a course, as offered by the commerce school, would present exactly the desired preparation. Dean Carroll, therefore, was engaged to inaugurate this new school in the University curriculum.

The plan of the commerce school is to give four years of adequate training for work in the modern world of business to the young man whose ambition it is. "The commerce school offers an excellent preparation for many professions," said Carroll. A course in modern commercial and financial methods would be invaluable to a corporation lawyer, a government employe, or to a journalist.

Dean Carroll pointed out how the training received here is good for future work in real business life. Subjection to discipline is fully as well defined in actual business life as in routine school work. The demand for regularity, punctuality, and dependability is met in the classroom work. Thus, actual business methods are used in minia-

BRANDIS WRITES IN LAW REVIEW

Former Student Here Contributes Article on "Trust Administration."

The February issue of the North Carolina Law Review, which is published by the University law school four times during the school year, has appeared. Henry Brandis, Jr., assistant editor of the Review, and at present a student in the school of law at Columbia University, wrote the leading article in the new issue on "Trust Administration."

In his discussion Brandis takes up two types of problems in the administration of trust estates. These two are (1) the problems of principal and income arising where a part of the trust is unproductive real estate, and (2) problems concerning the apportionment between principal and income of various expenses arising in connection with the management of the trust. Both of these are thoroughly discussed by the writer, who gives some of his views on each of the two.

Some of the other articles in the February number are "The Parol Evidence rule in North Carolina," written by J. H. Chadbourn, and C. T. McCormick. Chadbourn is the editor-in-chief of the Review while McCormick is dean and professor of law here. J. Gleen Edwards, a third year law student, and Professor M. T. Van Hecke contributed the third story in the number on "Purchase Money Resulting Trusts in North Carolina." The last article on "Tax Escape by Manipulations of Holding Company" was presented by Professor M. S. Breckenridge of the University law school.

Short articles printed under the head of "Notes and Comments" were contributed by E. M. Perkins, W. S. Malone, J. G. Adams, Jr., Travis Brown, H. B. Parker, H. L. Lobdell, Susie Sharp, C. E. Reitzel, Jr., T. C. Smith, Jr., H. B. Campbell, M. S. Benton, and W. T. Covington, Jr.

Less Bad Checks Used This Year Than Last

A careful record of all bad checks reported to the Student Council check committee for the fall quarter shows that a total of 367 bad checks were reported to the committee by the Bank of Chapel Hill.

A check is considered "bad" when it is returned for any reason whatsoever. The term "bad" applies to the check, and not to the intention of the giver.

This fall quarter has seen the least number of bad checks since the fall of 1926. During the same period of time last year, there were 637 checks returned, and 773 the year before. The total amount of money involved this year was $3,348.10 as compared with $4,376.07 last year, and $6,211.11 year before last. The number of students passing the checks was 334 as contrasted with 292 the previous year and the 315 the year preceding that. It is believed that the numerous bank failures have been the cause for the bad checks this fall.

Co-ed Tea

The Women's Association will have its regular Wednesday afternoon tea today in Spencer hall from four-thirty until six o'clock.

FOREIGN SERVICE SCHOOL PROPOSED

Meeting Called for Organizing International Relations Club Here.

There is a movement on foot to establish an International Relations Club for all students who are seriously interested and contemplate going into the foreign diplomatic service for their life work. A meeting is called at ten-thirty this morning in 213 Saunders for the purpose of forming such a club.

The club, if formed, has the prospect of becoming affiliated with the Carnegie Foundation for World Peace, which will send speakers distinguished in this field, here at frequent intervals.

Duke University is holding an Institute in Foreign Affairs the end of the month, and the proposed club here would be able to take advantage of all the seminars, meetings, and speakers that will be there at that time.

The Polity Forum was organized for the purpose of assuring an audience whenever a speaker might come here. The new group would plan regular seminar meetings, either for discussion or to hear addresses made by men who are internationally known in this field. Men, who are brought here as speakers for the Human Relations Institute would also be heard at some of the meetings.

The founders of the organization hope to encourage the establishment of a school of foreign affairs at the University.

$378 NOW GIVEN TO RELIEF FUND

Yesterday the amount contributed to the Chapel Hill quota of the Red Cross relief fund had reached $378. Colonel Pratt, chairman of the chapter, stated that a friend has sent a contribution of $50 toward the $600 quota. By means of the canvass being carried on by a special committee, it is hoped that the quota will be reached by the end of the week.

One of the colored orchestras of Chapel Hill has offered to give its services for a dance and donate the cost of the orchestra to the Red Cross. Arrangements have not yet been made to give the dance.

The national fund has reached approximately $5,000,000. Of this amount $13,678 was contributed by North Carolina. Many of the checks which have been sent in were accompanied by letters which mentioned the appeals given over the radio. The Canadian net work carried the appeal to many in Canada who sent checks. Americans in Mexico also answered the radio request.

Among those who have given addresses in behalf of the Red Cross are President Hoover, ex-President Coolidge, Alfred E. Smith, Will Rogers, Judge John Barton Payne, Mrs. August Belmont, and Mary Pickford.

In addition to state's contributions, $23,562 has come from the insular possessions of the United States and from residents in foreign countries.

Playmaker Production

"East Lynn," a part of the Carolina Playmakers regular season program, will be given Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights of this week in the Playmakers Theatre.

Oregon And Colgate Join Free Attendance Ranks

PATTERSON WILL SPEAK IN RADIO SERIES TONIGHT

Continuing the policy of having one of the campus leaders to speak each week over WPTF, Raleigh, "Pat" Patterson, president of the senior class and business manager of the Daily Tar Heel, will talk this afternoon from five to five-fifteen on the subject of "Class Organizations."

It is Patterson's plan to take up the activities of each of the four classes and discuss them in detail. Following the student from the time he enters school in his freshman year to graduation, the speaker will describe the several organizations which are open for members of the student body to take part in.

So far this quarter speeches have been made by "Red" Greene on "Student Government," John Lang on "Student View-point on the Taxation Question," Mayne Albright on "Di and Phi Literary Societies," John Idol on "Glee Club and Music Organizations," Will Yarborough and Jack Dungan on "Campus Publications," and J. C. Williams on "Debating."

PRESS RELEASES BOOK ON INDIAN VILLAGE SCHOOLS

Dr. W. J. McKee of Education School Is Author of Study of Indian Education.

A detailed account of the methods and experiences of an American educator who taught the youth of India for fourteen years is given in Professor W. F. McKee's "New Schools for Young India," a book just released by the University Press.

Dr. McKie, who is now on the faculty of the school of education, received high praise for his work at a teachers' training school at Moga, in the Punjab, where he was principal from 1919 to 1924. Sir George Anderson, Director of Public Instruction in the Punjab, said that Professor McKee's work at Moga was the "most interesting and valuable contribution to educational progress in India during the last few years." The same opinion has been expressed by numerous other Indian government officials, and the story of what Professor McKee has accomplished in the Punjab is known among the educational leaders of the world.

That an Indian publisher bought a thousand copies of "New Schools for Young India" before it had come from the press is another tribute to the book's author.

Besides telling of the methods and results of his educational work among the lower classes and outcast boys, Dr. McKee devoted several chapters to the history of education in India and the social and economic conditions among the various Indian castes.

The University Press believes that the greatest value of the book lies in its pointing out the effectiveness of connecting teaching with practical interests of everyday life.

Since coming to the University Dr. McKee has had several offers from other institutions, and he recently refused an attractive offer to go back to India.

THREE COLLEGES REMAIN OPPOSED TO CLASS CUTS

Only Ten Percent of Those Questioned Prevent Liberal Measures.

TWENTY-SIX REPLY

Comprehensive Tests May Replace Regular Examinations In Some Colleges.

Twenty-six college and university presidents, deans, and registrars have replied to questionaire letters sent out from here seeking information on optional attendance and liberal privileges extended students. Of this group only three—Carnegie Tech, the University of Iowa, and the University of California have revealed that they do not permit optional attendance.

The questions were unclear to six institutional heads, and further letters have been mailed them.

Sixteen have optional attendance in varying forms, going all the way from optional attendance for juniors and seniors on the honor roll, to all members of the upper classes. These institutions are: Harvard University, Columbia University, Leland Stanford University, Dartmouth College, the University of Chicago, the University of Wisconsin, the University of Kentucky, University of Michigan, University of Minnesota, Northwestern University, University of Virginia, Vanderbilt University, Purdue University, Syracuse University, University of Oregon, and Colgate University.

The University of Tennessee plans to adopt optional attendance and other liberal measures within the year.

The latest institutions to be recorded by the special committee functioning under the Central Advisory Committee at having optional attendance have been the University of Oregon and Colgate University.

Carl W. Onthank, dean of personell administration at the University of Oregon, says: "Liberal privileges are granted students who enroll for special honors. The number of such students is limited to upper di-

BRADSHAW GETS DOCTOR'S DEGREE

Dean F. F. Bradshaw recently received the degree of doctor of philosophy. He began his graduate work at this University and continued here after the war. He also did graduate work at Columbia University, beginning in the summer of 1925 and finishing in the spring and summer of 1926. This completed his year of residence necessary for the degree, which was conferred in December 1930 from Columbia.

His thesis is a pamphlet, "The American Council on Education Rating Scale: Its Reliability and Use." The degree was earned through the combining of three separate endeavors: namely, the studies of statistics for the reports needed for his office here at the University, his work on the committee of the American Council of Education, and lastly, the above mentioned thesis.

The Senate and House Go To War

The public may prepare to witness what now appears to be a determined war between the United States Senate on one side and the President and the House of Representatives on the other. The contest will be waged over the Senate's proposal to appropriate $25,000,000 for food relief. President Hoover and the House have refused to approve this proposal and majority leaders in the House declare that there will be no compromise offered.

Originally the bill appeared to be a Democratic measure, but Monday Senator Borah, sometimes Republican but more often Insurgent, joined with the Democrats in the war against the President and the House. Mr. Borah declared that he was willing to have Congress stay in session all summer if necessary to appropriate money. House leaders are anxious to avoid an extra session and in the words of Representative Tilson, Republican Floor leader, "the House made it clear that the rejection of the proposed $25,000,000 dole is a matter of principle altogether too important in its consequences for the future to admit of a compromise."

As it now seems there will be no compromise on the part of the House, which is clearly controlled by the Administration, and there will be no recession by the Senate. A long drawn out fight is in the offing unless the Administration loses its control over the House.

To the Democrats the fight is welcome, for with March fourth a new Congress will assemble and they hope to control it. It is doubted if either President Hoover or Republican Congressional leaders welcome a show of power immediately. But if a special session is forced the showdown will come all too soon.

The fight is of considerable importance to the President, for it is a test of his control of the present House, and it will prove a test which he does not relish of the new Congress. Unfortunately the sufferers will be losers however the battle goes, for oratory does little to produce food and that seems to be what they need just now.

Campus Hunting

A few days ago, several students were playing baseball on the new quadrangle. One of them was standing a few feet away from a tree. Suddenly he heard a loud report and a piece of bark flew off the tree a foot or so above his head. Astonished and a bit frightened, he looked about him. Then, raising his eyes, he saw a student, a rifle in his hands, leaning out of a window in Lewis dormitory. He was shooting at birds. He had been shooting at birds many times from the window of his room. And so absorbed was he in his pastime this day, that he did not realize he had almost hit a human being.

There is something despicable about a man who will derive great pleasure and enjoyment from killing defenseless birds. We cannot understand how a person can knowingly destroy these winged creatures that help to make Nature so beautiful to us. It goes against our grain to see a hundred and fifty pound animal with a rifle in his hands pitted against a tiny bird who it utterly defenseless against this enemy.

Aside from that, the campus was not meant for a hunting ground. We would like to feel assured that we can walk across the new quadrangle without the fear of having a hole drilled through our head by some campus hunting fool. We feel sure that he can find much better and bigger game in the western part of the state—P. L.

Better Even Than Brain or Brawn

A prominent banker of the state recently said that the thing that worried him most in the conditions through which we have been passing was not that people were losing their money, for when the tide turned they could make their money back, but that the times were making rascals out of so many people who really wanted to be honest men.

This is true not alone in financial matters. It is true with practically every kind of human endeavor that keeping up the the morale is really what counts.

Self-confidence can be easily overcome, and heaven deliver us from the individual who is persuaded that there is no earthly limit to what he can do and is not backward in telling us about it.

But on the other hand, the chap who goes into everything thinking he is already licked is generally correct in his opinion.

If we may venture a definition: morale is a mixture of over-confidence and under-confidence divided by two, determination, decency, cooperation. It's an intangible sort of thing, for which no definition is adequate. But it will carry us through when neither brawn nor brain can or will.

But the most important thing of all that morale can do—it urges us to do our very level best, and then when we fail, if we fail, it helps us to fail with a smile on our lips.—V. A. D.

Chicago Co-eds Protest

Chicago, Illinois, February 1.—Women at the University here have refused to subscribe to the Chicago Phoenix, the institution's humorous magazine, because of the "Co-ed's Diary" which appeared in the last issue.

With Contemporaries

Trust The Women

Rules, rules everywhere and not a one for men. Although college standards are supposed to uphold democracy and the freedom of women as human beings, by the looks of the numerous and uncountable rules, it appears that the men of the specials are so trusty as to be above suspicion, but the women—.

Tradition says that the woman, no matter how modern she may be, must be guarded by rules, so guarded she is with red tape galore. The model young lady who lives in organized houses and boarding houses must be in at 10:15 p. m. exact, not stay up and study late if mayhap she has a difficult test, may not smoke in her room, may not attend certain places of entertainment, may not wear pants to a costume dance, may not have men in the house during study hours, may not go stockingless on the campus, may not, in fact, do endless things that men do without thinking—well, without thinking at all.

Authorities say that they didn't make the rules, the rules are made at the request of the women themselves, and at the instigation of the parents who want their children as safely guarded as at kindergarden. The fathers and mothers, it is rumored, want their children to continue under strict rules, so that when they graduate from college they will have nothing but rules to bolster up their determination. When they are out on their own without rules, they must keep the rules of life stiffened with self-will. Why not treat college women as much as individuals as college men? Surely the women have as much right to develop their personalities as the men. By the time people are in school, if they wish to get around rules, they will get around them, so why penalize those who wish to keep the regulations, but do not believe in these regulations. It is hard to concur with restrictions that seem totally unjust, no matter how great the desire for right doing. Women should be given a chance to vote on the rules that bind them.

If the women make the rules that govern them, they should be able to correct them when they become obsolete.—Washington Daily.

Independence And Oxford Rules

American college students have a well-known penchant for declaiming on the harsh stringency of campus regulations imposed by the "authorities." They treasure their independence.

Ruminating on this, it is interesting to glance at a few of the rules in force at Oxford College, England.

For example: students at the famous English institution, which dates back to the eleventh century, are forbidden to leave their respective colleges after nine o'clock in the evening. If a student is already out, however, he is permitted to stay until midnight. At that time the gates to all colleges are locked and no one can get either in or out.

Student-driven automobiles must be kept in licensed garages and be equipped with a green light. In the event that a car with a green light is spotted on the streets after eleven o'clock in the evening, the driver is likely to be hauled up for an inquiry and a substantial fine.

Moreover, the student's "honor," that much misused term, is not entirely relied upon for the compliance of the many regulations for conduct. Each college (21, in all) is supplied with two proctors. The latter, in turn, have the services of three or four individuals known as "bullers." The "bullers," is it reported, are recruited from among ex-prizefighters, sailors, and the like from the town, and are well able to take care of such infractions of the rules as may be observed on the grounds. They bring the offenders to the proctors, who inflict the proper penalties.

Perhaps that political philosophy of the Englishman which has developed through centuries of monarchial government has permeated to the colleges and makes such rules practical. Certain it is, that the followers of Jefferson in this country would raise a huge outcry if any such constrictions were placed in the way of their collegiate liberty. —Clipped.

America Apologizes!

Major General Smedley D. Butler, for some time the stormy petrel of marine forces, has now become involved in a controversy that has reached international dimensions and resulted in a formal note of apology from the American department of state to the Italian government and its iron-fisted leader, Premier Mussolini.

But a question can be raised without any difficulty as to the real guilt of the marine officer. Perhaps there is just cause for the demands by Italian ambassador Giacomo De Martino and then again there is a possibility that Major Butler is merely a pawn in a chess-game which has already assumed proportions far beyond the seriousness of the original offense and in which the United States government is playing anything but a winning part.

The alacrity with which the Secretary of State apologized for the "reflections against the prime minister of Italy in the unauthorized speech of Major General Smedley D. Butler," is little less than astounding. A court martial has been ordered for the officer but the apology was already on its way to the Italian minister. There was but one fair and decent thing that the United States could do and that was to give Butler a chance properly to defend himself before the military court, without the added stigma of causing a humiliation. Then, there would still have been plenty of time for the apologies of the government.

On the side of Italy, it would appear that Mussolini had reached the perennial position which requires the apologies of some leading nation to bring the Fascist government back to a place of respect among the countries of the world. With his back against the wall, he chose to hang his case on the words of a United States officer which were spoken in comparative privacy and without apparent malice or premeditation. It was a big gamble but the bold face of the Italian premier won again.—Michigan Daily.

Native Art

According to the president of the American Art Dealers' association, artists and sculptors in this country received some 20 million dollars for their work last year. Such a figure is necessarily an estimate. Sales through dealers are a matter of record, but the total of direct purchases from artists is guesswork. The interesting part of F. Newlin Price's announcement, however, is not the actual sum involved. It is that despite a smaller volume of art trade in 1930, as compared to 1929, the American artists and sculptors did better than in the previous year.

If this change marks a definite trend toward stronger support for domestic art, it is particularly encouraging. In the past Americans have been spending many times as much upon works of foreign origin as upon native products. That condition is largely the result of the fabulous prices paid for paintings by, or attributed to, the old masters. In many instances such prices seem to be determined not so much by any merit of the picture as by the prestige attaching to the artist's name. In a sense they sometimes represent "snobbish" value.

The struggling American artist naturally resents this kind of competition. But there are ways of combating it. The fundamental means is by sheer excellence. But he has one great accident advantage as well. That is the American scene. Too many American artists still think it is necessary to paint quaint doorways in Montmartre or etch the Bridge of Sighs. They forget the impressive lesson taught by the designers of Japanese color prints, of the enormous popular appeal of familiar sights. There is a rich domestic market for art in this country. But it cannot be captured merely by patriotic appeals. The American public must be convinced that art is something living and immediate, and not a pastime for dilettantes with a foreign background.—Kansas City Star.

Basket Team Leaves On Northern Trip Tomorrow

WILL PLAY FIVE CONTESTS WHILE AWAY FROM HILL

First Game of Trip to Be With V. P. I. Gobblers Tomorrow Night.

FROSH ALSO MAKE TRIP

Game With Maryland Next Tuesday Will Be Hardest Test on Tour.

The Tar Heel quintet will settle down this afternoon to a hard workout as final preparation for the northern trip through Virginia and Maryland, which starts tomorrow night when the V. P. I. basketball team is met at Blacksburg.

On this trip Coach Ashmore's men will play V. P. I., V. M. I., Virginia, Washington and Lee, and Maryland, returning to Chapel Hill next Wednesday. Since the Tar Heels played Duke Saturday night and State last night, they have had little opportunity to prepare for this five game tour.

They will be out to avenge the 31-28 defeat handed them by the Gobblers last week. The defeat was the first conference tilt that the quint had lost up to that time, and they will be anxious to turn the tables tomorrow night. The game with the Cadets Friday will be the first meeting of the teams this season, V. M. I. coming here February 21 for the other engagement.

Washington and Lee and Virginia also have not been met so far this season. Both are expected to give the team a stiff fight. The Cavaliers have showed up well among the Virginia basketball outfits this year.

The last game of the series will be the hardest of the trip, and the Tar Heels will have to travel from Lexington, Virginia, to College Park, Maryland, on the day of the game. The impressive showing of the Old Liners this season and the hard trip should make going rough for the team next Tuesday night.

Upon returning home next Wednesday, they will have one day to rest and get ready to meet the Davidson Wildcats on Thursday, February 12.

The freshmen will take a brief northern trip this week also, playing Woodberry Forest School, Thursday night, a double bill with the varsity against V. M. I., Friday night, and Augusta Military Academy on Saturday.

SQUIBS

Next to your academic work, the most important thing in college life is athletics.

Leading educators and heads of business corporations agree that the whole hearted participation in athletics provides a splendid training for citizenship and business success.

This is an age of invention, but, we still have the problem of inventing something to take the place of health producing exercise and recreation.

For boys and young men on to citizenship there are two separate and distinct camps. In one camp there are cigarettes, "bootleg" with the hip flask, dissipation, careless eating, late hours, jazz, and the softer life. This is the easiest road for a short time. In the other camp are correct diet, regular hours, no smoking or drinking, hard training, discipline, and the build-

Raleigh, February 3.—State College's Red Terrors downed the Tar Heels here tonight by a score of 23-20 in one of the fastest games ever featured here in Big Five basketball. The battle was hotly contested until the final whistle had given the Terror quintet its second win over the White Phantoms.

RELAY TEAM TO BE NAMED TODAY

Men to Compete in Milrose A. A. Games Will Be Selected After Workout This Afternoon.

After an extensive period of hard work, the men trying for positions on the mile relay team which is to go to New York to take part in the Milrose A. A. track games Saturday night are beginning to get to the peak of condition.

The men who are trying out for berths on the team are: R. W. Drane, Tom Watkins, K. M. Marland, Clarence Jensen, Mark Jones, Leslie Weil, H. R. Garrett, Charlie Farmer, and J. K. Smith.

Leslie Weil is the only man so far who is certain of a position on the team. The three remaining men will be selected after the last practice today.

Charlie Farmer, who has been ill with flu recently, took hard workouts all last week and is rounding into top form. The coaches have not yet decided however, whether he will be sufficiently strong to run in both the sixty yard dash and the relay. In the event that the track mentors deem his condition not good enough for the double strain Farmer will run only in the dash.

In the dash Farmer will be matched against the premier speedsters in the east. Ira Singer of New York university, latest sprint sensation, has been clocked in record breaking time for the fifty, sixty, and seventy yard dashes. Chet Bowman of Newark A. C., who holds the world's indoor record at sixty yards is also entered in the Milrose games.

The Milrose Games are being held in Madison Square Garden. The coaches do not know who Carolina's competitors will be in the relay event, but it is certain that the best teams in the east will take part. Last year Lafayette University nosed out Carolina for first place.

College Sports

By Don Shoemaker

Singular in its intramural role at Emory and Henry is the school-boy sport of Hare and Hounds. Launched early in the season, this years series of runs has progressed to the fourth race with competition hot.

The sport is of Briton derivation and as old as the sporting world. Procedure: Preceding race winner or elected leader starts from central headquarters, lays a trail of torn paper, deposits container at end of trail. Entrants follow trail, retrive container, and race back to central headquarters. Scoring: Retriver received one point; one who reached central head quarters awarded ten points, second man, nine, third eight, etc.

Winners are awarded cups at the end of the season.

Furman university coaches sat on the side lines . . . watched with pangs of mentorial pride as Wofford topped and finally held a fourteen to thirteen lead on the hardwood . . . Hope forsaken, sent Center Watson, substitute into the fray. Substitute Watson, pivoted, dribbled, passed, shot, sunk basket after basket for thirteen points in the last four minutes of play. Final score: Furman twenty-six, Wofford fourteen.

Mind engrossed in the delights of a pleasant winter day, one Sam McCook, Virginia Polytechnic Institute yearling sauntered down Peachtree street in Blacksburg, Virginia. So remote were Rat McCook's thoughts that he collided and knocked sprauling a passer-by. So rudely awakened, McCook turned to the figure on the side walk endeavored to profer appoligies, stared, gasped. The fellow pedestrian arose, proved to be none other than W. L. (Young) Stribbling, erstwhile claimant to the heavyweight boxing title.

Puglist Stribbling muttered angrily, cuffed, the unwitting freshman, and departed on his way.

To the field of football alone is not confined the more brutal aspects of collegiate sport. Middle Western college men convened recently in Chicago, decided to conduct the western open ping pong championship in the ballroom of the LaSalle hotel February 20 and 21.

Patron saint of the meet is the Chicago Inter-fraternity club who will act under the authority of the American Ping Pong association. Not without rules will be the tournament. Regulations of the association will govern play, which means that only the "bounce" service will be permitted.

Big Bill Tilden Impressed With Individual Style Of Wilmer Hines

Big Bill Tilden, for years American Davis Cup Star and now chief racket-wielder of Tilden Tennis Tours Incorporated, so named by "Ye Old Reliable," was in Raleigh the other night en route to Florida, coming directly from Philadelphia. Tilden discusses possibilities for a series of matches in Raleigh and nearby points in the near future. He expressed hope that he and his associates might secure dates in this section, being especially hopeful that Raleigh might receive a place on that schedule.

Like Bobby Jones, Leo Diegal, and other sports luminaries, Tilden will make a series of "educational films" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, demonstrating his tennis play through slow motion pictures.

"The effect of these pictures is to practically stop the action, showing the ball and all details clearly," he said.

Tilden picked Donald Cram, Nashville, Tennessee youth, as having as much promise as any of the outstanding southern youngsters. He was also much impressed with the individual style worked out by Wilmer Hines, sophomore tennis star of the University, who holds three major tennis titles, two of which have been won since July first, 1930. Among his titles are: Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate Singles Champion, won this past fall over Alphonso Smith, University of Virginia star. Hines also paired with Hendlin, another University student, to win the doubles championship from Smith and Newell of Virginia. The National Junior Singles Championship, was won over James Bobbitt, Pasadena, California youth, in the finals at Culver, Indiana. He paired with Judge Beaver to win the doubles championship over Billy Doeg and Billy Jacobs. This summer Hines won the Carolinas championship at Pinehurst. Another title possessed by Hines is that of Southern singles champion won earlier in the year.

Simultaneously with Tilden's announcement of his entry into the professional ranks comes the prediction of Pierre Gillou, captain of the victorious French Davis Cup teams and the new president of the French Lawn Tennis Association, to the United Press that France would keep the Davis Cup in 1931 and that Rene LaCoste will not participate in the cup finals this summer. Crochet, Borotra, Brugnon, and Boussus will defend the cup this year if Gillou's announcement is to be taken at face value. Now that both Tilden and Hunter, ranking No. one and two respectively, have turned pro the United States will be hard put to bring the Davis Cup back to this side of the Atlantic.

VIRGINIA QUINTET CARDED TO MEET U. N. C. AND DUKE

Cavaliers Have Fifty-Fifty Rating in Southern Conference Standings.

University, Virginia, February 3.—Virginia's basketball team has two more important home games this week, all against Southern Conference rivals. Duke plays here Thursday and North Carolina Saturday.

The Cavalier quint now has a 50-50 rating in the S. C. standing. Court victories have been won over V. M. I. and V. P. I. Games have been lost to Washington and Lee and to Virginia Tech in the first Conference meeting of the season.

Lem Mayo, sharpshooting forward, is leading the Cavalier scorers with eighty-two points counted since the beginning of play against college teams. Including thirty-seven points scored in three practice games his total for the winter is 119 points.

Jim Delafield, whose accurate tossing enabled the Cavaliers to outscore V. P. I., has contributed fifty-four points. Illness prevented Delafield from playing in several games. Bill Thomas is leading the guards with twenty-six points scored.

Duke will bring several veterans of the teams that have been runners-up in the Atlanta tournament for two winters while North Carolina has a quint of tall men who are playing better ball as each game passes.

LEADING CINDER STARS TO ENTER TRACK CARNIVAL

Twenty-Six Events Scheduled For Southern Indoor Meet on March Seventh.

The Southern Conference meet, March 7, in the Tin Can will furnish an excellent opportunity for the track fans to see the outstanding track stars of the South compete in the race for Southern Conference honors.

The meet will be run off with clock-like precision from start to finish. Although it includes four general groups of competitors, conference colleges, non-conference colleges, freshmen and the scholastic group comprised of high schools and prep schools, it will be finished in about four and one quarter hours.

The meet will consist of twenty-six events distributed among the four groups of participants. The 60 yard dash and the one mile relay for non-conference colleges are new attractions, both having been added this year. The freshman high jump is also open to competition for the first time this year.

On account of the unusually large number of contestants about nineteen of the twenty-six events will have to be run off in two or more heats.

The stands for the crowd will be inside of the big oval track and will offer a comprehensive view of the whole meet. The length of the sprint and hurdle lanes have been increased from 60 to 70 yards this year.

In the half hour between seven-thirty and eight p. m. the sprint fans will see twenty-

SEVEN CAROLINA MEN CONTRIBUTE TO "THE ANNALS"

The latest copy of The Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science has just come from the press. This issue is devoted entirely to the topic of "The Coming of Industry to the South." The outstanding thing about these articles is the fact that seven out of twenty seven of them were written by people who are either faculty members or were students here formerly.

Professor C. T. Murchison, of the commerce school, has an article entitled "Southern Textile Manufacturing." Professor Murchison also had a book published recently called King Cotton Is Sick. President Frank Graham's article was "Southern Industrialism: A Way of Economic Recovery and an Opportunity for Social Mastery." "Early Industrial Development in the South" was written for the magazine by Miss Harriet L. Herring, research associate of the Institute for Research in Social Science at the University. Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, chairman of the executive committee of the North Carolina Forestry Association is the author of "Lumber and Forest—Products Industry in the South." Colonel Pratt is a resident of Chapel Hill. Thorndike Saville, professor of hydraulic and sanitary engineering, wrote "The Power Situation in the Southern Province." Dr. C. K. Brown, professor of economics at Davidson College contributed to the magazine also, as did Dr. Roland B. Eutsler, instructor of industry at the University of Pennsylvania. Dr. Eutsler received his degree here.

All students interested in making foreign service their life work are to meet in 213 Saunders this morning at chapel period for the purpose of organizing a foreign relations club.

SPANISH PICTURE TO BE SHOWN WEDNESDAY

The next foreign language picture to be seen here will be shown tonight instead of Saturday as has been the practice in the past. The time for the showing will be the same, eleven o'clock.

Tonight's picture is a Spanish version of "The Sea God," a picture of adventure in the South Seas which was very popular in the English version. The dialogue is in Spanish throughout, and the cast, entirely Spanish, is headed by Rosita Moreno and Ramon Pereda.

Stringfield Writes Bulletin On Music

"America and Her Music" is the subject of the fifteen lessons outlined in the March issue of the University Extension Bulletin, which has just come off the press. Lamar Stringfield is the author of the bulletin, which contains a foreword by Paul Green.

Some of the titles of the different lessons are "The Purpose of Music Clubs," "The Origin of American Negro Music," "The Indian in American Music," "An Analysis of Jazz," and "American Nationalism in Music." Records to accompany the courses may be borrowed for one week.

MANY TRAVELING FELLOWSHIPS OPEN

The American-Scandanavian Foundation offers travelling fellowships of $1000 each for graduate study in Scandanavian countries.

Fellowships are available in Sweden for the study in chemistry, physics, mathematics, agricultural sciences, forestry, mining and metallurgy, electrical engineering, language and literature, and other humanistic, technical and scientific subjects.

Those in Denmark are available in industrial organization, cooperative agriculture, agricultural sciences, bacteriology, physiology, chemistry, physics, mathematics, folk high schools, language and literature.

In Norway, fellowships are in oceanography, hydro-electricity, forestry, agricultural sciences, chemistry, physics, mathematics, language and literature, weather forecasting at Bergen Geo-Physical Institute, and other subjects.

Candidates for the fellowships must have been born in the United States or its possessions. They should be capable of original study, and each must submit a definite plan of study.

It is desirable that they shall be college graduates and be familiar with at least one language in addition to English, preferably Danish, Swedish, or Norwegian. The stipend is $1000, payable in quarterly installments.

Application papers including letters of recommendations and a photograph must be filed at the office of the Foundation before March 15. If the candidates wishes the official endorsement of his college, his application must be filed at the office of his dean before March 1. University students who are interested may apply to Dean A. W. Hobbs.

Successful candidates will be notified near April 15, the final selection being made by a jury of university professors and technical experts appointed by the Foundation.

FEW FIRES OCCUR DURING JANUARY

The Chapel Hill fire department has received several calls of late, but they have been of little consequence. Saturday the Carolina Grill called because of an explosion in their gas range.

Saturday night about twelve o'clock another alarm was turned in. This proved to be false. The trash can in front of the post office was smoking because of a cigarette thrown in while it was still burning.

The fire department has been fortunate lately, and have been able to reach the fires and stop them before they were too far advanced. The only bad fire in the past month was the negro home that burned a week ago just outside the town limits.

Freshman Suspended

The executive committee of the University faculty recently suspended a freshman for the winter quarter for a confessed violation of the honor system in connection with a weekly quiz in one of his courses.

JONES RECEIVES REPLY TO NOTE OF CONDOLENCE

In reply to a letter of condolence sent to Mrs. Morgan P. Moorer by the members of the class of 1933 after the body of her son, a freshman at the University, was found in the woods last fall, Mark Jones, secretary of the class, has received the following note:

"Mrs. Morgan P. Moorer wishes to express to the class of 1933 her deep appreciation of sympathy on the occasion of the tragic loss of her dearly beloved son, Morgan P. Moorer, Jr."

Moorer left his room February 28, 1930, and no trace of him had been seen until his skeleton was found by three students of the geology department late last quarter. The woods around Chapel Hill had been carefully searched many times by groups of students and townspeople, but the body remained concealed until accidentally discovered.

'Law Review' Staff Guest of Van Hecke

Professor M. T. Van Hecke of the law school faculty entertained the members of the Law Review staff at a dinner given in his home Monday evening. After the dinner, copies of the February issue of the magazine were distributed to the guests, and the articles written were discussed.

The persons who were present at the dinner were: Robert H. Wettach, M. S. Breckenridge, Frederick B. McCall, C. T. McCormick, M. T. Van Hecke, and Susie Sharpe of the law department, and James H. Chadbourn, William T. Covington, Jr., Peyton B. Abbott, Jr., Junius G. Adams, Jr., Mills Scott Benton, Travis T. Brown, Moore Bryson, Hugh B. Campbell, J. Glenn Edwards, Robert M. Gray, Jr., Allen Langston, Hugh L. Lobdell, George A. Long, Wex S. Malone, Henry B. Parker, Claude E. Reitzel, Jr., Thomas C. Smith, Thomas A. Uzzell, James A. Williams of the staff of the magazine.

Greenville Paper Believes Emerson Deserves Monument

The Greenville News (S. C.) shed a new light on the contribution of the late Captain Isaac E. Emerson, alumnus of the University. The editorial which referred to this was headed "Deserves a Monument," and brought out the fact that Emerson's headache remedy was in reality a benefit to mankind in general.

"Truth to say the foaming preparation has ranked for a generation as a premier tonic for the "morning after." Few who have had recourse to its assistance upon such occasions have failed to wax eloquent concerning its potent magic in the way of setting him on his feet and enabling him to nibble bravely of a soft boiled egg!

"Captain Emerson has doubtless made millions, but he deserves it, for hasn't he saved millions of lives, by helping to rescue errant humanity from the effects of their own folly. We know lots of folks who would like to see an imposing monument erected to him."

HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALL

The Chapel Hill high school basketball team will play Pittsboro at the "baby tin can" Friday evening after a game between the Chapel Hill and Greensboro girls. Pittsboro has beaten the local team once this season.

Dining Hall Now Serves Ice Cream

As a result of the vote taken at Swain hall a short time ago, the management has decided to serve ice cream each day after dinner and supper. The ice cream is served in four flavors, peach, vanilla, chocolate, and strawberry.

The ice cream, however, is not a part of the menu but is sold in individual portions as the students call for it. A new refrigerator of forty gallon capacity has been installed, and therefore a quantity of cream can always be kept at hand.

vision students who meet certain standards of excellence of work in lower division courses.

"Students who enroll for special honors select a subject in which to work and pursue studies in this field under the guidance of a faculty member in appropriate department to whom they report from time to time. At the end of the period of study, normally at the end of the academic year, they are given a comprehensive examination in the field in which they have been working. Commonly this examination is in two parts, written and oral, in the latter the candidate for honors in the field being questioned by members of the faculty teaching in this field."

George B. Cutten, of the executive office of Colgate University, writes: "In our revised curriculum, which is gradually going into effect and which we hope will be totally in effect within three years, there will be in some cases in the junior year, and in many cases in the senior year, optional attendance upon classes, and comprehensive examinations for the B.A. degree, probably carrying with it exemption from regular examinations in the field of concentration. At the present time, we are in a state of confusion owing to a very radical change in our whole curriculum, but we believe that when our curriculum is in effect, it will be very much more effective."

ture in order to acquaint the future business men with the very real problems that will confront them soon.

All courses are not relative to routine business methods, however. The broadening and cultural sides of a full education are equally stressed, and thorough knowledge of at least one modern foreign language is required. This part of an education is quite obviously valuable to anyone having business relations with foreign countries. The many-sided aspect of the commerce course shows the benefit which could be derived from it.

Intramural Fencing

The regular system of points will be used. Fifty points being given to the team winning the campus championship, and to the individual players five points will be given for each match won and one point for each match lost. Seventy-five men, representing fifteen teams, participated in the tournament last year.

The winners of the tournament will be awarded charms.

These illustrations serve to show the large number of events which will be run off in a comparatively short time. "The Tin Can will be like a three ring circus with something going on all of the time," an official of the indoor meet committee was heard to say.

Is there any question as to which camp should receive the encouragement and stamp of approval of this campus, and the publicity of the press?

The two main rewards are health, with a sound body and active, alert mind and real character.

The athletic department is calling for candidates for winter football, track, boxing, and wrestling. There is also an opportunity for development in tennis and golf, and for participation in the intramural sports. Football and track offer especial opportunity for men without previous experience.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

New Dorms Wins Close One

Led by Umstead, star forward, with eleven points, New Dorms defeated Carr in a close game yesterday afternoon 15-12. For the losers Kennerly was best with three action tosses for six points.

Manly Gets Forfeit

Everett failed to put in an appearance yesterday afternoon, Manly receiving a forfeit.

Graham Drops First

Dunlap, Best House center, showed the way to his team with thirteen points as Best House defeated Graham 32-14 yesterday afternoon. It was Graham's first loss after a string of five straight wins. For the losers Dinstman was best with seven points. Best House now boasts a string of four straight wins as against no defeats.

Aycock Wins Over Grimes

Aycock won its fifth straight victory in intramural by defeating Grimes 26-15. Efland, of Aycock, and Watson, of Grimes, led the individual scoring with eight points each.

Ruffin Wins Fifth

Ruffin won its fifth victory of the season over Ranson House yesterday afternoon, 40-13. Royster, Smith and Weathers, all of Ruffin staged a great race for scoring honors, Royster and Smith finally tieing with twelve points, while Weathers was a close second with ten. For the losers Hunter was best with five. Ruffin has lost only one game thus far.

Mangum Gets 42-19 Win

Mangum, led by F. W. Blythe with twenty points, easily defeated the Independents 42-19 yesterday afternoon. For the losers Roberts, star center, was best with ten points. It was Mangum's fourth win against two losses.

PATTERSON SAYS FINAL YEAR DEAR TO ALL STUDENTS

Senior Class President Describes The Four Years of College Life.

H. N. (Pat) Patterson, speaking yesterday afternoon over WPTF on the subject of "Class Organization at Carolina," stated that the students on this campus come in contact with class organization and activity more than with any other extra-curricula activity.

"The quickest way to arouse an alumnus' interest in his Alma Mater is to mention the name of his class to him," continued the senior class president.

Beginning with a freshman when he enters college, the speaker discussed in detail the yearly development in the class organization. Along with this he brought in some of the orders, social groups, and extra-curricula activities which opened up for the student each year.

Patterson, the senior class president, went on to say that the churches of Chapel Hill are well-equipped for the religious and moral training of the new men, and these churches in co-operation with the students' Y. M. C. A. offer the freshmen excellent opportunities to develop their moral qualities.

Taking up the question of the election of the class officers, he discussed the work of these men and how long their term in office lasted.

TWO SOCIETIES TO CONVENE JOINTLY

Phi and Di Will Discuss Special Resolution at Meeting February 17.

The greater part of the Phi Assembly meeting Tuesday night was taken up with the initiation of B. Lanier, of Davidson county; A. L. Jacobs, of Bellmore, New York; and J. D. Matheson, of Hoke county.

W. W. McKee from the Di Senate announced that the senators passed a resolution calling for a joint meeting of the two organizations in the senate hall February 17 to discuss a resolution to be determined by the Ways and Means Committee of the two bodies. After the assembly had approved the senate's resolution, Speaker Whittenton appointed Representative Lanier to fill a vacancy on the Ways and Means Committee.

Representative Lanier presented a bill calling for the establishment by the University executive council, the business manager, and the business managers of the various athletic and entertainment organizations on the campus, of a central office for the distribution of all athletic and entertainment tickets. The bill was passed unanimously without discussion.

The Di Senate, at its regular weekly meeting Tuesday night, decided that the students have too little control over their own extra-curricular activities.

The bill stating that students have too little control over their own extra-curricular activities, was passed by a large majority. The measure was supported by Senators Ramsay, Medford, Whitaker, and Herkimer.

Durham Kiwanians Attend Local Meet

Several members from Durham attended the meeting of the local Kiwanis club Tuesday night and delivered short talks.

Dr. E. C. Metzenthin, professor of German, spoke for an hour on the growing demand for an international language. He illustrated the reasons for such a demand by his own experiences and observations while traveling through foreign countries in Europe, Asia, and Africa. He indicated the underlying principles for such an artificial language, which must be simple, rich, clear, easy to learn, and creative. It should have few grammatical rules and no exceptions.

OLD MELODRAMA TO BE PRODUCED IN UNIQUE FORM

Playmaker Production is Praised By Koch as a Classic In Its Field.

The Carolina Playmakers will give tonight their initial presentation of the winter quarter program, East Lynn, dramatized from the novel by Mrs. Henry Wood. It will again be presented Friday and Saturday nights of this week.

This number of the Playmakers, a classic favorite of the old stock companies, will be done tonight in ultra modern dress. An attempted aim of the Playmakers under the technical director, Samuel Selden, is to bring out fresh values for the modern audience by presenting the play against a background of psychological scenery.

Professor Frederick H. Koch has said of the production: "East Lynn is a classic in the realm of melodrama. Written in dignified, though stilted, language, it is really good English. Since it was first adapted from the popular novel of Mrs. Henry Wood in the eighteen-sixties, it has been a general favorite in both England and America. Even today it is constantly played by itinerand Tent and Hall Repertory companies of the ten-twenty-thirty cent theatre in the small towns throughout the country. Not thirty miles from Boston recently it played to capacity audiences in a theatre that had been playing to empty seats, and the whole audience wept sincerely and copiously over the tragic fate of Lady Isabel. To many the tragic heroine of East Lynn is the equivalent of Lady Macbeth of the more dignified theatre."

Decent Salaries Necessary For Better Instruction, Says Graham

President Frank P. Graham of the University presented the cause of public education in North Carolina to the members of the senior high school Parent-Teachers' Association who came together in Greensboro Tuesday evening for their regular meeting.

President Graham, speaking as a representative of the public education system of the state gave warning after warning to the effect that small so-called economies which strike at the heart of the education program form an inexcusable, unsound and un-businesslike method of meeting emergencies. The University's president indicated that a decent salary is a necessary adjunct to the maintenance of the high standards of excellence in moral and intellectual training which have led this state out of ignorance, poverty, and despair into happiness and prosperity. This cut is not objected to on the grounds that the teachers are unwilling to allow a ten per cent reduction on their salary but because history has proved that a decent salary is a part of the equipment of every good teacher and the best service cannot be rendered without it.

Mrs. F. L. Blackwood, first vice-president of the Parent-Teachers' Association presided over the meeting in the absence of its president. Following President Graham's address there was a short business session. Mr. R. D. Douglas introduced the speaker.

President Graham began his talk by stating that there are four factors to which the progress of this country are responsible; the abundance of natural resources; efficient business organization; wide use of labor saving devices; and an efficient public school system.

"The calm second thought of the people of North Carolina surely show them that there will not be less public education but, rather, more of it. The spiritual and moral resources furnished by the educational institutions guide every other worth while activity in the state. The effectiveness of a school system is not to be judged by the excellence of its buildings but by the strength of its teaching faculty, the personality of its teachers, and those qualities and ideals inside the school," President Graham said.

"Teachers would willingly sacrifice their ten per cent on the altar of this commonwealth, if that would be fair. But experience has taught that a decent salary is necessary for the better instruction of our youths. Teaching brings in the smallest returns of any occupation, and yet it requires as much training and ability as any other profession. Many teachers would work without pay if this were possible. The failure of the public to provide a decent salary scale for teachers has the tendency to drive out the best instructors and to impair the efficiency of those who remain.

"The teachers have not been on a joy ride and they should

WAR BLAMED FOR ECONOMIC SLUMP

Dr. Schwenning Discusses Cause of Present Depression at Meeting of Engineers.

The American Institute of Chemical Engineers was addressed by Dr. G. T. Schwenning, of the commerce school, Tuesday night. He touched on some of the causes of our present industrial and economic situation.

Dr. Schwenning used graphs to point out how far below normal present economic activity is today.

Production has outrun consumption so far that there is an enormous surplus which industries can find no market for. However, there is a tremendous unemployment which needs the surplus, but cannot get it," he said.

"The World War should receive much of the blame for the present industrial slump. American industries have not been able to liquidate sufficiently after the war. The whole economic structure of the world was shaken loose, and a new industrial balance was reached among the nations," explained Dr. Schwenning. "In this balance, the United States pushed England and Germany down. America has changed from a debtor nation to a creditor nation, world markets have shifted and declined; and the production capacity of the United States has increased to an extent that she is able to supply the rest of the world with its needs. Another problem is the war debt that Germany owes America. Germany can either pay us in money or in goods. We do not want the

MASONIC ORDER DEDICATES LODGE

Old Baptist Church Renovated As Temple for Local Masons.

The members of the University Masonic Lodge dedicated their new temple Monday night at a meeting attended by Masons from Chapel Hill, Raleigh, Durham, Sanford, Pittsboro, Burlington, and many other nearby lodges. After dinner in the new temple, they were entertained by a musical program.

The new lodge is situated on the corner of Church and Franklin streets, and was the old Baptist church. Recently the local lodge decided to renovate the old church which had not been in use for many years, and to use it as a place of meeting. Funds were raised and the remodeling finished last week. Monday night's meeting was the first held in their new quarters.

When University Lodge was chartered January 1, 1888, it began to meet in an old brick building on the site of the present Baptist church. The members met there for twenty-three years, then changed to the Brockwell building, where they have met since 1911.

At the time the Baptist church was built, J. H. Andrews of Carrboro allotted the land and made a liberal donation toward the expenses of erecting a church. It was constructed of brick from Williamsburg, Virginia, the old town which is now being reconstructed by John D. Rockefeller because of its history and traditions.

In rebuilding the old church, the Masons have not altered the

PERSONALITY OF GOYA REFLECTED IN NEW DANCES

Colorful Spanish Danseuse Will Be First Performer in New Memorial Hall.

Carola Goya, who is the first performer offered on the entertainment program to appear in the new Memorial hall, is expected to arrive in Chapel Hill shortly before noon, Friday.

In the past the custom was to fete and entertain the guest artists extensively when they came here on their tours. Now, however, this practice has been abandoned, partly at the request of the artists themselves and partly because of lack of funds.

There will be reserved seats for the performance Friday night. Only about one-third of the liberal arts students who are entitled to and who have paid for their tickets, have called for them. The office of the dean of the liberal arts school, where these tickets may be secured, is open from nine in the morning until five in the afternoon, and the passes may be received at any time between these hours.

The program of dances by Senorita Goya are exceptional, judging from the comments made by those who have seen the performance. The press of Europe joins in the praise of the New York papers, in acclaiming her as one of the sensational dancers of the last few years.

The Musical American, states: —"Miss Goya's charm lies in her romantic personality, her dramatic grasp of a composition, and intelligent feeling for rhythm. She has a splendid body and a lively temperament which were best in evidence in a dance called 'Cordoba' performed with poetic feeling. She looked like an enchantress in some jasmine scented garden in Spain—a dangerous figure in the moonlight. The audience also greatly enjoyed her 'Fado'—the dance of a Portuguese fisher girl—and 'Mi Negrita,' a Cuban number, which she performed with such taste and fire she was asked to repeat them."

INDIRECT AID GIVEN TO FARMERS BY SWAIN HALL

For some time in the past, Swain Hall has been helping the farmers indirectly by obtaining their butter from local creameries. Among the creameries from which Swain gets its butter are the following: Durham Dairy Products Co., Pet Milk Co., of Burlington, Mooresboro Creamery of Mooresboro, and the Rowan Creamery of Salisbury. The milk for butter made by these companies is obtained from the farmers in their respective communities. The Durham creamery collects milk from farmers in Chatham, Orange, and Durham counties.

GRAHAM BACKED BY TRUSTEES IN FINANCE MATTER

Sum Demanded from Legislature by President is Endorsed At Raleigh Meeting.

At the meeting of trustees of the University presided over by Governor O. Max Gardner in his office in Raleigh on Tuesday afternoon, the move of President Frank P. Graham in asking for an appropriation of $875,000 for maintenance and operation of the University plant for the next biennium, was approved. The meeting also approved of the motion appointing a committee to appear before the appropriations committee of the general assembly to request that the sum asked for be appropriated.

The bill for the consolidation of the boards of the three state maintained schools, the University, State College, and North Carolina College, as one was discussed. Governor Gardner, in the discussion, intimated that he planned to send a special message to the general assembly urging that body to declare itself in favor of the proposal, with the details to be worked out later. However, the bill for consolidation has not yet been drawn up.

This consolidation was one of the governor's recommendations to the assembly. It is thought that it will take some time for this union to go into effect and no immediate change will be advocated in regard to the reappointment of the boards of trustees for the three schools during the next two years. With the 1933 assembly it is hoped that the consolidation plan, which this assembly will start, may be completed.

President Graham said that the University faculty was in favor of full consideration of the matter and that no hasty decisions should be reached. A faculty committee is now mak-

NEW BUILDING IS ABOUT COMPLETE

Structure Is Finished With Exception of Ceiling and Wall Painting.

The new auditorium according to the architect, T. C. Atwood, is now complete with the exception of the ceiling and wall painting.

The purpose of delaying the painting is to give the plastering time to dry thoroughly, in order that the final coat will be better and more permanent. When the plaster is perfectly dry, a much smoother and finer coat of paint can be put on than is possible now.

The architect also states that the acoustic properties will be less perfect at present because of the wooden benches used in old Memorial hall. When the building is equipped with upholstered seats, as it was designed, the acoustics will be corrected. The designer of the acoustics for the auditorium, Professor Sabine, one of the nation's most outstanding authorities on the subject, figured on the basis of upholstered seats, Mr. Atwood said yesterday.

When the auditorium is well filled little difference will be noticed, but with only a small audience there may be some reverberation. When other seats are installed this will disappear.

A Financial Brain Tackles Athletics

Rumblings which have been heard along the eastern front since the close of the past football season burst into loud roars as President Thomas S. Gates, who resigned as a partner in J. P. Morgan and company to become president of the University of Pennsylvania, reorganized athletics at that institution. Athletics will be placed on the same basis as other activities and will be given the same emphasis.

As a result of the changes which are the most drastic in the modern history of intercollegiate athletics a ten-thousand-dollar-year coach loses his job, spring football and pre-season training become taboo, and student and alumni athletic board members are given the gate. Proselyting and "scouting" of prep school athletes are expected to be ended. And the authors of the Carnegie Bulletin 23 will probably twiddle their thumbs in glee as they read the statement of President Gates.

The statement says: "Coaches will be members of the faculty of the department and will have suitable academic rank. All coaches will be employed on a full-time basis and will receive compensation in accordance with their rank and with the salary scale provided for all members of the university faculty. In no case will the compensation of coaches be in excess of such provisions.

"The academic eligibility of students to participate in intercollegiate athletics will be determined by a committee of five members of the university faculty to be appointed annually by the president, and the decisions of this committee will be final.

"Provisions for financial and other aid for needy students engaging in intercollegiate athletics will be placed upon the same basis as provisions for aid to all other needy students.

"There will be a definitely stated policy with respect to the participation of students in more than one sport, the wishes and the welfare of the student being the principal guiding factor instead of the desires of the coaches, as is too often the case."

Just how the plan will work out in practice we will not venture to say but we are of the opinion that Pennsylvania's students are learning something of big business' methods of dealing with those little businesses which are irritating but not serious. The students are the ones affected and unless student sentiment is in accord with the reorganization program then it seems that President Gates will find his Utopian athletic scheme just another of those theories.

The Entertainment Program

We notice that Carola Goya, the Spanish dancer, will appear in the first presentation of the entertainment committee this year.

The notice of the first presentation of the entertainment committee brings to mind its presentations in the past. The first year of the existence of this committee was a very successful one from the point of view of both the type of presentations and the manner in which they were received. There seemed to be a general feeling of enthusiasm among the students as to the future possibilities of the entertainment program. However, during the next year the program apparently decreased in interest and consequently was not so successful from the student point of view. Therefore, in order to remedy this, students in the college of liberal arts were given the opportunity of expressing their choices for future entertainment presentations. We are wondering how much their desires have been followed in the selection of this year's program.

The student entertainment program is financed largely by students and exists primarily for their enjoyment and benefit and if the program is not of a type pleasing to them it defeats its purpose. We are very much in agreement with the idea of an entertainment program, but think that the choice of the students should determine the presentations on the program.—J. C. S.

Government Says

Morals of college students are not as bad as some stories would indicate, investigation of undergraduate life at fifty-two of the largest universities in the country, including the University of Minnesota, revealed in a survey by the federal government, disclosed yesterday.

Congress appropriated, in 1927, a sum to be used to investigate all land grant colleges. 164,000 resident students are enrolled in these universities.

The report gives a grudging approval to fraternities and sororities, but urges better cooperation with university officials.

"On every campus," the report is said to state, "there are activities which the college does not sanction. But organizations of mystery and secrecy no longer operate.

"Some organizations are formed to foster revolt against custom, but these groups are usually loosely arranged, and are soon discontinued without harm to the institution where they were founded.

"Gamblers and drinkers often tend to form societies of their own. These usually are broken up without harm to anyone except the participants. University routine is too strenuous for a person who cannot concentrate on studies."

Attitudes shown by college authorities towards fraternities and sororities ranged from hearty commendation to absolute indifference.

Fraternity "rushing" systems are condemned for selling the fraternity to a prospect, rather than making it attractive by merit alone.

The pledge method of rushing sorority candidates, used by many universities at the present time, was given the approval of the investigating committee.

Under the system generally used, all sororities turn in bids to one officer who asks each woman to state her preferences. She is given a bid from the sorority whose name appears first on her list, providing that group has a bid for her. If it has not, she is given a bid from the sorority of her second choice. Only one bid goes to each woman.

Scholarship of fraternities is showing marked improvement. The idea that poor scholarship and success in life are directly related is disappearing.

Universities and fraternities should cooperate, it was said, in keeping up standards of the institutions. "Institutions frequently reported," quotes the survey, "that students' rooms were unclean and disorderly, that sleeping quarters were crowded and unsuitable for group life, that the fire hazard was great, and that the storage and preparation of food was unsanitary."

Drinking, improper dancing, discourtesy to chaperons and other difficulties were listed in the report as common social troubles of universities.—Minnesota Daily.

OPEN FORUM

Wants More Education

The Chapel Hill Movie Guild, "started with the view of putting on educational and artistic pictures Sunday afternoons for the benefit of various charities around Chapel Hill," is presenting regularly to its members such entertainment as the "Krazy Kat" and "Our Gang" comedies.

In the opinion of the humble writer, these are not exactly educational and show no artistic touch. The most gracious directors should consider the fact that the majority who attend these Sunday afternoon attractions are either college students or townspeople, and that they have long ago put aside their childish ways and become men and women. Anyone who expects the average college student to enjoy an "Our Gang" comedy must have a warped imagination.

If the crowd that saw the Sunday shows were mainly children, or even high school students, there would be some reason to present a "Krazy Kat" comedy or an "Our Gang," but for University students and college professors it is absurd. College students should at least be given credit for having grown up, even though sometimes they do not act it.

To show such a picture as educational is the height of a joke. Perhaps the directors can't secure beneficial films and make a nice size profit, we'll say for charity; if so, why not say so, and cut the whole thing out. At any rate, we hope we will not have to face "Our Gang" any more.

Why Hit University

To the Editor: In our worthy, though somewhat blind, desire to cut state appropriations we should be guided by at least a sense of fairness to the educational institutions of the State. I refer in particular to the University of North Carolina.

No well informed North Carolinian doubts the great usefulness of the University at Chapel Hill and its magnificent record of one hundred and thirty-seven years of service and devotion to the State and nation. Every well informed citizen of this state is proud of Chapel Hill's high standing in educational circles of the nation, and is particularly proud of the fact that the University of North Carolina has been admitted to the very select American Association of Universities, which has only twenty-seven members and to which only three institutions in the south have been considered sufficiently developed to have been admitted.

Yet, today we are apparently doing our level best to lower the standards of the University and to curtail its usefulness to the State. In 1929 the General Assembly appropriated $875,000 to the University for each of the next two fiscal years. The Governor, as director of the budget, cut this ten per cent the first year; the second year he cut this twenty per cent—in a justified attempt to balance the budget. Now the proposed appropriation for next year is $563,000—more than $300,000 less than the appropriation of two years ago!

This cut is far greater than the average cut for state departments and institutions; why is the University singled out?

goods, for we have too many of our own. Germany must sell these goods to get money, and when she seeks new markets, she runs into American competition, which largely controls these markets. This is merely an example of what other European nations are facing to-day. Europe is in the same state of industrial depression as the United States.

"There has been, and is at present a technological revolution going on in the world. The machine has displaced a large number of workers. It is true that other industries spring up to use some of these workers, but there is a steadily increasing efficiency in the industrial output of our country per worker, and our unemployment figures have been steadily mounting for the last few years.

"There have been marked shifts in the demands of the consumer, such as wagon manufacturing giving away to the manufacture of automobiles. This change calls for a new type of workman, thereby throwing many old craftsmen out of work.

"Another cause of our present economic depression is the recent stock crash, and with it the crash of our credit system, which resulted from high interest rates on call money. This caused many companies to use surplus and even merchandise money on the market, thus removing it from industrial use.

"Our economic machinery has broken down. The old system of laissez-faire has been discarded in favor of mergers and monopolies. Someone must modernize our present industrial system. But how? And by whom? No one knows, but it will certainly have to be done before industry gets back on its feet and before we again become prosperous."

Decent Pay Necessary For Better Instruction Says President Graham

not be made to pay for those who have. To tear down is a wasteful way to build up. Let us pay off our debts by a development of our power and resources, not by throwing away our investments."

As a conclusion to his speech, President Graham cited several instances to show that previous cuts in educational appropriations have seriously retarded educational progress in the state institutions. It was pointed out that more than a score of talented men have left this University because cuts in appropriations made it impossible for them to expand and to give of their best. President Graham concluded with the statement that the state may save a few dollars on the yearly budget but they lose significantly in the life of a generation.

exterior, but have devoted their attention to beautifying the interior of the building. No improvements have yet been made on the grounds but plans are underway to level off the yard for a lawn, to plant shrubbery, and to trim the trees.

Forty-three years have seen a tremendous growth of the local lodge. Its membership at present is 204, including townspeople, students, and faculty members. University Lodge Number 408, as it was chartered, has probably done more courtesy work than any other club in the state. Outside members who have come to Chapel Hill as students have been gladly transferred into this lodge. A part of the present membership is composed of students of the University. The largest part is made up of Chapel Hill business men, with a few faculty men included.

N. B. Henry was the first master of the local lodge. He has been followed by twenty-one others down to, and including, the present master, John W. Humphreys. They were: D. Virginia To Be Pugilists' Toughest Foe

CAVALIERS DOWN 1930 CHAMPIONS BY 5-2 MARGIN

Winner of Fights at Tin Can Saturday Night Will Be Favorites for 1931 Title.

BOTH TEAMS UNDEFEATED

Platt Landis May Be in Shape, But George Biggs Is Out With Broken Nose.

Since Virginia beat Florida's Southern Champions by 5-2 Tuesday night, it looks as if the Carolina boxers will be in for their toughest meet to date when Virginia brings its all-star punchers to the Tin Can Saturday night.

Both the Cavaliers and the Tar Heels have gone through their schedule, so far, undefeated, and a victory for either will definitely establish them as favorites in the Southern Conference Tournament, in Charlottesville, March 2.

Virginia was hard pressed to eke out a 4-3 verdict over the V. P. I. Gobblers, while the Blue and White easily took a 6-1 decision over them. However, Virginia came back Tuesday night to defeat Florida.

In the fourteen bouts of the last two meets the Tar Heels have had exactly five knockouts.

Hugh Wilson, sophmore heavyweight, has led the list with two. Captain Noah Goodridge, Dail Holderness, and Obie Davis have had one apiece.

All in all, indications are for a pretty scrap. The varsity meet will start at 8:30 o'clock, following a Carolina-Virginia freshman meet at seven o'clock.

Crayton Rowe, the Tar Heel coach, expects to have Platt Landis, the heavy-hitting sophomore in the light heavy division, in shape after being out all season with a broken hand.

Hugh Wilson has been performing so impressively in this class, however, that the "long man with the mystery punch," who has won knockouts in his last two fights, may keep the post.

George Biggs, sophomore bantam, will probably be out for the remainder of the season. George has been fighting with his nose broken in two places, and this week, he will be operated on. However, Carolina still has a reserve bantam in E. M. Fonvielle, junior. Fonvielle has been out since the season started and is in good shape to go on in place of Biggs.

DEFEAT 1930 CONFERENCE CHAMPIONS

The University of Virginia boxing team defeated the University of Florida pugilists Tuesday night by a 5-2 score. The veterans on the Cavalier squad are pictured above. They will meet the Tar Heels here Saturday night.

'BLUES' DEFEAT 'ORANGE' TEAM

Yearlings Lead Victors to 18-8 Victory While "Oranges" Score on Fumbles.

Led by three backs from the 1930 yearling squad, the "Blues" downed the "Orange" by a score of 18 to 8 in the second winter football game yesterday in Kenan stadium. Weisker, Lassiter, and Hackney showed the way to the "Blue" eleven in the ball totin' department while Croom, and Phipps, frosh flash, displayed prowess in the "Orange" backfield.

Barclay, freshman, played a creditable game at guard for the losers while Newcomb and Fysal at the same post for the ultimate winners were outstanding in the forward wall.

The "Orange's" eight points were garnered by a recovered "Blue" fumble on the goal line and a safety.

"No dramatists in this country receives full justice during his lifetime," observes a critic. It just shows what a generous, forgiving people we are. —The Humorist.

Basketball Team Will Meet V. P. I. Tonight

Cagers Already Be-Jinxed, Having Lost All Games Played Away from Home.

ELEVEN MEN MAKE TRIP

Gobblers Expected to Be Especially Tough with Palmer's Sharpshooting.

Carolina's basketball squad was off today on a week's Northern tour. They open at V. P. I. tonight against the strong Gobbler team that gave the Tar Heels a 31-28 licking, their only loss of the year on their home court.

Friday night will take them against V. M. I. and Saturday night they will play at Virginia. Monday and Tuesday nights the Carolina invaders will go up against Washington and Lee and Maryland with their strong teams, their narrow courts and their tough zone defenses.

This trip is considered the toughest spot of the Carolina schedule. The Virginia teams are all strong, the trip entails lots of hard and tedious traveling, and moreover, the Tar Heels seem bejinxed when playing on foreign courts.

This is evidenced by the fact that Carolina has won 8 of 9 games on its own court, and lost all three contests played away to date. Coach Jim Ashmore is trusting the boys will get accustomed to foreign courts at once, otherwise the results may be disastrous.

V. P. I. is expected to prove especially tough. Carolina led the Gobblers 16-15 in the first half of their game here, but Palmer's sensational sharp shooting of six field goals proved too much, and V. P. I. gave Carolina its only licking on the home court.

Bosley and Hall, forwards; Seaman, center; and Palmer and Wolfe, guards, will probably make up the Gobbler lineup. Wilmer Hines and Paul Edwards, forwards; Sandy Dameron, center; and Tom Alexander and Artie Marpet, guards, will probably start for Carolina.

Captain Marpet and Alexander, both guards, led the scoring with seven points apiece in Carolina's last game, a 23-20 loss to State. Leading scorers to date are Dameron, 77; Marpet, 74; Hines, 40.

Tar Heel Will Have Wire Coverage On Basketball Contests

While the Tar Heel basketball team is away on its Northern trip through Virginia and Maryland, the Daily Tar Heel will carry a special wire service on these games.

Here's one for the book. Boxing is illegal in the state of South Carolina, and yet the University of South Carolina boasts a mit team, and a good one at that; as far as we know, they have bouts at home too . . . The University of Virginia has obtained Fred Dawson, former football coach at Nebraska and Denver U. During his stay at the Big Ten school, Dawson was Knute Rockne's jinx, defeating the "Irish" twice during his four year's stay. Dawson will be trying to keep up his record for the Cavaliers.

The exact amount of Duke's endowment has never been made public . . . both major leagues are clamping down on the home run orgy; they're using a heavier stitch, but the cover will be of the same weight . . . the University of Virginia defeated last

Led by Henry House, varsity football star, with eight points, the K. A.'s won one of the closest games of the season from the T. E. P.'s. The T. E. P.'s jumped away to a 19-10 lead at the half time and the game appeared to be sewed up, but the K. A.'s staged a great rally in the final quarter, scoring nineteen points in the last thirteen minutes of the game while holding their opponents to two field goals for four points. The K. TAR BABIES OFF FOR THREE DAY TRIP IN VIRGINIA

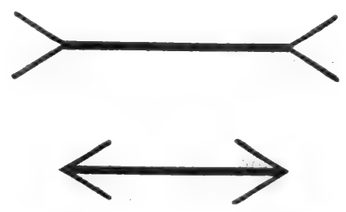
Yearling Basketball Team Takes Game from State College by 28-19 Score.

The Carolina freshmen left yesterday afternoon for a three day northern trip. The Tar Babies will play three games on their jaunt, meeting Woodberry Forest tonight, V. M. I. freshmen in a double bill with the varsity Friday night, and finishing up with an encounter with Augusta Military Academy Saturday. They will return home Sunday.



The Tar Babies defeated the N. C. State first year men, 28-19, in a preliminary to the Carolina-State varsity game in the Frank Thompson gymnasium Tuesday night. The Tar Babies, away to a 16-11 lead at the half-way, were never headed.

For Carolina the stars were Weathers and Collett, with ten points each, and McCachren, playing a brilliant floor game. Jay, with seven points, McQuage and Palm topped the losers.

Coach Shephard's new starting combination of Weathers and Fisher, forwards, Collett, center, Harris and McCachren, guards, seems to have worked wonders with the Tar Babies, and will probably be the starting lineup against Woodberry Forest tonight.

Dean D. D. Carroll wishes to meet all freshmen of the commerce school this morning at chapel period in 103 Bingham. The freshmen of the school of education will meet with C. E. McIntosh in 201 Peabody at the same hour. There will be no chapel for other freshmen today.

Extension Staff

The extension teaching staff will meet Friday at two o'clock to discuss plans for extension classes in the spring semester.

Debating Squad

The debating squad in its regular weekly meeting tonight in 201 Murphey hall, will continue the series of discussions on unemployment insurance. These discussions are preparations for the trips to Northwestern, Texas, and Boston universities.

Phi Picture

A group picture of the Phi Assembly will be taken Friday at chapel period on the steps of Murphey hall. All members are urged to be present.

Tonight at 8:30 o'clock the Carolina Playmakers will present as one of their winter productions, "East Lynn," from the novel by Mrs. Henry Wood.

The drama is a classic favorite of the old stock companies and is highly successful with tent and hall repertory companies. It will be presented in ultra modern dress and unique scenery.

The Epsilon Phi Delta Cosmopolitan Club will meet tonight at 9:00 in the Y. M. C. A. The subject of the Italian situation will be discussed.

Students in the school of education may get their entertainment tickets for the winter quarter by applying to Mrs. Pickard, 129 Peabody Hall, Friday morning.

No students will be admitted to the Carola Goya dances Friday night, or any of the other entertainments unless he has a ticket book.

Yale Radio Station Is Still A Mystery

New Haven, Conn., February 3.—"Radio Station W-R-I-G-H-T" has resumed broadcasting with an account of the Podunk vs. Our Dame football game in the Rose Bowl, the Yale News reported. Graham Cracker was at the microphone.

The latest report broadcast included a "rebroadcast" from Paris of Maurice Chevalier and Josephine Baker singing "All by the Aid of Mirrors," according to the news.

The "station" consists of a receiving set hooked up as a low-power broad-caster and operated by two juniors in Wright hall. The first broadcast, in which the anonymous broadcasters aired their opinion of faculty members from President James R. Angell down, followed accidental discovery that the receiver became a sending set when both ground and antennae wires were fastened to a radiator pipe.

"Cracker," chief announcer, had announced his retirement from broadcasting when the radio commission first announced its investigation.

Tuesday's workout for the boxing team was somewhat enlivened by the appearance of two local heavyweights, Jake Denning, former Navy champion, and Add Warren, star on the champion Tar Heels of three years ago. Both of these men went into the ring with the Tar Heel heavies, giving them some pointers.

New Commission Hears Reports On State's Illiteracy Figures

Holding its first meeting here Tuesday, the North Carolina Commission on Adult Illiteracy, recently appointed by Governor Gardner, elected Mrs. Elizabeth Morriss of Asheville, honorary chairman; S. L. Davis of High Point, chairman; Mrs. J. M. Slear of Charlotte, vice-chairman; and R. M. Grumman of the University, secretary.

Luther H. Hodges, of Leaksville-Spray, acting chairman, presided. Decision was reached to present to the present legislature the need for work to help wipe out illiteracy in this state. The meeting was attended by more than thirty persons.

The Commission was informed by Dr. E. C. Branson, rural sociologist of the University, that more than forty-four thousand native white women in North Carolina were illiterate, the figures being based on the 1920 census. Dr. Branson made the principal address at the morning session, his topic being "Our Forgotten Women." He said that the last census showed two hundred and forty-one thousand illiterates in this state, of whom one hundred and four thousand were native whites, and that the latter ninety-four thousand were rural dwellers. Dr. Branson thought that the churches could do much to help solve the problems.

Mrs. E. M. Land, president of the North Carolina Federation of Women's Clubs, said one of the major objectives of her organization was to remove illiteracy from the state. The efforts of their respective organizations to cope with the problem were related by Miss Eva Edgerton, director of the night schools of High Point; Miss Maud Worley, supervisor of the night schools in Surry county; Mrs. Claude Morris, of Rowan county, and J. R. McLean, Rockingham county superintendent of schools.

Mr. Davis said the work already done by the women's organizations ought to present a challenge to the men.

In addition to members of the Commission there were present representatives of Rotary Club districts which are at work on the problem.

Walter Murphy of Salisbury was appointed chairman of the legislative committee; T. W. Andrews of High Point, chairman of finance and R. M. Grumman of Chapel Hill, publicity chairman. These chairmen, together with the officers, will constitute the executive committee.

National President Will Address Local Branch of A. S. M. E.

At three o'clock Friday afternoon, Roy V. Wright, president of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers will address the students of the school of engineering in room 206 Phillips hall. He comes to Chapel Hill under the auspices of the University branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

The purpose of the national society is to provide an opportunity for engineering students in gaining a proper prospective of engineering work by becoming acquainted with the personnel and the problems of those who are actively engaged in the work. With the view that such acquaintance is necessary, Mr. Wright comes here to give the student in his field more insight into the work of an engineer.

Wright is a railroad mechanical engineer and managing editor of the Railway Age. His duties as editor have given him a broad vision and viewpoint on all engineering problems, and his address Friday should be of interest to all engineers, says E. G. Hoefer, professor of mechanical engineering. The student branch of the A. S. M. E. invites all engineering students and others interested to hear Mr. Wright Friday afternoon.

PATTERSON SAYS FINAL YEAR DEAR TO ALL STUDENTS

senior year, Patterson remarked, "When the student reaches his last year in college, he has both a feeling of joy and a touch of responsibility." While discussing the organization and work of this class, the president of the class of '31 explained the movement which was completed this year in regard to the establishment of a Duke-Carolina football trophy to be given to the winning team each year. He described this as a step to further even better athletic relations between the two schools, and it was his opinion that it would add color and interest to the traditional contest.

Pity the poor politician, he just can't stay in the middle of the road and keep an ear to the ground these days without an accident. — Leesburg Commercial.

N. C. State Quint Scheduled To Play Three More Games

Raleigh, February 4.—The State College basketball team has three more games on its 1931 schedule, all Big Five tilts.

The first of these three will be played with Duke University at Durham, Saturday night, February 7. On February 10, Wake Forest plays here and Davidson will pull down the curtain in Raleigh, Friday, February 13.

State's Big Five record to date shows wins over Wake Forest, Carolina, and Duke and losses to Carolina and Davidson.

Of the remaining three games, the one with Duke is also a Southern Conference affair.

In Southern Conference play this season State has lost to Auburn, Georgia, Carolina and twice to Alabama. Wins have been counted over Duke and V. P. I.

State also holds a win over Villanova in a pre-season game, giving the Red Terrors a record of four games won and six lost for the season.

EX-SPRING HILL MENTOR MAY BE WOLFPACK COACH

Frank Reese, who has just resigned as head football coach at Spring Hill, is understood to be Head Coach John Smith's selection for the assistant's job at N. C. State College.

Immediately after the announcement of the selection of Smith as head coach of football at the Raleigh institution, reports in college circles had it that Johnny, himself an exponent of the Rockne system, was seeking Reese for the job of backfield tutor at State next season.

Reese's resignation at this time gives further support to the rumor of Smith's plan to bring the former Spring Hill mentor at State.

Whether or not Reese is the man seeking the assistant's position at State, it is needless to say that Smith's right hand man will be a Rockne product. However in view of Reese's resignation at Spring Hill it would not be surprising if official announcement of his selection for the State College job would be forthcoming within the next few days.

Zeta Psi's and Beta's Will Give Exhibition Fencing Bouts Today

At 4:15 this afternoon in the Tin Can the fencing teams of Beta Theta Pi and Zeta Psi fraternities will give exhibition bout for the benefit of students interested in the sport. The coach will point out to the onlookers good and bad points in the style of each team.

Teams intending to enter the intramural contests should turn in the names of their men today at the Tin Can.

Instructions to new men are being given at the Tin Can every evening. After the exhibition bout, the fencing coach will hold an instruction class, and he invites interested persons to take advantage of this class.

Mrs. Fussler Reviews Marc Connelly's Play

The literature department of the Community Club met in the Episcopal parish house, Tuesday evening, February 3, at eight o'clock.

Mrs. Karl H. Fussler reviewed Green Pastures by Marc Connelly, a play which is based on Ol' Man Adam and His Chillun by Roark Bradford. The play has been running in New York over a year and is considered in this country as a highly religious play, but it was refused in London, being considered sacrilegious.

Mrs. Raymond Adams read in dialect selections from stories that are particularly connected with the play;—"Eve and the Snake," "Sin," "Noah," and "Moses and Old King Pharaoh's Daughter." These stories bridged over the gaps left in the play.

The department will meet again Tuesday evening, February 17, in the Episcopal parish house. Mrs. George Howe will conduct a round table discussion on "What Makes a Good Play." Ralph Westerman will speak on "The Chief Differences Between Old and Modern Drama." Several people of the community will give two minute opinions on the subject of discussion.

The Beta's received a forfeit yesterday afternoon when the Chi Phi's failed to put in an appearance.

Purser Leads Sigma Zeta's Win

The Sigma Zeta's defeated the Pi Kappa Alpha's yesterday afternoon, 43-16. Purser, star center, led the attack for the Sigma Zeta's with eighteen points. Davis and Bryan played a good floor game for the winners, getting eight and seven points respectively to figure in the scoring. For the losers Stamps and Little were best with six and five points respectively. It was the fourth win of the season for the Sigma Zeta's against no defeats.

Kappa Sig's Win 27-14

The Kappa Sig's, although handicapped by having only four men, easily defeated the Lambda Chi Alpha's 27-14. Eagles, stellar forward, led the Kappa Sig's with fourteen points. Staples, also of the Kappa Sig's, took second place scoring honors with seven points. For the losers Lodge and Prevost were best with six and four points.

Tin Can Is Best Location In East For Indoor Meet

The Tin Can where the Southern Indoor Track meet will be held March 7, has the best facilities for holding an indoor meet than any other building in the East.

The only organization in the country possessing as good or perhaps better equipment for the conducting of a track carnival is the athletic association of the University of Illinois. At the University of Illinois there are a regulation cinder track and sand pits for the jumping and vaulting events laid out inside a building larger even than the Tin Can.

The Tin Can has a floor space covering an area of 33,000 square feet. The track is nine laps to the mile and has a straightaway of over fifty yards. The track in Madison Square Garden, where the N. A. A. U. and other great meets with national and international stars as entrants are held, has eleven laps to the mile.

When the building is completely arranged for the track events the Tin Can has a seating capacity of approximately 1800.

Johnson High Scorer In State's Victory Over Tar Heel Quint

Frank Thompson Gymnasium, Raleigh, N. C., February 4.—N. C. State's Wolfpack, still smarting under last week's defeat at the hands of the Tar Heels, growled long and deep last night and made a hearty meal out of what was left of Carolina's championship hopes, nosing them out by a score of 23-20. The Tar Heels, leading at half-time 12-7, were swept aside by the Red Terrors' last half attack.

Johnny Johnson, State's sharp shooter, won scoring honors for the evening with four field goals and two fouls for a total of ten points. Artie Marpet and Tom Alexander led Carolina's attack with seven markers apiece. "Big Chief" Gurneau, Clark, and Johnson were the stars for "Doc" Sermon's charges, while Alexander and Captain Marpet looked good for the losers.

The game was closely contested, and many fouls were called. It was State's superiority in this department that gave them their final margin of victory.

A Correction

Through an error it was stated in yesterday's Tar Heel that State defeated the Carolina basketball team for the second time this season. As is stated above, Carolina won the first game by 22-16.

President Graham reviewed at length the appeal he made before the appropriations committee for an increased budget appropriation. He presented his report and it was agreed to print copies of it for public distribution.

Governor Gardner is to appoint the committee of seven trustees to appear before the appropriations committee at a date to be set later. A committee composed of Josephus Daniels, Dr. F. D. DEAN SMITH WILL RENDER FIRST OF GUEST RECITALS

Head of Lenoir-Rhyne Music Department to Play Organ Here Saturday.

Frederick Stanley Smith, dean of the music department at Lenoir-Rhyne, Hickory, N. C., will render the first of a series of guest events tomorrow, February 7, at 8:15 p. m. This event will take place in the new auditorium of the music building.

Dean Smith is an associate member of the American Guild of Organists, and the sub-dean of the Carolina chapter of the same organization. He is known in the state as the organist of "The Little Chapel," a church at Pinehurst, N. C.

This guest organist has composed several widely-known selections which are now played by concert musicians.

For the first part of his program, Dean Smith will render selections from Bach, Haendel, and other French composers, but the latter portion will deal with his own personal works, one of which is not yet published.

He and Mrs. Smith will be the guests of Dr. and Mrs. Dyer while in Chapel Hill.

The concert will begin promptly at eight-fifteen Saturday. There will not be any charge for these guest events which are held under the auspices of the music department at different times. The only charge for any of these events will be on that of the maennerchor presentation, which is to be given Monday night by a group of seventy-five men. This charge is to defray the expenses of the two Glee Club contest trips last year to New York and Greenville, S. C.

LAW ASSOCIATION PLANS FOR DANCE

Annual Affair Will Be In Bynum Gymnasium Friday, February 27.

The Law Association's annual dance will take place in Bynum Gymnasium Friday evening, February 27 between ten and one o'clock.

The committee in charge of the dance, Archie Allen, McDonald Gray, and E. L. Curlee, have Jelly Leftwich and his University Club Orchestra, of Durham, under contract to play at the affair.

The Gymnasium will be decorated in the law school's colors of red and white.

Each member of the law school will receive two invitations, one for himself and one for his guest. The chaperones at the dance will be Dean and Mrs. Charles T. McCormick, Professor and Mrs. R. H. Wettach, Professor and Mrs. A. C. McIntosh, Professor and Mrs. M. T. Van Hecke, Professor and Mrs. P. H. Winston, Professor and Mrs. Albert Coates, Professor and Mrs. M. S. Breckenridge, and Professor and Mrs. F. B. McCall.

The law school executive committee, composed of Ray Farris, H. B. Parker, and Travis Brown, is in charge of the affair.

The extension teaching staff will meet this afternoon at two o'clock to discuss plans for extension classes in the spring quarter.

Lenoir-Rhyne Dean

Dean Frederick S. Smith, of Lenoir-Rhyne College, will be the next guest artist to play on the new organ in the music auditorium.

PAUL GRAHAM TO PLAY FOR GERMAN CLUB DANCE SET

Plans Are Made for Mid-Winter Dances During Week-end of February 13-14.

Preparations are still in progress for the set of University mid-winter dances to be given under the auspices of the German Club February 13 and 14. This will be the second week-end of dances during the month of February, the co-ed winter dance and the second Grail of the quarter being scheduled for the week-end of February 6 and 7. The third Grail and the law school dance are planned for the next week-end, February 27 and 28.

Paul Graham's orchestra, which has been filling engagements in New York this winter, will play for the set. There will be dances Friday afternoon and night, and the set will be continued on St. Valentine's day with dances in the morning, afternoon, and night, all of them taking place in Bynum gymnasium.

William Dunn of New Bern will lead the set and will be assisted by Lynn Wilder of Raleigh and George Bagby of Charlotte.

A few vacancies in the club may be filled by immediate application. Cards may be obtained from Will Yarborough, secretary-treasurer, at the S. A. E. house.

Duke Sociologist Will Lecture Here

Dr. C. A. Ellwood, former sociologist at the University of Missouri and now at Duke University, will speak Sunday evening at seven-thirty o'clock in the Methodist church.

Dr. Ellwood is a man of national reputation, writer of various volumes on sociology, and for thirty years teacher of this subject at the University of Missouri. He came to Duke University in the fall of 1930 where he is building up a department of sociology.

"The Religion of a Mature Mind" is the subject that Dr. Ellwood will use for his talk Sunday evening. He comes at the invitation of Rev. C. Excell Rozzelle, the Methodist minister, and while in Chapel Hill he and Mrs. Ellwood will be entertained by the Rozzelles.

This is Dr. Ellwood's first public appearance in Chapel Hill, but he is well acquainted here, especially with those teaching the social sciences.

LIBRARY EXHIBITS ETCHING DISPLAY

Carnegie Corporation Art Collection Is Subject of Latest Exhibition.

Etchings drawn from the Carnegie Corporation Art Collection is the subject of the exhibition now displayed in the main entry of the general library building. This collection, which is comprised of reproductions of paintings, sculpture, architecture, and textiles, as well as etchings, was given to the University two years ago.

The small collection of etchings is remarkably rich in examples of the work of many famous masters of the art, such as Seymour Haden, Maxime Lalanne, Charles Meryon, and Whistler. Several etchings by men better known as painters, such as Manet, Corot, and Millet, are shown.

Notable among the etchings displayed is one by Corot of his favorite woodland scene. Corot it better known as a landscape painter than as an etcher. He did not commence etching until he was fifty, and his prints are rare and unusual.

Interesting for its style as well as its subject is Felix Bracquemond's picture of teal. This etcher was famous for his etchings of birds, and is said to employ a remarkably clear, decorative style. The example of the work of Francisco Goya is taken from his bull fighting series, a subject which he was eminently well fitted by birth to illustrate as he is the great Spanish etcher of all time.

Especially worth attention are two pictures done by other methods than etching. One is a landscape by Richard Earlom, done is mezzotint after a picture by Claude Lorraine. Mezzotint is a form of engraving which employs some of the etching

RED CROSS TOTAL PASSES $4,000,000

Total Raised By Subscriptions Of Local Chapter for Relief Fund Reaches $464.

Colonel J. H. Pratt in charge of the Red Cross fund in Chapel Hill announces that the subscription has reached $464. The national fund has come to the total of $4,883,159.

National Red Cross officials notified local workers that $1,300 has been allotted to drought sufferers in Vance County from the $10,000,000 fund now being raised through a nation-wide subscription campaign.

Judge John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, speaking over a national hook-up of the National Broadcasting Company during the "Collier Hour" said in part:

"Drought has worked a terrible tragedy. One of its most sinister aspects is the difficulty of making people realize its full import. The President sensed this difficulty in his proclamation calling for $10,000,000 for Red Cross relief funds, when he said: 'The familiarity of this situation, due to months of press reports of its progress, should not blind us to the fact that it is an acute emergency, nor dull our active sympathies toward our fellow countrymen who are in actual want and in many cases will lack the bare necessities of life unless they are provided for.'

"Drought presses slowly. There is nothing in it to quicken the emotions, unless one sees with his own eyes the gaunt hunger and hopelessness of those affected. But it has brought hundreds of thousands to the point of desperate need and the American Red Cross, which has coped with various forms of disaster for nearly fifty years, is meeting that need."

Student Federation Gains Recognition Of Legislature

By John Lang

The North Carolina Student Federation has recently gained from the State Legislature a recognition which that governing body accords only to the more outstanding and influential social organizations of the state. By special letters to the president of the State Student Federation, John Lang, the presiding officers of the two houses of the Legislature have announced that the Federation's formal protest to the Legislature against the proposed cut in the state's appropriation to its educational institutions will be given special consideration by the joint-committee on appropriations.

Acting on behalf of the Federation's executive-committee, Lang recently dispatched to President Richard T. Fountain, of the Senate, and to Speaker Willis Smith, of the House of Representatives, letters which requested that these officials announce to their respective houses the unalterable opposition of the students of North Carolina to any reduction in the state's appropriation to its institutions at this crucial moment in the history of North Carolina. These letters also informed these officials of the legislature that there were 15,000 college students in North Carolina who were standing behind this protest against the proposed cut in appropriations and who were ready on short notice to support the legislature in any sort of progressive educational program that it might wish to adopt.

In replying for the state senate, Lieutenant-Governor Fountain displayed a most friendly attitude toward the work of the the State Federation, and he announced that he was personally referring the Federation's request to the joint-committee on appropriations.

In his reply, Speaker Smith of the house, besides showing the same consideration that Mr. Fountain did, said that he would be glad personally "to bear in mind" what the Federation had to say in this educational matter.

In its work to consolidate student opinion in the state against the proposed cut in the state's educational appropriation, the State Student Federation has experienced a most encouraging co-operation from the students throughout North Carolina. Most of the student bodies have used their college papers to work against the proposed cut, and many student organizations have formally drawn up resolutions calling upon the legislature to continue the educational institutions of North Carolina in their course of progress and development.

LYNN RIGGS TELLS DRAMA CLASS OF CREATING PLAYS

Author Speaks to Professor Koch's Playwriting Class About Technique.

An advanced theory of drama creation was advanced at Wednesday's meeting of Professor Koch's playwriting class by Lynn Riggs, author of Green Grow the Lilacs, current New York Theatre Guild sensation, who is spending a few weeks in Chapel Hill.

Mr. Riggs, defining his attitude toward the material in his plays, said that the true dramatist was not one who ground out mere peopled plots in the familiar three-act mold or one who simply wrote accurately something he knew, but one who sets characters in motion and then hears them say and do things that astonish him and make him wise.

His conception of two persons in a room, he cited as an example, is that they are never in accord and that the nature of the spiritual flow between them, when on the subject of something illuminating about human life, determines conflict and story. Riggs expressed the sentiment that an author, as he watches his people develop, had has nerve to get in their way. He then demonstrated how his method transcended the form that was nothing more than a true to life sketch by resulting in plays that fairly got up and sang.

Riggs announced that he gave full rein to his theory in preparing the script of Green Grow the Lilacs, which was an effort to recapture, in the simpliest of stories, the mood and feeling of a number of old ballads. He told how some of the most important developments in the production surprised him mightily when they first loomed up in the writing. Thus, he added, a genius like Shakespeare must have actually lived in a state of continual astonishment.

The writer said that, when given the prescribed freedom, a group of characters might readily indulge in the conventionally shocking, but said the only thing he personally considered shocking was bad taste, and even that had its place.

SPANISH ARTIST HIGHLY PRAISED BY NEWSPAPERS

Spain's Beautiful Propagandist Of Peace to Present Characteristic Numbers.

AUDITORIUM COMPLETED

New Building Has Seating Capacity of 1800.

Carola Goya, Spain's beautiful ambassador and propagandist of peace, is to present her series of authenic Spanish dances tonight in Memorial hall as the first performer on the entertainment program for this year.

Senorita Goya, after winning the acclaim of all the European critics, appeared before the New York public, and for the past year has been the toast of the city. The New York American says of her: "Senorita Goya with her galaxy of bright costumes and her vivid dramatization of moods was a tonic for the eyes. Hers is a delightful art combining poetic movement, ravishing coquetry and the exhilerating throb of life in youth. To see her is to gain a new realization of the beauty of the Spanish dance."

Carola Goya made her first appearance in London before the King and Queen of Afghanistan. She ot only gave performances at the Colesium and Alhambra theatres in London, but she was chosen to dance at a charity fund under the patronage of of Her Royal Highness, the Duchess of York, in the great hall of the ancient middle temple, the only dancer to perform in this hall since the days of Queen Elizabeth.

In New York she gave eighteen recitals alone and with assisting artists. Her last program was presented at Carnegie hall. The New York Graphic is quoted as saying: "The rhythms and steps of Miss Goya's dances in themselves allow for much variation, and the exquisitness of her costumes contribute in no small degree to her hold on the audience. But her gorgeous gowns would lose much of their effectiveness were they not graced and enhanced by a provocative smile, extreme youth and a body that even in repose would suggest imptuousness and spontaneity, and all the radiance and love of loving that Spanish gaiety and coquetry symbolize."

Carola Goya brings to this country Spanish dances in all their native simplicity. All of her numbers, except certain ones of her own creation accompanied by music of modern Spanish composers, are classical, flamenca, or folk dances whose steps and rhythm have been familiar in Spain for generations. In costume, in form and in mood Senorita Goya's dances reflect the life, the traditions and the art of the Iberian peninsula. La Libertad of Madrid expressed this fact most aptly when it said: "Carola Goya's dances are of extraordinary beauty, color and rhythm, and in the finest spirit of the traditional Spanish dance, which unfortunately is dying out even in Spain. She has caused a genuine sensation."

Carola Goya's performance marks the opening of the new Memorial Hall, erected on the site of the historic old one. The University has been without an adequate assembly hall since

Hardly Civil War Over Road Control

We read in the Durham Herald that Mr. John Sprunt Hill, member of the State Highway Commission, told the Durham county commissioners that if Governor Gardner's road plan were adopted there would be civil war and bloodshed in North Carolina. The Governor proposes to abolish the present highway commission, substituting therefor a centralized commission with control of both state and county highways.

Mr. Hill has vigorously opposed this plan and he has been joined in his opposition by others of prominence and influence. At present there is a bill before the legislature which incorporates the Governor's plan. It's chances of passage are unknown insofar as the influence of the group opposed to it is considerable. Until the merits of the two plans are discussed we hesitate to agree with either Mr. Hill or Governor Gardner. Obviously, both are well intentioned.

But when civil war and bloodshed are predicted then we disagree. North Carolinians may love their local government with all its inefficiencies and they may wish to retain control of their county roads but they will hardly go to war over either. The chief problem confronting many of them is where to get money enough to pay the tax collector. Land taxes which include maintenance of county roads are too high. And if Governor Gardner can show them that taxes will be reduced by changing the highway control then there will be no civil war. The danger of civil war and bloodshed arise from taxes—not from county roads.

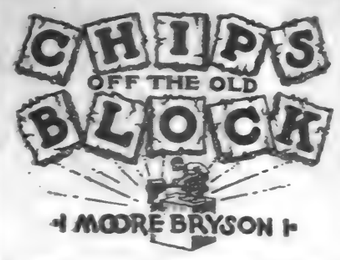
This Wickersham Report

Congress, the various news magazines, news reels, and all sorts of broadcast and deliberative agencies have been dealing with the Wickersham report in a rather featured manner recently. We are decidedly of the opinion that, as one writer quoted in the Literary Digest said, "The mountain labored and produced a mouse." Six or eight months were spent in utilizing plenty of the government's time and money to produce a group of conclusions most of which were already present in the minds of average intelligent citizens. It is another one of America's famous investigations, with lots of politics and ambiguity entering into the investigations and the conclusions. We were hoping a great deal to see some strong statement on one side or the other, and then let Congress do something which will be definite.

Quite naturally we do not dare to venture into the old, old question of the relative merits of prohibition and saloons. What we want to see is a definite stand on one side or the other with a leader behind the convictions strong enough to do what is best for the country.

The party which is at present out of power has exceedingly rich opportunities. The issue is very likely to be the main one in the coming presidential campaign, and the public very likely will not keep its present passive attitude toward ambiguity in platform issues.—O. W. D.

"This Is a Crazy World!"



Of one thing we can be sure; we shall always be harassed by mental and material difficulties. Worries of all sorts continually stick at our heels with undying tenacity. There is no use trying to escape these worries because our flights would only succeed in multiplying them. We must, instead, be frank to ourselves and admit that unusual difficulties will always crop up from nowhere and torment us—unless, and there lies our hope, we find a way to combat and to conquer them.

This, however, is not an easy thing to do, as we all have many times discovered to our unwilling satisfaction. Troubles have a habit of suddenly sweeping over us in overwhelming numbers. They force us to retreat before them. We become despondent and wretched over our defeat. We feel ourselves being pushed into a bottomless abyss of despair, and we are tempted to throw up our hands and give up.

A certain character in fiction, like we characters in reality, found himself in this situation. But he did not give up. He smiled, instead, and said, "This is a crazy world!" And his troubles vanished before him. The world was crazy; there was no getting around that. Anything could happen in such a world, so why not take things as a matter of course? If trouble comes, well and good, let it come; if it stays away, so much the better. But why become miserable over it? After all, "this is a crazy world!"—P.L.

Woodhouse Elected To Executive Honor

Edward J. Woodhouse, professor of government, and head of the bureau of municipal and county government research in the extension division of the University, has been elected a member of the executive council of the American Political Science Association, to serve for three years, ending December, 1933. The University of North Carolina is the only Southern institution represented on the executive council of the Association.

To T. A. U., Jr.

A sadness is over the whole campus. No longer are the signs of spring stimuli for thoughts of love among our fair maidens. No longer do jovial friends look forward to Friday night with hope and expectation. He is gone.

Gone! For seven years he has been going, going, and now he is gone. Is there little wonder why the song of birds sounds less sweet to feminine ears; why the clink of well-filled glasses less merry to his once pious companions?

Gone! He is gone.

Having written the above beautiful and touching eulogy to a friend who has been taken from us I feel greatly relieved. "Bootie's" departure was, of course, not the gentle one in which the Grim Reaper plays so prominent a part. No my friends, it was much more cruel than that. He has gone out into the cold, cold world to make his way. Much better death than this. But even as in death, there is some compensation, for he has gone to join friends in the Great Adventure. He has departed for Asheville to begin the practice of law with that now highly successful attorney, Thomas S. Rollins, Jr.

Everyone who knew "Bootie" will miss him. Why, even the law professors will gaze at his empty chair and remember that he did occupy it occasionally when he was supposed to be taking their courses.

"Bootie's" departure breaks up a gang which has been more or less infamous on the campus for the past three years. The "Barristers Bar" is a thing of the past. The untimely sale of Geraldine (the Bar's vehicle of conveyance) the loss of the Bar Maid, and old-age had already weakened the ranks, but the last loss was the death blow. (Sighs of relief from the Student Council, Faculty Committee, and the Y. M. C. A. Groans of anguish from Patterson's (ginger-ale) Model Market (Vermouth) and —, —, —, and —(? ? ?).

Jonnie Scott, the play-boy of the Graduate Club, became bored with ordinary bridge and invented a new game in which deuces are wild. "Deuces wild" has always been my Waterloo, so I haven't joined in the fun as yet. As usual, however, I suppose that I will weaken in time.

Four of our fairest have formed a club of their own. Not that they aren't already fraternity women. "Pete" Gilchrist, of Buccaneer fame, has been given the job of "Sponsor" and they have honored me with the title of "Tag-A-Long." My duties are to buy dopes for the members at chapel period. Such is the price of fame.

The wisest crack of the past week among column writers was Walter Winchell's—"Izzy Elinson invited his girl friend to "Grand Hotel" and the dope brought her overnight bag with her."

Of late the law students have been amiss as to whom to kid since the Norwood-Curlee combination seems to have gone on the rocks.

A certain young lady started by saying that she thought Scott Benton one of the most handsome boys she had ever seen. She brought her remark through several stages until Scott is now the most handsome boy she has ever seen at Carolina. What will she be saying when the arboretum is in full bloom?

last spring when the old building was torn down because it had been declared unsafe by the building inspectors.

Every seat in the auditorium commands an unobstructed view of the stage. The balcony is constructed on the cantilever plan and there are no posts to obstruct the view from any portion of the hall. The benches from the old Memorial hall will be used temporarily until the University has sufficient funds to install individual chairs such as are found in other modern auditoriums.

The memorial tablets which adorned the walls of the old building have been placed on the walls of the lobby and stair halls. The large tablets, bearing the names of the University's Confederate dead, are on the walls of the auditorium proper, flanking the stage.

Having a depth of thirty-five feet and a width of sixty feet, the stage is different from any other on this campus. A pernicium arch opening makes up the front, made more attractive by an asbestos curtain. On the stage is an automatic fire skylight built so that it will work of its own accord in case of an emergency.

Backstage is furnished with a grid and six private dressing rooms with ample toilet equipment. There is also a spacious room for scenery and costumes.

The new building has no basement, the main floor being laid directly upon the ground. Over layers of concrete, waterproof paper, and sound-deadening felt the wooden floor surface has been built. More felt has been laid on the floor, over which the carpet has been spread. Thus the floor has been made sound proof.

The seating capacity of the new auditorium is 1,800 or 200 more than the old. There are 1,200 seats downstairs and 600 in the balcony.

Contrary to an announcement in yesterday's Tar Heel there will be no reserved seats for tonight's performance.

LIBRARY EXHIBITS ETCHING DISPLAY

technique. Whistler's lithograph, "Smith's Yard," is an example of still another type of reproduction which requires the drawing to be done on stone from which the prints are made. The resulting proof has the attractive quality of the crayon drawing.

Illustrative of the etching process are two etching plates presented to the library by William Steene. The process of printing an etching is exactly the reverse of that from printing for type. With type the ink lies on raised surfaces and is transferred therefrom to the paper. In the case of an etching the ink lies in incised lines on the face of the plate, the surplus ink having been wiped off before printing. By passing the plate, covered with a sheet of dampened paper, between the rolls of an etching press, the paper is squeezed into the incised lines and absorbing the ink produces the finished proof.

Playmakers Will Try Experimental Drama

A departure from standard dramatic form is being prepared at the Playmaker Theatre as the rehearsals go forward on the experimental production of Anthony Buttitta's new three act drama, Playthings. A private performance has been definitely scheduled for Saturday evening, February twenty-eighth. Professor Koch, Paul Green, and others have become interested in this play as a dramatic experiment.

The highly concentrated action of the play is carried forward by three actors who, however, represent the composite characters of seven people. Whitner Bissell is cast in the roles of Shirley and Cecil Ingram; Eve Brickman has the parts of Sarah and Sonia Ingram; and Harold Baumstone plays the Man, Stanley, and Busch. The production is being directed by Walter Grotychann. John Edwards is stage manager with Shirley Carter as assistant.

The play concerns the manipulation of ideas within ideas—a treatment of the reality of illusion and the illusion of the reality, or reality in its stupidities assuming the vitality of illusion. The technique used to present such a mental complication is said to be attractive, complex, and sudden.

"Sardines packed by a Pacific coast fishery are now stood up in tall cans, instead of laid in the old flat type." In other words, instead of being packed in like sardines, they are now packed in like passengers on a street car.—Detroit News.

Boy Scouts To Observe Twenty-first Anniversary

The Boy Scouts of Chapel Hill are celebrating the twenty-first anniversary this week with a father and son banquet at the Baptist Church tonight at six o'clock, to be followed by a Court of Honor to award the various merit badges. The mayor of Chapel Hill, representatives from the American Legion, and the local Scout Council will be guests of honor.

GOLDSTEIN MAY NOT FIGHT HERE SATURDAY NIGHT

Star Virginia Featherweight Boxer Undergoes Minor Operation.

WOULD MEET LEVINSON

Bout Will Be Third for Cavaliers in Eight Days; In Good Shape However.

University, Virginia, February 5.—Bobby Goldstein, Virginia's sensational featherweight boxer, may not be in action Saturday night when the Cavalier ring team goes down to Chapel Hill to oppose North Carolina in a double-header dual meet.

For several days Goldstein had been suffering a slight ailment. Yesterday morning he went to the hospital where a minor operation was advised and was carried out. Goldstein was ordered to bed and it is unlikely that he will be permitted to box again until next week.

But if it is possible for Goldstein to get in shape to face Carolina by a workout tomorrow he'll do it. For he has been looking forward to the Saturday bout all year. And he won't want to miss his part in it.

Marty Levinson, Tar Heel 125-pounder, is the man who has given Goldstein his closest scrap since he put on gloves for Virginia. In a freshman bout last season these two were so closely matched that an extra round was required before Goldstein gained the verdict.

Both these men are undefeated in college boxing, except for this scrap. Goldstein, in fact, has never been defeated but once, and that was in an invitation amateur tournament in Madison Square Garden when he lost to Jimmy Turko, who was the final winner.

If Goldstein and Levinson don't meet Saturday they are almost certain to do so in the Conference tournament here on February 27 and 28. For they are generally regarded as the two best featherweights in the South.

Virginia's boxers will be in their third engagement in eight days when they oppose North Carolina. Last Saturday night they won from V. M. I. 6 to 1 and night before last they defeated the Florida team, Conference boxing champions, 5 to 2. Two more matches remain on the regular schedule. Duke comes here Friday, February 13. Then Virginia will go to Philadelphia to face Pennsylvania a week later.

The Cavaliers have come through the last two ring engagements with a minimum of injuries. But Coach Johnny LaRowe may decide that it is best to make some changes in his battle order.

REESE SIGNED TO COACH AT STATE

Raleigh, February 5.—Frank Reese, former Notre Dame player and head football coach at Spring Hill, Mobile, Alabama, last year, has accepted terms to become backfield coach at N. C. State College.

Reese resigned at Spring Hill last week. The new State coach will assist John "Clipper" Smith, another former Notre Dame star, who was signed last month as head football coach, taking over the reigns at the beginning of the spring training season which starts the middle of the month.

Reese was alternate quarterback on the team made famous by Struhldreher and his teammates of the famed "Four Horsemen." He was formerly assistant coach at Wabash.

1931 Track Schedule Is Announced At Meeting Cinder Squad By Fetzer

Twelve Meets Carded; Opening Event Is Milrose Games in New York.

7 DUAL ENGAGEMENTS

Southern Conference Meet To Be at Birmingham for Second Year.

At a meeting of the varsity and freshman track squads Wednesday, Coach Bob Fetzer announced the track schedule for 1931. Fetzer stated that the schedule this year is the most ambitious ever undertaken by a Tar Heel track team. In order to face this schedule and yet finish the season successfully the Coach urged the boys to attend practice regularly and get themselves into such a condition that they will be able to stand the strain of competition and come out ahead of the game.

A review of the schedule shows that the University track team will engage in seven dual meets and five meets in which they will compete against more than one opponent.

The first meet on the card is the Milrose Games tomorrow in New York in which the outstanding teams of the country are entered. The Carolina mile relay team took second place at the Games last year.

The Southern Conference indoor meet which is to take place in the Tin Can is the second open meet in which the Tar Heel cindermen are to take part. This was won last year by Washington and Lee, who nosed Carolina out by two points. The Generals are presenting a team this year which is as good as last year's and it will take Carolina's full strength to take the title from them.

The N. C. State, Georgia Tech, V. P. I. and Duke dual meets were won handily by the Tar Heels last year and there is very little danger that any of these teams will cause the team any great trouble this season.

The Penn Relays, the country's track classic will be run off at Franklin Field, Philadelphia this year as usual and Coach Fetzer hopes to send a strong contingent to the games.

The Washington and Lee dual meet has always been a hard one; the Tar Heel speedsters defeated the Generals last year by a fair margin, but due to loss of strength in the distance and hurdle events, the meet this year will be much more hotly contested.

The last dual meet of the season, with Penn State, will be run off at State College, Pennsylvania. Although the Tar Heels won this meet last year, it was by a close margin and the added disadvantage of running on foreign ground may cost them the meet.

The Southern Conference meet, which will be at Birmingham, is the last meet on the schedule for 1931. Carolina won the meet last year.

February 7—Milrose Games, New York.

March 7—Southern Conference Indoor Meet, Chapel Hill.

April 3—N. C. State (dual), place undecided.

April 11—Georgia Tech (dual), Atlanta.

April 18—V. P. N. (dual), Chapel Hill.

April 22—Duke (dual), place undecided.

April 25—Penn Relays, Philadelphia.

April 27—Washington and Lee, Lexington.

May 2—North Carolina Conference, Greensboro.

May 9—Penn State (dual), State College, Pennsylvania.

May 15-16—Southern Conference Meet, Birmingham.

CROWNING EVENT OF WINTER SEASON

The boxing matches tomorrow night between the Tar Heels and the Cavaliers will be the most important athletic event of the winter quarter up to this time, and will rank with the Southern Conference indoor track meet here March second as the drawing card of the term.

It is likely that only a few persons will get up to Charlottesville to the Conference boxing tournament, but fans here will see the next thing to it tomorrow night. Two undefeated teams, both with individual stars skilled in scientific boxing—what more could be wanted for a perfect evening at witnessing the sport which is rapidly forcing its way to the front in college athletics?

Martie Levinson, undefeated this season, will mix with Bobby Goldstein, also undefeated, in the 125-pound class for the first bout of major importance. Goldstein won a decision over Levinson last year when they were on the Virginia and Carolina freshman teams respectively, but Martie has gotten rid of the charley horse which was troubling him a week ago and is ready to seek revenge for last year's loss.

We do not know who will mix with Captain Noah Goodridge but predict that it will be a thriller if Noah keeps up the stellar fighting which he has shown in every fight this year.

Dale Holderness draws the toughest assignment of any Tar Heel boxer. He will meet Captain Rainey, Southern Conference welterweight champion. Rainey has the advantage of three years of experience, and is conceded to be one of the most scientific boxers in the South, but Dale packs a hard punch in both of his hands. The odds are against the Carolina welter, but we believe that he will give the Cavalier captain plenty to think about for the three-round engagement.

Hugh Wilson or Platt Landis, depending on Coach Rowe's choice, will be up against Fenton Gentry, stellar lightheavy; this bout promises to be a close match. Either Hunter Motley or Bryant will hook up with our own John Warren. All three are capable heavyweights, but we are inclined to favor Carolina's unlimited pugilist.

The fights start at seven o'clock, freshmen meeting at that time. We plan to go early and get us a ringside seat for the three hour "crowning event."

CAGERS UNDERTAKE DIFFICULT TRIP

With the basketball team having met several reverses during the past week, it is doubtful as to whether or not they will meet with great success on their northern trip. The old adages that we profit by experience and that we learn by our mistakes may be helpful, however. The same situation exists which was evident at the beginning of the season—if those forwards can find the basket, everything will be o. k. Artie Marpet and Tom Alexander have proven their worth against the best of opposition.

LENGTHY TRAINING GRIND AHEAD FOR U. N. C. GRAPPLERS

Tar Heels Have Made Impressive Record This Season; Next Meet February 21.

CONKLIN IS UNDEFEATED

Percy Idol Broke Into Win Column Last Saturday after Recovering from Cold.

The varsity wrestling team has settled down to a training grind of three weeks in which they will prepare for their last three meets of the season. The Tar Heels will face the Davidson Wildcats as their next opponents February 21.

Carolina has met only one Southern Conference foe this season, winning over V. P. I. last Saturday, but has a win over Princeton also to its credit. The only defeat was a hard fought loss to Navy in the second meet of the season.

Captain Fred Stallings lost his first dual bout in two years here last Saturday against V. P. I., when Graves, Southern Conference champion in the 118 pound class, edged out a time advantage of nineteen seconds in the second extra period of their match.

In winning over Mundie of V. P. I. here last week, Don Conklin added his third victory of the season and kept clear his undefeated standing. Conklin won his first bouts of the season by time decisions, one with over nine minutes advantage, and has given impressive exhibitions in each of his other bouts. Conklin has never been defeated since coming to Carolina. As a freshman last winter, he was the star of the Tar Baby grapplers and won all his matches decisively.

Percy Idol broke into the win column Saturday for the first time this season by winning a decisive victory over Leonard with a time advantage of almost eight minutes. Idol starred as a freshman last year, but was handicapped in his first two meets this season by a cold that prevented him from being at his best form.

Mayne Albright and Harry Tsumas, who both won falls against Princeton only to lose by the same route against Navy, returned to winning form against the Gobblers by chalking up their second victories of the season. Albright won by a fall over Mitchell in the 135 pound class, while Tsumas took a time decision over Captain Bailey of Tech in the 155 pound division.

Fred Ferguson, who has been working in the unlimited class, dropped into the 175 pound division when Marion Cowper was put on the sick list last week, and had little trouble annexing his second win of the season.

Marion Cowper is now back in togs and expects to get down to hard work in a few days. He will be ready to fill his regular position again when the Wildcats invade the Tin Can on the twenty-first.

Two positions are still very much in doubt, and a keen fight is being waged in each case. Charley Lawson continues to threaten Pete Usher's supremacy in the 118 pound class, while the veteran Harry Tsumas has found something to worry about in the shape of a reserve from last year, Jimmy Spell, who has been showing brilliant form during the past ten days. However, Tsumas's win over Captain Bailey last week tends to strengthen his position.

Late Bulletin

FRESHMEN WIN

The Carolina freshman basketball team defeated Woodberry Forest last night 37-19.

The score of the varsity game was not available when the Tar Heel went to press last night.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

Today's Games

3:30 p. m.—1. Phi Alpha vs Sigma Phi Sigma; 2. Phi Gamma Delta vs Phi Sigma Kappa; 3. T. E. P. vs Sigma Epsilon.

4:30 p. m.—1. Lambda Chi Alpha vs S. A. E.; 2. Delta Tau Delta vs St. Anthony Hall; 3. Sigma Zeta vs Kappa Sigma.

Aycock Drops First

Aycock, intramural basketball champions last year, lost their first game in two years to Manly yesterday afternoon 16-7. Ginsberg and Adams, Manly forwards, led the individual scoring with seven and five points respectively. For the losers Efland, star center, was best with five points.

Ranson House Wins 28-20

The Ranson House defeated Mangum yesterday afternoon by a score of 28-20. Sykes, Ranson House forward, led the attack with fourteen points. For the losers W. Blythe was best with eight points.

Steele forfeited to Ruffin yesterday afternoon.

Everett Wins Over Grimes

Everett defeated Grimes yesterday afternoon 29-13. Everett jumped away to a 14-2 lead at the half time and was never in danger. Liebowitz and Baumstone were best for the winners with eight and seven points respectively. For Grimes Watson played a brilliant floor game, contributing seven points to lead his team in individual scoring.

A. T. O.'s Win Fifth 52-19

The A. T. O.'s led by Alan Smith and Pollard, with thirteen points each, easily defeated the Chi Phi's 52-19 yesterday afternoon. McLaughlin also played a good game at center for the A.

TAR HEEL TRACK STARS OFF FOR MILROSE GAMES

Coach Fetzer, Farmer, Drane, Smith, Jensen and Weil Make Trip to New York.

FARMER TO BE IN SPRINTS

Relay Team Will Be Pitted Against Rutgers, Princeton and Lafayette.

Charlie Farmer, Lionel Weil, Bob Drane, J. K. Smith and Clarence Jensen, picked from a squad of 20, left here last night for New York, where they will carry North Carolina's colors in the classic Milrose Games tomorrow.

R. A. Fetzer, director of athletics and head track coach, accompanied the Tar Heel contingent.

Farmer, who has tied both Southern Conference dash records, has been picked by the Milrose officials to run in a special invitation 60-yard dash along with Bowman, Miller, Leland, Fitzpatrick, Singer, and 12 other of the country's leading sprinters.

The Tar Heel relay team, to run a special race against Rutgers, Lafayette and Princeton, will probably be composed of Farmer, Weil, Drane, and Smith.

In case the dash events are too much for the flying Farmer, Jensen, cross-country captain-elect, will take Farmer's place in the relay. Jensen may also be entered in the special 1,000-yard run.

State Pugilists To Meet South Carolina

Raleigh, N. C., February 5.—Announcement was made here today by Athletic Director, R. R. Sermon that the State College boxing team would meet the University of South Carolina team at Columbia, Saturday. The meet calls for varsity bouts only.

The match with the Gamecocks will mark the fourth appearance of State's first boxing team this year.

FROSH MATMEN SHOWING FORM

Coach Peyton Abbott Uncovers New Talent; New Faces Seen in Lineup.

Following their 14-14 tie with the V. P. I. freshman grapplers last Saturday, the Tar Babies went to iron out the rough spots still evident in their work. Peyton Abbott, freshman coach, has worked hard with the squad all season, and they are beginning to show the results of his teachings.

Coach Abbott has uncovered a star in Thad Hussey. brilliant 118 pounder. Hussey has won both of his matches this year by time decisions, and looks like the best prospect of the year. He is an experienced matman, and with sufficient work should develop into varsity material by next winter. Hussey has shown plenty in his bouts this winter, as well as a good knowledge of the finer points of the game.

A new man, Tom Bennett, worked in the 126 pound class against V. P. I. and looked good. However, Bennett has Howard Beebe and Ausley Cope to compete with and may find trouble. Cope handled the class in the first meet, and Beebe, who was out for a time with the flu, has been showing good form and stands a good chance to take the weight away from his two rivals.

Sam Efland, 165 pounder, and Bob Wells, 175 pounder, both received their first taste of actual competition last Saturday and started things off right by turning in decisive victories over their opponents.

Sam Walens, husky 220-pounder, worked the unlimited against V. P. I. and lost a time decision. That was Sam's first mat experience, however, and judging from the exhibition he put up under the circumstances, he should come along at a fast pace when Peyton Abbott begins to show him some of the tricks of the game.

The squad as a whole has shown marked improvement since the meet with Barium Springs when the Tar Babies were swamped by a score of 25-3. Coach Abbott has kept all the boys hard at work and has two or three potential candidates for each position. These boys are putting up hot scraps for each position and no one has his position sewed up, as is shown by the fact that four new faces were seen in the lineup here last week.

Law School Enrolls Ninety-five Students

The law school has registered ninety-five students for the second semester of the school year. This number is nine less than were registered in September.

Eight new men who had not registered in the fall entered the school last week. Four of these are from the University, and one each from Davidson, Wake Forest, Guilford, and William and Mary.

The students who graduated at the end of the past semester are: T. C. Smith, Peyton Abbott, Jr., J. L. Chadbourn, and J. G. Edwards. Four students from the University who took the bar examination upheld the record of the University law school of having all its students who have taken the examination pass. Those who passed the examination are Ed Scheidt, Martin Kellogg, Dan Currie, and Wex Malone.

Liggett Exposes Corruption In Washington Under The Ohio Gang

If half of what Walter W. Liggett, in March Real Detective Tales, says of corrupt conditions in our nation's capital is true, then Washington needs cleaning up and needs it badly.

Mr. Liggett after outlining in detail how the "Ohio Gang," with headquarters in the White House, operated in conjunction with the Homicide Squad, to suppress facts concerning the numerous "mystery murders" and earn the name of "Suicide Squad," says in part:

"It was announced by the papers that Mrs. Harding and two nurses were in the room with the President when he was seized by a stroke and died almost instantly. The early extras all stated that Dr. Sawyer was not in the room.

"Later, newspaper correspondents took pains to announce that Dr. Sawyer was with the President when he died, and that Mrs. Harding was the only other occupant of the room. According to Means, who quotes Mrs. Harding, the President's wife was alone with Mr. Harding when he died.

"Also there has been considerable mystery about the exact nature of the fatal ailment. It will be remembered that five days before the President's death it was announced that he had an attack of ptomaine poisoning.

"Next the bulletins said he had thrown off this attack and was on the road to recovery.

"Then came the stunning news of his death.

"Ordinarily, ptomaine poison does not kill five days after the initial attack, but bichloride of mercury does."

"It is," Mr. Liggett says, "a story of how the 'Ohio Gang' punished a squealer—perhaps two squealers — and how a strange chain of 'suicides' prevented any uncovering of facts. It is a startling story. A story most Americans will not want to believe.

"But it also is a story which should be told, for there can be no improvement in either municipal or national affairs until the truth, and the whole truth, is told."

N. C. Room Contains Personal Libraries

The North Carolina room of the Library contains over ten thousand bound volumes, of which at least a thousand are volumes containing newspapers. There are more than seventeen thousand bound pamphlets and three hundred maps. These were collected by the North Carolina Historical Society, which was organized in Chapel Hill in 1844 for the purpose of collecting one or more copies of every book, pamphlet, and newspaper published in North Carolina since 1749, at which time a printing press was first established.

This collection has grown very rapidly in the last few years. Twenty years ago the entire group covered only about thirty feet of floor space, while now it occupies 4,857 feet of floor space. The office of curator of the North Carolina collection was founded by John Sprunt Hill.

The collection contains several personal libraries. Among these are the Stephen B. Weeks Collection, which has over 10,000, the 1,300 volume collection of Kemp P. Battle, once president of the University; the collection of Colonel A. B. Andrews, containing 700 volumes on railroading; and the William Richardson Davie Memorial Collection of rare books and first editions on North Carolina.

Engagements Are Now Made Along Companionate Lines

According to a story published in the Columbus Dispatch, Ohio State University students have adopted as the latest rage that of "companionate engagements."

The plan, according to the story, is for the boys and girls to become engaged, the boy pinning his frat pin on the co-ed. Then each is free to have dates with everyone else, just so he or she is available to the other for the important events on the campus, and for such other little events as one or the other may desire from time to time.

All of which, the students said when they read the story, sounds like a new name for a very old custom.

Adams Gives Weekly Radio Spanish Lessons

Professor N. B. Adams, of the University Romance Language department lectured over station WPTF yesterday in a weekly radio Spanish lesson. The first lesson was broadcast last Thursday, at which time Professor Adams explained to the audience the principles involved in correct pronunciation of the Spanish language.

Yesterday Professor Adams reviewed his lecture on pronunciation and went on to give some of the elementary grammatical principles.

The course is to continue over a period of twelve weeks, each lesson to be given Thursday afternoon between 5:15 and 5:45. Other members of the Spanish department who are to appear on this program are: Professors R. S. Boggs, S. A. Stoudemire, and Mr. Francis Hayes.

Wickersham Report Stirs New Battles In Wet-Dry Issues

"The revision of the dry law is inevitable," according to Kenneth Mackintosh of Seattle, and a member of the Wickersham commission. He said that prohibition had put the saloon out of business, but that now the American people should look for something to keep the young people away from the speakeasies, and that almost any family can set up a small still in their cellar.

After the report of the Wickersham commission was in, the House and the Senate started battling over it. Anti-prohibitionists defeated a proposal to spend fifty thousand dollars for dry law propaganda, but eleven million dollars will be spent for the enforcement of the Volstead Law. Senator Tydings of Maryland attempted to have President Hoover investigated because some believed the President influenced the Wickersham commission to make a dry report. When some of the wets tried to put a stop to wire-tapping by prohibition agents, they lost. Representative Griffin of New York lost when he tried to prevent the expenditure of two hundred fifty thousand dollars.

Phi Picture

A group picture of the Phi Assembly for the Yackety Yack will be taken today at chapel period on the steps of Murphey hall. All members are urged to be present.

Theatre Entertains

The members of Old West dormitory will be entertained with a free show by the management of the Carolina theatre. The dormitory members are requested to be at the door of the theatre Saturday night at seven o'clock with their president.

Yackety Yack

Unless special arrangements have been made with the business manager of the Yackety Yack, all material for the sections of organizations, fraternities, social orders, dance leaders and partners must be in the hands of the Yackety Yack staff by five-thirty this afternoon.

FIFTY-ONE INFLUENZA CASES ARE REPORTED

Among the cases of illness reported to the County coroner, Dr. S. A. Nathan, influenza is by far the most common. Fifty-one out of sixty-four cases this month were due to this disease.

During the month four cases of measles were reported. Health officials expected this disease to spread since in the neighboring towns so many were sick, but it was not serious here.

In addition to these two diseases, which were all among white families, there were two cases of syphilis among the colored. Six cases of pneumonia and one case of German measles were also known.

Virginia Trackmen To Meet Generals In Indoor Contest

University, Virginia, February 5.—The 1931 edition of Virginia's track team will have its initial test against Washington and Lee in Lexington, Saturday night. The Cavalier first year team will oppose the W. and L. freshmen at the same time.

Archie Hahn, Cavalier coach, has been building up the track and field squad since early in the fall. And he is anxious to see how his charges stand competition given by the Generals.

Frank Wisner, the Mississippi flash, who is captain of the Cavaliers, heads the list of dash men. Coles, Platt and Buery will also be entered in the sprints. With Nick Penniman, veteran quarter miler, ineligible, Brydon will have to do duty in the 440 yard run.

Billy Lauck, who was something of a sensation as a middle distance man in his freshman year, will be entered in the mile and the 880 run. Cary and Clark will be with him in the longer event and Rudd in the shorter. Holden, cross country captain will run the two mile.

Bryan and Coles are entered in the hurdles, Kimball, Motley and Bentley in the shot put, and Moorman and Johnson in the high jump and the pole vault.

"Prohibition has put romance into American drinking," says a Paris business man. Uh-huh, along with a lot of other dangerous ingredients.—Judge.

Depression Causes Increased Lending

Lack of jobs due to general unemployment is affecting the college students in the North as well as here in the South. According to the dean of men in the Rutgers University, $6,000, the largest amount in the history of the office, was loaned at the beginning of the second semester to undergraduates who otherwise would be unable to meet tuition bills. The funds apportioned to the needy is expected to reach $8,000 before the end of the year, the dean said.

The dean attributed the high demand to two causes: First, that, because of the business depression, many students did not receive sufficient funds from home to meet the cost of their education; second, many students accustomed to pay all or part of their expenses found themselves jobless this year when restaurants where they worked closed down and clothing stores and other establishments discarded part-time employees.

TIME OPPORTUNE FOR LAW CAREER SAYS M'CORMICK

University Law School Rates Scholastically with First 26 of Country.

Dean C. T. McCormick, of the University law school, spoke to the sophomores in chapel Friday about the possibilities of the law school. He suggested that an accurate survey of conditions in this field be made before entering it. In regard to the possibilities for the young lawyer in North Carolina McCormick said that this state offered an unusually fertile field for beginning a law career.

The ratio of lawyers to population is that of one to fourteen. Therefore there is ample room for anyone possessing proper training and abilities. "The great fortunes made in the legal profession are made in the larger centers of population," said McCormick, "and not in the rural states. The lawyer in such a state as North Carolina, however, is assured of a moderate income and of high community esteem."

Relative to the University law school McCormick said that its position was excellent as to scholarship standing. It is accredited and approved by the American bar association and by the American association of law schools, and there are only twenty-six schools represented in this association. The honorary society of the law school, the Order of the Coif, offers an honor equivalent to the scholarship fraternity of Phi Beta Kappa. Scholarships and fellowships to graduate institutions are available of course.

UNIQUE COLORING FEATURES DANCES

German Club Plans to Employ Valentine Decorations for Mid-Winter Set.

Valentine colors will feature the decorations for the German Club's annual mid-winter dances which will take place in Bynum gymnasium Friday and Saturday, February 13 and 14. The decorators have planned several designs for the ballroom, and yesterday they stated that a rectangular overhead of red and white streamers would be employed.

According to officials of the club several innovations are being planned with the valentine as the theme. The regular German Club figure will be led by William Dunn assisted by Lynn Wilder and George Bagby. This figure will be presented Saturday night. Bill Bridgers, assisted by Walter Crouch and Steve Lynch will lead the junior figure Friday night.

In addition to these figures there will be a number of special no-break dances.

Will Yarborough, secretary-treasurer of the club, stated that cards may be obtained from him at any time now. He also said that due to some misunderstanding members of the club who were not planning to go to mid-winters but to attend the final dances in June had the impression that they would save part of their yearly dues. No reduction in the amount of yearly dues will be made, he said, whether the members attend two sets or merely finals.

Local Relief Fund On Steady Increase

The American Red Cross announced yesterday that it had shipped 128 carloads of food and fuel which had been donated by individuals in various parts of the country to drought stricken states.

Cash contributions to the national fund totaled $5,952,492. Chapel Hills quota is now within $100 of being filled. The officials in charge of the local contributions to the Red Cross fund stated that all money received in excess of the quota will be used for the benefit of the needy of Orange county. The chairman of the committee in charge of collections, Colonel J. H. Pratt hopes that $200 will be secured for the county.

ORGAN CONCERT BY DEAN SMITH SET FOR TONIGHT

Lenoir - Rhyne Professor To Play Several of His Own Compositions.

Dean F. S. Smith of the music department of Lenoir-Rhyne college at Hickory, N. C., will give an organ recital in the new auditorium of the music building at 8:15 to-night. This recital will be the first of a series of guest programs to be given in the new auditorium.

Dean Smith has held many important positions in the East and has only been in the South about four years. He is a member of the American Guild of Organists and is sub-dean of the Carolina chapter of that organization. He is at present the organist of "The Little Chapel" at Pinehurst.

The program will be as follows:

Preludio, from the Third Sonata by Guilmant. This is from the Sonata in C minor and is the first of three movements by one of the greatest French organist-composers.

Chorale Prelude, "In dulci jubilo" by Bach. This is a delightful little Christmas song.

Aria, from Tenth Concerto, by Handel. This selection is a superb example of restful organ music.

Marche Russe, by Schminke, uses as its main theme the Song of the Volga Boatman against which the National Hymn of Old Russia is played on the pedals to a stirring climax.

Caprice by Matthews is a sprightly little number from the pen of Philadelphia's most prominent organist-composer-conductor-teacher.

Londonderry Air, arranged by Dean Smith, is a traditional Irish melody.

Festival Toccata by Fletcher. This piece brings into play the full resources of the organ.

The French Clock by Bornschein. In this piece

"The porcelain maid and the read cavalier
Have their quaint little romance
Throughout the glad year."

Introspection, Retrospection, Spring Morn, Finale, the last four pieces, were composed by Dean Smith himself.

Grail Dance Tickets

Tickets for the Grail dance to be given tonight are on sale in the Book Exchange and Pritchard-Lloyd's drug store. They may also be procured in the gym this evening at eight-thirty o'clock.

MAENNERCHOR TO PRESENT CONCERT

Glee Club Is Preparing for Recital in Music Building Monday Night.

The University Maennerchor, composed of seventy-five voices under the direction of Dr. Harold S. Dyer, will present the first concert of the year by a University organization in the Music auditorium at 8:15 Monday night. This group is composed of the men on the Glee Club singing a program of music which gives ample opportunity for the mass effects achieved by similar organizations abroad.

The flexibility of the group is perhaps its outstanding characteristic, being able to handle the lighter numbers with the same ease of expression as those numbers from the north of Europe which are massive, and give a large group its greatest opportunities. The program is to be much the same as that which the Glee Club uses at Hollins college tonight. Among these are the Ave Maria sung by the Glee Club as its choice number in the Southern Intercollegiate Glee Club Contest last year when it brought the Southern Championship to Carolina, and Landsighting, by Grieg, a number which has the robustness and vigor of the Norsemen of whom it sings. In contrast to the massiveness of Grieg, Gericke's Dreamworld affords the Maennerchor the opportunity to show a finesse and flexibility in tonal treatment rarely found in a group this large. The program has been in rehearsal since October.

BENEFIT SHOW TO BE GIVEN SUNDAY

Tomorrow the Red Cross through the courtesy of E. C. Smith, manager of the Carolina theatre, will give a benefit show.

The show will be given three times between 1:30 and five o'clock, and 9:15 and 11:00. The feature picture will be Reginald Denny in "Oh What a Man." In addition a reel showing Red Cross work in the West Indies hurricane and Mississippi flood will also be shown.

Admission is by tickets which may be purchased at the theater Sunday. They are fifty cents each.

N. C. Bar Association Meets Here in July

The annual meeting of the North Carolina Bar Association will take place at Chapel Hill on July 23-24-25.

The Association will be the guests of the University and accommodations for 500 persons will be made. There are approximately 2000 lawyers in the state who are members of this group.

At the meeting the lawyers discuss problems relating to the profession and seek to promote improvement of the state's laws.

The program for the meeting here in July has not been entirely completed, but the law department announces that Charles A. Boston, president of the American Bar Association will deliver an address.

Editorial Board

The regular weekly meeting of The Daily Tar Heel editorial board is scheduled for tomorrow afternoon at five-thirty in the office in Alumni building.

GOYA'S RECITAL WINS APPROVAL

Famed Spanish Dancer Opens New Auditorium With Brilliant Program.

Carola Goya's recital of Spanish dances presented last night in the new Memorial hall, was a true representation of the Spanish dance in all its color and fire. Most of the dances were creations of Goya set to the modern music of Spain. The costumes were by Hortense d'Arblay, and the assisting musicians were Beatrice Weller, harpist, and Ramon Gonzalez, pianist.

The opening number on the program was a set of three dances; the first Cadiz, by Albeniz; the next La Vida Breve, by DeFalla; and thirdly Fado, by Alvaro Retana. This last rendition was a flirtatious, authenic Portuguese dance of a fisher girl.

During a short intermission, Beatrice Weller played two numbers on the harp: Danza Number Five, an Andalusian composition by Granados, and Granada, by Albeniz.

A group of four dances were then offered by Senorita Goya: Rapsodia Valencia by Manuel Panella; Taconeo by Manuel Font; Cordoba by Albeniz; and La Manica by Luis Sopena.

After an intermission of some fifteen minutes, the program was resumed with two numbers: Fandanguillo Gitano by Azagra; and Danza Del Fuego by DeFalla. Ramon Gonzalez gave a piano solo, Espana by Maduro.

Vénga! Maestro! by Albeniz, and Viva Lo Cani by Luis Sopena were next presented; followed by a harp solo: Nordiche Ballade by Poenitz and played by Beatrice Weller.

The closing group of dances were two vivacious numbers created by Senorita Goya. Mariposa by Albenez-Godowsky was an imitation of the flight of a butterfly lightly flitting here and there; while La Arogonesa by Granados was a lively representation of the spirited dance of Aragon, a province in the south of Spain.

The recital was brought to the University as a presentation of the University Entertainment series. The direction of the dances was done by the Pond Bureau of New York City.

New Trees Planted On Franklin Street

The town has planted two dozen young trees along the south side of Franklin street between the new Texaco filling station and the Methodist church. When the sidewalk was graded and pavement put down, a month ago, spaces were left for trees and grass to be planted. The trees that have just been placed along the street by the town are of the sugar maple species, which grow quickly and furnish shade as well as a sturdy tree.

St. Mary's Girls Entertain

Wednesday the faculty of St. Mary's school in Raleigh entertained the wives of the members of the General Assembly with a tea. Among the invited guests were President Frank Graham, Dr. and Mrs. Collier Cobb, Miss Mary Cobb, Mrs. Henry, Mrs. Harding, and Miss Evelyn Way, of Chapel Hill. Prominent members of the St. Mary's student body served, and ladies from different parts of the state were in the receiving line.

Daily Tar Heel To List Advertisers

The Daily Tar Heel will publish in each Saturday's issue a list of its advertisers for the preceding week. The initial list appears in this issue.

This list is being published in an effort to aid students who wish to patronize those who advertize in the student paper. The list will be published in a classified order for the convenience of students.

ENGINEERS NEED SPEAKING ABILITY SAYS ROY WRIGHT

President of American Society of Mechanical Engineers Addresses Local Branch of Society.

Roy V. Wright, president of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, addressed students of the school of engineering assembled in room 206 Phillips hall yesterday afternoon at three o'clock on the advantages of engineering societies for students preparing themselves for that field of work.

"The engineer of old," said Mr. Wright, "received his degree from some engineering school, and thought he was all that could be expected of an engineer. He went out into the world to follow a profession quite different from that of today.

"The engineer of the present has a much wider field than he had twenty-five years ago and must have quite a different sort of training. It becomes more and more necessary for young engineers to make public addresses, and be able to express himself freely and without embarrassment. There is more sales talk to be done now, and large companies require accurate reports to be rendered by the engineers concerning their work.

"This training," points out Mr. Wright, "can be gained by membership in such organizations as the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. These societies offer the young student an opportunity to get up and speak. He is able to express ideas of his own. It is often necessary when he leaves school, for him to speak on something closely connected with his work. When the student has had training in this body or organization, he finds it much easier to talk freely and easily before a group."

Another advantage of the engineering societies pointed out by Wright is the personal contacts made by the students. They are afforded the opportunity through their organizations to have noted men in their field of training speak to them. They can meet many such men, and by such relations gain a broader knowledge of the profession.

"When the student makes personal contacts with men of importance by membership to the organizations, he forms ideas and opinions of his own. He hears noted men give their experiences, and can profit by their mistakes as well as by their successful enterprises."

The purpose of the A. S. M. E. is to acquaint the student of engineering with the problems facing the engineer, and give him the proper prospective on the work that is being done at present in the various fields of engineering.

BAITY CHOSEN ACTING DEAN IN BRAUNE'S PLACE

President Graham Announces Appointment Following Committee Recommendation.

President Frank Graham yesterday, upon the recommendation of the executive committee of the engineering school, composed of the heads of the departments, has appointed Professor Herman G. Baity to acting dean, with the stipulation by Dr. Baity that the appointment is not to be permanent and that the search for a man to take Dean Braune's place shall be continued.

Professor Baity is head of the department of civil engineering. The executive committee has had direction of the school since the death of Dean Braune. They found, however, from experience that a single head was needed at this time and unanimously recommended the appointment of Professor Baity. Those who joined in this recommendation were: Dr. A. W. Hobbs, professor of applied mathematics and dean of the college of liberal arts; Dr. J. M. Bell, representing chemical engineering and dean of the school of applied science; Professor E. G. Hoefer, head of the department of mechanical applied engineering; and Professor J. E. Lear, acting head of the department of electrical engineering.

PROGRAM PLANNED FOR BLUE RIDGE

Dean Cloyd of State College Is Made Chairman of Committee.

The Continuation Committee, which has charge of vocational guidance courses at the Blue Ridge Conference every summer, met Thursday morning in President Graham's office to formulate plans for this summer's conference. Dean F. F. Bradshaw, H. F. Comer, R. B. House, Henry Johnston, Dean Cloyd of State College, Dr. Robert Wilson of Duke, and Claude Nelson, field secretary of the southeastern division of the Y. M. C. A. were present.

It was decided that Dean Cloyd will take Dean Bradshaw's place as chairman this summer, since Dean Bradshaw will be unable to attend. Ex-president Chase was the original chairman of the committee and served in that capacity for two years and Dean Bradshaw succeeded him.

The committee checked over the plans thoroughly and decided to leave them as they have been in the past. They will integrate the vocational department in with the other work conducted by the conference. They have set as their goal the securing of twenty-five deans and faculty men of southern colleges to attend the conference.

V. E. S. Alumni Meet

Local alumni of Virginia Episcopal School met Thursday night in the parish house of the Episcopal Church to hear John M. Ladd, a professor of history at V. E. S. on the topic of "The Condition of the School."

The Community Chorus will not practice Monday night because of a conflict with the Glee Club.

We Have An Auditorium . . .

Many students and townspeople viewed for the first time the interior of the University's new auditorium last night. After having admired its exterior for many months we were somewhat shocked upon entering the structure to discover that its simple beauty had been spoiled by the inclusion of Memorial Hall's old seats. Although the Building Department should be complimented for a splendid piece of work in rehabilitating the old seats, we still feel that so long as the old seats remain we will have a constant reminder of the present financial depression.

To ask the University to furnish new seats at this time would be unfair. At present the University is engaged in protecting itself against a possible crippling cut in its appropriations. The issue before it for the next thirty days is one of far reaching importance and the actions of the legislature in respect to the University's appropriations will affect us for years to come.

But there is a place for the students in this matter of seats. With the new auditorium we are furnished with a structure which will play an important part in our college lives. We are the ones who will benefit to the greatest extent from it and it is only fair that we should attempt to furnish the building in a proper manner. The auditorium raises a question which the students must answer themselves.

The Diplomatic Thing

That dashing gentleman of the marines, Major General Smedley D. Butler, who has a knack for doing unusual things and for getting into controversies of all sorts, and whose antics make it inevitable that the limelight be almost continually thrown upon him, is again in the public eye—this time as a critic of Mussolini. But it seems that Butler's remarks about the new Napoleon are going to be given more serious consideration than his previous ventures (purifying Philadelphia, et cetera) were accorded; for now, after the government's reprimand of Butler, which seems to have satisfied Mussolini's pride, Secretary of Navy Adams is going to put on a big show in Washington in the form of a court-martial, with Butler as the center of attraction, ostensibly to let the world know that the United States of America does not intend to offend, in any way, either Italy or Il Duce. Furthermore, Secretary Adams states, speaking of the proceedings against Butler, that "unless we change our minds, they might be open." So everybody will probably be allowed to witness the spectacle.

Whether or not the anecdote picturizing Mussolini as a hit-and-run driver, said to have been supplied Butler by Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., can be substantiated matters little. We are sure that the Italian government would much rather have the matter end where it is than have it culminate in another scene. Major General Butler is himself a one-ring circus, and the spectacle which Adams is going to turn the affair into will indubitably cause the thing to take on a more ludicrous aspect than it has had heretofore. If the results of this court-martial business will not make Mussolini boil, we are very much mistaken about the elements in that big-chested politician's make-up. The diplomatic thing for the American government to do is to tell the secretary of state that the affair is ended.—B. M.

American Divorce Laws

Three bills which would tend to make the divorce laws of North Carolina more lenient have been introduced into the State House of Representatives. One bill would allow a divorce after three years separation instead of the present five if there were no children; another would allow divorce after three years separation regardless of children, and a third would allow divorce after the protracted separation without making either party prove that he is the "injured" party, as is now necessary. All of these bills are forward steps; they should be passed, and the men who introduced them should be commended.

However, these bills do not go far enough. Our American system of divorce laws is an absurd jumble of conflict, contradiction, and injustice. Each state has its own laws, and they vary widely. In South Carolina one can get married on any pretext, with no trouble at all, but divorce is impossible. The illogical laws of most states will allow divorce when one party desires divorce and the other opposes it, but will not allow it when both parties desire it. Of course these laws are evaded; sordid, compromising, "cooked-up" evidence is supplied and the divorce is allowed. The parties have to go through a dirty, harrowing experience to gain their freedom.

The American divorce system is a colossal farce. A nation of supposedly intelligent people should not tolerate such an absurdity.—H. B.

With Contemporaries

The Perfect Month

February, 1931, advocates for a 13 month calendar say, is "the perfect month."

It is a sample of what every month would be under the proposed scheme of 28 day periods, 13 in number, with every week beginning on Sunday and ending on Saturday in uniform sequence. A February with its four weeks in this sequence will not come again until 1942 with the present calendar.

The proposed 13 month calendar would make every month that way by shortening the other months to exactly four weeks each, combining the surplus days into a new month of four weeks and an extra 24 hour period to be known as "Year day". A "Leap day" would be added for Leap years.

Arguments pro and con cannot be condensed into one editorial. In brief, however, some of them are:

PRO: Months at present have 28, 29, 30, and 31 days, hence are not comparable for statistics, business accounting, and the like. Months do not contain a whole number of weeks, causing split week payrolls. The days of the week shift each year to different dates, so that some months have made days of differing economic value than others, as five Sundays or Saturdays. Easter would be fixed and other occasions like Christmas and New Year's joined to week end holidays.

CON: An altered calendar would work hardship in delving into matters involving use of the old calendar, with its unbroken week cycle now disrupted by the arbitrary, unassigned "Year day" and "Leap day." Certain religious faiths would find their sabbath sacrificed to business convenience with a Sunday, Saturday, or Friday shifted each year by insertion of the "Year day." Astronomic calculations would be upset by interrupting the sequence of weeks which has been followed since the first historic calendars.

So say proponents of both sides, who doubtless will be represented at an international conference on calendar reform at Geneva, Switzerland, in October this year, under the auspices of the League of Nations. And in the meantime numerous business firms will use 13 month calendars for their calculations. —Daily Iowan.

OPEN FORUM

And This Goes for More Than a Few

Editor, Daily Tar Heel:
Dear Sir:

Yesterday I asked a class of 23 upperclassmen, whose intelligence and alertness are above the average, how many knew the majority of the facts embodied in President Graham's recent speech to the legislative committee. Five had read most of his speech. To be specific, I asked how many knew substantially how the library fared under the proposed cut, as reported by President Graham. Only three were aware of the situation. When you consider that the recommended appropriation does not even cover the bill for periodicals, leaving nothing for new books, and that the librarian does not now see how the library could remain open fourteen hours a day as at present, then this ignorance becomes astonishing.

"East Lynne" by Mrs. Henry Wood. Produced by the Carolina Playmakers, February 5, 6, and 7. Reviewed by Joe P. Fox.

"The planets are bells on his motley.
He fleers at the stars in their state.
He banters the suns burning hotly
The Jester whose nickname is Fate.
The valorous puppets that chatter
Superbly of Little and Great,
A flip of his finger would shatter
The dreams of these "Masters of Fate."

—Arthur Guiterman.

By mistake the laughing muse stalked into the Playmakers Theatre Thursday night with a humdinger of a tragedy entitled "East Lynne," a good old melodrama of the gay nineties. A bit gloomy and fearful, a whit morbid and tearful, with humor and zest, heart interest, you know. Original truly and yet not unduly bizarre or unruly but quite "comme il faut." A play simply ripping quite virile and gripping, not mushy or gushy—just one of our best.

To quote the program, recently a whole audience in a theatre thirty miles from Boston wept sincerely and copiously over the tragic fate of Lady Isabel. Whether people near Boston are overflowing with the tenderer emotions or the sonorous tones of the bell from the South building chimed out of turn at the most sentimental scenes of the play, I do not know, but Lady Isabel might just as well have been a combination of Bottom, Touchstone and Fisher's Trained Seals as to try and make Thursday night's audience lacrimonious. This, however, was not due to the fault of Bess Jones Winburn, who interpreted her part with sympathy, understanding and finesse, which is a credit to her fine acting ability.

The fault lay not in the acting but in the audience, who came to see a melodrama burlesqued and laugh, (because that is being done now) but who actually, whether they realized it or not, witnessed a near classic done in ultra-modern dress with non - realistic expressionistic scenery. The audience thought that the play was funny and director Selden thought it was funny that they thought so—and thus both sides were amused and entertained.

Director Selden is to be complimented first for his interpretation of the acting and secondly for the originality of the scenery and lighting. Departing from the usual stock types in melodrama, Mr. Selden gave his puppets characterization. His hero, Whitner Bissell, as Archibald Carlyle, turned in the best performance of the evening, due without doubt to exceptional talent and previous acting experience. Eclipsing his co-workers by smooth, finished acting, coupled with a well modulated voice, and excellent enunciation, he came nearest of any to a flawless piece of work. Everett Jess as Sir Francis Levison, the villian, is to be commended for his restraint in the characterization of a difficult role. Without resorting to the old stage tricks commonly attributed to the villain of a "drammer," he put across his part with exceptional originality.

Jo Norwood as Barbara Hare was cast true to type. Beautiful and charming, she acquitted herself by an intelligent and sincere interpretation. Ernest Deans as Richard Hare, the fugitive brother, was thoroughly convincing. Mr. Dean's interpretation of Richard reminded one of the delicate dramatization of the role of Raleigh in "Journey's End." Horace Ward, playing Lord Mt. Severn, retained the dignity of that part, presenting a genuine characterization of an elderly gentleman. Hazel Bowers, in the part of Joyce, lady's maid to Isabel, was admirable in a small but difficult role.

Alice Walker, as Miss Carlyle, the hero's spinster sister, furnished a splendid comic relief in the play, with the exception of one scene in which I think she was supposed to have a cold. Talking in the "sprig-is-here" type of voice, sneezing and coughing enough to give every member of the audience double pneumonia, she climaxed her catarrhal demonstration by attempting to force a laugh with an unwarranted entrance (just for the fun of it) wearing a red woolen petticoat wrapped around her head. At this point only was the audience nearest to weeping. However, this fault should be attributed to the directing.

Other actors playing minor roles were Elmer Oettinger as Justice Hare, a character bit of an old man, adequately done, yet with too exaggerated a hump in the back and not enough in the voice. Little Willie, the invalid son of Isabel, played by Dudley DeWitt Carroll, Junior, gave a sensitive interpretation of his role, especially in the death-bed scene. Adelaide Reed as Wilson, a maid, did well with the little she had. John Zimmerman, playing secretary to Archibald, also got what comedy there was in his bit. And last, but not least, Pen Harrison as the officer was just dandy.

Which, if you will run your finger roughly, but not too roughly, over the above criticism, means that the acting in general was above par, and that the bows should be taken in front of the curtain by Mr. Samuel Selden and his East Lynne marionettes.

Our second compliment to the director for his technique, which, for this review, will include lighting, costume and scenery, all of which were executed in the ultra-modernistic manner. Each actor was typically 1931 in his or her raiment. In each scene were different lighting effects, suggesting the various changes in mood and thought. Especially effective was the lighting in the grove scene, in which an eerie atmosphere was admirably produced. In the presentation of scenery realism was utterly abandoned, and in its stead was employed purely expressionistic scenery successfully attempting to make clear through abstracted visual environment some new spiritual significance in East Lynne. By representing the action as taking place in the cage of Fate, symbolized by four great bars which stood just behind the area of acting, plus two large masks, suggesting the [illegible] forces of Evil and Virtue in Isabel's nature which produced the conflict in her soul. Mr. Selden accomplished his purpose. The scenery, as well as the content of the play, was thoroughly didactic and brought out his point in the program that a play is often known by the scenery with which it surrounds itself.

Thus did Fate, the Jester, peek out from behind the Playmakers curtain and gaze quizzically on the atomies of the first nighters. He saw there the largest audience ever to pack the Playmakers Theatre, all seats filled and fifty persons standing. As he peered the bells on his motley tingled, for there was Paul Green, Lynn Riggs, and then he looked into the pit and saw Lamar Stringfield whom he knew would play "Cripple Creek." He grinned, pulled in his head, turned on the cast, and with a sly wink, said: "Let's go, boys and girls, there's work to be done." And they did it as "His form in the nebulae shrouding

He chuckled, unnoted of all."

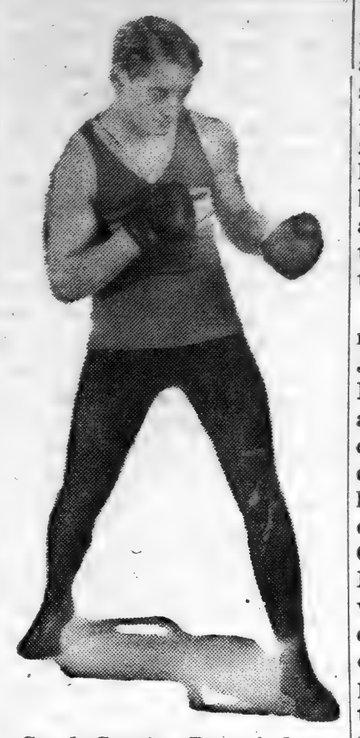
When the Tar Heel boxers step into the ring tonight to meet the Virginia boxers, it will be the last home meet of the 1931 season. Only two more meets remain on the schedule before the squad leaves for Charlottesville, March 1, for the Southern Conference tournament. These matches are with Duke, February 13, and an intersectional meet with Penn. State, February 21.

As a preliminary to the varsity bouts, the Tar Babies meet the Virginia freshmen at seven o'clock. The following men will represent the Carolina freshmen: Cliff Glover, bantam; Furches Raymer, feather; Bruce Langdon, lightweight; "Red" Allsbrook or John Nicholson, welter; Vernon Guthrie or Jim Wadsworth, middle; Peyton Brown, lightheavy; and Lacey Pace, heavy.

The freshmen have been undefeated so far, but they will have plenty of trouble before they add Virginia to their list.



Five of the Tar Babies have yet to taste defeat. These men are Peyton Brown, who is credited with a pair of technical knock-outs in his two fights. Lacey Pace has taken one fight by a decision, and last Saturday scored a clean knock-out over his V. P. I. opponent. Furches Raymer, feather, has also scored two technical knock-outs, while Vernon Guthrie, middle, and Jim Nicholson, who have only fought in one fight, won by a decision and technical knock-out respectively. Cliff Glover, bantam, and Bruce Langdon, lightweight, have each lost two bouts via the decision route, while Jim Wadsworth, middle, has lost one bout, also by a verdict.

The Cavaliers are coming to Chapel Hill fresh from a 5-2 victory over Florida, last year's champions; the winners of tonight's bouts will undoubtedly reign the favorite to cop the turkey in the Southern tournament. The Cavaliers have one of the strongest aggregations in the Southland, including one Southern champion, Captain Bob Rainey, welterweight, who defeated Archie Allen, now frosh coach, in the finals last year.

In defeating Florida last week, the Cavaliers won four bouts by knock-outs. Of this number, Virginia will present three men, Goldstein, feather,

FENCING WILL BE INAUGURATED AT VIRGINIA TONIGHT

Community Club Discusses American Music Writers

University, Virginia, February 6.—Fencing, a new sport at Virginia, will make its formal bow to the public Saturday night when three representatives of the Virginia Fencing Club will oppose William and Mary in Williamsburg.

This is an unofficial sport that has not yet been adopted by the Athletic Association. The physical training department is looking after the new club unofficially, and has supplied the fencers with a room of their own in the Memorial Gymnasium where they can practice thrusts and parries.

Captain Earl Abrams, Joseph Wadsworth and J. D. Reeder compose the team that will go to Williamsburg.

Virginia tried fencing unofficially back in 1923, but this was in the days of the smaller Fayerweather Gymnasium. There was not room for practice and interest in the foils died out. The prospect for success is much brighter today. More than 50 men are in the group that is holding regular practice.

WARREN AND GENTRY, OLD FOES, TO BOX AGAIN

John Warren, last of the famous fighting Warrens, who is boxing the heavyweight for Carolina this year, may tangle with Gentry, his old Virginia opponent, when the undefeated teams clash here tonight. If he does, there's certain to be a great bout, for the powerful Warren will be out to avenge a close decision Gentry won from him last year.

DOPING 'EM OUT

By BOB BETTS

With the return of blue birds and marbles, one is reminded of the nearness of Spring and baseball. Already some of the early birds have taken their gloves, mitts, and bats out of the closets and moth balls. Soon the varsity candidates will be out on Emerson field every afternoon getting in shape for the short lived but colorful college baseball season. All this leads up to a big question: what kind of team will Carolina have this time?

North Carolina lost some good men when they lost Captain Jimmie Maus, "Nap" Lufty, Frank Fleming, Auburn Wright, and Phil Jackson. It will be recalled that Lufty was captain during his junior year, a signal honor on any team, and was one of the heaviest hitters that Carolina had last year. Jimmie Maus, "Nap's" fellowtownsman, was a rare gem, for he could catch, play first, or patrol the outfield. No matter where he played it never affected his batting eye. Fleming and Wright were the cream of last year's hurlers. In addition to these men, Marshall Rand, keystone guardian, and Phil Jackson will not be back. In spite of these losses Coach Ashemore has some good material on which to build a team.

At the initial sack two sophs will fight it out for the post. Glen "Cordwood" Dixon and "Sugar" Allen played good ball on the Freshman squad. Dixon played in the outfield and compiled a good batting average. Allen played first but was a rather light batter. There is a possibility that Dunlap, out for the first time, may get the call.

"Smoky" Ferebee, another Sophomore, looks like a sure bet for the second base assignment. Ferebee is a fast, smooth fielder and a timely swatter. He would make a good man to play around the keystone bag with the veteran Whitehead.

The short stop position will be taken care of by Captain Burgess Whitehead. "Whitey" is the best short stop in the state, a flashy fielder, and a driving hitter. The whole infield will be built around him.

McCaskill and Leonard, two second year men, will fight it out for the hot corner position. McCaskill, one of the Freshmen's hardest maulers last year, seems to have the edge on account of his good batting eye. Leonard played the position quite a bit last spring. He is a fast man and gets them over to first in a hurry.

There are a large number of candidates out for the outfield. Henry House, outfield regular for the last two years, is the leading letter man back this year. House packs a terrific punch in his war club and should pound the ball far and wide this year. Tom Blythe, John Crouch, Obie Davis, "Mac." McKinney, and Paxton are the others held over from last year's team. John Daniels and Lewis Whitehead are promising recruits that have come up from the Freshman squad of last year. Dunlap will give somebody a fight for an outfield post, because this kid can sure sock the old apple.

Behind the plate the Tar Heels are well fortified with "Biggy" Potter, letterman, and Peacock, another one of the Sophomores Coach Ashemore is counting on to come through. Potter is a heady catcher, a good hitter, and has a deadly throwing arm. Peacock was one of the Freshman's biggest stars last year. He is a hard swatter and a very good catcher. There is a possibility that one of them will be shifted to the outfield on account of their batting ability.

On the mound Carolina looks weak at the present. Good hurlers have been scarce here since "Lefty" Ball and "Smoky

VETERAN TEAM TO SEE ACTION IN THIRD GAME

"Orange" Winter Grid Team Out to Break "Blue's" Winning Streak.

Carolina's third winter practice football game is carded for Kenan Stadium this afternoon at three o'clock.

Head Coach Chuck Collins hadn't announced his selection of teams last night, but it is likely that the veterans will see the most action, inasmuch as the rookies carried the brunt of Wednesday's game.

Rip Slusser and Stuart Chandler, the only two letter halfbacks who will be available next fall, will probably see service on opposite sides.

One team will probably have the nearest to a veteran line that Coach Collins can muster—the one used last Saturday, with Walker and Brown, ends; Hodges and Daniels, tackles; Blackwood and Fysal, guards; and Gilbreath, center.

The "Blues" have won both games to date, although the personnel of the two teams has been changed each game. The "Oranges," whoever they be, will be out to break the streak in this third game.

TAR HEEL AND VIRGINIAN TO HAVE GRUDGE BOUT

Levinson of Carolina and Goldstein of Virginia, two sophomore 125-pounders who box like professionals, are slated for one of the most interesting bouts in the meet here tonight between the undefeated Carolina and Virginia teams. Goldstein won a close decision from Levinson as a freshman, after Levinson had floored him in the first round, and now it will be a grudge bout between two undefeated aces.

VIRGINIA CHAMP FACES STAR TAR HEEL TONIGHT

Captain Bob Rainey, who will box the 145-pound class for Virginia against Carolina here tonight, is a conference champion, but he is slated to get the fight of his life from Dail Holderness. The newcoming red-head of the Carolina boxers who combines a walloping punch with a fiery, fighting spirit, has won both his bouts to date, having knocked out V. M. I.'s 145-pounder and having won a decision over V. P. I.'s captain.

Late Bulletin

Lexington, Va., Feb 6.—Virginia Military Institute's Flying Cadet basketeers were no match for the Tar Heels as the latter downed the Virginians here tonight by the lop sided score of 42 to 13. Carolina exhibited a superior brand of basketball throughout the contest, giving the Cadets quint little opportunity to get in for close shots.

The Carolinians, triumphant so far in their northern invasion with victories over V. M. I. and V. P. I., face Virginia at Charlottesville tomorrow night.

ZETA PSI'S LOSE FENCING EXHIBIT TO BETA SQUAD

Last Winter's Campus Champions Win Handily By 7-2 Score.

Fencing, the newest of intramural sports, made its first official appearance of the year in the Tin Can Thursday afternoon when Beta Theta Pi, fraternity champions last winter, defeated Zeta Psi 7-2 in an exhibition match.

The regular intramural fencing schedule will begin next week and teams wishing to compete may do so by filing their applications at the Tin Can next Monday. The match Thursday will have no bearing on the final standing of teams, and was merely an exhibition between the two outstanding teams of last year for the benefit of those interested in going out for the sport this winter. Regular instructions will be given at the Tin Can next week for any who are interested.

Lynch led the Beta attack Thursday with three wins, showing lots of speed and agression. The work of Cooper, Zeta Psi and Waugh, Beta, was also outstanding. Both showed good form with Cooper winning an interesting match from Waugh to account for half the Zeta Psi points.

Box score:

Beta Theta Pi	W.	L.
Lynch	3	0
Waugh	2	1
Fenker	2	1
Zeta Psi	W.	L.
Cooper	1	2
Pratt	1	2
Valk	0	3

VIRGINIA TO USE GRID BOXERS AT CAROLINA

Virginia will be able to call on three rugged football players for its heavyweight boxers in the Carolina meet here tonight—Gentry, Bryant and Motley, grid captain last year. Carolina will probably match against these powerful scrappers Hugh Wilson, sophomore who has won knockouts in his last two scraps, and John Warren, hard-hitting brother to the famous "K. O." Warren.

Hearing that a successor is about to be picked for a missing New York judge, the public is anxious to know how the bids stand.—Lincoln State-Journal.

Ohio Schools Offer Many Scholarships

Two universities in the state of Ohio, the University of Cincinnati and Ohio State University, offer over a hundred scholarships and fellowships to students wishing to do graduate work.

All fellowships at the University of Cincinnati carry exemption from tuition and laboratory fees, and no fellow is allowed to accept remunerative employment or give instruction or assistance in any department except by permission of the faculty.

The Daughters of the American Revolution have a fellowship in American history there which pays $100 a year. Sixteen fellowships paying from $500 to $750 a year are open to graduate students in all departments with preference given to those taking work leading to the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Six others paying the same stipend are for students doing research in chemistry, mathematics, and physics. A special fellowship in biochemistry for investigation of the nature of the natural cure of disease, pays $1500 a year. Three other fellowships in biochemistry pay from $500 to $750, and a few in chemistry and lithographic research.

Several fellowships in surgery established for the purpose of promoting the study of surgery and surgical anatomy give annual stipends ranging from $600 to $1500. Three fellowships in heliotherapy pay $700 each, and one in research medicine pays $500. There are sixteen fellowships in pediatric research, most of these to be in connection with the Children's Hospital.

In the graduate school of arts and sciences, there are twelve graduate scholarships which pay free tuition and laboratory fees.

Ohio State University offers a number of scholarships which are open to students with a liberal arts degree and which carry a stipend of $300 in addition to exemption from fees. A number of fellowships are open to students who have an M. A. degree and these pay $500 and exemption from fees.

A $750 fellowship in engineering is open to graduates in mechanical, civil and electrical engineering, the holder being expected to give his entire time to work. Another of the same remuneration was established to encourage graduate research on solid fuels or products derived from solid fuels which have a practical application in the industrial world. The work should lead to the degree of Master of Science or Doctor of philosophy.

A number of assistantships demand a limited amount of work and pay $500 in nine monthly installments. These are available in agricultural chemistry, animal husbandry, botany, chemistry, dairying, economics, English, geology, mathematics, principles and practices of education, physics, psychology, school administration, sociology, zoology, and entomology.

Other special fellwships are given in ceramic engineering, psychology, soils, horticulture, technology, and entomology.

Woman Labor Head Will Lecture at N. C. College

Frances Perkins, industrial commissioner and head of the department of labor of New York, said to be one of the best equipped and most experienced woman lecturers in this country, is the next speaker of the lecture course directed by North Carolina college. Miss Perkins will speak at Aycock auditorium February 19 and 20.

The lecturer's general topic is the government's part in the solution of modern problems of labor. She will lecture twice to the public and in addition will speak several times before smaller selected groups.

Lyon Is Conducting Sunday School Class

W. W. Lyon, of the psychology department, is now conducting a series of talks at the Methodist Church for students. He has had a good deal of experience with such leading thinkers of the country as Dr. Reinhold Neibhur, to whom he was an assistant, and Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick.

The meetings convene at ten o'clock each Sunday morning in the west parlor of the Church and a list of the topics for the remaining Sundays of the quarter follows: February 8th—"The Meaning of Anxiety and the Sense of Guilt;" February 15th—"Capitalizing the Inferiority Complex;" February 22nd—"Self-Analysis, Good and Bad;" March 1st—"A Common Habit That Insures Failure and Its Transformation;" March 8th—"What's Coming in Religion?"

Births Outnumber Deaths in Village

The births in Chapel Hill for the year 1930 numbered thirty-eight, while there were twenty-nine deaths. Among the whites ten died, and there were ten births. The negroes had nineteen deaths and twenty-eight births.

Only one death out of the twenty-nine was caused by auto accident. This was a white man. One negro was murdered by strangulation; the remainder resulted from diseases.

The causes of the white deaths were: Hypertension, acute peritonitis, myocarditis, cerebral hemmorrhage, heat prostration, coronary thrombris, angina pectoris, scull fracture, apoplexy, and double pneumonia. There was one case of each.

Three negroes died of tuberculosis, one of intestinal obstruction, one of myocarditis, two of nephritis, one of pneumonia, one of diabetes, one of meningitis one of pyelitis, and two of cerebral hemmorrhage. There were three premature births and one stillborn.

Of the white births four were boys and six girls. Sixteen of the negro babies were male and twelve were female.

FILM MOVING PICTURES ON OHIO STATE CAMPUS

Columbus, Ohio.—The moving picture being sponsored by the Student Senate depicting life at Ohio State University, which has created much interest and curiosity on the campus, is soon to be released.

Filmed by the Photographic Service Company, the picture contains familiar scenes of the campus, among which are shots of football games, initiations, Sphinx rituals, the cane rush, class-room sessions, Hennick's at the noon hour, and many other bits of student activity.

When released the picture will be shown in high schools throughout the state. At present letters are being sent to the various schools to ascertain when they wish a showing.

On top of this comes the announcement of a project of the department of education in producing a talking picture. The film has just been completed at the Ohio State University Elementary School and will enable prospective teachers to observe the elementary school in operation and to hear a discussion of the underlying theories.

The film is the outcome of many requests from groups interested in elementary school education.

Dean Howell Improving

Dr. Edward Vernon Howell, dean of the school of pharmacy since 1897, was reported yesterday to be resting much better and his condition has greatly improved. Dr. Howell was taken sick at his home January 26. He is fifty seven years of age.

N. C. SECRETARIES MAY MEET HERE

Bailey T. Groome, prominent in the newspaper world of North Carolina and president of the North Carolina commercial secretaries association, conferred with Charles M. Ketcham of the Greensboro chamber of commerce, last week about the annual meeting of the state organization.

Plans for the meeting of the secretaries are still somewhat unsettled, but the session will be called to meet at some time and place to be determined later.

Several proposals are before the group, but the main one is whether to hold the meeting in Chapel Hill in the summer, provided the University will have a short secretarial course in connection with the summer school. Officials of the University are said to have such an understanding and Mr. Groome is to take the matter under advisement and confer with them later.

Another plan for the group is to meet jointly with the southern secretaries association, which will hold its meeting at Roanoke in May. Mr. Groome spent some time in conferring with Mr. Ketcham about the affairs and general work of the various chambers of commerce throughout the state.

Joe" Westmoreland left Carolina two years ago. The old men who will be back are Paul Edwards, George Hinton, Tommy Longest, and "Minx" Park, the Jersey Skeeter. Longest and Edwards both looked good at times last season, and they should improve a lot this year. Hinton and Parks showed signs of developing into winning slabmen last Spring; they should find themselves this year. If they do, then another one of Ashemore's problems will be solved. McNeil, Griffith, Stuart Chandler, Scarboro, and "Little Pot" Adkins are a promising group of sophomores. Griffith and McNeil starred for the frosh last year. Both boys have plenty of stuff and should bolster up the hurling department.

It all depends on how the Sophomores come through and how the moundsmen will perform. If the sophs deliver the goods and the pitching staff improves, then Carolina will have a good team. But if they don't—well, that's another thing!

UNIVERSITY OF IOWA OFFICIALS FACE CHARGE

Investigation of charges of maladministration of the University of Iowa by a joint legislative committee was requested last week by Governor Dan Turner in a message to the general assembly.

The governor said the charges were grave, "alleging irregularities too serious to be tolerated if true."

His request followed a series of articles in the Cedar Rapids Gazette-Republican, charging irregularities in the administration of the university. While Governor Turner refused to comment further, it was indicated that the charges dealt to some extent with the method of handling finances.

Martin Levinson, Captain Noah Goodridge, Dail Holderness, Obie Davis and John Warren, Tar Heel boxers, are undefeated for the season. Levinson beat V. M. I.'s captain, and Holderness did the same thing to V. P. I's captain last week-end.

Arthur Arlett, editor in chief of the Daily Californian, has been dismissed for charging that the University of California's football players are professional.

Students Collect Interesting Data

The University of Minnesota school of journalism has evolved a novel system of collecting data upon which to write class themes. The students of the school of journalism are to attend a dance where each one will be given a slip of paper upon which will be written a number and a question.

When the feature dance is held, each man will find the co-ed holding the slip of paper with the same number and question as his own. He will ask her the question and she will be expected to answer.

Some of the questions will be:

"Do you object if a boy does not smoke when he is with you?"

"What do you consider necking privileges?"

"Do you insist on petting on the first night you date a new man?"

When the students return to work after the dance, they will compare notes and prepare a class thesis on "manners and methods of campus love."

Why Civilization

By F. A. Merrick

A human being who is absolutely dependent upon his own muscles can just barely keep himself alive under favorable circumstances; and to raise himself above the animals he must in some way supplement his own feeble strength. Civilization came into existence because certain strong groups of people used the muscles of men and women of weaker groups for this purpose; if there were no machines today there would be no art, literature, science, leisure, or comfort for anyone without slavery.

BOXERS TO FACE VIRGINIA TONIGHT

Captain Rainey, welter, and Smith. Against this formidable trio will be Martin Levinson, Captain Noah Goodridge, and Dail Holderness. All three are unbeaten this year. Levinson floored Goldstein as a freshman last year but lost a close decision and will be out for revenge. Goodridge has had every foe at his mercy this year, and is one of the finest boxers in the south. Holderness is a fiery, red-head, who is used to fighting captains, he having beaten V. P. I.'s leader last week.

Obie Davis, undefeated for the season, will be Carolina's choice in the 160-pound class, and will oppose Reiss. The heavy classes promise more heavy barrages. Virginia can call on either Gentry, Bryant, or Motley, three rugged football players, all of whom can hit. Carolina can offer Hugh Wilson, sophomore 175-pounder, who has won his last two fights by knockouts, and John Warren, last of the famous line of punching Warrens, who will be out to avenge a close decision lost to Gentry last year.

Carolina may have to forfeit in the 115-pound class, since George Biggs has a broken nose.

German Students

The "Friends of German" will have their regular monthly meeting tomorrow afternoon from four to six o'clock at the home of Dr. and Mrs. E. C. Metzenthin, 402 Hillsboro street.

Anyone interested in German conversation, songs and games is invited. Dr. Metzenthin will discuss his trip of last vacation through central Europe.

Guilford Observes 58th Anniversary

Guilford College last week observed founder's day for that institution, which was first organized in 1873 under the name of New Garden boarding school.

In the year 1888 the boarding school was made into a college and since that time with the addition of new buildings, equipment, standards and educational facilities it has made constant progress. Today Guilford College is a member of the Southern Association.

JONES SAYS CUT IN SALARY WILL RUIN UNIVERSITY

Ventures That Professors Will Be Lured Elsewhere By Higher Salaries.

"To cut the salaries now paid to the professors of the University would be an act of suicidal folly," stated Howard Mumford Jones, former professor of English here, in a letter to Governor Gardner which was published in the last week's issue of the Chapel Hill Weekly.

The University of Michigan professor made the statement that although he had left the University with reluctance and regret, it seemed a wise thing to do in view of the fact that a ten per cent cut was about to be effected.

"It is my opinion that North Carolina is naturally at the present moment too closely concerned with her own troubles to realize the blow which the state is likely to deal to her own reputation (and therefore her drawing power) by this proposed reduction," he continued.

He went on to say that this institution has reached a place of prominence in the nation as well as in the entire South; yet if this cut goes through, practically all would be lost. "For a measure of this kind is far-reaching in its effect; news of it gets abroad; the institution is immediately thought of as a bad place to go to, and a good place to leave; and even if the proposed cut lasted only a year or two, the damage done to the reputation and attractiveness of the state university cannot be repaired in the same length of time," he declared.

Mr. Jones is of the opinion that the members of the present faculty are loyal to the institution and to the state. "But if they leave," he continued, "it is simply because in the situation they cannot afford to stay."

The writer declared that he already knew of several of the faculty who were seeking other jobs for fear the ten per cent reduction might be put into effect.

He stated further that both the Universities of Texas and Virginia have a higher salary rate than this University, and also every northern state university of any standing whatsoever pays a higher salary scale. "If the University of North Carolina is to be anything but a petty second-rate school, it is not a salary cut, but a salary increase that is imperatively demanded," the English professor said in conclusion.

Debating Bulletin Prepared by Rankin

An extension bulletin, entitled "Independence for the Philippines," has been compiled by E. R. Rankin, secretary of the high school debating union, and distributed to the various schools entering the debating contest. The bulletin includes reviews of contests held in the past, regulations, and both affirmative and negative references on the query, which is: Resloved, that the United States should grant immediate Independence to the Philippines.

The state-wide triangular contests will be held April 3. Schools which win both affirmative and negative sides in these debates will send teams to Chapel Hill April 16 and 17 to compete for the Aycock Memorial Cup.

Many Entertainment Tickets Unclaimed

Despite the last minute rush on the student tickets of the entertainment series due to the Goya performance about a third of the total number still remain unclaimed. Dean A. W. Hobbs of the liberal arts school urges those students who have not yet gotten their tickets to do so at once, and not to wait until just before the next offering to crowd into the office to claim them.

Students in the schools of liberal arts and the school of education, having already paid for the tickets when they paid their tuition, are the ones who are entitled to the passes. Of the 720 odd students in the two schools, only four hundred and fifty have received their card of admittance.

SPRING FESTIVAL DANCES PLANNED

Five Fraternities Are Represented in Social Activities, April 10 and 11.

The Spring Festival, a set of three dances sponsored by five fraternities on the campus, will be given April 10 and 11. This set is similar to the May Frolic which was given last year and which will take place again May eighth and ninth.

The five fraternities giving the dance are Pi Kappa Phi, Phi Gamma Delta, Alpha Tau Omega, Phi Delta Theta, and Pi Kappa Alpha. The committee in charge of the dance includes: George Newman, Pi Kappa Phi, chairman; Bill Bliss, Phi Gamma Delta, secretary; Mosely Fonvielle, Phi Delta Theta, treasurer; Barron Grier, A. T. O.; and Ed French, Pi Kappa Alpha.

The Festival will open with a dance Friday night, and will continue with a tea dance Saturday afternoon. The last dance will be Saturday night. All the dances will take place in Bynum gymnasium, which will have decorations appropriate to the season.

Several fraternities are planning to have week-end house parties.

A number of orchestras are under consideration by the committee, but an engagement has not yet been made.

Y. Cabinets Will Meet Tomorrow

The three cabinets of the Y will meet Monday night at 7:15. The topic for discussion will be the State Student Volunteer Conference which will meet here February 27 to March 1. Each cabinet has a definite part to assist in entertaining the delegation to this conference which is expected to be attended by approximately two hundred college men and women from the institutions of North Carolina.

Rankin on Trip

E. R. Rankin, secretary of the committee in charge of the high school basketball contest, will go to Raleigh Monday and to Salisbury Tuesday for meetings concerning the contest.

The finals between the winners of the eastern and western districts will be held in the Tin Can around the first of March. Basketball champions of the past included Durham, for five years; Winston-Salem, three; Wilmington, three; and Greensboro, Chapel Hill, Asheville, Reidsville and Spencer, one year each.

GLEE CLUB GIVES INITIAL CONCERT OF THIS QUARTER

"Ave Maria" and "Autumn" Included in Program Given Last Night at Rollins College.

The Glee Club gave its first concert of the winter quarter last night at Rollins College, Virginia. The program consisted of numbers from northern Europe, two French numbers, a group of sacred songs, and a final group made up of American songs.

Among these numbers was "Ave Maria," the choice number which was sung by the club last year, when it won the Southern championship at Greenville, S. C. "Autumn," by Gretchaninov, was also sung. This number has met with much approval on the tours of the club.

Other concerts this quarter will be the Maennerchor concert on Monday in the music building, Spring Hope, February 20; Guilford College, February 28; Southern Pines, March 1; and Salem College, March 3. The concert at Guilford will be reciprocal, as the Guilford Choir will give a concert here in the music building this winter.

The personnel of the Glee Club is chosen from the 140 men who comprise the squad. Seventy-five of these are chosen

CAROLA GOYA ENTERTAINED BY LEAVITTS

Dancer Is Guest of Spanish Professor and Wife; Tells of Life and Training.

Friday evening after her performance in Memorial hall, Carola Goya was entertained by Professor and Mrs. Leavitt at their home.

The members of the Spanish department and the South American students of the University were also guests of Professor Leavitt and his wife.

Amando Mendez speaking for the foreign students presented the dancer with a corsage of roses.

After speaking of various subjects, Senorita Goya, talking in fluent English though with a delightful foreign accent, told something of her life.

She was born in Leon, a small town in northern Spain, and studied in Seville and Costillo, most famous of Spanish dancing instructors.

Following years of arduous study Senorita Goya made her debut and was pronounced an outstanding success by leading critics. She has appeared before distinguished audiences both in this country and abroad.

Carola Goya's performance Friday night was received enthusiastically by the audience, as evinced by the unusually great number of curtain calls.

Appearing before a university audience is the most feared thing in the life of any performer because if the audience is not satisfied it will openly show its disapproval and disconcert the artist to such an extent that he will not be able to put forth his best efforts.

The reception given Senorita Goya's offerings Friday night leave no doubt in the minds of the entertainment committee as to the wisdom of their course in arranging this program.

OLDEST ALUMNUS RECOVERS FROM SERIOUS ILLNESS

Descendant of Daniel Boone Lacks Four Years of Century Mark.

W. G. Candler, the oldest living alumnus of the University, has as his goal the century mark. He lacks but four years from attaining this goal, and holds a courage that promises to carry him past his ambition. He lives quietly with his family at Candler in the western part of the state.

He has just arisen from a sickbed where he was confined for many weeks by an illness of pneumonia and complications. With his hair a little greyer and perhaps a little thinner but his spirit is undaunted.

He is the great, great grandson of Daniel Boone and the grandson of Colonel William Moore, first white settler west of the French Broad river. He has practiced law most of his life, and was a representative in the General Assembly for three terms.

At the age of twenty-one he passed the examination that admitted him to the bar. After practicing law for thirty-five years, he entered politics and was voted solicitor for his district, much larger than the pres-

SOCIETIES WILL MEET TOGETHER TUESDAY NIGHT

Di Will Be Host to Phi in First Joint Meeting of Quarter.

The Di senate will be the host of the Phi assembly in a joint session Tuesday night at 7:15. This will be the first combined meeting of the two societies this winter.

It has been the custom in the past for the two groups to meet jointly at least once during the quarter. This plan was inaugurated several years ago to stimulate friendly rivalry between the two organizations in an attempt to create more interest in forensic activities on the campus.

At the last joint session the two societies met to witness the Mary D. Wright debate which was won by the Phi representatives. McBride Fleming-Jones, and Clyde Shreve of the Di contested Hamilton Hobgood and John Wilkinson of the Phi. Hobgood won the medal for the best speaker of the group.

The Tuesday night session will be presided over by President J. M. Little of the Dialectic group.

Mrs. Steele Dies

Mrs. Wilbur Daniel Steele passed away Friday afternoon in Watts hospital following a six-weeks illness which, beginning with pleurisy, developed into a severe case of pneumonia.

Staff Meeting

The weekly meeting of the city editors, editorial board, and sports editors will begin in the office of the Daily Tar Heel at five o'clock instead of five-thirty as was announced last meeting. All of the editors are required to attend unless previously excused by the editor or managing-editor.

New Plays To Be Read Tomorrow

Plays written in Professor Koch's play-writing class will be read Monday evening at seven-thirty in the Playmakers Theatre. Among the plays are Lonely Hearts, a comedy of northern Alabama by Phillip Mithas; and Ever Snitch, a comedy of the Carolina coast by Irene Fussler. Two or three other new plays are to be selected from plays by Tom Loy, William Long, Ruth Valentine, Ellen Stewart, Dr. Hammond and others.

From those read there will be selected for the spring production, April ninth, tenth and eleventh. Students interested in trying out for parts are requested to be present Monday night at the reading. Tryouts will be held in the theatre Monday afternoon, February sixteenth at four-thirty.

HUME CUP GOES TO GREENSBORO

Homespun Wins Award in Extension Division Magazine Contest.

To Greensboro goes the honor of winning both the magazine and newspaper awards in the seventh annual contests in high school journalism conducted by the University extension division. Greensboro receives the Hume cup, a trophy given by a group of University alumni, of which George Stephens is chairman. The cup is given in memory of the late Thomas Hume, a distinguished English professor here. Judges of the contest were Dr. L. R. Wilson, O. J. Coffin, and Louis Graves, all of Chapel Hill.

In the newspaper contest the prize-winning Greensboro entry was entitled High Life. Honorable mention went to the High Point Pointer and the Durham Hi-Rocket. Other schools entering papers were Winston-Salem, Charlotte, Beaufort, New Bern, and Wadesboro. In the magazine contest first prize went to Greensboro for Homespun, honorable mention going to Winston-Salem, which entered Black and Gold.

This is the seventh consecutive year that Greensboro has won either the newspaper or the magazine contest, and is the fourth time that it has won both contests in the same year.

Mitchell Society To Meet Tuesday

The Elisha Mitchell scientific society will meet Tuesday, February 10, in room 206 Phillips hall. The meeting will be the 326th.

Professor N. P. Bailey will talk on the following subject: "Response of Thermocouples to Rapidly Oscillating Temperatures." Professor F. K. Cameron will deliver an address on "The Absorption of Sulphur Dioxide by Calcium Phosphates."

The society meets on the second Tuesday of each month. Membership is open to the faculty, graduates, and advanced undergraduates. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Journalism Students Will Work on Weekly

Students in the school of Journalism will have charge of publishing the next week's issue of the Chapel Hill Weekly.

This plan was carried out several times last year, much to the delight of Editor Graves, who expressed himself as being happy to get the week off.

ORIGINAL PLAYS SUBMITTED FOR STATE FESTIVAL

Number Already Sent Indicates Growing Interest in Creative Writing.

That interest in creative writing is growing throughout the state is shown by the many original plays that have been submitted for the state dramatic festival and state tournament to be presented in Chapel Hill February 26, 27, and 28.

Ephraim's Light, by Helen Bridges Parker, and It's Mine Ain't It, by Arthur Edwards, both from Seabord County high school, under the direction of Mrs. T. R. Everett are two of the plays to be presented.

The following are from city high schools: Asheville, under the direction of W. R. Wunsch, submits We Still Have Memories, by Moselle Burke, and Rhinestones and Rough, by Kneale Morgan. An original play, Clippings, was presented at the Dramatic Festival last year.

One manuscript comes from Central high school, Charlotte: Queer Sister, by Mary Woodward. Miss Louise Duls is teaching creative writing there.

Fruitland Institute at Hendersonville, under the directorship of Miss Flora Mae Hood, sends in The Trysting Spring, by Nancy Lee Coker.

Winston-Salem high school will present The Frost King, by Dorothy Clay, and Negro Fantasy, by Isabella Hansom, with Bessie Watts and William Perry directors.

Mars Hill College and Seaboard Woman's Club, which are in the same classification for the contest, submit two plays each: His Heritage, by Frances Barnes, and Unhappy Gypsy, by Martha Parker, both of Mars Hill, Miss Bonnie Wengert, director. A Pair o' Quilts, by Bernice Harris and Reece Bullock, and The Evidence, by Leila Taylor Edwards and Bernice Harris, come from the Seaboard Woman's Club.

Lenoir-Rhyne college will submit The Beast on the Hill, by Robert Shelby, and Mountain Shadows, by Erskine C. Dysart, under the direction of Miss Pearl Setzer.

Wake Forest College also enters with a drama, God's Ship, by Edward T. Harrell.

Judges for the dramatic contest have been chosen from the the townspeople of Chapel Hill: Mrs. Paul Green, Dr. A. C. Howell, and J. O. Bailey.

Administrative Board Discusses Joining of State Institutions

A short meeting of the advisory and administrative board of the University in the president's office, yesterday discussed the possibility and advisability of the combining of the boards of the three state supported institutions. This proposal has been before the state General Assembly for some time but no definite action has been taken on the matter.

It is hoped that this year's assembly will start the work with a few minor changes, and that it may be continued in slow stages by the succeeding assemblies until 1933 when the plan would be in complete effect.

The meeting of the University board decided nothing definitely, but only discussed the project from all angles.

Getting Into Deep Water

There are certain privileges or rights which are reserved solely to critics. Once one imposes upon those privileges or invades those sacred domains then there is no returning. With that knowledge we still take a chance and lay ourselves open to criticism which is bestowed upon those who often make or break a show. We are going to offer a bit of advice to the Carolina Playmakers.

After hearing comments from those who know of what they speak concerning the latest production of the Carolina Playmakers—"East Lynne"—we are forced to conclude that somewhere there has been a slip up. To the average layman's mind defects which appear in many plays are not apparent at once. But even a layman may recognize those glaring faults which nullified the efforts of the players to make "East Lynne" a successful show.

Obviously the Playmakers should never have undertaken the production of "East Lynne." And above all things they should not have done so when their financial condition prohibited them from producing it with the proper scenery and other little incidentals which go to make a production pleasing. "East Lynne" is a difficult play even when undertaken by professional players. When amateurs attempt it a complete fizzle is usually the result.

It is rather unfair to impose upon those students here who came to study playmaking the task of presenting such a show. Why those in authority selected East Lynne" remains a mystery to us unless the copyright costs were lower than for a more suitable production. The Carolina Playmakers have shown their ability to produce comedies and plays of a lighter type successfully. They haven't the experience or the ability just yet to put across "East Lynne."

If the Playmakers feel that they must produce a certain number of shows each year, then why not go back and resurrect some of the old plays which certainly will not cost them anything and which were produced with success.

Give the players something they can handle. Sending them in over their heads before they learn to swim will either result in a few casualties or make them water shy.

—And More Speed!
